According to Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, only one who takes sannyāsa in the disciplic succession from Śaṅkarācārya is a Vedic sannyāsī. Sometimes it is challenged that the sannyāsīs who are preaching in the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement are not genuine because they do not belong to brāhmaṇa families, for Māyāvādīs do not offer sannyāsa to one who does not belong to a brāhmaṇa family by birth. Unfortunately, however, they do not know that at present everyone is born a śūdra (kalau śūdra-sambhavaḥ). It is to be understood that there are no brāhmaṇas in this age because those who claim to be brāhmaṇas simply on the basis of birthright do not have the brahminical qualifications. However, even if one is born in a non-brāhmaṇa family, if he has the brahminical qualifications he should be accepted as a brāhmaṇa, as confirmed by Śrīla Nārada Muni and the great saint Śrīdhara Svāmī. This is also stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Both Nārada and Śrīdhara Svāmī completely agree that one cannot be a brāhmaṇa by birthright but must possess the qualities of a brāhmaṇa. Thus in our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement we never offer the sannyāsa order to a person whom we do not find to be qualified in terms of the prescribed brahminical principles. Although it is a fact that unless one is a brāhmaṇa he cannot become a sannyāsī, it is not a valid principle that an unqualified man who is born in a brāhmaṇa family is a brāhmaṇa whereas a brahminically qualified person born in a non-brāhmaṇa family cannot be accepted. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement strictly follows the injunctions of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, avoiding misleading heresy and manufactured conclusions.

sannyāsī ha-iyā kara nartana-gāyana bhāvuka saba saṅge lañā kara saṅkīrtana

SYNONYMS

sannyāsī-the renounced order of life; ha-iyā-accepting; kara-You do; nartana-gāyana-dancing and chanting; bhāvuka-fanatics; saba-all; saṅge-in Your company; lañā-accepting them; kara-You do; saṅkīrtana-chanting of the holy name of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

"You are a sannyāsī. Why then do You indulge in chanting and dancing, engaging in Your saṅkīrtana movement in the company of fanatics?

PURPORT

This is a challenge by Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura writes in his Anubhāṣya that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is the object of Vedānta philosophical research, has very kindly determined who is an appropriate candidate for study of Vedānta philosophy. The first qualification of such a candidate is expressed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in His Śikṣāṣṭaka:

tṛṇād api sunīcena
taror iva sahiṣṇunā
amāninā mānadena

kīrtanīyaḥ sadā hariḥ

This statement indicates that one can hear or speak about Vedānta philosophy through the disciplic succession. One must be very humble and meek, more tolerant than a tree and more humble than the grass. One should not claim respect for himself but should be prepared to give all respect to others. One must have these qualifications to be eligible to understand Vedic knowledge.

SYNONYMS

vedānta-paṭhana-studying Vedānta philosophy; dhyāna-meditation; sannyāsīra-of a sannyāsi; dharma-duties; tāhā chāḍi'-giving them up; kara-You do; kene-why; bhāvukera-of the fanatics; karma-activities.

TRANSLATION

"Meditation and the study of Vedānta are the sole duties of a sannyāsī. Why do You abandon these to dance with fanatics?

PURPORT

As explained in regard to verse 41, Māyāvādī sannyāsīs do not approve of chanting and dancing. Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, like Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya, misunderstood Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be a misled young sannyāsī, and therefore he asked Him why He indulged in the association of fanatics instead of executing the duty of a sannyāsī.

hīnācāra kara kene, ithe ki kāraṇa prabhāve-in Your opulence; dekhiye-I see; tomā-You; sākṣāt-directly; nārāyaṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; hīna-ācāra-lower-class behavior; kara-You do; kene-why; ithe-in this; ki-what is; kāraṇa-reason.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"You look as brilliant as if You were Nārāyaṇa Himself. Will You kindly explain the reason that You have adopted the behavior of lower-class people?"

PURPORT

Due to renunciation, Vedānta study, meditation and the strict regulative principles of their daily routine, Māyāvādī sannyāsīs are certainly in a position to execute pious activities. Thus Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, on account of his piety, could understand that Caitanya Mahāprabhu was not an ordinary person but the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Sākṣāt nārāyaṇa: he considered Him to be Nārāyaṇa Himself. Māyāvādī sannyāsīs address one another as Nārāyaṇa because they think that they are all going to be Nārāyaṇa or merge with Nārāyaṇa in the next life. Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī appreciated that Caitanya Mahāprabhu had already directly become Nārāyaṇa and did not need to wait until His next life. One difference between the Vaiṣṇava and Māyāvādī philosophies is that Māyāvādī philosophers think that after giving up their bodies they are going to become Nārāyaṇa by merging with His body, whereas Vaiṣṇava philosophers understand that after the body dies they are going to have a transcendental, spiritual body in which to associate with Nārāyaṇa.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied to Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, "My dear sir, kindly hear the reason. My spiritual master considered Me a fool, and therefore he chastised Me.

PURPORT

When Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī inquired from Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu why He neither studied Vedānta nor performed meditation, Lord Caitanya presented Himself as a number one fool in order to indicate that the present age, Kali-yuga, is an age of fools and rascals in which it is not possible to obtain perfection simply by reading Vedānta philosophy and meditating. The śāstras strongly recommend:.

harer nāma harer nāma
harer nāmaiva kevalam kalau nāsty eva nāsty eva nāsty eva gatir anyathā

"In this age of quarrel and hypocrisy the only means of deliverance is the chanting of the holy names of the Lord. There is no other way. There is no other way. There is no other way." People in general in Kali-yuga are so fallen that it is not possible for them to obtain perfection simply by studying the Vedānta-sūtra. One should therefore seriously take to the constant chanting of the holy name of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

" 'You are a fool,' he said. 'You are not qualified to study Vedānta philosophy, and therefore You must always chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa. This is the essence of all mantras, or Vedic hymns.

PURPORT

Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī Mahārāja comments in this connection, "One can become perfectly successful in the mission of his life if he acts exactly according to the words he hears from the mouth of his spiritual master." This acceptance of the words of the spiritual master is called śrauta-vākya, which indicates that the disciple must carry out the spiritual master's instructions without deviation. Śrīla Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura remarks in this connection that a disciple must accept the words of his spiritual master as his life and soul. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu here confirms this by saying that since His spiritual master ordered Him only to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa, He always chanted the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra according to this direction ('kṛṣṇa-mantra' japa sadā,-ei mantra-sāra).

Kṛṣṇa is the origin of everything. Therefore when a person is fully Kṛṣṇa conscious it is to be understood that his relationship with Kṛṣṇa has been fully confirmed. Lacking Kṛṣṇa consciousness, one is only partially related with Kṛṣṇa and is therefore not in his constitutional position. Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Kṛṣṇa, the spiritual master of the entire universe, He nevertheless took the position of a disciple in order to teach by example how a devotee should strictly follow the orders of a spiritual master in executing the duty of always chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. One who is very much attracted to the study of Vedānta philosophy must take lessons from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In this age, no one is actually competent to study Vedānta, and therefore it is better that one chant the holy name of the Lord, which is the essence of all Vedic knowledge, as Kṛṣṇa Himself confirms in the Bhagavad-gītā (15.15):

vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyo vedānta-kṛd veda-vid eva cāham

"By all the Vedas, I am to be known. Indeed, I am the compiler of Vedānta, and I am the knower of the Vedas."

Only fools give up the service of the spiritual master and think themselves advanced in spiritual knowledge. In order to check such fools, Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself presented the perfect example of how to be a disciple. A spiritual master knows very well how to engage each disciple in a particular duty, but if a disciple, thinking himself more advanced than his spiritual master, gives up his orders and acts independently, he checks his own spiritual progress. Every disciple must consider himself completely unaware of the science of Kṛṣṇa and must always be ready to carry out the orders of the spiritual master to become competent in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. A disciple should always remain a fool before his spiritual master. Therefore sometimes pseudospiritualists accept a spiritual master who is not even fit to become a disciple because they want to keep him under their control. This is useless for spiritual realization.

One who imperfectly knows Kṛṣṇa consciousness cannot know Vedānta philosophy. A showy display of Vedānta study without Kṛṣṇa consciousness is a feature of the external energy, māyā, and as long as one is attracted by the inebrieties of this ever-changing material energy, he deviates from devotion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. An actual follower of Vedānta philosophy is a devotee of Lord Viṣṇu, who is the greatest of the great and the maintainer of the entire universe. Unless one surpasses the field of activities in service to the limited, one cannot reach the unlimited. Knowledge of the unlimited is actual brahma-jñāna, or knowledge of the Supreme. Those who are addicted to fruitive activities and speculative knowledge cannot understand the value of holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa, which is always completely pure, eternally liberated and full of spiritual bliss. One who has taken shelter of the holy name of the Lord, which is identical with the Lord, does not have to study Vedānta philosophy, for he has already completed all such study.

One who is unfit to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa but thinks that the holy name is different from Kṛṣṇa and thus takes shelter of Vedānta study in order to understand Him must be considered a number one fool, as confirmed by Caitanya Mahāprabhu by His personal behavior, and philosophical speculators who want to make Vedānta philosophy an academic career are also considered to be within the material energy. A person who always chants the holy name of the Lord, however, is already beyond the ocean of nescience, and thus even a person born in a low family who engages in chanting the holy name of the Lord is considered to be beyond the study of Vedānta philosophy. In this connection Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.33.7) states:

aho bata śva-paco 'to garīyān yaj-jihvāgre vartate nāma tubhyam tepus tapas te juhuvuḥ sasnur āryā brahmānūcur nāma gṛṇanti ye te

"If a person born in a family of dog-eaters takes to the chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa, it is to be understood that in his previous life he must have executed all kinds of austerities and penances and performed all the Vedic yajñas." Another quotation states:

ṛg-vedo 'tha yajur-vedaḥ sāma-vedo 'py atharvaṇaḥ adhītās tena yenoktaṁ harir ity akṣara-dvayam

"A person who chants the two syllables ha-ri has already studied the four Vedas-Sāma, Ṛg, Yajur and Atharva."

Taking advantage of these verses, there are some sahajiyās who, taking everything very cheaply, consider themselves elevated Vaiṣṇavas but do not care even to touch the Vedānta-sūtra or Vedānta philosophy. A real Vaiṣṇava should, however, study Vedānta philosophy, but if after studying Vedānta one does not adopt the chanting of the holy name of the Lord, he is no better than a Māyāvādī. Therefore, one should not be a Māyāvādī, yet one should not be unaware of the subject matter of Vedānta philosophy. Indeed, Caitanya Mahāprabhu exhibited His knowledge of Vedānta in His discourses with Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī. Thus it is to be understood that a Vaiṣṇava should be completely conversant with Vedānta philosophy, yet he should not think that studying Vedānta is all in all and therefore be unattached to the chanting of the holy name. A devotee must know the importance of simultaneously understanding Vedānta philosophy and chanting the holy names. If by studying Vedānta one becomes an impersonalist, he has not been able to understand Vedānta. This is confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (15.15). Vedānta means "the end of knowledge." The ultimate end of knowledge is knowledge of Kṛṣṇa, who is identical with His holy name. Cheap Vaiṣṇavas (sahajiyās) do not care to study the Vedānta philosophy as commented upon by the four ācāryas. In the Gauḍīya-sampradāya there is a Vedānta commentary called the Govinda-bhāṣya, but the sahajiyās consider such commentaries to be untouchable philosophical speculation, and they consider the ācāryas to be mixed devotees. Thus they clear their way to hell.

TRANSLATION

"Simply by chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa one can obtain freedom from material existence. Indeed, simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra one will be able to see the lotus feet of the Lord.

PURPORT

In his Anubhāṣya, Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī says that the actual effect that will be visible as soon as one achieves transcendental knowledge is that he will immediately become free from the clutches of māyā and fully engage in the service of the Lord. Unless one serves the Supreme Personality of Godhead Mukunda, one cannot become free from fruitive activities under the external energy. However, when one chants the holy name of the Lord offenselessly, one can realize a transcendental position that is completely aloof from the material conception of life. Rendering service to the Lord, a devotee relates to the Supreme Personality of Godhead in one of five relationships-namely, śānta, dāsya, sakhya, vātsalya or mādhurya-and thus he relishes transcendental bliss in that relationship. Such a relationship certainly transcends the body and mind. When one realizes that the holy name of the Lord is identical with the Supreme Person, he becomes completely eligible to chant the holy name of the Lord. Such an ecstatic chanter and dancer must be considered to have a direct relationship with the Lord.

According to the Vedic principles, there are three stages of spiritual advancement, namely, sambandha-jñāna, abhidheya and prayojana. Sambandha-jñāna refers to establishing one's original relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, abhidheya refers to acting according to that constitutional relationship, and prayojana is the ultimate goal of life, which is to develop love of Godhead (premā pum-artho mahān). If one adheres to the regulative principles under the order of the spiritual master, he very easily achieves the ultimate goal of his life. A person who is addicted to the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra very easily gets the opportunity to serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead directly. There is no need for such a person to understand the grammatical jugglery in which Māyāvādī sannyāsīs generally indulge. Śrī Śaṅkarācārya also stressed this point: na hi na hi rakṣati ḍukṛñ karaṇe. "Simply by juggling grammatical suffixes and prefixes one cannot save himself from the clutches of death." The grammatical word jugglers cannot bewilder a devotee who engages in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Simply addressing the energy of the Supreme Lord as Hare and the Lord Himself as Kṛṣṇa very soon situates the Lord within the heart of the devotee. By thus addressing Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa, one directly engages in His Lordship's service. The essence of all revealed scriptures and all knowledge is present when one addresses the Lord and His energy by the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, for this transcendental vibration can completely liberate a conditioned soul and directly engage him in the service of the Lord.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu presented Himself as a grand fool, yet He maintained that all the words that He had heard from His spiritual master strictly followed the principles stated by Vyāsadeva in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.7.6).

anarthopaśamaṁ sākṣād bhakti-yogam adhokṣaje lokasyājānato vidvāṁś cakre sātvata-saṁhitām

"The material miseries of a living entity, which are superfluous to him, can be directly mitigated by the linking process of devotional service. But the mass of people do not know this, and therefore the learned Vyāsadeva compiled this Vedic scripture [Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam], which is in relation to the Supreme Truth." One can overcome all misconceptions and entanglement in the material world by practicing bhakti-yoga, and therefore Vyāsadeva, acting on the instruction of Śrī Nārada, has very kindly introduced Śrīmad-Bhagavatam to relieve the conditioned souls from the clutches of māyā. Lord Caitanya's spiritual master instructed Him, therefore, that one must read Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam regularly and with scrutiny to gradually become attached to the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

The holy name and the Lord are identical. One who is completely free from the clutches of māyā can understand this fact. This knowledge, which is achieved by the mercy of the spiritual master, places one on the supreme transcendental platform. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu presented Himself as a fool because prior to accepting the shelter of a spiritual master He could not understand that simply by chanting one can be relieved from all material conditions. But as soon as He became a faithful servant of His spiritual master and followed his instructions, He very easily saw the path of liberation. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra must be understood to be devoid of all offenses. The ten offenses against the holy name are as follows: (1) to blaspheme a devotee of the Lord, (2) to consider the Lord and the demigods to be on the same level or to think that there are many gods, (3) to neglect the orders of the spiritual master, (4) to minimize the authority of scriptures (Vedas), (5) to interpret the holy name of God, (6) to commit sins on the strength of chanting, (7) to instruct the glories of the Lord's name to the unfaithful, (8) to compare the chanting of the holy name with material piety, (9) to be inattentive while chanting the holy name, and (10) to be attached to material things in spite of chanting the holy name.

TRANSLATION

" 'In this Age of Kali there is no religious principle other than the chanting of the holy name, which is the essence of all Vedic hymns. This is the purport of all scriptures.'

PURPORT

The principles of the paramparā system were strictly honored in previous ages-Satya-yuga, Tretā-yuga and Dvāpara-yuga-but in the present age, Kali-yuga, people neglect the importance of this system of śrauta-paramparā, or receiving knowledge by disciplic succession. In this age, people are prepared to argue that they can understand that which is beyond their limited knowledge and perception through so-called scientific observations and experiments, not knowing that actual truth comes down to man from authorities. This argumentative attitude is against the Vedic principles, and it is very difficult for one who adopts it to understand that the holy name of Kṛṣṇa is as good as Kṛṣṇa Himself. Since Kṛṣṇa and His holy name are identical, the holy name is eternally pure and beyond material contamination. It is the Supreme Personality of Godhead as a transcendental vibration. The holy name is completely different from material sound, as confirmed by Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura: golokera prema-dhana, hari-nāma-saṅkīrtana. The transcendental vibration of hari-nāma-saṅkīrtana is imported from the spiritual world. Thus although materialists who are addicted to experimental knowledge and the so-called "scientific method" cannot place their faith in the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, it is a fact that simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra offenselessly one can be freed from all subtle and gross material conditions. The spiritual world is called Vaikuṇṭha, which means "without anxiety." In the material world everything is full of anxiety (kuṇṭha), whereas in the spiritual world (Vaikuṇṭha) everything is free from anxiety. Therefore those who are afflicted by a combination of anxieties cannot understand the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, which is free from all anxiety. In the present age the vibration of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is the only process that is in a transcendental position, beyond material contamination. Since the holy name can deliver a conditioned soul, it is explained here to be sarva-mantra-sāra, the essence of all Vedic hymns.

A name that represents an object of this material world may be subjected to arguments and experimental knowledge, but in the absolute world a name and its owner, the fame and the famous, are identical, and similarly the qualities, pastimes and everything else pertaining to the Absolute are also absolute. Although Māyāvādīs profess monism, they differentiate between the holy name of the Supreme Lord and the Lord Himself. For this offense of nāmāparādha they gradually glide down from their exalted position of brahma-jñāna, as confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32):

patanty adho 'nādṛta-yuṣmad-aṅghrayaḥ

Although by severe austerities they rise to the exalted position of brahma-jñāna, they nevertheless fall down due to imperfect knowledge of the Absolute Truth. Although they profess to understand the Vedic mantra sarvaṁ khalv idaṁ brahma (Chāndogya Upaniṣad 3.14.1), which means "Everything is brahman," they are unable to understand that the holy name is also brahman. If they regularly chant the mahā-mantra, however, they can be relieved from this misconception. Unless one properly takes shelter of the holy name, he cannot be relieved from the offensive stage in chanting the holy name.

PURPORT

For progress in spiritual life, the śāstras recommend meditation in Satya-yuga, sacrifice for the satisfaction of Lord Viṣṇu in Tretā-yuga and gorgeous worship of the Lord in the temple in Dvāpara-yuga, but in the Age of Kali one can achieve spiritual progress only by chanting the holy name of the Lord. This is confirmed in various scriptures. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam there are many references to this fact. In the Twelfth Canto (12.3.51) it is said, kīrtanād eva kṛṣṇasya mukta-saṅgaḥ paraṁ vrajet: In the Age of Kali there are many faults, for people are subjected to many miserable conditions, yet in this age there is one great benediction-simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra one can be freed from all material contamination and thus be elevated to the spiritual world. The Nārada-pañcarātra also praises the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra as follows:

trayo vedāḥ ṣaḍ-aṅgāni chandāṁsi vividhāḥ surāḥ sarvam aṣṭākṣarāntaḥsthaṁ yac cānyad api vāṅ-mayam sarva-vedānta-sārārthaḥ saṁsārārṇava-tāraṇaḥ

”The essence of all Vedic knowledge-comprehending the three kinds of Vedic activity [karma-kāṇḍa, jñāna-kāṇḍa and upāsanā-kāṇḍa], the chandas, or Vedic hymns, and the processes for satisfying the demigods-is included in the eight syllables Hare Kīṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa. This is the reality of all Vedānta. The chanting of the holy name is the only means to cross the ocean of nescience.” Similarly, the Kali-santaraṇa Upaniṣad states, ”Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare-these sixteen names composed of thirty-two syllables are the only means to counteract the evil effects of Kali-yuga. In all the Vedas it is seen that to cross the ocean of nescience there is no alternative to the chanting of the holy name.” Similarly, Śrī Madhvācārya, while commenting upon the Muṇḍaka Upaniṣad, has said:

dvāparīyair janair viṣṇuḥ pañcarātrais tu kevalaiḥ kalau tu nāma-mātreṇa pūjyate bhagavān hariḥ

”In the Dvāpara-yuga one could satisfy Kṛṣṇa or Viṣṇu only by worshiping Him gorgeously according to the pāñcarātrikī system, but in the Age of Kali one can satisfy and worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead Hari simply by chanting the holy name.” In his Bhakti-sandarbha (verse 284), Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī strongly emphasizes the chanting of the holy name of the Lord as follows:

nanu bhagavan-nāmātmakā eva mantrāḥ, tatra viśeṣeṇa namaḥ-śabdādy-alaṅkṛtāḥ śrī-bhagavatā śrīmad-ṛṣibhiś cāhita-śakti-viśeṣāḥ, śrī-bhagavatā samam ātma-sambandha-viśeṣa-pratipādakāś ca tatra kevalāni śrī-bhagavan-nāmāny api nirapekṣāṇy eva parama-puruṣārtha-phala-paryanta-dāna-samarthāni tato mantreṣu nāmato ’py adhika-sāmarthye labdhe kathaṁ dīkṣādy-apekṣā. ucyate-yady api svarūpato nāsti, tathāpi prāyaḥ svabhāvato dehādi-sambandhena kadarya-śīlānāṁ vikṣipta-cittānāṁ janānāṁ tat-saṅkocī-karaṇāya śrīmad-ṛṣi-prabhṛtibhir atrārcana-mārge kvacit kvacit kācit kācin maryādā sthāpitāsti.

Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī states that the substance of all the Vedic mantras is the chanting of the holy name of the Lord. Every mantra begins with the prefix nama oṁ and eventually addresses by name the Supreme Personality of Godhead. By the supreme will of the Lord there is a specific potency in each and every mantra chanted by great sages like Nārada Muni and other ṛṣis. Chanting the holy name of the Lord immediately renovates the transcendental relationship of the living being with the Supreme Lord.

To chant the holy name of the Lord, one need not depend upon other paraphernalia, for one can immediately get all the desired results of connecting or linking with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. It may therefore be questioned why there is a necessity for initiation or further spiritual activities in devotional service for one who engages in the chanting of the holy name of the Lord. The answer is that although it is correct that one who fully engages in chanting the holy name need not depend upon the process of initiation, generally a devotee is addicted to many abominable material habits due to material contamination from his previous life. In order to get quick relief from all these contaminations, it is required that one engage in the worship of the Lord in the temple. The worship of the Deity in the temple is essential to reduce one’s restlessness due to the contaminations of conditioned life. Thus Nārada, in his pāñcarātrikī-vidhi, and other great sages have sometimes stressed that since every conditioned soul has a bodily concept of life aimed at sense enjoyment, to restrict this sense enjoyment the rules and regulations for worshiping the Deity in the temple are essential. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī has described that the holy name of the Lord can be chanted by liberated souls, but almost all the souls we have to initiate are conditioned. It is advised that one chant the holy name of the Lord without offenses and according to the regulative principles, yet due to their past bad habits they violate these rules and regulations. Thus the regulative principles for worship of the Deity are also simultaneously essential.

TRANSLATION

”Collecting My patience, therefore, I began to consider that chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa had covered all My spiritual knowledge.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu hints in this verse that to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa one does not need to speculate on the philosophical aspects of the science of God, for one automatically becomes ecstatic and without consideration immediately chants, dances, laughs, cries and sings just like a madman.

TRANSLATION

”I saw that I had become mad by chanting the holy name, and I immediately submitted this at the lotus feet of my spiritual master.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as an ideal teacher, shows us how a disciple should deal with his spiritual master. Whenever there is doubt regarding any point, he should refer the matter to his spiritual master for clarification. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said that while chanting and dancing He had developed the kind of mad ecstasy that is possible only for a liberated soul. Yet even in His liberated position, He referred everything to His spiritual master whenever there were doubts. Thus in any condition, even when liberated, we should never think ourselves independent of the spiritual master, but must refer to him as soon as there is some doubt regarding our progressive spiritual life.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu prays in His Śikṣāṣṭaka:

yugāyitaṁ nimeṣeṇa
cakṣuṣā prāvṛṣāyitam
śūnyāyitaṁ jagat sarvaṁ
govinda-viraheṇa me

”O Govinda! Feeling Your separation, I am considering a moment to be like twelve years or more. Tears are flowing from my eyes like torrents of rain, and I am feeling all vacant in the world in Your absence.” It is the aspiration of a devotee that while he chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra his eyes will fill with tears, his voice falter and his heart throb. These are good signs in chanting the holy name of the Lord. In ecstasy, one should feel the entire world to be vacant without the presence of Govinda. This is a sign of separation from Govinda. In material life we are all separated from Govinda and are absorbed in material sense gratification. Therefore, when one comes to his senses on the spiritual platform he becomes so eager to meet Govinda that without Govinda the entire world becomes a vacant place.

TRANSLATION

” 'Chanting the holy name in ecstasy causes Me to dance, laugh and cry.' When My spiritual master heard all this, he smiled and then began to speak.

PURPORT

When a disciple very perfectly makes progress in spiritual life, this gladdens the spiritual master, who then also smiles in ecstasy, thinking, ”How successful my disciple has become!” He feels so glad that he smiles as he enjoys the progress of the disciple, just as a smiling parent enjoys the activities of a child who is trying to stand up or crawl perfectly.

TRANSLATION

It is the nature of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra that anyone who chants it immediately develops his loving ecstasy for Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

In this verse it is explained that one who chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra develops bhāva, ecstasy, which is the point at which revelation begins. It is the preliminary stage in developing one's original love for God. Lord Kṛṣṇa mentions this bhāva stage in the Bhagavad-gītā (10.8):

ahaṁ sarvasya prabhavo mattaḥ sarvaṁ pravartate iti matvā bhajante māṁ budhā bhāva-samanvitāḥ

"I am the source of all spiritual and material worlds. Everything emanates from Me. The wise who know this perfectly engage in My devotional service and worship Me with all their hearts."

A neophyte disciple begins by hearing and chanting, associating with devotees and practicing the regulative principles, and thus he vanquishes all of his unwanted bad habits. In this way he develops attachment for Kṛṣṇa and cannot forget Kṛṣṇa even for a moment. Bhāva is almost the successful stage of spiritual life. A sincere student aurally receives the holy name from the spiritual master, and after being initiated he follows the regulative principles given by the spiritual master. When the holy name is properly served in this way, automatically the spiritual nature of the holy name spreads; in other words, the devotee becomes qualified in offenselessly chanting the holy name.

When one is completely fit to chant the holy name in this way, he is eligible to make disciples all over the world, and he actually becomes jagad-guru. Then the entire world, under his influence, begins to chant the holy names of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Thus all the disciples of such a spiritual master increase in attachment for Kṛṣṇa, and therefore he sometimes cries, sometimes laughs, sometimes dances and sometimes chants. These symptoms are very prominently manifest in the body of a pure devotee. Sometimes when our students of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement chant and dance, even in India people are astonished to see how these foreigners have learned to chant and dance in this ecstatic fashion. As explained by Caitanya Mahāprabhu, however, actually this is not due to practice, for without extra endeavor these symptoms become manifest in anyone who sincerely chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

Many fools, not knowing the transcendental nature of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, sometimes impede our loudly chanting this mantra, yet one who is actually advanced in the fulfillment of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra induces others to chant also. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī explains, kṛṣṇa-śakti vinā nahe tāra pravartana; unless one receives special power of attorney from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he cannot preach the glories of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. As devotees propagate the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, the general population of the entire world gets the opportunity to understand the glories of the holy name. While chanting and dancing or hearing the holy name of the Lord, one automatically remembers the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and because there is no difference between the holy name and Kṛṣṇa, the chanter is immediately linked with Kṛṣṇa. Thus connected, a devotee develops his original attitude of service to the Lord. In this attitude of constantly serving Kṛṣṇa, which is called bhāva, he always thinks of Kṛṣṇa in many different ways. One who has attained this bhāva stage is no longer under the clutches of the illusory energy. When other spiritual ingredients, such as trembling, perspiration and tears, are added to this bhāva stage, the devotee gradually attains love of Kṛṣṇa.

The holy name of Kṛṣṇa is called the mahā-mantra. Other mantras mentioned in the Nārada-pañcarātra are known simply as mantras, but the chanting of the holy name of the Lord is called the mahā-mantra.

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-viṣayaka-in the subject of Kṛṣṇa; premā-love; parama-the highest; puruṣa-artha-achievement of the goal of life; yāra-whose; āge-before; tṛṇa-tulya-like the grass in the street; cāri-four; puruṣa-artha-achievements.

TRANSLATION

" 'Religiosity, economic development, sense gratification and liberation are known as the four goals of life, but before love of Godhead, the fifth and highest goal, these appear as insignificant as straw in the street.

PURPORT

While chanting the holy name of the Lord, one should not desire the material advancements represented by economic development, religiosity, sense gratification and ultimately liberation from the material world. As stated by Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the highest perfection in life is to develop one's love for Kṛṣṇa (premā pum-artho mahān śri-caitanya-mahāprabhor matam idam). When we compare love of Godhead with religiosity, economic development, sense gratification and liberation, we can understand that these achievements may be desirable objectives for bubhukṣus, or those who desire to enjoy this material world, and mumukṣus, or those who desire liberation from it, but they are very insignificant in the eyes of a pure devotee who has developed bhāva, the preliminary stage of love of Godhead.

Dharma (religiosity), artha (economic development), kāma (sense gratification) and mokṣa (liberation) are the four principles of religion that pertain to the material world. Therefore in the beginning of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam it is declared, dharmaḥ projjhita-kaitavo 'tra: cheating religious systems in terms of these four material principles are completely discarded from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, for Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam teaches only how to develop one's dormant love of God. The Bhagavad-gītā is the preliminary study of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, and therefore it ends with the words, sarva-dharmān parityajya mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja: "Abandon all varieties of religion and just surrender unto Me." (Bg. 18.66) To adopt this means, one should reject all ideas of religiosity, economic development, sense gratification and liberation and fully engage in the service of the Lord, which is transcendental to these four principles. Love of Godhead is the original function of the spirit soul, and it is as eternal as the soul and the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This eternity is called sanātana. When a devotee revives his loving service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, it should be understood that he has been successful in achieving the desired goal of his life. At that time everything is automatically done by the mercy of the holy name, and the devotee automatically advances in his spiritual progress.

TRANSLATION

" 'When one actually develops love of Godhead, he naturally sometimes cries, sometimes laughs, sometimes chants and sometimes runs here and there just like a madman.

PURPORT

In this connection Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī says that sometimes persons who have no love of Godhead at all display ecstatic bodily symptoms. Artificially they sometimes laugh, cry and dance just like madmen, but this cannot help one progress in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Rather, such artificial agitation of the body is to be given up when one naturally develops the necessary bodily symptoms. Actual blissful life, manifested in genuine spiritual laughing, crying and dancing, is the symptom of real advancement in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, which can be achieved by a person who always voluntarily engages in the transcendental loving service of the Lord. If one who is not yet developed imitates such symptoms artificially, he creates chaos in the spiritual life of human society.

TRANSLATION

" 'Perspiration, trembling, standing on end of one's bodily hairs, tears, faltering voice, fading complexion, madness, melancholy, patience, pride, joy and humility-these are various natural symptoms of ecstatic love of Godhead, which causes a devotee to dance and float in an ocean of transcendental bliss while chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra.

PURPORT

Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī, in his Prīti-sandarbha (66), explains this stage of love of Godhead: bhagavat-prīti-rūpā vṛttir māyādi-mayī na bhavati. kiṁ tarhi, svarūpa-śakty-ānanda-rūpā, yad-ānanda-parādhīnaḥ śrī-bhagavān apīti. Similarly, in the 69th anuccheda he offers further explanation: tad evaṁ prīter lakṣaṇaṁ citta-dravas tasya ca roma-harṣādikam. kathañcij jāte 'pi citta-drave roma-harṣādike vā na ced āśaya-śuddhis tadāpi na bhakteḥ samyag-āvirbhāva iti jñāpitam. āśaya-śuddhir nāma cānya-tātparya-parityāgaḥ prīti-tātparyaṁ ca. ata evānimittā svābhāvikī ceti tad viśeṣaṇam. Transcendental love of Godhead is not under the jurisdiction of the material energy, for it is the transcendental bliss and pleasure potency of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Since the Supreme Lord is also under the influence of transcendental bliss, when one comes in touch with such bliss in love of Godhead, one's heart melts, and the symptoms of this are standing of the hairs on end, etc. Sometimes a person thus melts and manifests these transcendental symptoms yet at the same time is not well behaved in his personal transactions.This indicates that he has not yet reached complete perfection in devotional life. In other words, a devotee who dances in ecstasy but after dancing and crying appears to be attracted to material affairs has not yet reached the perfection of devotional service, which is called āśaya-śuddhi, or the perfection of existence. One who attains the perfection of existence is completely averse to material enjoyment and engrossed in transcendental love of Godhead. It is therefore to be concluded that the ecstatic symptoms of āśaya-śuddhi are visible when a devotee's service has no material cause and is purely spiritual in nature. These are characteristics of transcendental love of Godhead, as stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.6):

sa vai puṁsāṁ paro dharmo yato bhaktir adhokṣaje ahaituky apratihatā yayātmā suprasīdati

"That religion is best which causes its followers to become ecstatic in love of God that is unmotivated and free from material impediments, for this only can completely satisfy the self."

TRANSLATION

" 'It is very good, my dear child, that You have attained the supreme goal of life by developing love of Godhead. Thus You have pleased me very much, and I am very much obliged to You.

PURPORT

According to revealed scriptures, if a spiritual master can convert even one soul into a perfectly pure devotee, his mission in life is fulfilled. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura always used to say, "Even at the expense of all the properties, temples and maṭhas that I have, if I could convert even one person into a pure devotee, my mission would be fulfilled." It is very difficult, however, to understand the science of Kṛṣṇa, what to speak of developing love of Godhead. Therefore if by the grace of Lord Caitanya and the spiritual master a disciple attains the standard of pure devotional service, the spiritual master is very happy. The spiritual master is not actually happy if the disciple brings him money, but when he sees that a disciple is following the regulative principles and advancing in spiritual life, he is very glad and feels obliged to such an advanced disciple.

nāca, gāo, bhakta-saṅge kara saṅkīrtana kṛṣṇa-nāma upadeśi' tāra' sarva-jana

SYNONYMS

nāca-go on dancing; gāo-chant; bhakta-saṅge-in the society of devotees; kara-continue; saṅkīrtana-chanting of the holy name in assembly; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; upadeśi'-by instructing; tāra'-deliver; sarva-jana-all fallen souls.

TRANSLATION

" 'My dear child, continue dancing, chanting and performing saṅkīrtana in association with devotees. Furthermore, go out and preach the value of chanting kṛṣṇa-nāma, for by this process You will be able to deliver all fallen souls.'

PURPORT

It is another ambition of the spiritual master to see his disciples not only chant, dance and follow the regulative principles but also preach the saṅkīrtana movement to others in order to deliver them, for the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is based on the principle that one should become as perfect as possible in devotional service oneself and also preach the cult for others' benefit. There are two classes of unalloyed devotees-namely, goṣṭhy-ānandīs and bhajanānandīs. Bhajanānandī refers to one who is satisfied to cultivate devotional service for himself, and goṣṭhy-ānandī is one who is not satisfied simply to become perfect himself but wants to see others also take advantage of the holy name of the Lord and advance in spiritual life. The outstanding example is Prahlāda Mahārāja. When he was offered a benediction by Lord Nṛsiṁhadeva, Prahlāda Mahārāja said:

naivodvije para duratyaya-vaitaraṇyās tvad-vīrya-gāyana-mahāmṛta-magna-cittaḥ śoce tato vimukha-cetasa indriyārtha-māyā-sukhāya bharam udvahato vimūḍhān

"My dear Lord, I have no problems and want no benediction from You because I am quite satisfied to chant Your holy name. This is sufficient for me because whenever I chant I immediately merge in an ocean of transcendental bliss. I only lament to see others bereft of Your love. They are rotting in material activities for transient material pleasure and spoiling their lives toiling all day and night simply for sense gratification, with no attachment for love of Godhead. I am simply lamenting for them and devising various plans to deliver them from the clutches of māyā." (Bhāg. 7.9.43)

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura explains in his Anubhāṣya, "A person who has attracted the attention of the spiritual master by his sincere service likes to dance and chant with similarly developed Kṛṣṇa conscious devotees. The spiritual master authorizes such a devotee to deliver fallen souls in all parts of the world. Those who are not advanced prefer to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra in a solitary place.” Such activities constitute, in the language of Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvati Ṭhākura, a type of cheating process in the sense that they imitate the activities of exalted personalities like Haridāsa Ṭhākura. One should not attempt to imitate such exalted devotees. Rather, everyone should endeavor to preach the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in all parts of the world and thus become successful in spiritual life. One who is not very expert in preaching may chant in a secluded place, avoiding bad association, but for one who is actually advanced, preaching and meeting people who are not engaged in devotional service are not disadvantages. A devotee gives the nondevotees his association but is not affected by their misbehavior. Thus by the activities of a pure devotee even those who are bereft of love of Godhead get a chance to become devotees of the Lord one day. In this connection Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura advises that one discuss the verse in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam beginning naitat samācarej jātu manasāpi hy anīśvaraḥ (10.33.30), and the following verse in Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.255):

anāsaktasya viṣayān yathārham upayuñjataḥ nirbandhaḥ kṛṣṇa-sambandhe yuktaṁ vairāgyam ucyate

One should not imitate the activities of great personalities. One should be detached from material enjoyment and should accept everything in connection with Kṛṣṇa’s service.

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.40) was spoken by Śrī Nārada Muni to Vasudeva to teach him about Bhāgavata-dharma. Vasudeva had already achieved the result of Bhāgavata-dharma because Lord Kṛṣṇa appeared in his house as his son, yet in order to teach others, he desired to hear from Śrī Nārada Muni to be enlightened in the process of Bhāgavata-dharma. This is the humbleness of a great devotee.

TRANSLATION

”I firmly believe in these words of My spiritual master, and therefore I always chant the holy name of the Lord, alone and in the association of devotees. That holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa sometimes causes Me to chant and dance, and therefore I chant and dance. Please do not think that I intentionally do it. I do it automatically.

PURPORT

A person who cannot keep his faith in the words of his spiritual master but acts independently never receives the authority to chant the holy name of the Lord. It is said in the Vedas (Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 6.23):

yasya deve parā bhaktir
yathā deve tathā gurau
tasyaite kathitā hy arthāḥ
prakāśante mahātmanaḥ

"Only unto those great souls who have implicit faith in both the Lord and the spiritual master are all the imports of Vedic knowledge automatically revealed." This Vedic injunction is very important, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu supported it by His personal behavior. Believing in the words of His spiritual master, He introduced the saṅkīrtana movement, just as the present Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement was started with belief in the words of our spiritual master. He wanted to preach, we believed in his words and tried somehow or other to fulfill them, and now this movement has become successful all over the world. Therefore faith in the words of the spiritual master and in the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the secret of success. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu never disobeyed the orders of His spiritual master and stopped propagating the saṅkīrtana movement. Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī, at the time of his passing away, ordered all his disciples to work conjointly to preach the mission of Caitanya Mahāprabhu all over the world. Later, however, some self-interested, foolish disciples disobeyed his orders. Each one of them wanted to become head of the mission, and they fought in the courts, neglecting the order of the spiritual master, and the entire mission was defeated. We are not proud of this; however, the truth must be explained. We believed in the words of our spiritual master and started in a humble way-in a helpless way-but due to the spiritual force of the order of the supreme authority, this movement has become successful.

It is to be understood that when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu chanted and danced, He did so by the influence of the pleasure potency of the spiritual world. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu never considered the holy name of the Lord to be a material vibration, nor does any pure devotee mistake the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra to be a material musical manifestation. Lord Caitanya never tried to be the master of the holy name; rather He taught us how to be servants of the holy name. If one chants the holy name of the Lord just to make a show, not knowing the secret of success, he may increase his bile secretion, but he will never attain perfection in chanting the holy name. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu presented himself in this way: "I am a great fool and do not have knowledge of right and wrong. In order to understand the real meaning of the Vedānta-sūtra, I never followed the explanation of the Śaṅkara-sampradāya or Māyāvādī sannyāsīs. I'm very much afraid of the illogical arguments of the Māyāvādī philosophers. Therefore I think I have no authority regarding their explanations of the Vedānta-sūtra. I firmly believe that simply chanting the holy name of the Lord can remove all misconceptions of the material world. I believe that simply by chanting the holy name of the Lord one can attain the shelter of the lotus feet of the Lord. In this age of quarrel and disagreement, the chanting of the holy names is the only way to liberation from the material clutches.

"By chanting the holy name," Lord Caitanya continued, "I became almost mad. However, after inquiring from My spiritual master I have come to the conclusion that instead of striving for achievement in the four principles of religiosity [dharma], economic development [artha], sense gratification [kāma] and liberation [mokṣa], it is better if somehow or other one develops transcendental love of Godhead. That is the greatest success in life. One who has attained love of Godhead chants and dances by his nature, not caring for the public." This stage of life is known as bhāgavata-jīvana, or the life of a devotee.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, "I never chanted and danced to make an artificial show. I dance and chant because I firmly believe in the words of My spiritual master. Although the Māyāvādī philosophers do not like this chanting and dancing, I nevertheless perform it on the strength of his words. Therefore it is to be concluded that I deserve very little credit for these activities of chanting and dancing, for they are being done automatically by the grace of the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-nāme-in the holy name of the Lord; ye-which; ānanda-transcendental bliss; sindhu-ocean; āsvādana-tasting; brahma-ānanda-the transcendental bliss of impersonal understanding; tāra-its; āge-in front; khāta-udaka-shallow water in the canals; sama-like.

TRANSLATION

"Compared to the ocean of transcendental bliss that is tasted by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, the pleasure derived from impersonal Brahman realization [brahmānanda] is like the shallow water in a canal.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.1.38) it is stated:

brahmānando bhaved eṣa cet parārdha-guṇī-kṛtaḥ naiti bhakti-sukhāmbhodheḥ paramāṇu-tulām api

"If brahmānanda, the transcendental bliss derived from understanding impersonal Brahman, were multiplied a million times, such a quantity of brahmānanda could not compare with even an atomic portion of the pleasure relished in pure devotional service."

SYNONYMS

tvat-Your; sākṣāt-meeting; karaṇa-such action; āhlāda-pleasure; viśuddha-spiritually purified; abdhi-ocean; sthitasya-being situated; me-by me; sukhāni-happiness; goṣpadāyante-a small hole created by the hoof of a calf; brāhmaṇi-the pleasure derived from impersonal Brahman understanding; api-also; jagat-guro-O master of the universe.

TRANSLATION

" 'My dear Lord, O master of the universe, since I have directly seen You, my transcendental bliss has taken the shape of a great ocean. Being situated in that ocean, I now realize all other so-called happiness to be like the water contained in the hoofprint of a calf.' "

PURPORT

The transcendental bliss enjoyed in pure devotional service is like an ocean, whereas material happiness and even the happiness to be derived from the realization of impersonal Brahman are just like the water in the hoofprint of a calf. This is a verse from the Hari-bhakti-sudhodaya (14.36).

prabhura miṣṭa-vākya śuni' sannyāsīra gaṇa citta phiri' gela, kahe madhura vacana

SYNONYMS

prabhura-of the Lord; miṣṭa-vākya-sweet words; śuni'-after hearing; sannyāsīra gaṇa-all the groups of sannyāsīs; citta-consciousness; phiri'-moved; gela-went; kahe-said; madhura-pleasing; vacana-words.

TRANSLATION

After hearing Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, all the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs were moved. Their minds changed, and thus they spoke with pleasing words.

PURPORT

The Māyāvādī sannyāsīs met Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Vārāṇasī to criticize the Lord regarding His participation in the saṅkīrtana movement, which they did not like. This demonic nature of opposition to the saṅkīrtana movement perpetually exists. As it existed in the time of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, similarly it existed long before that, even in the time of Prahlāda Mahārāja. He used to chant in saṅkīrtana although his father did not like it, and that was the reason for the misunderstanding between the father and son. In the Bhagavad-gītā (7.15) the Lord says:

na māṁ duṣkṛtino mūḍhāh prapadyante narādhamāḥ
māyayāpahṛta-jñānā
āsuraṁ bhāvam āśritāḥ

"Those miscreants who are grossly foolish, who are lowest among mankind, whose knowledge is stolen by illusion, and who partake of the atheistic nature of demons do not surrender unto Me." The Māyāvādī sannyāsīs are āsuraṁ bhāvam āśritāḥ, which means that they have taken the path of the asuras (demons), who do not believe in the existence of the form of the Lord. The Māyāvādīs say that the ultimate source of everything is impersonal, and in this way they deny the existence of God. Saying that there is no God is direct denial of God, and saying that God exists but has no head, legs or hands and cannot speak, hear or eat is a negative way of denying His existence. A person who cannot see is called blind, one who cannot walk can be called lame, one who has no hands can be called helpless, one who cannot speak can be called dumb, and one who cannot hear can be called deaf. The Māyāvādīs' proposition that God has no legs, no eyes, no ears and no hands is an indirect way of insulting Him by defining Him as blind, deaf, dumb, lame, helpless, etc. Therefore although they present themselves as great Vedāntists, they are factually māyayāpahṛta-jñāna; in other words, they seem to be very learned scholars, but the essence of their knowledge has been taken away.

Impersonalist Māyāvādīs always try to defy Vaiṣṇavas because Vaiṣṇavas accept the Supreme Personality as the supreme cause and want to serve Him, talk with Him and see Him, just as the Lord is also eager to see His devotees and talk, eat and dance with them. These personal exchanges of love do not appeal to the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs. Therefore the original purpose of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs of Benares in meeting Caitanya Mahāprabhu was to defeat His personal conception of God. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, however, as a preacher, turned the minds of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs. They were melted by the sweet words of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and thus became friendly and spoke to Him also in sweet words. Similarly, all preachers will have to meet opponents, but they should not make them more inimical. They are already enemies, and if we talk with them harshly or impolitely their enmity will merely increase. We should therefore follow in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu as far as possible and try to convince the opposition by quoting from the śāstras and presenting the conclusion of the ācāryas. It is in this way that we should try to defeat all the enemies of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

"Dear Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, what You have said is all true. Only one who is favored by fortune attains love of Godhead.

PURPORT

One who is actually very fortunate can begin Kṛṣṇa consciousness, as stated by Caitanya Mahāprabhu to Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī:

brahmāṇḍa bhramite kona bhāgyavān jīva guru-kṛṣṇa-prasāde pāya bhakti-latā-bīja
(Cc. Madhya 19.151)

There are millions of living entities who have become conditioned by the laws of material nature, and they are wandering throughout the planetary systems of this universe in different bodily forms. Among them, one who is fortunate meets a bona fide spiritual master by the grace of Kṛṣṇa and comes to understand the meaning of devotional service. By discharging devotional service under the direction of the bona fide spiritual master, or ācārya, he develops love of Godhead. One whose love of Godhead (kṛṣṇa-prema) is awakened and who thus becomes a devotee of the inconceivable Supreme Personality of Godhead is to be considered extremely fortunate. The Māyāvādī sannyāsīs admitted this fact to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. It is not easy for one to become a Kṛṣṇa conscious person, but by the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu it can be possible, as will be proven in the course of this narration.

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇe-unto Kṛṣṇa; bhakti-devotional service; kara-do; ihāya-in this matter; sabāra-of everyone; santoṣa-there is satisfaction; vedānta-the philosophy of the Vedānta-sūtra; nā-do not; śuna-hear; kene-why; tāra-of the philosophy; kibā-what is; doṣa-fault.

TRANSLATION

”Dear sir, there is no objection to Your being a great devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Everyone is satisfied with this. But why do You avoid discussion on the Vedānta-sūtra? What is the fault in it?”

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments in this connection, ”Māyāvādī sannyāsīs accept that the commentary by Śrī Śaṅkarācārya known as Śārīraka-bhāṣya gives the real meaning of the Vedanta-sūtra. In other words, Māyāvādī sannyāsīs accept the meanings expressed in the explanations of the Vedānta-sūtra by Śaṅkarācārya, which are based on monism. Thus they explain the Vedānta-sūtra, the Upaniṣads and all such Vedic literature in their own impersonal way.” The great Māyāvādī sannyāsī Sadānanda Yogīndra has written a book known as Vedānta-sāra, in which he writes, vedānto nāma upaniṣat-pramāṇam. tad-upakārīṇi śārīraka-sūtrādīni ca. According to Sadānanda Yogīndra, the Vedānta-sūtra and Upaniṣads, as presented by Śrī Śaṅkarācārya in his Śārīraka-bhāṣya commentary, are the only sources of Vedic evidence. Actually, however, Vedānta refers to the essence of Vedic knowledge, and it is not a fact that there is nothing more than Śaṅkarācārya’s Śārīraka-bhāṣya. There are other Vedānta commentaries, written by Vaiṣṇava ācāryas, none of whom follow Śrī Śaṅkarācārya or accept the imaginative commentary of his school. Their commentaries are based on the philosophy of duality. Monist philosophers like Śaṅkarācārya and his followers want to establish that God and the living entity are one, and instead of worshiping the Supreme Personality of Godhead they present themselves as God. They want to be worshiped as God by others. Such persons do not accept the philosophies of the Vaiṣṇava ācāryas, which are known as śuddhādvaita (purified monism), śuddha-dvaita (purified dualism), viśiṣṭādvaita (specific monism), dvaitādvaita (monism and dualism) and acintya-bhedābheda (inconceivable oneness and difference). Māyāvādīs do not discuss these philosophies, for they are firmly convinced of their own philosophy of kevalādvaita, exclusive monism. Accepting this system of philosophy as the pure understanding of the Vedānta-sūtra, they believe that Kṛṣṇa has a body made of material elements and that the activities of loving service to Kṛṣṇa are sentimentality. They are known as Māyāvādīs because according to their opinion Kṛṣṇa has a body made of māyā, and the loving service of the Lord executed by devotees is also māyā. They consider such devotional service to be an aspect of fruitive activities (karma-kāṇḍa). According to their view, bhakti consists of mental speculation or sometimes meditation. This is the difference between the Māyāvādī and Vaiṣṇava philosophies.

SYNONYMS

eta-thus; śuni’-hearing; hāsi’-smiling; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; balilā-said; vacana-His words; duḥkha-unhappy; nā-do not; mānaha-take it; yadi-if; kari-I say; nivedana-something unto you.

TRANSLATION

After hearing the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs speak in that way, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu smiled slightly and said, ”My dear sirs, if you don’t mind I can say something to you regarding Vedānta philosophy.”

PURPORT

The Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, appreciating Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, inquired from Him why He did not discuss Vedānta philosophy. Actually, however, the entire system of Vaiṣṇava activities is based on Vedānta philosophy. Vaiṣṇavas do not neglect Vedānta, but they do not care to understand Vedānta on the basis of the Śārīraka-bhāṣya commentary. Therefore, to clarify the situation, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, with the permission of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, wanted to speak regarding Vedānta philosophy.

The Vaiṣṇavas are by far the greatest philosophers in the world, and the greatest among them was Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī Prabhu, whose philosophy was again presented less than four hundred years later by Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura Mahārāja. Therefore one must know very well that Vaiṣṇava philosophers are not sentimentalists or cheap devotees like the sahajiyās. All the Vaiṣṇava ācāryas were vastly learned scholars who understood Vedānta philosophy fully, for unless one knows Vedānta philosophy he cannot be an ācārya. To be accepted as an ācārya among Indian transcendentalists who follow the Vedic principles, one must become a vastly learned scholar in Vedānta philosophy, either by studying it or hearing it.

Bhakti develops in pursuance of Vedānta philosophy. This is stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.12):

tac chraddadhānā munayo jñāna-vairāgya-yuktayā paśyanty ātmani cātmānaṁ bhaktyā śruta-gṛhītayā

The words bhaktyā śruta-gṛhītayā in this verse are very important, for they indicate that bhakti must be based upon the philosophy of the Upaniṣads and Vedānta-sūtra. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī said:

śruti-smṛti-purāṇādipañcarātra-vidhiṁ vinā
aikāntikī harer bhaktir
utpātāyaiva kalpate

”Devotional service performed without reference to the Vedas, Purāṇas, Pañcarātras, etc., must be considered sentimentalism, and it causes nothing but disturbance to society.” There are different grades of Vaiṣṇavas (kaniṣṭha-adhikārī, madhyama-adhikārī and uttama-adhikārī), but to be a madhyama-adhikārī preacher one must be a learned scholar in the Vedānta-sūtra and other Vedic literature because when bhakti-yoga develops on the basis of Vedānta philosophy it is factual and steady. In this connection we may quote the translation and purport of the verse mentioned above (Bhāg. 1.2.12):

TRANSLATION

The seriously inquisitive student or sage, well equipped with knowledge and detachment, realizes that Absolute Truth by rendering devotional service in terms of what he has heard from the Vedānta-śruti.

PURPORT

The Absolute Truth is realized in full by the process of devotional service to the Lord, Vāsudeva, or the Personality of Godhead, who is the full-fledged Absolute Truth. Brahman is His transcendental bodily effulgence, and Paramātmā is His partial representation. As such, Brahman or Paramātmā realization of the Absolute Truth is but a partial realization. There are four different types of human beings-the karmīs, the jñānīs, the yogīs and the devotees. The karmīs are materialistic, whereas the other three are transcendental. The first-class transcendentalists are the devotees who have realized the Supreme Person. The second-class transcendentalists are those who have partially realized the plenary portion of the absolute person. And the third-class transcendentalists are those who have barely realized the spiritual focus of the absolute person. As stated in the Bhagavad-gītā and other Vedic literatures, the Supreme Person is realized by devotional service which is backed by full knowledge and detachment from material association. We have already discussed the point that devotional service is followed by knowledge and detachment from material association. As Brahman and Paramātmā realization are imperfect realizations of the Absolute Truth, so the means of realizing Brahman and Paramātmā, i.e., the paths of jñāna and yoga, are also imperfect means of realizing the Absolute Truth. Devotional service which is based on the foreground of full knowledge combined with detachment from material association, and which is fixed by dint of the aural reception of the Vedānta-śruti, is the only perfect method by which the seriously inquisitive student can realize the Absolute Truth. Devotional service is not, therefore, meant for the less intelligent class of transcendentalist.

There are three classes of devotees, namely first, second and third class. The third-class devotees, or the neophytes, who have no knowledge and are not detached from material association, but who are simply attracted by the preliminary process of worshiping the Deity in the temple, are called material devotees. Material devotees are more attached to material benefit than transcendental profit. Therefore, one has to make definite progress from the position of material devotional service to the second-class devotional position. In the second-class position, the devotee can see four principles in the devotional line, namely the Personality of Godhead, His devotees, the ignorant and the envious. One has to raise himself at least to the stage of a second-class devotee and thus become eligible to know the Absolute Truth.

A third-class devotee, therefore, has to receive the instructions of devotional service from the authoritative sources of Bhāgavata. The number one Bhāgavata is the established personality of devotee, and the other Bhāgavata is the message of Godhead. The third-class devotee therefore has to go to the personality of devotee in order to learn the instructions of devotional service. Such a personality of devotee is not a professional man who earns his livelihood by the business of the Bhāgavatam. Such a devotee must be a representative of Śukadeva Gosvāmī, like Sūta Gosvāmī, and must preach the cult of devotional service for the all-around benefit of all people. A neophyte devotee has very little taste for hearing from the authorities. Such a neophyte devotee makes a show of hearing from the professional man to satisfy his senses. This sort of hearing and chanting has spoiled the whole thing, so one should be very careful about the faulty process. The holy messages of Godhead, as inculcated in the Bhagavad-gītā or in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, are undoubtedly transcendental subjects, but even though they are so, such transcendental matters are not to be received from the professional man, who spoils them as the serpent spoils milk simply by the touch of his tongue.

A sincere devotee must, therefore, be prepared to hear the Vedic literature like the Upaniṣads, Vedānta-sūtra and other literatures left by the previous authorities, or Gosvāmīs, for the benefit of his progress. Without hearing such literatures, one cannot make actual progress. And without hearing and following the instructions, the show of devotional service becomes worthless and therefore a sort of disturbance in the path of devotional service. Unless, therefore, devotional service is established on the principles of śruti, smṛti, Purāṇa and Pañcarātra authorities, the make-show of devotional service should at once be rejected. An unauthorized devotee should never be recognized as a pure devotee. By assimilation of such messages from the Vedic literatures, one can see the all-pervading localized aspect of the Personality of Godhead within his own self constantly. This is called samādhi.

tomāke dekhiye yaiche sākṣāt nārāyaṇa

SYNONYMS

ihā-this; śuni'-hearing; bale-spoke; sarva-all; sannyāsīra-of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs; gaṇa-group; tomāke-unto You; dekhiye-we see; yaiche-exactly like; sākṣāt-directly; nārāyaṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this, the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs became somewhat humble and addressed Caitanya Mahāprabhu as Nārāyaṇa Himself, who they all agreed He was.

PURPORT

Māyāvādī sannyāsīs address each other as Nārāyaṇa. Whenever they see another sannyāsī, they offer him respect by calling oṁ namo nārāyaṇāya ("I offer my respect unto you, Nārāyaṇa"), although they know perfectly well what kind of Nārāyaṇa he is. Nārāyaṇa has four hands, but although they are puffed up with the idea of being Nārāyaṇa, they cannot exhibit more than two. Since their philosophy declares that Nārāyaṇa and an ordinary human being are both on the same level, they sometimes use the term daridra-nārāyaṇa ("poor Nārāyaṇa"), which was invented by a so-called svāmī who did not know anything about Vedānta philosophy. Therefore although all these Māyāvādī sannyāsīs who called themselves Nārāyaṇa were actually unaware of the position of Nārāyaṇa, due to their austerities Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu enabled them to understand Him to be Nārāyaṇa Himself. Lord Caitanya is certainly the Supreme Personality of Godhead Nārāyaṇa appearing as a devotee of Nārāyaṇa, and thus the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, understanding that He was directly Nārāyaṇa Himself whereas they were false, puffed-up Nārāyaṇas, spoke to Him as follows.

TEXT 104

tomāra vacana śuni' juḍāya śravaṇa tomāra mādhurī dekhi' juḍāya nayana

SYNONYMS

tomāra-Your; vacana-speeches; śuni'-hearing; juḍāya-very much satisfied; śravaṇa-aural reception; tomāra-Your; mādhurī-nectar; dekhi'-seeing; juḍāya-satisfies; nayana-our eyes.

TRANSLATION

"Dear Caitanya Mahāprabhu," they said, "to tell You the truth, we are greatly pleased to hear Your words, and furthermore Your bodily features are so pleasing that we feel extraordinary satisfaction in seeing You.

PURPORT

In the śāstras it is said:

ataḥ śrī-kṛṣṇa-nāmādi
na bhaved grāhyam indriyaiḥ
sevonmukhe hi jihvādau
svayam eva sphuraty adaḥ

"With one's materially contaminated senses one cannot understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead or His name, form, qualities or paraphernalia, but if one renders service unto Him the Lord reveals Himself." (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 1.2.234) Here one can see the effect of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs' service toward Nārāyaṇa. Because they offered a little respect to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and because they were pious and actually followed the austere rules and regulations of sannyāsa, they had some understanding of Vedānta philosophy, and by the grace of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu they could appreciate that He was none other than the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is endowed with all six opulences. One of these opulences is His beauty. By His extraordinarily beautiful bodily features the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs recognized Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as Nārāyaṇa Himself. He was not a farcical Nārāyaṇa like the daridra-nārāyaṇas invented by so-called sannyāsīs.

tomāra prabhāve sabāra ānandita mana kabhu asaṅgata nahe tomāra vacana

SYNONYMS

tomāra-Your; prabhāve-by influence; sabāra-of everyone; ānandita-joyful; mana-mind; kabhu-at anytime; asaṅgata-unreasonable; nahe-does not; tomāra-Your; vacana-speeches.

TRANSLATION

"Dear sir, by Your influence our minds are greatly satisfied, and we believe that Your words will never be unreasonable. Therefore You can speak on the Vedānta-sūtra."

PURPORT

In this verse the words tomāra prabhāve ("Your influence") are very important. Unless one is spiritually advanced he cannot influence an audience. Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has sung, śuddha-bhakata-caraṇa-reṇu, bhajana-anukūla. "Unless one associates with a pure devotee he cannot be influenced to understand devotional service." These Māyāvādī sannyāsīs were fortunate enough to meet the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the form of a devotee, and certainly they were greatly influenced by the Lord. They knew that since a perfectly advanced spiritualist never says anything false, all his words are reasonable and agree with the Vedic version. A highly realized person never says anything that has no meaning. Māyāvādī philosophers claim to be the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and this has no meaning, but Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu never uttered such nonsense. The Māyāvādī sannyāsīs were convinced about His personality, and therefore they wanted to hear from Him the purport of Vedānta philosophy.

TEXT 106

prabhu kahe, vedānta-sūtra īśvara-vacana vyāsa-rūpe kaila yāhā śrī-nārāyaṇa

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord began to speak; vedānta-sūtra-the philosophy of Vedanta-sūtra; īśvara-vacana-spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead; vyāsa-rūpe-in the form of Vyāsadeva; kaila-He has made; yāhā-whatever; śrī-nārāyaṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

The Lord said, "Vedānta philosophy consists of words spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Nārāyaṇa in the form of Vyāsadeva.

PURPORT

The Vedānta-sūtra, which consists of aphorisms revealing the method of understanding Vedic knowledge, is the concise form of all Vedic knowledge. It begins with the words athāto brahma-jijñāsā ("Now is the time to inquire about the Absolute Truth"). The human form of life is especially meant for this purpose, and therefore the Vedānta-sūtra very concisely explains the human mission. This is confirmed by the words of the Vāyu and Skanda Purāṇas, which define a sūtra as follows:

alpākṣaram asandigdhaṁ sāra-vat viśvato-mukham astobham anavadyaṁ ca sūtraṁ sūtra-vido viduḥ

"A sūtra is an aphorism that expresses the essence of all knowledge in a minimum of words It must be universally applicable and faultless in its linguistic presentation." Anyone familiar with such sūtras must be aware of the Vedānta-sūtra, which is well known among scholars by the following different names: (1) Brahma-sūtra, (2) Śārīraka, (3) Vyāsa-sūtra, (4) Bādarāyaṇa-sūtra, (5) Uttara-mīmāṁsā and (6) Vedānta-darśana.

There are four chapters (adhyāyas) in the Vedānta-sūtra, and there are four divisions (pādas) in each chapter. Therefore the Vedānta-sūtra may be referred to as ṣoḍaśa-pāda, or sixteen divisions of aphorisms. The theme of each and every division is fully described in terms of five different subject matters (adhikaraṇas), which are technically called pratijñā, hetu, udāharaṇa, upanaya and nigamana. Every theme must necessarily be explained with reference to pratijñā, or a solemn declaration of the purpose of the treatise. The solemn declaration given in the beginning of the Vedānta-sūtra is athāto brahma-jijñāsā, which indicates that this book was written with the solemn declaration to inquire about the Absolute Truth. Similarly, reasons must be expressed (hetu), examples must be given in terms of various facts (udaharaṇa), the theme must gradually be brought nearer for understanding (upanaya), and finally it must be supported by authoritative quotations from the Vedic śāstras (nigamana).

According to the great dictionary compiler Hemacandra, also known as Koṣakāra, Vedānta refers to the purport of the Upaniṣads and the Brāhmaṇa portion of the Vedas. Professor Apte, in his dictionary, describes the Brāhmaṇa portion of the Vedas as that portion which states the rules for employment of hymns at various sacrifices and gives detailed explanations of their origin, sometimes with lengthy illustrations in the form of legends and stories. It is distinct from the mantra portion of the Vedas. Hemacandra said that the supplement of the Vedas is called the Vedānta-sūtra. Veda means knowledge, and anta means the end. In other words, proper understanding of the ultimate purpose of the Vedas is called Vedānta knowledge. Such knowledge, as given in the aphorisms of the Vedānta-sūtra, must be supported by the Upaniṣads.

According to learned scholars, there are three different sources of knowledge, which are called prasthāna-traya. According to these scholars, Vedānta is one of such sources, for it presents Vedic knowledge on the basis of logic and sound arguments. In the Bhagavad-gītā (13.5) the Lord says, brahma-sūtra-padaiś caiva hetumadbhir viniścitaiḥ: "Understanding of the ultimate goal of life is ascertained in the Brahma-sūtra by legitimate logic and argument concerning cause and effect." Therefore the Vedānta-sūtra is known as nyāya-prasthāna, the Upaniṣads are known as śruti-prasthāna, and the Gītā, Mahābhārata and Purāṇas are known as smṛti-prasthāna. All scientific knowledge of transcendence must be supported by śruti, smṛti and a sound logical basis.

It is said that both the Vedic knowledge and the supplement of the Vedas called the Sātvata-pañcarātra emanated from the breathing of Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Vedānta-sūtra aphorisms were compiled by Śrīla Vyāsadeva, a powerful incarnation of Śrī Nārāyaṇa, although it is sometimes said that they were compiled by a great sage named Apāntaratamā. Both the Pañcarātra and Vedānta-sūtra, however, express the same opinions. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore confirms that there is no difference in opinion between the two, and He declares that because the Vedānta-sūtra was compiled by Śrīla Vyāsadeva, it may be understood to have emanated from the breathing of Śrī Nārāyaṇa. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvati Ṭhākura comments that while Vyāsadeva was compiling the Vedānta-sūtra, seven of his great saintly contemporaries were also engaged in similar work. These saints were Ātreya Ṛṣi, Āśmarathya, Auḍulomi, Kārṣṇājini, Kāśakṛtsna, Jaimini and Bādarī. In addition, it is stated that Pārāśarī and Karmandī-bhikṣu also discussed the Vedānta-sūtra aphorisms before Vyāsadeva.

The Vedānta-sūtra consists of four chapters. The first two chapters discuss the relationship of the living entity with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is known as sambandha-jñāna, or knowledge of the relationship. The third chapter describes how one can act in his relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is called abhidheya-jñāna. The relationship of the living entity with the Supreme Lord is described by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu: jīvera 'svarūpa' haya kṛṣṇera 'nitya-dāsa'. "The living entity is an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme God." (Cc. Madhya 20.108) Therefore, to act in that relationship one must perform sādhana-bhakti, or the prescribed duties of service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is called abhidheya-jñāna. The fourth chapter describes the result of such devotional service (prayojana-jñāna). This ultimate goal of life is to go back home, back to Godhead. The words anāvṛttiḥ śabdāt in the Vedānta-sūtra indicate this ultimate goal.

Śrīla Vyāsadeva, a powerful incarnation of Nārāyaṇa, compiled the Vedānta-sūtra, and in order to protect it from unauthorized commentaries, he personally composed Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam on the instruction of his spiritual master, Nārada Muni, as the original commentary on the Vedānta-sūtra. Besides Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, there are commentaries on the Vedānta-sūtra composed by all the major Vaiṣṇava ācāryas, and in each of them devotional service to the Lord is described very explicitly. Only those who follow Śaṅkara's commentary have described the Vedānta-sūtra in an impersonal way, without reference to viṣṇu-bhakti, or devotional service to the Lord, Viṣṇu. Generally people very much appreciate this Śārīraka-bhāṣya, or impersonal description of the Vedānta-sūtra, but all commentaries that are devoid of devotional service to Lord Viṣṇu must be considered to differ in purpose from the original Vedānta-sūtra. In other words, Lord Caitanya definitely confirmed that the commentaries, or bhāṣyas, written by the Vaiṣṇava ācāryas on the basis of devotional service to Lord Viṣṇu, and not the Śārīraka-bhāṣya of Śaṅkarācārya, give the actual explanation of the Vedānta-sūtra.

bhrama-mistake; pramāda-illusion; vipralipsā-cheating purposes; karaṇa-apāṭava-inefficiency of the material senses; īśvarera-of the Lord; vākye-in the speech; nāhi-there is not; doṣa-fault; ei saba-all this.

TRANSLATION

"The material defects of mistakes, illusions, cheating and sensory inefficiency do not exist in the words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

PURPORT

A mistake is the acceptance of an object to be different than what it is or the acceptance of false knowledge. For example, one may see a rope in the dark and think it to be a serpent, or one may see a glittering oyster shell and think it to be gold. These are mistakes. Similarly, an illusion is a misunderstanding that arises from inattention while hearing, and cheating is the transmission of such defective knowledge to others. Materialistic scientists and philosophers generally use such words as "maybe" and "perhaps" because they do not have actual knowledge of complete facts. Therefore their instructing others is an example of cheating. The final defect of the materialistic person is his inefficient senses. Although our eyes, for example, have the power to see, they cannot see that which is situated at a distance, nor can they see the eyelid, which is the object nearest to the eye. To our untrained eyes the sun appears to be just like a plate, and to the eyes of one who is suffering from jaundice everything appears to be yellow. Therefore we cannot rely on the knowledge acquired through such imperfect eyes. The ears are equally imperfect. We cannot hear a sound vibrated a long distance away unless we put a telephone to our ear. Similarly, if we analyze all our senses in this way, we will find them all to be imperfect. Therefore it is useless to acquire knowledge through the senses. The Vedic process is to hear from authority. In the Bhagavad-gītā (4.2) the Lord says, evaṁ paramparā-prāptam imaṁ rājarṣayo viduḥ: "The supreme science was thus received through the chain of disciplic succession, and the saintly kings understood it in that way." We have to hear not from a telephone but from an authorized person, for it is he who has real knowledge.

PURPORT

It has become fashionable since the time of Śaṅkarācārya to explain everything regarding the śāstras in an indirect way. Scholars take pride in explaining everything in their own way, and they declare that one can understand the Vedic scriptures in any way he likes. This "any way you like" method is foolishness, and it has created havoc in the Vedic culture. One cannot accept scientific knowledge in his own whimsical way. In the science of mathematics, for example, two plus two equals four, and one cannot make it equal three or five. Yet although it is not possible to alter real knowledge, people have taken to the fashion of understanding Vedic knowledge in any way they like. It is for this reason that we have presented Bhagavad-gītā As It Is. We do not create meanings by concoction. Sometimes commentators say that the word kurukṣetra in the first verse of the Bhagavad-gītā refers to one's body, but we do not accept this. We understand that Kurukṣetra is a place that still exists, and according to the Vedic version it is a dharma-kṣetra, or a place of pilgrimage. People still go there to perform Vedic sacrifices. Foolish commentators, however, say that kurukṣetra means the body and that pañca-pāṇḍava refers to the five senses. In this way they distort the meaning, and people are misled. Here Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu confirms that all Vedic literature, including the Upaniṣads, Brahma-sūtra and others, whether śruti, smṛti or nyāya, must be understood according to their original statements. To describe the direct meaning of the Vedic scriptures is glorious, but to describe them in one's own way, using imperfect senses and imperfect knowledge, is a disastrous blunder. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu fully deprecated the attempt to describe the Vedas in this way.

Regarding the Upaniṣads, the following eleven Upaniṣads are considered to be the topmost: Īśa, Kena, Kaṭha, Praśna, Muṇḍaka, Māṇḍūkya, Taittirīya, Aitareya, Chāndogya, Bṛhad-āraṇyaka and Śvetāśvatara. However, in the Muktikopaniṣad, verses 30-39, there is a description of 108 Upaniṣads. They are as follows: (1) Īśopaniṣad, (2) Kenopaniṣad, (3) Kaṭhopaniṣad, (4) Praśnopaniṣad, (5) Muṇḍakopaniṣad, (6) Māṇḍūkyopaniṣad, (7) Taittirīyopaniṣad, (8) Aitareyopaniṣad, (9) Chāndogyopaniṣad, (10) Bṛhad-āraṇyakopaniṣad, (11) Brahmopaniṣad, (12) Kaivalyopaniṣad, (13) Jābālopaniṣad, (14) Śvetāśvataropaniṣad, (15) Haṁsopaniṣad, (16) Āruṇeyopaniṣad, (17) Garbhopaniṣad, (18) Nārāyaṇopaniṣad, (19) Paramahaṁsopaniṣad, (20) Amṛta-bindūpaniṣad, (21) Nāda-bindūpaniṣad, (22) Śiropaniṣad, (23) Atharva-śikhopaniṣad, (24) Maitrāyaṇy-upaniṣad, (25) Kauṣītaky-upaniṣad, (26) Bṛhaj-jābālopaniṣad, (27) Nṛsiṁha-tāpanīyopaniṣad, (28) Kālāgni-rudropaniṣad, (29) Maitreyy-upaniṣad, (30) Subālopaniṣad, (31) Kṣurikopaniṣad, (32) Mantrikopaniṣad, (33) Sarva-sāropaniṣad, (34) Nirālambopaniṣad, (35) Śuka-rahasyopaniṣad, (36) Vajra-sūcikopaniṣad, (37) Tejo-bindūpaniṣad, (38) Nāda-bindūpaniṣad, (39) Dhyāna-bindūpaniṣad, (40) Brahma-vidyopaniṣad, (41) Yoga-tattvopaniṣad, (42), Ātma-bodhopaniṣad, (43) Nārada-parivrājakopaniṣad, (44) Triśikhy-upaniṣad, (45) Sītopaniṣad, (46) Yoga-cūḍāmaṇy-upaniṣad, (47) Nirvāṇopaniṣad, (48) Maṇḍala-brāhmaṇopaniṣad, (49) Dakṣiṇā-mūrty-upaniṣad, (50) Śarabhopaniṣad, (51) Skandopaniṣad, (52) Mahānārāyaṇopaniṣad, (53) Advaya-tārakopaniṣad, (54) Rāma-rahasyopaniṣad, (55) Rāma-tāpaṇy-upaniṣad, (56) Vāsudevopaniṣad, (57) Mudgalopaniṣad, (58) Śāṇḍilyopaniṣad, (59) Paiṅgalopaniṣad, (60) Bhikṣūpaniṣad, (61) Mahad-upaniṣad, (62) Śārīrakopaniṣad, (63) Yoga-śikhopaniṣad, (64) Turīyātītopaniṣad, (65) Sannyāsopaniṣad, (66) Paramahaṁsa-parivrājakopaniṣad, (67) Mālikopaniṣad, (68) Avyaktopaniṣad, (69) Ekākṣaropaniṣad, (70) Pūrṇopaniṣad, (71) Sūryopaniṣad, (72) Akṣy-upaniṣad, (73) Adhyātmopaniṣad, (74) Kuṇḍikopaniṣad, (75) Sāvitry-upaniṣad, (76) Ātmopaniṣad, (77) Pāśupatopaniṣad, (78) Param-brahmopaniṣad, (79) Avadhūtopaniṣad, (80) Tripurā-tapanopaniṣad, (81) Devy-upaniṣad, (82) Tripuropaniṣad, (83) Kaṭha-rudropaniṣad, (84) Bhāvanopaniṣad, (85) Hṛdayopaniṣad, (86) Yoga-kuṇḍaliny-upaniṣad, (87) Bhasmopaniṣad, (88) Rudrākṣopaniṣad, (89) Gaṇopaniṣad, (90) Darśanopaniṣad, (91) Tāra-sāropaniṣad, (92) Mahā-vākyopaniṣad, (93) Pañca-brahmopaniṣad, (94) Prāṇāgni-hotropaniṣad, (95) Gopāla-tāpany-upaniṣad, (96) Kṛṣṇopaniṣad, (97) Yājñavalkyopaniṣad, (98) Varāhopaniṣad, (99) Śāṭyāyany-upaniṣad, (100) Hayagrīvopaniṣad, (101) Dattātrey-opaniṣad, (102) Gāruḍopaniṣad, (103) Kaly-upaniṣad, (104) Jābāly-upaniṣad, (105) Saubhāgyopaniṣad, (106) Sarasvatī-rahasyopaniṣad, (107) Bahvṛcopaniṣad and (108) Muktikopaniṣad. Thus there are 108 generally accepted Upaniṣads, of which eleven are the most important, as previously stated.

TRANSLATION

”Śaṅkarācārya is not at fault, for he has thus covered the real purpose of the Vedas under the order of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

PURPORT

The Vedic literature is to be considered a source of real knowledge, but if one does not take it as it is, one will be misled. For example, the Bhagavad-gītā is an important book of Vedic literature that has been taught for many years, but because it was commented upon by unscrupulous rascals, people derived no benefit from it, and no one came to the conclusion of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Since the purpose of the Bhagavad-gītā is now being presented as it is, however, within four or five short years thousands of people all over the world have become Kṛṣṇa conscious. That is the difference between direct and indirect explanations of the Vedic literature. Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, mukhya-vṛttye sei artha parama mahattva: ”To teach the Vedic literature according to its direct meaning, without false commentary, is glorious.” Unfortunately, Śrī Śaṅkarācārya, by the order of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, compromised between atheism and theism in order to cheat the atheists and bring them to theism, and to do so he gave up the direct method of Vedic knowledge and tried to present a meaning which is indirect. It is with this purpose that he wrote his Śārīraka-bhāṣya commentary on the Vedānta-sūtra.

One should not, therefore, attribute very much importance to the Śārīraka-bhāṣya. In order to understand Vedānta philosophy, one must study Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, which begins with the words oṁ namo bhagavate vāsudevāya, janmādy asya yato ’nvayād itarataś cārtheṣv abhijñaḥ sva-rāṭ: ”I offer my obeisances unto Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, son of Vasudeva, who is the Supreme All-pervading Personality of Godhead. I meditate upon Him, the transcendent reality, who is the primeval cause of all causes, from whom all manifested universes arise, in whom they dwell and by whom they are destroyed. I meditate upon that eternally effulgent Lord who is directly and indirectly conscious of all manifestations and yet is fully independent.” (Bhāg. 1.1.1) Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is the real commentary on the Vedānta-sūtra. Unfortunately, if one is attracted to Śrī Śaṅkarācārya’s commentary, Śārīraka-bhāṣya, his spiritual life is doomed.

One may argue that since Śaṅkarācārya is an incarnation of Lord Śiva, how is it that he cheated people in this way? The answer is that he did so on the order of his master, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed in the Padma Purāṇa in the words of Lord Śiva himself:

māyāvādam asac chāstraṁ pracchannaṁ bauddham ucyate mayaiva kalpitaṁ devi kalau brāhmaṇa-rūpiṇā brahmaṇaś cāparaṁ rūpaṁ nirguṇaṁ vakṣyate mayā sarva-svaṁ jagato’py asya mohanārthaṁ kalau yuge vedānte tu mahā-śāstre māyāvādam avaidikam mayaiva vakṣyate devi jagatāṁ nāśa-kāraṇāt

”The Māyāvāda philosophy,” Lord Śiva informed his wife Pārvatī, ”is impious [asac chāstra]. It is covered Buddhism. My dear Pārvatī, in the form of a brāhmaṇa in the Kali-yuga I teach this imagined Māyāvāda philosophy. In order to cheat the atheists, I describe the Supreme Personality of Godhead to be without form and without qualities. Similarly, in explaining Vedānta I describe the same Māyāvāda philosophy in order to mislead the entire population toward atheism by denying the personal form of the Lord.” In the Śiva Purāṇa the Supreme Personality of Godhead told Lord Śiva:

dvāparādau yuge bhūtvā kalayā mānuṣādiṣu svāgamaiḥ kalpitais tvaṁ ca janān mad-vimukhān kuru

”In the Kali-yuga, mislead the people in general by propounding imaginary meanings for the Vedas to bewilder them.” These are the descriptions of the Purāṇas.

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that mukhya-vṛtti (”the direct meaning”) is abhidhā-vṛtti, or the meaning that one can understand immediately from the statements of dictionaries, whereas gauṇa-vṛtti (”the indirect meaning”) is a meaning that one imagines without consulting the dictionary. For example, one politician has said that Kurukṣetra refers to the body, but in the dictionary there is no such definition. Therefore this imaginary meaning is gauṇa-vṛtti, whereas the direct meaning found in the dictionary is mukhya-vṛtti or abhidhā-vṛtti. This is the distinction between the two. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu recommends that one understand the Vedic literature in terms of abhidhā-vṛtti, and the gauṇa-vṛtti He rejects. Sometimes, however, as a matter of necessity, the Vedic literature is described in terms of the lakṣaṇā-vṛtti or gauṇa-vṛtti, but one should not accept such explanations as permanent truths.

The purpose of the discussions in the Upaniṣads and Vedānta-sūtra is to philosophically establish the personal feature of the Absolute Truth. The impersonalists, however, in order to establish their philosophy, accept these discussions in terms of lakṣaṇā-vṛtti, or indirect meanings. Thus instead of being tattva-vāda, or in search of the Absolute Truth, they become Māyāvāda, or illusioned by the material energy. When Śrī Viṣṇusvāmī, one of the four ācaryas of the Vaiṣṇava cult, presented his thesis on the subject matter of śuddhādvaita-vāda, immediately the Māyāvādīs took advantage of this philosophy and tried to establish their advaita-vāda or kevalādvaita-vāda. To defeat this kevalādvaita-vāda, Śrī Rāmānujācārya presented his philosophy as viśiṣṭādvaita-vāda, and Śrī Madhvācārya presented his philosophy of tattva-vāda, both of which are stumbling blocks to the Māyāvādīs because they defeat their philosophy in scrupulous detail. Students of Vedic philosophy know very well how strongly Śrī Rāmānujācārya's viśiṣṭādvaita-vāda and Śrī Madhvācārya's tattva-vāda contest the impersonal Māyāvāda philosophy. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, however, accepted the direct meaning of the Vedānta philosophy and thus defeated the Māyāvāda philosophy immediately. He opined in this connection that anyone who follows the principles of the Śārīraka-bhāṣya is doomed. This is confirmed in the Padma Purāṇa, where Lord Śiva tells Pārvatī:

śṛṇu devi pravakṣyāmi tāmasāni yathā-kramam yeṣāṁ śravaṇa-mātreṇa pātityaṁ jñāninām api apārthaṁ śruti-vākyānāṁ darśayaḷ loka-garhitam karma-svarūpa-tyājyatvam atra ca pratipādyate sarva-karma-paribhraṁśān naiṣkarmyaṁ tatra cocyate parātma-jīvayor aikyaṁ mayātra pratipādyate

"My dear wife, hear my explanations of how I have spread ignorance through Māyāvāda philosophy. Simply by hearing it, even an advanced scholar will fall down. In this philosophy, which is certainly very inauspicious for people in general, I have misrepresented the real meaning of the Vedas and recommended that one give up all activities in order to achieve freedom from karma. In this Māyāvāda philosophy I have described the jīvātmā and Paramātmā to be one and the same." How the Māyāvāda philosophy was condemned by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His followers is described in Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Second Chapter, verses 94 through 99, where Svarūpa-dāmodara Gosvāmī says that anyone who is eager to understand the Māyāvāda philosophy must be considered insane. This especially applies to a Vaiṣṇava who reads the Śārīraka-bhāṣya and considers himself to be one with God. The Māyāvādī philosophers have presented their arguments in such attractive, flowery language that hearing Māyāvāda philosophy may sometimes change the mind of even a mahā-bhāgavata, or very advanced devotee. An actual Vaiṣṇava cannot tolerate any philosophy that claims God and the living being to be one and the same.

This statement by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.11):

"Learned transcendentalists who know the Absolute Truth call this nondual substance Brahman, Paramātmā or Bhagavān." The Absolute Truth is ultimately understood as Bhagavān, partially understood as Paramātmā and vaguely understood as the impersonal Brahman. Bhagavān, or the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is opulent in all excellence; no one can be equal to or greater than Him. This is also confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (7.7), where the Lord says, mattaḥ parataraṁ nānyat kiñcid asti dhanañjaya: "O conqueror of wealth [Arjuna], there is no truth superior to Me." There are many other verses which prove that the Absolute Truth in the ultimate sense is understood to be the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"Everything about the Supreme Personality of Godhead is spiritual, including His body, opulence and paraphernalia. Māyāvāda philosophy, however, covering His spiritual opulence, advocates the theory of impersonalism.

PURPORT

It is stated in the Brahma-saṁhitā, īśvaraḥ paramaḥ kṛṣṇaḥ sac-cid-ānanda-vigrahaḥ: "The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, has a spiritual body which is full of knowledge, eternity and bliss." In this material world everyone's body is just the opposite-temporary, full of ignorance and full of misery. Therefore when the Supreme Personality of Godhead is sometimes described as nirākāra, this is to indicate that He does not have a material body like us.

Māyāvādī philosophers do not know how it is that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is formless. The Supreme Lord does not have a form like ours but has a spiritual form. Not knowing this, Māyāvādī philosophers simply advocate the onesided view that the Supreme Godhead, or Brahman, is formless (nirākāra). In this connection Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura offers many quotes from the Vedic literature. If one accepts the real or direct meaning of these Vedic statements, one can understand that the Supreme Personality of Godhead has a spiritual body (sac-cid-ānanda-vigrahaḥ).

In the Bṛhad-āraṇyaka Upaniṣad (5.1.1) it is said, pūrṇam adaḥ pūrṇam idaṁ pūrṇāt pūrṇam udacyate. This indicates that the body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is spiritual, for even though He expands in many ways, He remains the same. In the Bhagavad-gītā (10.8) the Lord says, ahaṁ sarvasya prabhavo mattaḥ sarvaṁ pravartate: "I am the origin of all. Everything emanates from Me." Māyāvādī philosophers materialistically think that if the Supreme Truth expands Himself in everything, He must lose His original form. Thus they think that there cannot be any form other than the expansive gigantic body of the Lord. But the Bṛhad-āraṇyaka Upaniṣad confirms, pūrṇam idaṁ pūrṇāt pūrṇam udacyate: "Although He expands in many ways, He keeps His original personality. His original spiritual body remains as it is." Similarly, elsewhere it is stated, vicitra-śaktiḥ puruṣaḥ purāṇaḥ: "The Supreme Personality of Godhead, the original person [puruṣa], has multifarious energies." And the Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad declares, sa vṛkṣa-kālākṛtibhiḥ paro 'nyo yasmāt prapañcaḥ parivartate 'yaṁ dharmāvahaṁ pāpanudaṁ bhageśam: "He is the origin of material creation, and it is due to Him only that everything changes. He is the protector of religion and annihilator of all sinful activities. He is the master of all opulences." (Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 6.6) Vedāham etaṁ puruṣaṁ mahāntam āditya-varṇaṁ tamasaḥ parastāt: "Now I understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead to be the greatest of the great. He is effulgent like the sun and is beyond this material world." (Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 3.8) Patiṁ patīnāṁ paramaṁ parastāt: "He is the master of all masters, the superior of all superiors." (Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 6.7) Mahān prabhur vai puruṣaḥ: "He is the supreme master and supreme person." (Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 3.12) Parāsya śaktir vividhaiva śrūyate: "We can understand His opulences in different ways." (Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 6.8) These are all statements of the Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad. Similarly, in the Ṛg Veda it is stated, tad viṣṇoḥ paramaṁ padaṁ sadā paśyanti sūrayaḥ: "Viṣṇu is the Supreme, and those who are actually learned think only of His lotus feet." In the Praśna Upaniṣad it is said, sa īkṣāṁ cakre: "He glanced over the material creation." (6.3) In the Aitareya Upaniṣad it is said, sa aikṣata-"He glanced over the material creation"-and sa imāḷ lokān asṛjata-"He created this entire material world." (1.1.1-2)

Thus many verses can be quoted from the Upaniṣads and Vedas which prove that the Supreme Godhead is not impersonal. In the Kaṭha Upaniṣad (2.2.13) it is also said, nityo nityānāṁ cetanaś cetanānām eko bahūnāṁ yo vidadhāti kāmān: "He is the supreme eternally conscious person who maintains all other living entities." From all these Vedic references one can understand that the Absolute Truth is a person, although no one can equal or excel Him. Although there are many foolish Māyāvādī philosophers who think that they are even greater than Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa is asamaurdhva: no one is equal to or above Him.

As stated in the Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad (3.19), apāṇi-pādo javano grahītā. This verse describes the Absolute Truth as having no legs or hands. Although this is an impersonal description, however, it does not mean that the Absolute Personality of Godhead has no form. He has a spiritual form that is distinct from the forms of matter. In this verse Caitanya Mahāprabhu clarifies this distinction.

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead is full of spiritual potencies. Therefore His body, name, fame and entourage are all spiritual. The Māyāvādī philosopher, due to ignorance, says that these are all merely transformations of the material mode of goodness.

PURPORT

In the Seventh Chapter of the Bhagavad-gītā the Supreme Personality of Godhead has classified His energies in two distinct divisions-namely, prākṛta and aprākṛta, or parā-prakṛti and aparā-prakṛti. In the Viṣṇu Purāṇa the same distinction is made. The Māyāvādī philosophers cannot understand these two prakṛtis, or natures-material and spiritual-but one who is actually intelligent can understand them. Considering the many varieties and activities in material nature, why should the Māyāvādī philosophers deny the spiritual varieties of the spiritual world? The Bhāgavatam (10.2.32) says:

ye 'nye 'ravindākṣa vimukta-māninas
tvayy asta-bhāvād aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ

The intelligence of those who think themselves liberated but have no information of the spiritual world is not yet clear. In this verse the term aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ refers to unclean intelligence. Due to unclean intelligence or a poor fund of knowledge, the Māyāvādī philosophers cannot understand the distinction between material and spiritual varieties; therefore they cannot even think of spiritual varieties because they take it for granted that all variety is material.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, therefore, explains in this verse that Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead or the Absolute Truth, has a spiritual body that is distinct from material bodies, and thus His name, abode, entourage and qualities are all spiritual. The material mode of goodness has nothing to do with spiritual varieties. Māyāvādī philosophers, however, cannot clearly understand spiritual varieties; therefore they imagine a negation of the material world to be the spiritual world. The material qualities of goodness, passion and ignorance cannot act in the spiritual world, which is therefore called nirguṇa, as clearly indicated in the Bhagavad-gītā (trai-guṇya-viṣayā vedā nistrai-guṇyo bhavārjuna). The material world is a manifestation of the three modes of material nature, but one has to become free from these modes to come to the spiritual world, where their influence is completely absent. Now Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu will disassociate Lord Śiva from Māyāvāda philosophy in the following verse.

tāṅra-his (Lord Śiva's); doṣa-fault; nāhi-there is none; teṅho-he; ājñā-kārī-obedient order-carrier; dāsa-servant; āra-others; yei-anyone; śune-hears (the Māyāvāda philosophy); tāra-of him; haya-becomes; sarva-nāśa-everything lost

TRANSLATION

"Śaṅkarācārya, who is an incarnation of Lord Śiva, is faultless because he is a servant carrying out the orders of the Lord. But those who follow his Māyāvādī philosophy are doomed. They will lose all their advancement in spiritual knowledge.

PURPORT

Māyāvādī philosophers are very proud of exhibiting their Vedānta knowledge through grammatical jugglery, but in the Bhagavad-gītā Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa certifies that they are māyayāpahṛta-jñāna, bereft of real knowledge due to māyā. Māyā has two potencies with which to execute her two functions-prakṣepātmikā-śakti, the power to throw the living entity into the ocean of material existence, and āvaraṇātmikā-śakti, the power to cover the knowledge of the living entity. The function of the āvaraṇātmikā-śakti is explained in the Bhagavad-gītā by the word māyayāpahṛta-jñānāḥ.

Why the daivī-māyā, or illusory energy of Kṛṣṇa, takes away the knowledge of the Māyāvādī philosophers is also explained in the Bhagavad-gīta by the use of the words āsuraṁ bhāvam āśritāḥ, which refer to a person who does not agree to the existence of the Lord. The Māyāvādīs, who are not in agreement with the existence of the Lord, can be classified in two groups, exemplified by the impersonalist Śaṅkarites of Vārāṇasī and the Buddhists of Saranātha. Both groups are Māyāvādīs, and Kṛṣṇa takes away their knowledge due to their atheistic philosophies. Neither group agrees to accept the existence of a personal God. The Buddhist philosophers clearly deny both the soul and God, and although the Śaṅkarites do not openly deny God, they say that the Absolute is nirākāra, or formless. Thus both the Buddhists and the Śaṅkarites are aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ, or imperfect and unclean in their knowledge and intelligence.

The most prominent Māyāvādī scholar, Sadānanda Yogīndra, has written a book called Vedānta-sāra, in which he expounds the philosophy of Śaṅkarācārya, and all the followers of Śaṅkara's philosophy attribute great importance to his statements. In this Vedānta-sāra Sadānanda Yogīndra defines Brahman as sac-cid-ānanda combined with knowledge and without duality, and he defines ignorance (jaḍa) as knowledge distinct from that of sat and asat. This is almost inconceivable, but it is a product of the three material qualities. Thus he considers anything other than pure knowledge to be material. The center of ignorance is considered to be sometimes all-pervading and sometimes individual. Thus according to his opinion both the all-pervading Viṣṇu and the individual living entities are products of ignorance.

In simple language, it is the opinion of Sadānanda Yogindra that since everything is nirākāra (formless), the conception of Viṣṇu and the conception of the individual soul are both products of ignorance. He also explains that the viśuddha-sattva conception of the Vaiṣṇavas is nothing but pradhāna, or the chief principle of creation. He maintains that when all-pervading knowledge is contaminated by the viśuddha-sattva, which consists of a transformation of the quality of goodness, there arises the conception of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the omnipotent, omniscient supreme ruler, the Supersoul, the cause of all causes, the supreme īśvara, etc. According to Sadānanda Yogīndra, because īśvara, the Supreme Lord, is the reservoir of all ignorance, He may be called sarva-jña, or omniscient, but one who denies the existence of the omnipotent Supreme Personality of Godhead is more than īśvara, or the Lord. His conclusion, therefore, is that the Supreme Personality of Godhead (īśvara) is a transformation of material ignorance and that the living entity (jīva) is covered by ignorance. Thus he describes both collective and individual existence in darkness. According to Māyāvādī philosophers, the Vaiṣṇava conception of the Lord as the Supreme Personality of Godhead and of the jīva, or individual soul, as His eternal servant is a manifestation of ignorance. If we accept the judgment of Lord Kṛṣṇa in the Bhagavad-gītā, however, the Māyāvādīs are to be considered māyayāpahṛta-jñāna, or bereft of all knowledge, because they do not recognize the existence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead or they claim that His existence is a product of the material conception (māyā). These are characteristics of asuras, or demons.

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, in His discourses with Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya, said:

jīvera nistāra lāgi' sūtra kaila vyāsa māyāvādi-bhāṣya śunile haya sarva-nāśa
(Cc. Madhya 6.169)

Vyāsadeva composed the Vedānta-sūtra to deliver the conditioned souls from this material world, but Śaṅkarācārya, by presenting the Vedānta-sūtra in his own way, has clearly done a great disservice to human society, for one who follows his Māyāvāda philosophy is doomed. In the Vedanta-sūtra, devotional service is clearly indicated, but the Māyāvādī philosophers refuse to accept the spiritual body of the Supreme Absolute Person and refuse to accept that the living entity has an individual existence separate from that of the Supreme Lord. Thus they have created atheistic havoc all over the world, for such a conclusion is against the very nature of the transcendental process of pure devotional service. The Māyāvādī philosophers' unrealizable ambition to become one with the Supreme through denying the existence of the Personality of Godhead results in a most calamitous misrepresentation of spiritual knowledge, and one who follows this philosophy is doomed to remain perpetually in this material world. Therefore the Māyāvādīs are called aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ, or unclean in knowledge. Because they are unclean in knowledge, all their austerities and penances end in frustration. Thus although they may be honored at first as very learned scholars, ultimately they descend to physical activities of politics, social work, etc. Instead of becoming one with the Supreme Lord, they again become one with these material activities. This is explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32):

patanty adho 'nādṛta-yuṣmad-aṅghrayaḥ

In actuality the Māyāvādī philosophers very strictly follow the austerities and penances of spiritual life and in this way are elevated to the impersonal Brahman platform, but due to their negligence of the lotus feet of the Lord they again fall down to material existence.

SYNONYMS

prākṛta-material; kariyā-taking it to be so; māne-accepts; viṣṇu-Lord Viṣṇu's; kalevara-body; viṣṇu-nindā-defaming or blaspheming Lord Viṣṇu; āra-beyond this; nāhi-none; ihāra-of this; upara-above.

TRANSLATION

"One who considers the transcendental body of Lord Viṣṇu to be made of material nature is the greatest offender at the lotus feet of the Lord. There is no greater blasphemy against the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

PURPORT

Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī explains that the variegated personal feature of the Absolute Truth is the viṣṇu-tattva and that the material energy, which creates this cosmic manifestation, is the energy of Lord Viṣṇu. The creative force is merely the energy of the Lord, but the foolish conclude that because the Lord has distributed Himself in an impersonal form He has no separate existence.. The impersonal Brahman, however, cannot possess energies, nor does the Vedic literature state that māyā (the illusory energy) is covered by another māyā. There are hundreds and thousands of references, however, to viṣṇu-māyā (parāsya śaktiḥ), or the energy of Lord Viṣṇu. In the Bhagavad-gītā (7.14) Kṛṣṇa refers to mama māyā ("My energy"). Māyā is controlled by the Supreme Personality of Godhead; it is not that He is covered by māyā. Therefore Lord Viṣṇu cannot be a product of the material energy. In the beginning of the Vedānta-sūtra it is said, janmādy asya yataḥ, indicating that the material energy is also an emanation of the Supreme Brahman. How then could He be covered by the material energy? If that were possible, material energy would be greater than the Supreme Brahman. Even these simple arguments, however, cannot be understood by the Māyāvādī philosophers, and therefore the term māyayāpahṛta-jñāna, which is applied to them in the Bhagavad-gītā, is extremely appropriate. Anyone who thinks that Lord Viṣṇu is a product of the material energy, as explained by Sadānanda Yogīndra, should immediately be understood to be insane, for his knowledge has been stolen by the illusory energy.

Lord Viṣṇu cannot be placed within the category of the demigods. Those who are actually bewildered by the Māyāvāda philosophy and are still in the darkness of ignorance consider Lord Viṣṇu to be a demigod, in defiance of the Ṛg-vedic mantra oṁ tad viṣṇoḥ paramaṁ padam ("Viṣṇu is always in a superior position"). This mantra is also confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā: mattaḥ parataraṁ nānyat-there is no truth superior to Lord Kṛṣṇa, or Viṣṇu. Thus only those whose knowledge has been bewildered consider Lord Viṣṇu to be a demigod and therefore suggest that one may worship either Lord Viṣṇu, the goddess Kālī (Durgā) or whomever one likes and achieve the same result. This is an ignorant conclusion that is not accepted in the Bhagavad-gītā, which distinctly says, yānti deva-vratā devān . . . yānti mad-yājino'pi mām: "The worshipers of the demigods will be promoted to the respective planets of the demigods, but devotees of the Supreme Lord will go back home, back to Godhead." (Bg. 9.25) Lord Kṛṣṇa explains very clearly in the Bhagavad-gitā that His material energy is very difficult to overcome: daivī hy eṣā guṇa-mayī mama māyā duratyayā. Māyā's influence is so strong that even learned scholars and spiritualists are also covered by māyā and think themselves to be as good as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Actually, however, to free oneself from the influence of māyā one must surrender to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, as Kṛṣṇa also states in the Bhagavad-gītā: mām eva ye prapadyante māyām etāṁ taranti te. It is to be concluded, therefore, that Lord Viṣṇu does not belong to this material creation but to the spiritual world. To misconceive Lord Viṣṇu to have a material body or to equate Him with the demigods is the most offensive blasphemy against Lord Viṣṇu, and offenders against the lotus feet of Lord Viṣṇu cannot advance in spiritual knowledge. They are called māyayāpahṛta-jñāna, or those whose knowledge has been stolen by the influence of illusion.

One who thinks that there is a difference between Lord Viṣṇu's body and His soul dwells in the darkest region of ignorance. There is no difference between Lord Viṣṇu's body and Viṣṇu's soul, for they are advaya-jñāna, one knowledge. In this world there is a difference between the material body and the spiritual soul, but in the spiritual world everything is spiritual, and there are no such differences. The greatest offense of the Māyāvādī philosophers is to consider Lord Viṣṇu and the living entities to be one and the same. In this connection the Padma Purāṇa states, arcye viṣṇau śilā-dhir guruṣu nara-matir vaiṣṇave jāti-buddhiḥ: "One who considers the arcā-mūrti, the worshipable Deity of Lord Viṣṇu, to be stone, the spiritual master to be an ordinary human being, and a Vaiṣṇava to belong to a particular caste or creed, is possessed of hellish intelligence." One who follows such conclusions is doomed.

īśvarera tattva-the truth of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; yena-is like; jvalita-blazing; jvalana-fire; jīvera-of the living entities; svarūpa-identity; yaiche-is like; sphuliṅgera-of the spark; kaṇa-particle.

TRANSLATION

"The Lord is like a great blazing fire, and the living entities are like small sparks of that fire.

PURPORT

Although sparks and a big fire are both fire and both have the power to burn, the burning power of the fire and that of the spark are not the same. Why should one artificially try to become like a big fire although by constitution he is like a small spark? It is due to ignorance. One should therefore understand that neither the Supreme Personality of Godhead nor the small sparklike living entities have anything to do with matter, but when the spiritual spark comes in contact with the material world his fiery quality is extinguished. That is the position of the conditioned souls. Because they are in touch with the material world, their spiritual quality is almost dead, but because these spiritual sparks are all Kṛṣṇa's parts and parcels, as the Lord states in the Bhagavad-gītā (mamaivāṁśaḥ), they can revive their original position by getting free from material contact. This is pure philosophical understanding. In the Bhagavad-gītā the spiritual sparks are declared to be sanātana (eternal); therefore the material energy, māyā, cannot affect their constitutional position.

Someone may argue, ”Why is there a need to create the spiritual sparks?” The answer can be given in this way: Since the Absolute Personality of Godhead is omnipotent, He has both unlimited and limited potencies. This is the meaning of omnipotent. To be omnipotent, He must have not only unlimited potencies but limited potencies also. Thus to exhibit His omnipotency He displays both. The living entities are endowed with limited potency although they are part of the Lord. The Lord displays the spiritual world by His unlimited potencies, whereas by His limited potencies the material world is displayed. In the Bhagavad-gītā (7.5) the Lord says:

apareyam itas tv anyāṁ prakṛtiṁ viddhi me parām jīva-bhūtāṁ mahā-bāho yayedaṁ dhāryate jagat

”Besides these inferior energies, O mighty-armed Arjuna, there is another, superior energy of Mine, which comprises all living entities who are exploiting the resources of this material, inferior nature.” The jīva-bhūta, the living entities, control this material world with their limited potencies. Generally, people are bewildered by the activities of scientists and technologists. Due to māyā they think that there is no need of God and that they can do everything and anything, but actually they cannot. Since this cosmic manifestation is limited, their existence is also limited. Everything in this material world is limited, and for this reason there is creation, sustenance and dissolution. However, in the world of unlimited energy, the spiritual world, there is neither creation nor destruction.

If the Personality of Godhead did not possess both limited and unlimited energies, He could not be called omnipotent. Aṇor aṇīyān mahato mahīyān: ’. ”The Lord is greater than the greatest and smaller than the smallest.” He is smaller than the smallest in the form of the living entities and greater than the greatest in His form of Kṛṣṇa. If there were no one to control, there would be no meaning to the conception of the supreme controller (īśvara), just as there is no meaning to a king without his subjects. If all the subjects became king, there would be no distinction between the king and an ordinary citizen. Thus for the Lord to be the supreme controller there must be a creation to control. The basic principle for the existence of the living entities is called cid-vilāsa, or spiritual pleasure. The omnipotent Lord displays His pleasure potency as the living entities. The Lord is described in the Vedānta-sūtra (1.1.12) as ānanda-mayo ’bhyāsāt. He is by nature the reservoir of all pleasures, and because He wants to enjoy pleasure, there must be energies to give Him pleasure or supply Him the impetus for pleasure. This is the perfect philosophical understanding of the Absolute Truth.

TRANSLATION

”The living entities are energies, not the energetic. The energetic is Kṛṣṇa. This is very vividly described in the Bhagavad-gītā, the Viṣṇu Purāṇa and other Vedic scriptures.

PURPORT

As already explained, there are three prasthānas on the path of advancement in spiritual knowledge-namely, nyāya-prasthāna (Vedānta philosophy), śruti-prasthāna (the Upaniṣads and Vedic mantras) and smṛti-prasthāna (the Bhagavad-gītā, Mahābhārata, Purāṇas, etc.). Unfortunately, Māyāvādī philosophers do not accept the smṛti-prasthāna. Smṛti refers to the conclusions drawn from the Vedic evidence. Sometimes Māyāvādī philosophers do not accept the authority of the Bhagavad-gītā and the Purāṇas, and this is called ardha-kukkuṭī-nyāya, ”the logic of half a hen.” (A foolish farmer once thought he would save money by cutting off his hen’s head, which he had to feed, and leaving its tail, which produced the eggs.) If one believes in the Vedic literature, one must accept all the Vedic scriptures recognized by the great ācāryas, but these Māyāvādī philosophers accept only the nyāya-prasthāna and śruti-prasthāna, rejecting the smṛti-prasthāna. Here, however, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu cites evidence from the Gītā, Viṣṇu Purāṇa, etc., which are smṛti-prasthāna. No one can avoid the Personality of Godhead in the statements of the Bhagavad-gītā and other Vedic scripttures such as the Mahābhārata and the Purāṇas. Lord Caitanya therefore quotes a passage from the Bhagavad-gītā (7.5).

TRANSLATION

” ’Besides these inferior energies, O mighty-armed Arjuna, there is another, superior energy of Mine, which comprises all living entities who are exploiting the resources of this material, inferior nature.’.’

PURPORT

In the Bhagavad-gītā it is explained that the five elements earth, water, fire, air and ether constitute the gross energy of the Absolute Truth and that there are also three subtle energies, namely, the mind, intelligence and false ego, or identification with the phenomenal world. Thus the entire cosmic manifestation is divided into eight energies, all of which are inferior. As explained in the Bhagavad-gītā (mama māyā duratyayā), the inferior energy, known as māyā, is so strong that although the living entity does not belong to this energy, due to the superior strength of the inferior energy the living entity (jīva-bhūta) forgets his real position and identifies with it. Kṛṣṇa says distinctly that beyond the material energy there is a superior energy which is known as the jīva-bhūta, or living entities. When in contact with the material energy, this superior energy conducts all the activities of the entire material, phenomenal world.

The supreme cause is Kṛṣṇa (janmādy asya yataḥ), who is the origin of all energies, which work variously. The Supreme Personality of Godhead has both inferior and superior energies, and the difference between them is that the superior energy is factual whereas the inferior energy is a reflection of the superior. A reflection of the sun in a mirror or on water appears to be the sun but is not. Similarly, the material world is but a reflection of the spiritual world. Although it appears to be factual, it is not; it is only a temporary reflection, whereas the spiritual world is a factual reality. The material world, with its gross and subtle forms, is merely a reflection of the spiritual world.

The living entity is not a product of the material energy; he is spiritual energy, but in contact with matter he forgets his identity. Thus the living entity identifies himself with matter and enthusiastically engages in material activities in the guises of a technologist, scientist, philosopher, etc. He does not know that he is not at all a material product but is spiritual. His real identity thus being lost, he struggles very hard in the material world, and the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement, or Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, tries to revive his original consciousness. His activities in manufacturing big skyscrapers are evidence of intelligence, but this kind of intelligence is not at all advanced. One should know that his only real concern is how to get free from material contact, for by absorbing his mind in material activities he takes material bodies again and again, and although he falsely claims to be very intelligent, in material consciousness he is not at all intelligent. When we speak about the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, which is meant to make people intelligent, the conditioned living entity therefore misunderstands it. He is so engrossed in the material concept of life that he does not think that there can be any activities that are actually based on intelligence beyond the construction of skyscrapers and big roads and the manufacturing of cars. This is proof of māyayāpahṛta-jñāna, or loss of all intelligence due to the influence of māyā. When a living entity is freed from such misconceptions, he is called liberated. When one is actually liberated he no longer identifies with the material world. The symptom of mukti (liberation) is that one engages in spiritual activities instead of falsely engaging in material activities.

Transcendental loving devotional service is the spiritual activity of the spirit soul. Māyāvādī philosophers confuse such spiritual activity with material activity, but the Bhagavad-gītā (14.26) confirms:

māṁ ca yo ’vyabhicāreṇa
bhakti-yogena sevate
sa guṇān samatītyaitān
brahma-bhūyāya kalpate

One who engages in the spiritual activities of unalloyed devotional service (avyabhicāriṇī-bhakti) is immediately elevated to the transcendental platform, and he is to be considered brahma-bhūta, which indicates that he is no longer in the material world but in the spiritual world. Devotional service is enlightenment or awakening. When the living entity perfectly performs spiritual activities under the direction of the spiritual master, he becomes perfect in knowledge and understands that he is not God but a servant of God. As explained by Caitanya Mahāprabhu, jīvera ’svarūpa’ haya-kṛṣṇera ’nitya-dāsa’: the real identity of the living entity is that he is an eternal servant of the Supreme (Cc. Madhya 20.108). As long as one does not come to this conclusion, he must be in ignorance. This is also confirmed by the Lord in the Bhagavad-gītā (7.19): bahūnāṁ janmanām ante jñānavān māṁ prapadyate. ”After many births of struggling for existence and cultivating knowledge, when one comes to the point of real knowledge he surrenders unto Me.” Such an advanced mahātmā, or great soul, is very rarely to be seen. Thus although the Māyāvādī philosophers appear to be very advanced in knowledge, they are not yet perfect. To come to the point of perfection they must voluntarily surrender to Kṛṣṇa.

” ’The potency of Lord Viṣṇu is summarized in three categories-namely, the spiritual potency, the living entities and ignorance. The spiritual potency is full of knowledge; the living entities, although belonging to the spiritual potency, are subject to bewilderment; and the third energy, which is full of ignorance, is always visible in fruitive activities.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa (6.7.61).

In the previous verse, quoted from the Bhagavad-gītā, it has been established that the living entities are to be categorized among the Lord’s potencies. The Lord is potent, and there are varieties of potencies (parāsya śaktir vividhaiva śrūyate). Now, in this quotation from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, this is further confirmed. There are varieties of potencies, and they have been divided into three categories-namely, spiritual, marginal and external.

The spiritual potency is manifested in the spiritual world. Kṛṣṇa's form, qualities, activities and entourage are all spiritual. This is also confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (4.5):

ajo 'pi sann avyayātmā bhūtānām īśvaro 'pi san prakṛtiṁ svām adhiṣṭhāya sambhavāmy ātma-māyayā

"Although I am unborn and My transcendental body never deteriorates, and although I am the Lord of all living entities, by My spiritual potency I still appear in every millennium in My original transcendental form." Ātma-māyā refers to the spiritual potency. When Kṛṣṇa comes to this or any other universe, He does so with His spiritual potency. We take birth by the force of the material potency, but as stated here with reference to the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, the kṣetra-jña, or living entity, belongs to the spiritual potency; thus when we free ourselves from the clutches of the material potency we can also enter the spiritual world.

The material potency is the energy of darkness, or complete ignorance of spiritual activities. In the material potency, the living entity engages himself in fruitive activities, thinking that he can be happy through expansion in terms of material energy. This fact is prominently manifest in this Age of Kali because human society, not understanding the spiritual nature, is busily expanding in material activities. The men of the present day are almost unaware of their spiritual identity. They think that they are products of the elements of the material world and that everything will end with the annihilation of the body. Therefore they conclude that as long as one has a material body consisting of material senses, one should enjoy the senses as much as possible. Since they are atheists, they do not care whether there is a next life. Such activities are described in this verse as avidyā-karma-saṁjñānyā.

The material energy is separated from the spiritual energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Thus although it is originally created by the Supreme Lord, He is not actually present within it. The Lord also confirms in the Bhagavad-gītā (9.4), mat-sthāni sarva-bhūtāni: "Everything is resting on Me." This indicates that everything is resting on His own energy. For example, the planets are resting within outer space, which is the separated energy of Kṛṣṇa. The Lord explains in the Bhagavad-gītā (7.4):

bhūmir āpo 'nalo vāyuḥ khaṁ mano buddhir eva ca ahaṅkāra itīyaṁ me bhinnā prakṛtir aṣṭadhā

"Earth, water, fire, air, ether, mind, intelligence and false ego-all together these eight constitute My separated material energies." The separated energy acts as if it were independent, but here it is said that although such energies are certainly factual, they are not independent but merely separated.

The separated energy can be understood from a practical example. I compose books by speaking into a dictaphone, and when the dictaphone is replayed, it appears that I am speaking personally, but actually I am not. I spoke personally, but then the dictaphone tape, which is separate from me, acts exactly like me. Similarly, the material energy originally emanates from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but it acts separately, although the energy is supplied by the Lord. This is also explained in the Bhagavad-gītā (9.10): mayādhyakṣeṇa prakṛtiḥ sūyate sa-carācaram. "This material nature is working under My direction, O son of Kuntī, and it is producing all moving and unmoving beings." Under the guidance or superintendence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the material energy works as if independent, although it is not actually independent.

In this verse from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa the total energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is classified in three divisions-namely, the spiritual or internal potency of the Lord, the marginal potency, or kṣetra-jña (the living entity), and the material potency, which is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead and appears to act independently. When Śrīla Vyāsadeva, by meditation and self-realization, saw the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he also saw the separated energy of the Lord standing behind Him (apaśyat puruṣaṁ pūrṇaṁ māyāṁ ca tad-apāśrayam). Vyāsadeva also realized that it is this separated energy of the Lord, the material energy, that covers the knowledge of the living entities (yayā sammohito jīva ātmānaṁ tri-guṇātmakam). The separated, material energy bewilders the living entities (jīvas), and thus they work very hard under its influence, not knowing that they are not fulfilling their mission in life. Unfortunately, most of them think that they are the body and should therefore enjoy the material senses irresponsibly, since when death comes everything will be finished. This atheistic philosophy also flourished in India, where it was sometimes propagated by Cārvāka Muni, who said:

ṛṇaṁ kṛtvā ghṛtaṁ pibet yāvaj jīvet sukhaṁ jīvet bhasmī-bhūtasya dehasya kutaḥ punar āgamano bhavet

His theory was that as long as one lives one should eat as much ghee as possible. In India, ghee (clarified butter) is a basic ingredient in preparing many varieties of food. Since everyone wants to enjoy nice food, Cārvāka Muni advised that one eat as much ghee as possible. One may say, "I have no money. How shall I purchase ghee?" Cārvāka Muni, however, says, "If you have no money, then beg borrow or steal, but in some way secure ghee and enjoy life." For one who further objects that he will be held accountable for such unauthorized activities as begging, borrowing and stealing, Cārvāka Muni replies, "You will not be held responsible. As soon as your body is burned to ashes after death, everything is finished." This is called ignorance. From the Bhagavad-gītā it is understood that one does not die with the annihilation of his body (na hanyate hanyamāne śarīre). The annihilation of one body involves changing to another (tathā dehāntara-prāptiḥ). Therefore, to perform irresponsible activities in the material world is very dangerous. Without knowledge of the spirit soul and its transmigration, people are allured by the material energy to engage in many such activities, as if one could become happy simply by dint of material knowledge, without reference to spiritual existence. Therefore the entire material world and its activities are referred to as avidyā-karma-saṁjñānyā.

In order to dissipate the ignorance of the human beings who work under the material energy, which is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Lord comes down to revive their original nature of spiritual activities (yadā yadā hi dharmasya glānir bhavati bhārata). As soon as they deviate from their original nature, the Lord comes to teach them, sarva-dharmān parityajya mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja: ”My dear living entities, give up all material activities and simply surrender unto Me for protection.” (Bg. 18.66)

It is the statement of Cārvāka Muni that one should beg, borrow or steal money to purchase ghee and enjoy life (ṛṇaṁ kṛtvā ghṛtaṁ pibet). Thus even the greatest atheist of India recommends that one eat ghee, not meat. No one could conceive of human beings' eating meat like tigers and dogs, but men have become so degraded that they are just like animals and can no longer claim to have a human civilization.

SYNONYMS

hena-such degraded; jīva-tattva-the living entities; lañā-taking them; likhi'-having written; para-tattva-as the Supreme; ācchanna-covering; karila-did; śreṣṭha-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; īśvara-the Lord's; mahattva-glories.

TRANSLATION

”The Māyāvāda philosophy is so degraded that it has taken the insignificant living entities to be the Lord, the Supreme Truth, thus covering the glory and supremacy of the Absolute Truth with monism.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura comments in this connection that in all Vedic scriptures the jīva-tattva, the truth of the living entities, is mentioned to be one of the energies of the Lord. If one does not accept the living entity to be a minute, infinitesimal spark of the Supreme but equates the jīva-tattva with the Supreme Brahman or Supreme Personality of Godhead, it must be understood that his entire philosophy is based on a misunderstanding. Unfortunately, Śrīpāda Śaṅkarācārya purposely claimed the jīva-tattva, or living entities, to be equal to the Supreme God. Therefore his entire philosophy is based on a misunderstanding, and it misguides people to become atheists whose mission in life is unfulfilled. The mission of human life, as described in the Bhagavad-gītā, is to surrender unto the Supreme Lord and become His devotee, but the Māyāvāda philosophy misleads one to defy the existence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and pose oneself as the Supreme Lord. Thus it has misguided hundreds and thousands of innocent men.

In the Vedānta-sūtra, Vyāsadeva has described that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is potent and that everything, material or spiritual, is but an emanation of His energy. The Lord, the Supreme Brahman, is the origin or source of everything (janmādy asya yataḥ), and all other manifestations are emanations of different energies of the Lord. This is also confirmed in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa:

ekadeśa-sthitasyāgner jyotsnā vistāriṇī yathā parasya brahmaṇaḥ śaktis tathedam akhilaṁ jagat

”Whatever we see in this world is simply an expansion of different energies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is exactly like a fire that spreads illumination for a long distance although it is situated in one place.” This is a very vivid example. Similarly, it is stated that just as everything in the material world exists in the sunshine, which is the energy of the sun, so everything exists on the basis of the spiritual and material energies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Thus although Kṛṣṇa is situated in His own abode (goloka eva nivasaty akhilātma-bhūtaḥ), where He enjoys His transcendental pastimes with the cowherd boys and gopīs, He is nevertheless present everywhere, even within the atoms of this universe (aṇḍāntara-stha-paramāṇu-cayāntara-stham). This is the verdict of the Vedic literature.

Unfortunately, the Māyāvāda philosophy, misguiding people by claiming the living entity to be the Lord, has created havoc throughout the entire world and led almost everyone to godlessness. By thus covering the glories of the Supreme Lord, the Māyāvādī philosophers have done the greatest disservice to human society. It is to counteract these most abominable activities of the Māyāvādī philosophers that Lord Caitanya has introduced the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

harer nāmaiva kevalam
kalau nāsty eva nāsty eva
nāsty eva gatir anyathā

”In this age of quarrel and hypocrisy, the only means of deliverance is chanting the holy name of the Lord. There is no other way. There is no other way. There is no other way.” People should simply engage in the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, for thus they will gradually come to understand that they are not the Supreme Personality of Godhead, as they have been taught by the Māyāvādī philosophers, but are eternal servants of the Lord. As soon as one engages himself in the transcendental service of the Lord, he becomes free.

māṁ ca yo 'vyabhicāreṇa
bhakti-yogena sevate
brahma-bhūyāya kalpate

”One who engages in full devotional service, unfailing in all circumstances, at once transcends the modes of material nature and thus comes to the level of Brahman.” (Bg. 14.26) Therefore the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement, or Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, is the only light for the foolish living entities who think either that there is no God or that if God exists He is formless and they themselves are also God. These misconceptions are very dangerous, and the only way to counteract them is to spread the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement.

vyāsera-of Śrīla Vyāsadeva; sūtrete-in the aphorisms; kahe-describes; pariṇāma-transformation; vāda-philosophy; vyāsa-Śrīla Vyāsadeva; bhrānta-mistaken; bali'-accusing him; tāra-his; uṭhāila-raised; vivāda-opposition.

TRANSLATION

"In his Vedānta-sūtra Śrīla Vyāsadeva has described that everything is but a transformation of the energy of the Lord. Śaṅkarācārya, however, has misled the world by commenting that Vyāsadeva was mistaken. Thus he has raised great opposition to theism throughout the entire world.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura explains, "In the Vedanta-sūtra of Śrīla Vyāsadeva it is definitely stated that all cosmic manifestations result from transformations of various energies of the Lord. Śaṅkarācārya, however, not accepting the energy of the Lord, thinks that it is the Lord who is transformed. He has taken many clear statements from the Vedic literature and twisted them to try to prove that if the Lord, or the Absolute Truth, were transformed, His oneness would be disturbed. Thus he has accused Śrīla Vyāsadeva of being mistaken. In developing his philosophy of monism, therefore, he has established vivarta-vāda, or the Māyāvāda theory of illusion."

In the Brahma-sūtra, Second Chapter, the first quote is as follows: tad-ananyatvam ārambhaṇa-śabdādibhyaḥ. Commenting on this sūtra in his Śārīraka-bhāṣya, Śaṅkarācārya has introduced the statement vācārambhaṇaṁ vikāro nāmadheyam from the Chāndogya Upaniṣad (6.1.4) to try to prove that acceptance of the transformation of the energy of the Supreme Lord is faulty. He has tried to defy this transformation of energy in a misguided way, which will be explained later. Since his conception of God is impersonal, he does not believe that the entire cosmic manifestation is a transformation of the energies of the Lord, for as soon as one accepts the various energies of the Absolute Truth, one must immediately accept the Absolute Truth to be personal, not impersonal. A person can create many things by the transformation of his energy. For example, a businessman transforms his energy by establishing many big factories or business organizations, yet he remains a person although his energy has been transformed into these many factories or business concerns. The Māyāvādī philosophers do not understand this simple fact. Their tiny brains and poor fund of knowledge cannot afford them sufficient enlightenment to realize that when a man's energy is transformed, the man himself is not transformed but remains the same person.

Not believing in the fact that the energy of the Absolute Truth is transformed, Śaṅkarācārya has propounded his theory of illusion. This theory states that although the Absolute Truth is never transformed, we think that it is transformed, which is an illusion. Śaṅkarācārya does not believe in the transformation of the energy of the Absolute Truth, for he claims that everything is one and that the living entity is therefore also one with the Supreme. This is the Māyāvāda theory.

Śrīla Vyāsadeva has explained that the Absolute Truth is a person who has different potencies. Merely by His desire that there be creation and by His glance (sa aikṣata), He created this material world (sa asṛjata). After creation, He remains the same person; He is not transformed into everything. One should accept that the Lord has inconceivable energies and that it is by His order and will that varieties of manifestation have come into existence. In the Vedic literature it is said, sa-tattvato 'nyathā-buddhir vikāra ity udāhṛtaḥ. This mantra indicates that from one fact another fact is generated. For example, a father is one fact, and a son generated from the father is a second fact. Thus both of them are truths, although one is generated from the other. This generation of a second, independent truth from a first truth is called vikāra, or transformation resulting in a by-product. The Supreme Brahman is the Absolute Truth, and the energies that have emanated from Him and are existing separately, such as the living entities and the cosmic manifestation, are also truths. This is an example of transformation, which is called vikāra or pariṇāma. To give another example of vikāra, milk is a truth, but the same milk may be transformed into yogurt. Thus yogurt is a transformation of milk, although the ingredients of yogurt and milk are the same.

In the Chāndogya Upaniṣad there is the following mantra: aitad-ātmyam idaṁ sarvam. This mantra indicates without a doubt that the entire world is Brahman. The Absolute Truth has inconceivable energies, as confirmed in the Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad (parāsya śaktir vividhaiva śrūyate), and the entire cosmic manifestation is evidence of these different energies of the Supreme Lord. The Supreme Lord is a fact, and therefore whatever is created by the Supreme Lord is also factual. Everything is true and complete (pūrṇam), but the original pūrṇam, the complete Absolute Truth, always remains the same. Pūrṇāt pūrṇam udacyate pūrṇasya pūrṇam ādāya. The Absolute Truth is so perfect that although innumerable energies emanate from Him and manifest creations which appear to be different from Him, He nevertheless maintains His personality. He never deteriorates under any circumstances.

It is to be concluded that the entire cosmic manifestation is a transformation of the energy of the Supreme Lord, not of the Supreme Lord or Absolute Truth Himself, who always remains the same. The material world and the living entities are transformations of the energy of the Lord, the Absolute Truth or Brahman, who is the original source. In other words, the Absolute Truth, Brahman, is the original ingredient, and the other manifestations are transformations of this ingredient. This is also confirmed in the Taittirīya Upaniṣad (3.1): yato vā imāni bhūtani jāyante. "This entire cosmic manifestation is made possible by the Absolute Truth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead." In this verse it is indicated that Brahman, the Absolute Truth, is the original cause and that the living entities (jīvas) and the cosmic manifestation are effects of this cause. The cause being a fact, the effects are also factual. They are not illusion. Śaṅkarācārya has inconsistently tried to prove that acceptance of the material world and the jīvas to be by-products of the Supreme Lord is an illusion because in this conception the existence of the material world and the jīvas is different and separate from that of the Absolute Truth. With this jugglery of understanding, Māyāvādī philosophers have propagated the slogan brahma satyaṁ jagan mithyā, which declares that the Absolute Truth is fact but the cosmic manifestation and the living entities are simply illusions, or that all of them are in fact the Absolute Truth and that the material world and living entities do not separately exist.

It is therefore to be concluded that Śaṅkarācārya, in order to present the Supreme Lord, the living entities and the material nature as indivisible and ignorant, tries to cover the glories of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He maintains that the material cosmic manifestation is mithyā, or false, but this is a great blunder. If the Supreme Personality of Godhead is a fact, how can His creation be false? Even in ordinary dealings, one cannot think the material cosmic manifestation to be false. Therefore Vaiṣṇava philosophers say that the cosmic creation is not false but temporary. It is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but since it is wonderfully created by the energy of the Lord, to say that it is false is blasphemous.

Nondevotees factually appreciate the wonderful creation of material nature, but they cannot appreciate the intelligence and energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead who is behind this material creation. Śrīpāda Rāmānujācārya, however, refers to a sūtra from the Aitareya Upaniṣad (1.1.1), ātmā vā idam agra āsīt, which points out that the supreme ātmā, the Absolute Truth, existed before the creation. One may argue, "If the Supreme Personality of Godhead is completely spiritual, how is it possible for Him to be the origin of creation and have within Himself both material and spiritual energies?" To answer this challenge, Śrīpāda Rāmānujācārya quotes a mantra from the Taittirīya Upaniṣad (3.1) that states:

This mantra confirms that the entire cosmic manifestation emanates from the Absolute Truth, rests upon the Absolute Truth and after annihilation again reenters the body of the Absolute Truth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The living entity is originally spiritual, and when he enters the spiritual world or the body of the Supreme Lord, he still retains his identity as an individual soul. In this connection Śrīpāda Rāmānujācārya gives the example that when a green bird enters a green tree it does not become one with the tree: it retains its identity as a bird, although it appears to merge in the greenness of the tree. To give another example, an animal that enters a forest keeps its individuality, although apparently the beast merges in the forest. Similarly, in material existence, both the material energy and the living entities of the marginal potency maintain their individuality. Thus although the energies of the Supreme Personality of Godhead interact within the cosmic manifestation, each keeps its separate individual existence. Merging in the material or spiritual energies, therefore, does not involve loss of individuality. According to Śrī Rāmānujapāda's theory of Viśiṣṭādvaita, although all the energies of the Lord are one, each keeps its individuality (vaiśiṣṭya).

Śrīpāda Śaṅkarācārya has tried to mislead the readers of the Vedānta-sūtra by misinterpreting the words ānanda-mayo 'bhyāsāt, and he has even tried to find fault with Vyāsadeva. All the aphorisms of the Vedānta-sūtra need not be examined here, however, since we intend to present the Vedānta-sūtra in a separate volume.

SYNONYMS

pariṇāma-vāde-by accepting the theory of transformation of energy; īśvara-the Supreme Lord; hayena-becomes; vikārī-transformed; eta kahi'-saying this; vivarta-illusion; vāda-theory; sthāpanā-establishing; ye-what; kari-do.

TRANSLATION

"According to Śaṅkarācārya, by accepting the theory of the transformation of the energy of the Lord, one creates an illusion by indirectly accepting that the Absolute Truth is transformed.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura comments that if one does not clearly understand the meaning of pariṇāma-vāda, or transformation of energy, one is sure to misunderstand the truth regarding this material cosmic manifestation and the living entities. In the Chāndogya Upaniṣad (6.8.4) it is said, san-mūlāḥ saumyemāḥ prajāḥ sad-āyatanāḥ sat-pratiṣṭhāḥ.The material world and the living entities are separate beings, and they are eternally true, not false. Śaṅkarācārya, however, unnecessarily fearing that by pariṇāma-vāda (transformation of energy) Brahman would be transformed (vikārī), has imagined both the material world and the living entities to be false and to have no individuality. By word jugglery he has tried to prove that the individual identities of the living entities and the material world are illusory, and he has cited the examples of mistaking a rope for a snake or an oyster shell for gold. Thus he has most abominably cheated people in general.

The example of misunderstanding a rope to be a snake is mentioned in the Māṇḍūkya Upaniṣad, but it is meant to explain the error of identifying the body with the soul. Since the soul is actually a spiritual particle, as confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (mamaivāṁśo jīva-loke), it is due to illusion (vivarta-vāda) that a human being, like an animal, identifies the body with the self. This is a proper example of vivarta, or illusion. The verse atattvato 'nyathā-buddhir vivarta ity udāhṛtaḥ describes such an illusion. To not know actual facts and thus to mistake one thing for another (as, for example, to accept the body as oneself) is called vivarta-vāda. Every conditioned living entity who considers the body to be the soul is deluded by this vivarta-vāda. One can be attacked by this vivarta-vāda philosophy when he forgets the inconceivable power of the omnipotent Personality of Godhead.

How the Supreme Personality of Godhead remains as He is, never changing, is explained in the Īśopaniṣad: pūrṇasya pūrṇam ādāya pūrṇam evāvaśiṣyate. God is complete. Even if a complete manifestation is taken away from Him, He continues to be complete. The material creation is manifested by the energy of the Lord, but He is still the same person. His form, entourage, qualities and so on never deteriorate. Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī, in his Paramātma-sandarbha, comments regarding the vivarta-vāda as follows: "Under the spell of vivarta-vāda one imagines the separate entities, namely, the cosmic manifestation and the living entities, to be one with Brahman. This is due to complete ignorance regarding the actual fact. The Absolute Truth, or Parabrahman, is always one and always the same. He is completely free from all other conceptions of existence. He is completely free from false ego, for He is the full spiritual identity. It is absolutely impossible for Him to be subjected to ignorance and fall under the spell of a misconception (vivarta-vāda). The Absolute Truth is beyond our conception. One must admit that He has unblemished qualities that He does not share with every living entity. He is never tainted in the slightest degree by the flaws of ordinary living beings. Everyone must therefore understand the Absolute Truth to possess inconceivable potencies."

TRANSLATION

"Transformation of energy is a proven fact. It is the false bodily conception of the self that is an illusion.

PURPORT

The jīva, or living entity, is a spiritual spark who is part of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Unfortunately, he thinks the body to be the self, and that misunderstanding is called vivarta, or acceptance of untruth to be truth. The body is not the self, but animals and foolish people think that it is. Vivarta (illusion) does not, however, denote a change in the identity of the spirit soul; it is the misconception that the body is the self that is an illusion. Similarly, the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not change when His external energy, consisting of the eight gross and subtle material elements listed in the Bhagavad-gītā (bhūmir āpo 'nalo vāyuḥ, etc.), acts and reacts in different phases.

PURPORT

The argument of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu described in this verse can be very easily understood even by a common man if he simply thinks of the activities of the sun, which has been giving off unlimited amounts of heat and light since time immemorial and yet has not even slightly decreased in power. Modern science believes that it is by sunshine that the entire cosmic manifestation is maintained, and actually one can see how the actions and reactions of sunshine maintain order throughout the universe. The growth of vegetables and even the rotation of the planets take place due to the heat and light of the sun. Sometimes, therefore, modern scientists consider the sun to be the original cause of creation, not knowing that the sun is only a medium, for it is also created by the supreme energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Aside from the sun and the touchstone, there are many other material things that transform their energy in different ways and yet remain as they are. It is not necessary, therefore, for the original cause, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, to change due to the changes or transformations of His different energies.

The falsity of Śrīpāda Śaṅkarācārya's explanation of vivarta-vāda and pariṇāma-vāda has been detected by the Vaiṣṇava ācāryas, especially Jīva Gosvāmī, whose opinion is that actually Śaṅkara did not understand the Vedānta-sūtra. In Śaṅkara's explanation of one sūtra, ānanda-mayo 'bhyāsāt, he has interpreted the affix mayaṭ with such word jugglery that this very explanation proves that he had little knowledge of the Vedānta-sūtra but simply wanted to support his impersonalism through the aphorisms of the Vedānta philosophy. Actually, however, he failed to do so because he could not put forward strong arguments. In this connection, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī cites the phrase brahma pucchaṁ pratiṣṭhā (Taittirīya Upaniṣad 2.5), which gives Vedic evidence that Brahman is the origin of everything. In explaining this verse, Śrīpāda Śaṅkarācārya interpreted various Sanskrit words in such a way that he implied, according to Jīva Gosvāmī, that Vyāsadeva had very little knowledge of higher logic. Such unscrupulous deviation from the real meaning of the Vedānta-sūtra has created a class of men who by word jugglery try to derive various indirect meanings from the Vedic literatures, especially the Bhagavad-gītā. One of them has even explained that the word kurukṣetra refers to the body. Such interpretations imply, however, that neither Lord Kṛṣṇa nor Vyāsadeva had a proper sense of word usage or etymological adjustment. They lead one to assume that since Lord Kṛṣṇa could not personally sense the meaning of what He was speaking and Vyāsadeva did not know the meaning of what he was writing, Lord Kṛṣṇa left His book to be explained later by the Māyāvādīs. Such interpretations merely prove, however, that their proponents have very little philosophical sense.

Instead of wasting one's time falsely deriving such indirect meanings from the Vedānta-sūtra and other Vedic scriptures, one should accept the words of these books as they are. In presenting the Bhagavad-gītā As It Is, therefore, we have not changed the meaning of the original words. Similarly, if one studies the Vedānta-sūtra as it is, without whimsical and capricious adulteration, one can understand the Vedanta-sūtra very easily. Śrīla Vyāsadeva therefore explains the Vedānta-sūtra, beginning from the first sūtra, janmādy asya yataḥ, in his Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.1):

janmādy asya yato 'nvayād itarataś cārtheṣv abhijñaḥ sva-rāṭ

"I meditate upon Him [Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa], the transcendent reality, who is the primeval cause of all causes, from whom all manifested universes arise, in whom they dwell, and by whom they are destroyed. I meditate upon that eternally effulgent Lord, who is directly and indirectly conscious of all manifestations and yet is fully independent." The Supreme Personality of Godhead knows very well how to do everything perfectly. He is abhijña, always fully conscious. The Lord therefore says in the Bhagavad-gītā (7.26) that He knows everything, past, present and future, but that no one but a devotee knows Him as He is. Therefore, the Absolute Truth, the Personality of Godhead, is at least partially understood by devotees of the Lord, but the Māyāvādī philosophers, who unnecessarily speculate to understand the Absolute Truth, simply waste their time.

'praṇava' se mahāvākya–vedera nidāna īśvara-svarūpa praṇava sarva-viśva-dhāma

SYNONYMS

praṇava-the oṁkāra; se-that; mahā-vākya-transcendental sound vibration; vedera-of the Vedas; nidāna-basic principle; īśvara-svarūpa-direct representation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; praṇava-oṁkāra; sarva-viśva-of all universes; dhāma-is the reservoir.

TRANSLATION

"The Vedic sound vibration oṁkāra, the principal word in the Vedic scriptures, is the basis of all Vedic vibrations. Therefore one should accept oṁkāra as the sound representation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the reservoir of the cosmic manifestation.

PURPORT

In the Bhagavad-gītā (8.13) the glories of oṁkāra are described as follows:

oṁ ity ekākṣaraṁ brahma
vyāharan mām anusmaran
yaḥ prayāti tyajan dehaṁ
sa yāti paramāṁ gatim

This verse indicates that oṁkāra, or praṇava, is a direct representation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore if at the time of death one simply remembers oṁkāra, he remembers the Supreme Personality of Godhead and is therefore immediately transferred to the spiritual world. Oṁkāra is the basic principle of all Vedic mantras, for it is a representation of Lord Kṛṣṇa, understanding of whom is the ultimate goal of the Vedas, as stated in the Bhagavad-gītā (vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ). Māyāvādī philosophers cannot understand these simple facts explained in the Bhagavad-gītā, and yet they are very proud of being Vedāntīs. Sometimes, therefore, we refer to the Vedāntī philosophers as Vidantīs, those who have no teeth (vi means "without," and dantī means "possessing teeth"). The statements of the Śaṅkara philosophy, which are the teeth of the Māyāvādī philosopher, are always broken by the strong arguments of Vaiṣṇava philosophers such as the great ācāryas, especially Rāmānujācārya. Śrīpāda Rāmānujācārya and Madhvācārya break the teeth of the Māyāvādī philosophers, who can therefore be called Vidantīs, "toothless."

The transcendental vibration oṁkāra is explained in the Bhagavad-gītā, Chapter Eight, verse thirteen:

oṁ ity ekākṣaraṁ brahma
vyāharan mām anusmaran
yaḥ prayāti tyajan dehaṁ
sa yāti paramāṁ gatim

"After being situated in this yoga practice and vibrating the sacred syllable oṁ, the supreme combination of letters, if one thinks of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and quits his body, he will certainly reach the spiritual planets."

If one actually understands that oṁkāra is the sound representation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whether he chants oṁkāra or the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, the result is certainly the same.

The transcendental vibration of oṁkāra is further explained in the Bhagavad-gītā, Chapter Nine, verse seventeen:

pitāham asya jagato mātā dhātā pitāmahaḥ vedyaṁ pavitram oṁkāra ṛk sāma yajur eva ca

"I am the father of this universe, the mother, the support, and the grandsire. I am the object of knowledge, the purifier and the syllable oṁ. I am also the Ṛg, the Sāma and the Yajur Vedas. ."

Similarly, the transcendental sound oṁ is further explained in the Bhagavad-gītā, Chapter Seventeen, verse twenty-three:

oṁ tat sad iti nirdeśo brahmaṇas tri-vidhaḥ smṛtaḥ brāhmaṇās tena vedāś ca yajñāś ca vihitāḥ purā

"From the beginning of creation, the three syllables oṁ tat sat have been used to indicate the Supreme Absolute Truth [Brahman]. They were uttered by brāhmaṇas while chanting Vedic hymns and during sacrifices for the satisfaction of the Supreme."

Throughout all the Vedic scriptures the glories of oṁkāra are specifically mentioned. Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī, in his thesis Bhagavat-sandarbha, says that in the Vedic literature oṁkāra is considered to be the sound vibration of the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Only this vibration of transcendental sound can deliver a conditioned soul from the clutches of māyā. Sometimes oṁkāra is also called the deliverer (tāra). Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam begins with the oṁkāra vibration: oṁ namo bhagavate vāsudevāya. Therefore oṁkāra has been described by the great commentator Śrīdhara Svāmī as tārāṅkura, the seed of deliverance from the material world. Since the Supreme Godhead is absolute, His holy name and His sound vibration oṁkāra are as good as He Himself. Caitanya Mahāprabhu says that the holy name, or oṁkāra, the transcendental representation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, has all the potencies of the Personality of Godhead.

tatrārpitā niyamitaḥ smaraṇe na kālaḥ

All potencies are invested in the holy vibration of the holy name of the Lord. There is no doubt that the holy name of the Lord, or oṁkāra, is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. In other words, anyone who chants oṁkāra and the holy name of the Lord, Hare Kṛṣṇa, immediately meets the Supreme Lord directly in His sound form. In the Nārada-pañcarātra it is clearly said that the Supreme Personality of Godhead Nārāyaṇa personally appears before the chanter who engages in chanting the aṣṭākṣara, or eight-syllable mantra, oṁ namo nārāyaṇāya. A similar statement in the Māṇḍūkya Upaniṣad declares that whatever one sees in the spiritual world is all an expansion of the spiritual potency of oṁkāra.

On the basis of all the Upaniṣads, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī says that oṁkāra is the Supreme Absolute Truth and is accepted as such by all the ācāryas and authorities. Oṁkāra is beginningless, changeless, supreme and free from deterioration and external contamination. Oṁkāra is the origin, middle and end of everything, and any living entity who thus understands oṁkāra attains the perfection of spiritual identity in oṁkāra. Oṁkāra, being situated in everyone's heart, is īśvara, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, as confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (18.61): īśvaraḥ sarva-bhūtānāṁ hṛd-deśe 'rjuna tiṣṭhati. Oṁkāra is as good as Viṣṇu because oṁkāra is as all-pervasive as Viṣṇu. One who knows oṁkāra and Lord Viṣṇu to be identical no longer has to lament or hanker. One who chants oṁkāra no longer remains a śūdra but immediately comes to the position of a brāhmaṇa. Simply by chanting oṁkāra one can understand the whole creation to be one unit, or an expansion of the energy of the Supreme Lord: idaṁ hi viśvaṁ bhagavān ivetaro yato jagat-sthāna-nirodha-sambhavāḥ. "The Supreme Lord Personality of Godhead is Himself this cosmos, and still He is aloof from it. From Him only this cosmic manifestation has emanated, in Him it rests, and unto Him it enters after annihilation." (Bhāg. 1.5.20) Although one who does not understand concludes otherwise, Śrīmad-Bhagavatam states that the entire cosmic manifestation is but an expansion of the energy of the Supreme Lord. Realization of this is possible simply by chanting the holy name of the Lord, oṁkāra.

One should not, however, foolishly conclude that because the Supreme Personality of Godhead is omnipotent, we have manufactured a combination of letters-a, u and m-to represent Him. Factually the transcendental sound oṁkāra, although a combination of the three letters a, u and m, has transcendental potency, and one who chants oṁkāra will very soon realize oṁkāra and Lord Viṣṇu to be nondifferent. Kṛṣṇa declares, praṇavaḥ sarva-vedeṣu: "I am the syllable oṁ in the Vedic mantras." (Bg. 7.8) One should therefore conclude that among the many incarnations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, oṁkāra is the sound incarnation. All the Vedas accept this thesis. One should always remember that the holy name of the Lord and the Lord Himself are always identical (abhinnatvān nāma-nāminoḥ). Since oṁkāra is the basic principle of all Vedic knowledge, it is uttered before one begins to chant any Vedic hymn. Without oṁkāra, no Vedic mantra is successful. The Gosvāmīs therefore declare that praṇava (oṁkāra) is the complete representation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and they have analyzed oṁkāra in terms of its alphabetical constituents as follows:

a-kāreṇocyate kṛṣṇaḥ sarva-lokaika-nāyakaḥ u-kāreṇocyate rādhā ma-kāro jīva-vācakaḥ

Oṁkāra is a combination of the letters a, u and m. A-kāreṇocyate kṛṣṇaḥ: the letter a (a-kāra) refers to Kṛṣṇa, who is sarva-lokaika-nāyakaḥ, the master of all living entities and planets, material and spiritual. Nāyaka means "leader." He is the supreme leader (nityo nityānāṁ cetanaś cetanānām). The letter u (u-kāra) indicates Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, the pleasure potency of Kṛṣṇa, and m (ma-kāra) indicates the living entities (jīvas). Thus oṁ is the complete combination of Kṛṣṇa, His potency and His eternal servitors. In other words, oṁkāra represents Kṛṣṇa, His name, fame, pastimes, entourage, expansions, devotees, potencies and everything else pertaining to Him. As Caitanya Mahāprabhu states in the present verse of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, sarva-viśva-dhāma: oṁkāra is the resting place of everything, just as Kṛṣṇa is the resting place of everything (brahmaṇo hi pratiṣṭhāham).

The Māyāvādī philosophers consider many Vedic mantras to be the mahā-vākya, or principal Vedic mantra, such as tat tvam asi (Chāndogya Upaniṣad 6.8.7), idaṁ sarvaṁ yad ayam ātmā and brahmedaṁ sarvam (Bṛhad-āraṇyaka Upaniṣad 2.5.1), ātmaivedaṁ sarvam (Chāndogya Upaniṣad 7.25.2) and neha nānāsti kiñcana (Kaṭha Upaniṣad 2.1.11). That is a great mistake. Only oṁkāra is the mahā-vākya. All these other mantras that the Māyāvādīs accept as the mahā-vākya are only incidental. They cannot be taken as the mahā-vākya, or mahā-mantra. The mantra tat tvam asi indicates only a partial understanding of the Vedas, unlike oṁkāra, which represents the full understanding of the Vedas. Therefore the transcendental sound that includes all Vedic knowledge is oṁkāra (praṇava).

Aside from oṁkāra, none of the words uttered by the followers of Śaṅkarācārya can be considered the mahā-vākya. They are merely passing remarks. Śaṅkarācārya, however, has never stressed chanting of the mahā-vākya oṁkāra; he has accepted only tat tvam asi as the mahā-vākya. Imagining the living entity to be God, he has misrepresented all the mantras of the Vedānta-sūtra with the motive of proving that there is no separate existence of the living entities and the Supreme Absolute Truth. This is similar to the politician's attempt to prove nonviolence from the Bhagavad-gītā. Kṛṣṇa is violent to demons, and to attempt to prove that Kṛṣṇa is not violent is ultimately to deny Kṛṣṇa. As such explanations of the Bhagavad-gītā are absurd, so also is Śaṅkarācārya's explanation of the Vedānta-sūtra, and no sane and reasonable man will accept it. At present, however, the Vedānta-sūtra is misrepresented not only by the so-called Vedāntis but also by other unscrupulous persons who are so degraded that they even recommend that sannyāsīs eat meat, fish and eggs. In this way Śaṅkara's so-called followers, the impersonalist Māyāvādīs, are sinking lower and lower. How can these degraded men explain the Vedānta-sūtra, which is the essence of all Vedic literature?

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has declared, māyāvādi-bhāṣya śunile haya sarva-nāśa: "Anyone who hears commentary on the Vedānta-sūtra from the Māyāvāda school is completely doomed." As explained in the Bhagavad-gītā (15.15), vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ: all Vedic literature aims to understand Kṛṣṇa. Māyāvāda philosophy, however, has deviated everyone from Kṛṣṇa. Therefore there is a great need for the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement all over the world to save the world from degradation. Every intelligent and sane man must abandon the philosophical explanation of the Māyāvādīs and accept the explanation of Vaiṣṇava ācāryas. One should read Bhagavad-gītā As It Is to try to understand the real purpose of the Vedas.

SYNONYMS

sarva-āśraya-the reservoir of everything; īśvarera-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; praṇava-oṁkāra; uddeśa-purpose; tat tvam asi-the Vedic mantra tat tvam asi ("you are the same"); vākya-statement; haya-becomes; vedera-of the Vedic literature; eka-deśa-partial understanding.

TRANSLATION

"It is the purpose of the Supreme Personality of Godhead to present praṇava [oṁkāra] as the reservoir of all Vedic knowledge. The words tat tvam asi are only a partial explanation of the Vedic knowledge.

PURPORT

Tat tvam asi means "you are the same spiritual identity."

TRANSLATION

"Praṇava [oṁkāra] is the mahā-vākya [mahā-mantra] in the Vedas. Śaṅkarācārya's followers cover this to stress without authority the mantra tat tvam asi.

PURPORT

The Māyāvādī philosophers stress the statements tat tvam asi, so 'ham, etc., but they do not stress the real mahā-mantra, praṇava (oṁkāra). Therefore, because they misrepresent Vedic knowledge, they are the greatest offenders to the lotus feet of the Lord. Caitanya Mahāprabhu says clearly, māyāvādī kṛṣṇe aparādhī: "Māyāvādī philosophers are the greatest offenders to Lord Kṛṣṇa." Lord Kṛṣṇa declares:

tān ahaṁ dviṣataḥ krūrān saṁsāreṣu narādhamān kṣipāmy ajasram aśubhān āsurīṣv eva yoniṣu

"Those who are envious and mischievous, who are the lowest among mankind, I perpetually cast into the ocean of material existence, into various demoniac species of life." (Bg. 16.19) Life in demoniac species awaits the Māyāvādī philosophers after death because they are envious of Kṛṣṇa. When Kṛṣṇa says in the Bhagavad-gītā (9.34), man-manā bhava mad-bhakto mad-yājī māṁ namaskuru ("Engage your mind always in thinking of Me, become My devotee, offer obeisances to Me and worship Me"), one demoniac scholar says that it is not Kṛṣṇa to whom one must surrender. This scholar is already suffering in this life, and he will have to suffer again in the next if in this life he does not complete his prescribed suffering. One should be very careful not to be envious of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In the next verse, therefore, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu clearly states the purpose of the Vedas.

PURPORT

We quote Vedic evidence to support our statements, but if we interpret it according to our own judgment, the authority of the Vedic literature is rendered imperfect or useless. In other words, by interpreting the Vedic version one minimizes the value of Vedic evidence. When one quotes from Vedic literature, it is understood that the quotations are authoritative. How can one bring the authority under his own control? That is a case of principiis obsta.

TRANSLATION

"To prove their philosophy, the members of the Māyāvāda school have given up the real, easily understood meaning of the Vedic literature and introduced indirect meanings based on their imaginative powers."

PURPORT

Unfortunately, the Śaṅkarite interpretation has covered almost the entire world. Therefore there is a great need to present the original, easily understood natural import of the Vedic literature. We have therefore begun by presenting Bhagavad-gītā As It Is, and we propose to present all the Vedic literature in terms of the direct meaning of its words.

TRANSLATION

"Brahman, who is greater than the greatest, is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is full of six opulences, and therefore He is the reservoir of ultimate truth and absolute knowledge.

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam it is said that the Absolute Truth is understood in three phases of realization: the impersonal Brahman, the localized Paramātmā and ultimately the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The impersonal Brahman and localized Paramātmā are expansions of the potency of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is complete in six opulences, namely, wealth, fame, strength, beauty, knowledge and renunciation. Since He possesses His six opulences, the Personality of Godhead is the ultimate truth in absolute knowledge.

TRANSLATION

"When we speak of the Supreme as impersonal, we deny His spiritual potencies. Logically, if you accept half of the truth, you cannot understand the whole.

PURPORT

In the Upaniṣads it is said:

oṁ pūrṇam adaḥ pūrṇam idaṁ pūrṇāt pūrṇam udacyate pūrṇasya pūrṇam ādāya pūrṇam evāvaśiṣyate

This verse, which is mentioned in the Īśopaniṣad, Bṛhad-āraṇyaka Upaniṣad and many other Upaniṣads, indicates that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is full in six opulences. His position is unique, for He possesses all riches, strength, influence, beauty, knowledge and renunciation. Brahman means the greatest, but the Supreme Personality of Godhead is greater than the greatest, just as the sun globe is greater than the sunshine, which is all-pervading in the universe. Although the sunshine that spreads all over the universes appears very great to the less knowledgeable, greater than the sunshine is the sun itself, and greater than the sun is the sun-god. Similarly, impersonal Brahman is not the greatest, although it appears to be so. Impersonal Brahman is only the bodily effulgence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but the transcendental form of the Lord is greater than both the impersonal Brahman and localized Paramātmā. Therefore whenever the word Brahman is used in the Vedic literature, it is understood to refer to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

In the Bhagavad-gītā the Lord is also addressed as Parabrahman. Māyāvādīs and others sometimes misunderstand Brahman because every living entity is also Brahman. Therefore Kṛṣṇa is referred to as Parabrahman (the Supreme Brahman). In the Vedic literature, whenever the words Brahman or Parabrahman are used, they are to be understood to refer to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa. This is their real meaning. Since the entire Vedic literature deals with the subject of Brahman, Kṛṣṇa is therefore the ultimate goal of Vedic understanding. The impersonal brahmajyoti rests on the personal form of the Lord. Therefore although the impersonal effulgence, the brahmajyoti, is the first realization, one must enter into it, as mentioned in the Īśopaniṣad, to find the Supreme Person, and then one's knowledge is perfect. The Bhagavad-gītā (7.19) also confirms this: bahūnāṁ janmanām ante jñānavān māṁ prapadyate. One's search for the Absolute Truth by dint of speculative knowledge is complete when one comes to the point of understanding Kṛṣṇa and surrenders unto Him. That is the real point of perfectional knowledge.

Partial realization of the Absolute Truth as impersonal Brahman denies the complete opulences of the Lord. This is a hazardous understanding of the Absolute Truth. Unless one accepts all the features of the Absolute Truth-namely, impersonal Brahman, localized Paramātmā and ultimately the Supreme Personality of Godhead-his knowledge is imperfect. Śrīpāda Rāmānujācārya, in his Vedārtha-saṅgraha, says: jñānena dharmeṇa svarūpam api nirūpitam, na tu jñāna-mātraṁ brahmeti katham idam avagamyate. He thus indicates that the real absolute identity must be understood in terms of both His knowledge and His characteristics. Simply to understand the Absolute Truth to be full of knowledge is not sufficient. In the Vedic literature (Muṇḍaka Upaniṣad 1.1.9) we find the statement yaḥ sarva-jñaḥ sarva-vit, which means that the Absolute Truth knows everything perfectly, but we also learn from the Vedic description parāsya śaktir vividhaiva śrūyate that not only does He know everything, but He also acts accordingly by utilizing His different energies. Thus to understand that Brahman, the Supreme, is conscious is not sufficient. One must know how He consciously acts through His different energies. Māyāvāda philosophy simply informs us of the consciousness of the Absolute Truth but does not give us information of how He acts with His consciousness. That is the defect of that philosophy.

bhagavān-prāpti-hetu ye kari upāya śravaṇādi bhakti–kṛṣṇa-prāptira sahāya bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; prāpti-hetu-the means by which He can be approached; ye-what; kari-I do; upāya-means; śravaṇa-ādi-devotional service, beginning with hearing; bhakti-devotional service; kṛṣṇa-the Supreme Lord; prāptira-to approach Him; sahāya-means.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"It is only by devotional service, beginning with hearing, that one can approach the Supreme Personality of Godhead. That is the only means to approach Him.

PURPORT

Māyāvādī philosophers are satisfied simply to understand Brahman to be the sum total of knowledge, but Vaiṣṇava philosophers not only know in detail about the Supreme Personality of Godhead but also know how to approach Him directly. The method for this is described by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as nine kinds of devotional service, beginning with hearing:

śravaṇaṁ kīrtanaṁ viṣṇoḥ
smaraṇaṁ pāda-sevanam
arcanaṁ vandanaṁ dāsyaṁ
sakhyam ātma-nivedanam
(Bhāg. 7.5.23)

>One can directly approach the Supreme Personality of Godhead simply by executing the nine kinds of devotional service, of which hearing about the Lord is the most important (śravaṇādi). Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has very favorably stressed the importance of this process of hearing. According to His method, if people are simply given a chance to hear about Kṛṣṇa, certainly they will gradually develop their dormant awareness or love of Godhead. Śravaṇādi-śuddha-citte karaye udaya (Cc. Madhya 22.107). Love of God is dormant in everyone, but if one is given a chance to hear about the Lord, certainly that love develops. Our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement acts on this principle. We simply give people the chance to hear about the Supreme Personality of Godhead and give them prasāda to eat, and the actual result is that all over the world people are responding to this process and becoming pure devotees of Lord Kṛṣṇa. We open hundreds of centers all over the world just to give people in general a chance to hear about Kṛṣṇa and accept Kṛṣṇa's prasāda. These two processes can be accepted by anyone, even a child. It doesn't matter whether one is poor or rich, learned or foolish, black or white, old or still a child-anyone who simply hears about the Supreme Personality of Godhead and takes prasāda is certainly elevated to the transcendental position of devotional service.

TEXT 142

sei sarva-vedera 'abhidheya' nāma sādhana-bhakti haite haya premera udgama

SYNONYMS

sei sarva-vedera-that is the essence of all Vedic literature; abhidheya nāma-the process called abhidheya, or devotional activities; sādhana-bhakti-another name of this process, "devotional service in practice"; haite-from this; haya-there is; premera-of love of Godhead; udgama-awakening.

TRANSLATION

"By practicing this regulated devotional service under the direction of the spiritual master, certainly one awakens his dormant love of Godhead. This process is called abhidheya.

PURPORT

By the practice of devotional service, beginning with hearing and chanting, the impure heart of a conditioned soul is purified, and thus he can understand his eternal relationship with the Supreme personality of Godhead. That eternal relationship is described by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu: jīvera 'svarūpa' haya kṛṣṇera 'nitya-dāsa'. "The living entity is an eternal servitor of the Supreme Personality of Godhead." When one is convinced about this relationship, which is called sambandha, he then acts accordingly. That is called abhidheya. The next step is prayojana-siddhi, or fulfillment of the ultimate goal of one's life. If one can understand his relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead and act accordingly, automatically his mission in life is fulfilled. The Māyāvādī philosophers miss even the first stage in self-realization because they have no conception of God's being personal. He is the master of all, and He is the only person who can accept the service of all living entities, but since this knowledge is lacking in Māyāvāda philosophy, Māyāvādīs do not have knowledge even of their relationship with God. They wrongly think that everyone is God or that everyone is equal to God. Therefore, since the real position of the living entity is not clear to them, how can they advance further? Although they are very puffed-up at being liberated, Māyāvādī philosophers very shortly fall down again to material activities due to their neglecting the lotus feet of the Lord. That is called patanty adhaḥ.

(Bhāg. 10.2.32)

>It is the statement of Prahlāda Mahārāja that persons who think themselves liberated but do not execute devotional service, not knowing their relationship with the Lord, are certainly misled. One must know his relationship with the Lord and act accordingly. Then the fulfillment of his life's mission will be possible.

kṛṣṇera-of Kṛṣṇa; caraṇe-at the lotus feet; haya-becomes; yadi-if; anurāga-attachment; kṛṣṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; vinu-without; anyatra-anywhere else; tāra-his; nāhi-there does not; rahe-remain; rāga-attachment.

TRANSLATION

"If one develops his love of Godhead and becomes attached to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, gradually he loses his attachment to everything else.

PURPORT

This is a test of advancement in devotional service. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.42), bhaktir pareśānubhavo viraktir anyatra ca: in bhakti, a devotee's only attachment is Kṛṣṇa; he no longer wants to maintain his attachments to many other things. Although Māyāvādī philosophers are supposed to be very advanced on the path of liberation, we see that after some time they descend to politics and philanthropic activities. Many big sannyāsīs who were supposedly liberated and very advanced have come down again to materialistic activities, although they left this world as mithyā (false). When a devotee develops in devotional service, however, he no longer has attachments to such philanthropic activities. He is simply inspired to serve the Lord, and he engages his entire life in such service. This is the difference between Vaiṣṇava and Māyāvādī philosophers. Devotional service, therefore, is practical, whereas Māyāvāda philosophy is merely mental speculation.

kṛṣṇera mādhurya-rasa karāya āsvādana pañcama-fifth; puruṣa-artha-goal of life; sei-that; prema-love of God; mahā-dhana-foremost wealth; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; mādhurya-conjugal love; rasa-mellow; karāya-causes; āsvādana-taste.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Love of Godhead is so exalted that it is considered to be the fifth goal of human life. By awakening one's love of Godhead, one can attain the platform of conjugal love, tasting it even during the present span of life.

PURPORT

The Māyāvādī philosophers consider the highest goal of perfection to be liberation (mukti), which is the fourth perfectional platform. Generally people are aware of four principal goals of life-religiosity (dharma), economic development (artha), sense gratification (kāma) and ultimately liberation (mokṣa)-but devotional service is situated on the platform above liberation. In other words, when one is actually liberated (mukta) he can understand the meaning of love of Godhead (kṛṣṇa-prema). While teaching Rūpa Gosvāmī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu stated, koṭi-mukta-madhye 'durlabha' eka kṛṣṇa-bhakta: "Out of millions of liberated persons, one may become a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa."

The most elevated Māyāvādī philosopher can rise to the platform of liberation, but kṛṣṇa-bhakti, devotional service to Kṛṣṇa, is transcendental to such liberation. Śrīla Vyāsadeva explains this fact in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.2):

dharmaḥ projjhita-kaitavo 'tra paramo nirmatsarāṇāṁ satāṁ vedyaṁ vāstavam atra vastu śiva-daṁ tāpa-trayonmūlanam

"Completely rejecting all religions which are materially motivated, the Bhāgavata Purāṇa propounds the highest truth, which is understandable by those devotees who are pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries." Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, the explanation of the Vedānta-sūtra, is meant for paramo nirmatsarāṇām, those who are completely aloof from jealousy. Māyāvādī philosophers are jealous of the existence of the Personality of Godhead. Therefore the Vedānta-sūtra is not actually meant for them. They unnecessarily poke their noses into the Vedanta-sūtra, but they have no ability to understand it because the author of the Vedānta-sūtra writes in his commentary, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, that it is meant for those who are pure in heart (paramo nirmatsarāṇām). If one is envious of Kṛṣṇa, how can he understand the Vedānta-sūtra or Śrīmad-Bhagavatam? The Māyāvādīs' primary occupation is to offend the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa. For example, although Kṛṣṇa demands our surrender in the Bhagavad-gītā, the greatest scholar and so-called philosopher in India has protested that it is "not to Kṛṣṇa" that we have to surrender. Therefore, he is envious. Since Māyāvādīs of all different descriptions are envious of Kṛṣṇa, they have no scope to understand the meaning of the Vedānta-sūtra. Even if they were on the liberated platform, as they falsely claim, here Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī repeats the statement of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu that love of Kṛṣṇa is beyond the state of liberation.

TEXT 145

premā haite kṛṣṇa haya nija bhakta-vaśa premā haite pāya kṛṣṇera sevā-sukha-rasa

SYNONYMS

premā-love of Kṛṣṇa; haite-from; kṛṣṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; haya-becomes; nija-His own; bhakta-vaśa-submissive to devotees; premā-love of God; haite-from; pāya-he gets; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; sevā-sukha-rasa-the mellow of devotional service.

TRANSLATION

"The Supreme Lord, who is greater than the greatest, becomes submissive to even a very insignificant devotee because of his devotional service. It is the beautiful and exalted nature of devotional service that the infinite Lord becomes submissive to the infinitesimal living entity because of it. In reciprocal devotional activities with the Lord, the devotee actually enjoys the transcendental mellow quality of devotional service.

PURPORT

Becoming one with the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not very important for a devotee. Muktiḥ svayaṁ mukulitāñjali sevate 'smān (Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta 107). Speaking from his actual experience, Śrīla Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura says that if one develops love of Godhead, mukti (liberation) becomes subservient and unimportant to him. Mukti stands before the devotee and is prepared to render all kinds of services. The Māyāvādī philosophers' standard of mukti is very insignificant for a devotee, for by devotional service even the Supreme Personality of Godhead becomes subordinate to him. An actual example is that the Supreme Lord Kṛṣṇa became the chariot driver of Arjuna, and when Arjuna asked Him to draw his chariot between the two armies (senayor ubhayor madhye rathaṁ sthāpaya me 'cyuta), Kṛṣṇa executed his order. Such is the relationship between the Supreme Lord and a devotee that although the Lord is greater than the greatest, He is prepared to render service to the insignificant devotee by dint of his sincere and unalloyed devotional service.

TEXT 146

sambandha, abhidheya, prayojana nāma ei tina artha sarva-sūtre paryavasāna

SYNONYMS

sambandha-relationship; abhidheya-functional duties; prayojana-the goal of life; nāma-name; ei-there; tina-three; artha-purport; sarva-all; sūtre-in the aphorisms of the Vedānta; paryavasāna-culmination.

TRANSLATION

"One's relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, activities in terms of that relationship, and the ultimate goal of life [to develop love of God]-these three subjects are explained in every aphorism of the Vedānta-sūtra, for they form the culmination of the entire Vedānta philosophy."

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.5.5) it is said:

parābhavas tāvad abodha-jāto yāvan na jijñāsata ātma-tattvam

"A human being is defeated in all his activities as long as he does not know the goal of life, which can be understood when one is inquisitive about Brahman." It is such inquiry that begins the Vedānta-sūtra: athāto brahma-jijñāsā. A human being should be inquisitive to know who he is, what the universe is, what God is, and what the relationship is between himself, God and the material world. Such questions cannot be asked by cats and dogs, but they must arise in the heart of a real human being. Knowledge of these four items-namely, oneself, the universe, God, and their internal relationship-is called sambandha-jñāna, or the knowledge of one's relationship. When one's relationship with the Supreme Lord is established, the next program is to act in that relationship. This is called abhidheya, or activity in relationship with the Lord. After executing such prescribed duties, when one attains the highest goal of life, love of Godhead, he achieves prayojana-siddhi, or the fulfillment of his human mission. In the Brahma-sūtra, or Vedānta-sūtra, these subjects are very carefully explained. Therefore one who does not understand the Vedānta-sūtra in terms of these principles is simply wasting his time. This is the version of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.8):

dharmaḥ svanuṣṭhitaḥ puṁsāṁ viṣvaksena-kathāsu yaḥ notpādayed yadi ratiṁ śrama eva hi kevalam

One may be a very learned scholar and execute his prescribed duty very nicely, but if he does not ultimately become inquisitive about the Supreme Personality of Godhead and is indifferent to śravaṇaṁ kīrtanam (hearing and chanting), all that he has done is but a waste of time. Māyāvādī philosophers who do not understand the relationship between themselves, the cosmic manifestation and the Supreme Personality of Godhead are simply wasting their time, and their philosophical speculation has no value.

TEXT 147

ei-mata sarva-sūtrera vyākhyāna śuniyā sakala sannyāsī kahe vinaya kariyā

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; sarva-sūtrera-of all the aphorisms of the Vedānta-sūtra; vyākhyāna-explanation; śuniyā-by hearing; sakala-all; sannyāsī-the groups of Māyāvādī sannyāsīs; kahe-said; vinaya-humbly; kariyā-doing so.

TRANSLATION

When all the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs thus heard the explanation of Caitanya Mahāprabhu on the basis of sambandha, abhidheya and prayojana, they spoke very humbly.

PURPORT

Everyone who actually desires to understand the Vedānta philosophy must certainly accept the explanation of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu or the Vaiṣṇava ācāryas who have also commented on the Vedānta-sūtra according to the principles of bhakti-yoga. After hearing the explanation of the Vedānta-sūtra from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, all the sannyāsīs, headed by Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, became very humble and obedient to the Lord, and they spoke as follows.

TEXT 148

vedamaya-mūrti tumi,–sākṣāt nārāyaṇa kṣama aparādha,–pūrve ye kailuṅ nindana veda-maya-transformation of the Vedic knowledge; mūrti-form; tumi-You; sākṣāt-directly; nārāyaṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; kṣama-excuse; aparādha-offense; pūrve-before; ye-that; kailuṅ-we have done; nindana-criticism.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Dear sir, You are Vedic knowledge personified and are directly Nārāyaṇa Himself. Kindly excuse us for the offenses we previously committed by criticizing You."

PURPORT

The complete path of bhakti-yoga is based upon the process of becoming humble and submissive. By the grace of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, all the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs were very humble and submissive after hearing His explanation of the Vedānta-sūtra, and they begged to be pardoned for the offenses they had committed by criticizing the Lord for simply chanting and dancing and not taking part in the study of the Vedānta-sūtra. We are propagating the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement simply by following in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. We may not be very well versed in the Vedānta-sūtra aphorisms and may not understand their meaning, but we follow in the footsteps of the ācāryas, and because of our strictly and obediently following in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, it is to be understood that we know everything regarding the Vedānta-sūtra.

TEXT 149

sei haite sannyāsīra phiri gela mana
'kṛṣṇa' 'kṛṣṇa' nāma sadā karaye grahaṇa

SYNONYMS

sei haite-from that time; sannyāsīra-all the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs; phiri-turn; gela-became; mana-mind; kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa-the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa; nāma-name; sadā-always; karaye-do; grahaṇa-accept.

TRANSLATION

From that moment when the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs heard the explanation of the Vedānta-sūtra from the Lord, their minds changed, and on the instruction of Caitanya Mahāprabhu, they too chanted "Kṛṣṇa! Kṛṣṇa!" always.

PURPORT

In this connection it may be mentioned that sometimes the sahajiyā class of devotees opine that Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī and Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī are the same man. Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī was a great Vaiṣṇava devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, but Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, the head of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs in Benares, was a different person. Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī belonged to the Rāmānuja-sampradāya, whereas Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī belonged to the Śaṅkarācārya-sampradāya. Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī wrote a number of books, among which are the Caitanya-candrāmṛta, Rādhā-rasa-sudhā-nidhi, Saṅgīta-mādhava, Vṛndāvana-śataka and Navadvīpa-śataka. While traveling in southern India, Caitanya Mahāprabhu met Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī, who had two brothers, Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa and Tirumalaya Bhaṭṭa, who were Vaiṣṇavas of the Rāmānuja-sampradāya. Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī was the nephew of Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī. From historical records it is found that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu traveled in South India in the year 1433 śakābda (A.D. 1511) during the Cāturmāsya period, and it was at that time that He met Prabodhānanda, who belonged to the Rāmānuja-sampradāya. How then could the same person meet Him as a member of the Śaṅkara-sampradāya in 1435 śakābda, two years later? It is to be concluded that the guess of the sahijiyā-sampradāya that Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī and Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī were the same man is a mistaken idea.

ei-mate tāṅ-sabāra kṣami' aparādha sabākāre kṛṣṇa-nāma karilā prasāda ei-mate-in this way; tāṅ-sabāra-of all the sannyāsīs; kṣami'-excusing; aparādha-offense; sabākāre-all of them; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; karilā-gave; prasāda-as mercy.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thus Lord Caitanya excused all the offenses of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs and very mercifully blessed them with kṛṣṇa-nāma.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the mercy incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is addressed by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī as mahā-vadānyāvatāra, or the most magnanimous incarnation. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī also says, karuṇayāvatīrṇaḥ kalau: it is only by His mercy that He has descended in this Age of Kali. Here this is exemplified. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not like to see Māyāvādī sannyāsīs because He thought of them as offenders to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, but here He excuses them (tāṅ-sabāra kṣami' aparādha). This is an example in preaching. Āpani ācari' bhakti śikhāimu sabāre. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu teaches us that those whom preachers meet are almost all offenders who are opposed to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, but it is a preacher's duty to convince them of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and then induce them to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Our propagation of the saṅkīrtana movement is continuing, despite many opponents, and people are taking up this chanting process even in remote parts of the world like Africa. By inducing the offenders to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu exemplified the success of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. We should follow very respectfully in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya, and there is no doubt that we shall be successful in our attempts.

TEXT 151

SYNONYMS

tabe-after this; saba-all; sannyāsī-the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs; mahāprabhuke-Caitanya Mahāprabhu; laiyā-taking Him; bhikṣā karilena-took prasāda, or took lunch; sabhe-all together; madhye-in the middle; vasāiyā-seating Him.

TRANSLATION

After this, all the sannyāsīs took the Lord in their midst, and thus they all took their meal together.

PURPORT

Previously Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu neither mixed nor talked with the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, but now He is taking lunch with them. It is to be concluded that when Lord Caitanya induced them to chant Hare Kṛṣṇa and excused them for their offenses, they were purified, and therefore there was no objection to taking lunch, or bhagavat-prasāda, with them, although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu knew that the food was not offered to the Deity. Māyāvādī sannyāsīs do not worship the Deity, or if they do so they generally worship the deity of Lord Śiva or the pañcopāsanā (Lord Viṣṇu, Lord Śiva, Durgādevī, Gaṇeśa and Sūrya). Here we do not find any mention of the demigods or Viṣṇu, and yet Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted food in the midst of the sannyāsīs on the basis that they had chanted the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and that He had excused their offenses.

TEXT 152

bhikṣā-accepting food from others; kari'-accepting; mahāprabhu-Lord Caitanya; āilā-returned; vāsāghara-to His residence; hena-thus; citra-līlā-wonderful pastimes; kare-does; gaurāṅga-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sundara-very beautiful.

TRANSLATION

After taking lunch among the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is known as Gaurasundara, returned to His residence. Thus the Lord performs His wonderful pastimes.

SYNONYMS

candraśekhara-of the name Candraśekhara; tapana miśra-of the name Tapana Miśra; āra-and; sanātana-of the name Sanātana; śuni'-hearing; dekhi'-seeing; ānandita-very pleased; sabākāra-all of them; mana-minds.

TRANSLATION

Hearing the arguments of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and seeing His victory, Candraśekhara, Tapana Miśra and Sanātana Gosvāmī were all extremely pleased.

PURPORT

Here is an example of how a sannyāsī should preach. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to Vārāṇasī, He went there alone, not with a big party. Locally, however, He made friendships with Candraśekhara and Tapana Miśra, and Sanātana Gosvāmī also came to see Him. Therefore, although He did not have many friends there, due to His sound preaching and His victory in arguing with the local sannyāsīs on the Vedānta philosophy, He became greatly famous in that part of the country, as explained in the next verse.

TRANSLATION

Many Māyāvādī sannyāsīs of Vārāṇasī came to see the Lord after this incident, and the entire city praised Him.

TRANSLATION

The crowd at the door of His residence was so great that it numbered hundreds of thousands.

TEXT 157

TRANSLATION

When the Lord went to visit the temple of Viśveśvara, hundreds of thousands of people assembled to see Him.

PURPORT

The important point in this verse is that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu regularly visited the temple of Viśveśvara (Lord Śiva) at Vārāṇasī. Vaiṣṇavas generally do not visit a demigod's temple, but here we see that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu regularly visited the temple of Viśveśvara, who was the predominating deity of Vārāṇasī. Generally Māyāvādī sannyāsīs and worshipers of Lord Śiva live in Vārāṇasī, but how is it that Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who took the part of a Vaiṣṇava sannyāsī, also visited the Viśveśvara temple? The answer is that a Vaiṣṇava does not behave impudently toward the demigods. A Vaiṣṇava gives proper respect to all, although he never accepts a demigod to be as good as the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

In the Brahma-saṁhitā there are mantras offering obeisances to Lord Śiva, Lord Brahmā, the sun-god and Lord Gaṇeśa, as well as Lord Viṣṇu, all of whom are worshiped by the impersonalists as pañcopāsanā. In their temples impersonalists also install deities of Lord Viṣṇu, Lord Śiva, the sun-god, Goddess Durgā and sometimes Lord Brahmā also, and this system is continuing at present in India under the guise of the Hindu religion. Vaiṣṇavas can also worship all these demigods, but only on the principles of the Brahma-saṁhitā, which is recommended by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. We may note in this connection the mantras for worshiping Lord Śiva, Lord Brahmā, Goddess Durgā, the sun-god and Gaṇeśa, as described in the Brahma-saṁhitā.

chāyeva yasya bhuvanāni bibharti durgā icchānurūpam api yasya ca ceṣṭate sā govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

"The external potency, māyā, who is of the nature of the shadow of the cit [spiritual] potency, is worshiped by all people as Durgā, the creating, preserving and destroying agency of this mundane world. I adore the primeval Lord, Govinda, in accordance with whose will Durgā conducts herself." (Brahma-saṁhitā 5.44) kṣīraṁ yathā dadhi vikāra-viśeṣa-yogāt sañjāyate na hi tataḥ pṛthag asti hetoḥ yaḥ śambhutām api tathā samupaiti kāryād

govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

"Milk is transformed into curd by the actions of acids, yet the effect, 'curd,' is neither the same as nor different from its cause, viz., milk. I adore the primeval Lord, Govinda, of whom the state of Śambu is a similar transformation for the performance of the work of destruction." (Brahma-saṁhitā 5.45)

bhāsvān yathāśma-śakaleṣu nijeṣu tejaḥ svīyaṁ kiyat prakaṭayaty api tadvad atra brahmā ya eṣa jagad-aṇḍa-vidhāna-kartā
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

"I adore the primeval Lord, Govinda, from whom the separated subjective portion Brahmā receives his power for the regulation of the mundane world, just as the sun manifests a portion of his own light in all the effulgent gems that bear such names as sūrya-kānta." (Brahma-saṁhitā 5.49) yat-pāda-pallava-yugaṁ vinidhāya kumbha-dvandve praṇāma-samaye sa gaṇādhirājaḥ vighnān vihantum alam asya jagat-trayasya

govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

"I worship the primeval Lord, Govinda. Gaṇeśa always holds His lotus feet upon the pair of tumuli protruding from his elephant head in order to obtain power for his function of destroying all obstacles on the path of progress in the three worlds." (Brahma-saṁhitā 5.50)

yac cakṣur eṣa savitā sakala-grahāṇāṁ rājā samasta-sura-mūrtir aśeṣa-tejāḥ yasyājñayā bhramati sambhṛta-kāla-cakro
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

"The sun, full of infinite effulgence, who is the king of all the planets and the image of the good soul, is like the eye of this world. I adore the primeval Lord, Govinda, in pursuance of whose order the sun performs his journey, mounting the wheel of time." (Bs. 5.52)

All the demigods are servants of Kṛṣṇa; they are not equal with Kṛṣṇa. Therefore even if one goes to a temple of the pañcopāsanā, as mentioned above, one should not accept the deities as they are accepted by the impersonalists. All of them are to be accepted as personal demigods, but they all serve the order of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Śaṅkarācārya, for example, is understood to be an incarnation of Lord Śiva, as described in the Padma Purāṇa. He propagated the Māyāvāda philosophy under the order of the Supreme Lord. We have already discussed this point in text 114 of this chapter: tāṅra doṣa nāhi, teṅho ājñā-kārī dāsa. "Śaṅkarācārya is not at fault, for he has thus covered the real purpose of the Vedas under the order of the Supreme Personality of Godhead." Although Lord Śiva, in the form of a brāhmaṇa (Śaṅkarācārya), preached the false philosophy of Māyāvāda, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu nevertheless said that since he did it on the order of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, there was no fault on his part (tāṅra doṣa nāhi).

We must offer proper respects to all the demigods. If one can offer respects even to an ant, why not to the demigods? One must always know, however, that no demigod is equal to or above the Supreme Lord. Ekale īśvara kṛṣṇa, āra saba bhṛtya: "Only Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and all others, including the demigods such as Lord Śiva, Lord Brahmā, Goddess Durgā and Ganeśa, are His servants." Everyone serves the purpose of the Supreme Godhead, and what to speak of such small and insignificant living entities as ourselves? We are surely eternal servants of the Lord. The Māyāvāda philosophy maintains that the demigods, the living entities and the Supreme Personality of Godhead are all equal. It is therefore a most foolish misrepresentation of Vedic knowledge.

TRANSLATION

Whenever the crowds were too great, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu stood up, raised His hands and chanted, "Hari! Hari!" to which all the people responded, filling both the land and sky with the vibration.

SYNONYMS

loka-people; nistāriyā-delivering; prabhura-of the Lord; calite-to leave; haila-became; mana-mind; vṛndāvane-toward Vṛndāvana; pāṭhāilā-sent; śrī-sanātana-Sanātana Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

After thus delivering the people in general, the Lord desired to leave Vārāṇasī. After instructing Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī, He sent him toward Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

The actual purpose of Lord Caitanya's stay at Vārāṇasī after coming back from Vṛndāvana was to meet Sanātana Gosvāmī and teach him. Sanātana Gosvāmī met Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu after the Lord's return to Vārāṇasī, where the Lord taught him for two months about the intricacies of Vaiṣṇava philosophy and Vaiṣṇava activities. After completely instructing him, He sent him to Vṛndāvana to execute His orders. When Sanātana Gosvāmī went to Vṛndāvana, there were no temples. The city was lying vacant like an open field. Sanātana Gosvāmī sat down on the bank of the Yamunā, and after some time he gradually constructed the first temple; then other temples were constructed, and now the city is full of temples, numbering about five thousand.

SYNONYMS

rātri-night; divase-day; lokera-of the people in general; śuni-hearing; kolāhala-tumult; vārāṇasī-the city of Benares; chāḍi'-leaving; prabhu-the Lord; āilā-returned; nīlācala-to Purī.

TRANSLATION

Because the city of Vārāṇasī was always full of tumultuous crowds, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, after sending Sanātana to Vṛndāvana, returned to Jagannātha Purī.

SYNONYMS

ei-these; līlā-pastimes; kahiba-I shall speak; āge-later on; vistāra-vivid description; kariyā-making; saṅkṣepe-in short; kahilāṅ-I have spoken; ihāṅ-in this place; prasaṅga-topics; pāiyā-taking advantage of.

TRANSLATION

I have here given a brief account of these pastimes of Lord Caitanya, but later I shall describe them in an extensive way.

TEXT 163

ei pañca-tattva-rūpe śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya kṛṣṇa-nāma-prema diyā viśva kailā dhanya

SYNONYMS

ei-this; pañca-tattva-rūpe-the Lord in His five forms; śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; prema-love of Kṛṣṇa; diyā-delivering; viśva-the whole world; kailā-made; dhanya-thankful.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His associates of the Pañca-tattva distributed the holy name of the Lord to invoke love of Godhead throughout the universe, and thus the entire universe was thankful.

PURPORT

Here it is said that Lord Caitanya made the entire universe thankful to Him for propagating the saṅkīrtana movement with His associates. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu has already sanctified the entire universe by His presence five hundred years ago, and therefore anyone who attempts to serve Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu sincerely by following in His footsteps and following the instructions of the ācāryas will successfully be able to preach the holy names of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra all over the universe. There are some foolish critics who say that Europeans and Americans cannot be offered sannyāsa, but here we find that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to preach the saṅkīrtana movement all over the universe. For preaching work, sannyāsīs are essential. These critics think that only Indians or Hindus should be offered sannyāsa to preach, but their knowledge is practically nil. Without sannyāsīs, the preaching work will be impeded. Therefore, under the instruction of Lord Caitanya and with the blessings of His associates, there should be no discrimination in this matter, but people in all parts of the world should be trained to preach and given sannyāsa so that the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's saṅkīrtana movement will expand boundlessly. We do not care about the criticism of fools. We shall go on with our work and simply depend on the blessings of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His associates, the Pañca-tattva.

mathurāte pāṭhāila rūpa-sanātana
dui senā-pati kaila bhakti pracāraṇa

SYNONYMS

mathurāte-toward Mathurā; pāṭhāila-sent; rūpa-sanātana-the two brothers Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī; dui-both of them; senā-pati-as commanders in chief; kaila-He made them; bhakti-devotional service; pracāraṇa-to broadcast.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya dispatched the two generals Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī to Vṛndāvana to preach the bhakti cult.

PURPORT

When Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī went to Vṛndāvana, there was not a single temple, but by their preaching they were gradually able to construct various temples. Sanātana Gosvāmī constructed the Madana-mohana temple, and Rūpa Gosvāmī constructed the Govindajī temple. Similarly, their nephew Jīva Gosvāmī constructed the Rādhā-Dāmodara temple, Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī constructed the Rādhā-ramaṇa temple, Śrī Lokanātha Gosvāmī constructed the Gokulānanda temple, and Śyāmānanda Gosvāmī constructed the Śyāmasundara temple. In this way, many temples were gradually constructed. For preaching, construction of temples is also necessary. The Gosvāmīs not only engaged in writing books but also constructed temples because both are needed for preaching work. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted the cult of His saṅkīrtana movement to spread all over the world. Now that the International Society for Krishna Consciousness has taken up this task of preaching the cult of Lord Caitanya, its members should not only construct temples in every town and village of the globe but also distribute books that have already been written and further increase the number of books. Both distribution of books and construction of temples must continue side by side in parallel lines.

SYNONYMS

nityānanda-Lord Nityānanda; gosāñe-the ācārya; pāṭhāilā-was sent; gauḍa-deśe-in Bengal; teṅho-He; bhakti-devotional cult; pracārilā-preached; aśeṣa-viśeṣe-in a very extensive way.

TRANSLATION

As Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī were sent toward Mathurā, so Nityānanda Prabhu was sent to Bengal to preach extensively the cult of Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

The name of Lord Nityānanda is very famous in Bengal. Of course, anyone who knows Lord Nityānanda knows Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu also, but there are some misguided devotees who stress the importance of Lord Nityānanda more than that of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This is not good. Nor should Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu be stressed more than Lord Nityānanda. The author of the Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, left his home because of his brother's stressing the importance of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu over that of Nityānanda Prabhu. Actually, one should offer respect to the Pañca-tattva without such foolish discrimination, not considering Nityānanda Prabhu to be greater, Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be greater or Advaita Prabhu to be greater. The respect should be offered equally: śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda. All devotees of Lord Caitanya or Nityānanda are worshipable persons.

SYNONYMS

ei ta'-this; kahila-described; pañca-tattvera-of the Pañca-tattva; vyākhyāna-explanation; ihāra-of this; śravaṇe-hearing; haya-becomes; caitanya-tattva-the truth of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jñāna-knowledge.

TRANSLATION

I thus explain the truth of the Pañca-tattva. One who hears this explanation increases in knowledge of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

The Pañca-tattva is a very important factor in understanding Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. There are sahajiyās who, not knowing the importance of the Pañca-tattva, concoct their own slogans, such as bhaja nitāi gaura, rādhe śyāma, japa hare kṛṣṇa hare rāma or śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda hare kṛṣṇa hare rāma śrī-rādhe govinda. Such chants may be good poetry, but they cannot help us to go forward in devotional service. In such chants there are also many discrepancies, which need not be discussed here. Strictly speaking, when chanting the names of the Pañca-tattva, one should fully offer his obeisances: śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda. By such chanting one is blessed with the competency to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra without offense. When chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, one should also chant it fully: Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare. One should not foolishly adopt any of the slogans concocted by imaginative devotees. If one actually wants to derive the effects of chanting, one must strictly follow the great ācāryas. This is confirmed in the Mahābhārata: mahā-jano yena gataḥ sa panthāḥ. "The real path of progress is that which is traversed by great ācāryas and authorities."

TRANSLATION

While chanting the Pañca-tattva mahā-mantra, one must chant the names of Śrī Caitanya, Nityānanda, Advaita, Gadādhara and Śrīvāsa with their many devotees. This is the process.

TRANSLATION

I again and again offer obeisances unto the Pañca-tattva. Thus I think that I will be able to describe something about the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to preach the saṅkīrtana movement of love of Kṛṣṇa throughout the entire world, and therefore during His presence He inspired the saṅkīrtana movement. Specifically, He sent Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī to Vṛndāvana and Nityānanda to Bengal and personally went to South India. In this way He kindly left the task of preaching His cult in the rest of the world to the International Society for Krishna Consciousness. The members of this Society must always remember that if they stick to the regulative principles and preach sincerely according to the instructions of the ācāryas, surely they will have the profound blessings of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and their preaching work will be successful everywhere throughout the world.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-lilā, Seventh Chapter, describing Lord Caitanya in five features.

18.4.8 Chapter 8

The Author Receives the Orders of Kṛṣṇa and Guru

The Eighth Chapter of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta is summarized by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. In this Eighth Chapter the glories of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda are described, and it is also stated that one who commits offenses in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra does not achieve love of Godhead, even after chanting for many years. In this connection, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura warns against artificial displays of the bodily symptoms called aṣṭa-sāttvika-vikāra. That is also another offense. One should seriously and sincerely continue to chant the Pañca-tattva names śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda. All these ācāryas will bestow their causeless mercy upon a devotee and gradually purify his heart. When he is actually purified, automatically he will experience ecstasy in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Previous to the composition of Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura wrote a book called Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata. Only those subjects which were not discussed by Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura in his Caitanya-bhāgavata have been taken up by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī to be depicted in Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta. In his very old age, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī went to Vṛndāvana, and by the order of Śrī Madana-mohanajī he wrote Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta. Thus we are now able to relish its transcendental bliss.

TRANSLATION

Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto Advaita Ācārya, who is very merciful, and also to that great personality Gadādhara Paṇḍita, the learned scholar.

TEXT 4

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya-all glories; śrīvāsa-ādi-unto Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, etc.; yata-all; bhakta-gaṇa-devotees; praṇata-offering obeisances; ha-iyā-doing so; vandoṅ-I pray; sabāra-all; caraṇa-lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura and all other devotees of the Lord. I fall down to offer them respect. I worship their lotus feet.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī teaches us first to offer respect to the Pañca-tattva-Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Nityānanda Prabhu, Advaita Prabhu, Gadādhara Prabhu and Śrīvāsa and other devotees. We must strictly follow the principle of offering our respects to the Pañca-tattva, as summarized in the mantra śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda. At the beginning of every function in preaching, especially before chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra-Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare-we must chant the Pañca-tattva’s names and offer our respects to them.

TEXT 5

SYNONYMS

mūka-dumb; kavitva-poet; kare-becomes; yāṅ-whose; sabāra-all; smaraṇe-by remembering; paṅgu-the lame; giri-mountains; laṅghe-crosses; andha-blind; dekhe-sees; tārā-gaṇe-the stars.

TRANSLATION

By remembering the lotus feet of the Pañca-tattva, a dumb man can become a poet, a lame man can cross mountains, and a blind man can see the stars in the sky.

PURPORT

In Vaiṣṇava philosophy there are three ways for perfection-namely, sādhana-siddha, perfection attained by executing devotional service according to the rules and regulations; nitya-siddha, eternal perfection attained by never forgetting Kṛṣṇa at any time; and kṛpā-siddha, perfection attained by the mercy of the spiritual master or another Vaiṣṇava. Kavirāja Gosvāmī here stresses kṛpā-siddha, perfection by the mercy of superior authorities. This mercy does not depend on the qualifications of a devotee. By such mercy, even if a devotee is dumb he can speak or write to glorify the Lord splendidly, even if lame he can cross mountains, and even if blind he can see the stars in the sky.

TEXT 6

e-saba nā māne yei paṇḍita sakala tā-sabāra vidyā-pāṭha bheka-kolāhala

SYNONYMS

e-saba-all these; nā-does not; māne-accept; yei-anyone; paṇḍita-so-called learned; sakala-all; tā-sabāra-of all of them; vidyā-pāṭha-the educational cultivation; bheka-of frogs; kolāhala-tumultuous sound.

TRANSLATION

The education cultivated by so-called learned scholars who do not believe these statements of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta is like the tumultuous croaking of frogs.

PURPORT

The croaking of the frogs in the rainy season resounds very loudly in the forest, with the result that snakes, hearing the croaking in the darkness, approach the frogs and swallow them. Similarly, the so-called educational vibrations of the tongues of university professors who do not have spiritual knowledge is like the croaking of frogs.

TEXT 7

ei saba nā māne yebā kare kṛṣṇa-bhakti kṛṣṇa-kṛpā nāhi tāre, nāhi tāra gati

SYNONYMS

ei-these; saba-all; nā māne-does not accept; yebā-anyone who; kare-executes; kṛṣṇa-bhakti-devotional service; kṛṣṇa-kṛpā-mercy of Kṛṣṇa; nāhi-is not; tāre-unto him; nāhi-there is not; tāra-his; gati-advancement.

TRANSLATION

One who does not accept the glories of the Pañca-tattva but still makes a show of devotional service to Kṛṣṇa can never achieve the mercy of Kṛṣṇa or advance to the ultimate goal.

PURPORT

If one is seriously interested in Kṛṣṇa conscious activities, he must be ready to follow the rules and regulations laid down by the ācāryas, and he must understand their conclusions. The śāstra says: dharmasya tattvaṁ nihitaṁ guhāyāṁ mahā-jano yena gataḥ sa panthāḥ (Mahābhārata, Vana-parva 313.117). It is very difficult to understand the secret of Kṛṣṇa consciousness, but one who advances by the instruction of the previous ācāryas and follows in the footsteps of his predecessors in the line of disciplic succession will have success. Others will not. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says in this connection, chāḍiyā vaiṣṇava-sevā nistāra pāyeche kebā: "Unless one serves the spiritual master and ācāryas, one cannot be liberated." Elsewhere he says:

ei chaya gosāñi yāra–mui tāra dāsa tāṅ' sabāra pada-reṇu mora pañca-grāsa

"I simply accept a person who follows in the footsteps of the six Gosvāmīs, and the dust of such a person's lotus feet is my food."

pūrve yaiche jarāsandha-ādi rāja-gaṇa veda-dharma kari' kare viṣṇura pūjana

SYNONYMS

pūrve-formerly; yaiche-as it was; jarāsandha-King Jarāsandha; ādi-heading; rāja-gaṇa-kings; veda-dharma-performance of Vedic rituals; kari'-doing; kare-does; viṣṇura-of Lord Viṣṇu; pūjana-worship.

TRANSLATION

Formerly kings like Jarāsandha [the father-in-law of Kaṁsa] strictly followed the Vedic rituals, thus worshiping Lord Viṣṇu.

PURPORT

In these verses the author of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, is very seriously stressing the importance of worship of the Pañca-tattva. If one becomes a devotee of Gaurasundara or Kṛṣṇa but does not give importance to the Pañca-tattva (śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda), his activities are considered to be offenses, or, in the words of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, utpāta (disturbances). One must therefore be ready to offer due respects to the Pañca-tattva before becoming a devotee of Lord Gaurasundara or of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TEXT 9

kṛṣṇa nāhi māne, tāte daitya kari' māni caitanya nā mānile taiche daitya tāre jāni

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; nāhi-does not; māne-accept; tāte-therefore; daitya-demon; kari' māni-we accept; caitanya-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nā-without; mānile-accepting; taiche-similarly; daitya-demon; tāre-to him; jāni-we know.

TRANSLATION

One who does not accept Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Personality of Godhead is certainly a demon. Similarly, anyone who does not accept Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as Kṛṣṇa, the same Supreme Lord, is also to be considered a demon.

PURPORT

Formerly there were kings like Jarāsandha who strictly followed the Vedic rituals, acted as charitable, competent kṣatriyas, possessed all kṣatriya qualities and were even obedient to the brahminical culture but who did not accept Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Jarāsandha attacked Kṛṣṇa many times, and each time, of course, he was defeated. Like Jarāsandha, any man who performs Vedic rituals but does not accept Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Personality of Godhead must be considered an asura, or demon. Similarly, one who does not accept Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as Kṛṣṇa Himself is also a demon. This is the conclusion of authoritative scriptures. Therefore, both so-called devotion to Gaurasundara without devotional service to Kṛṣṇa and so-called kṛṣṇa-bhakti without devotional service to Gaurasundara are nondevotional activities. If one wants to be successful on the path of Kṛṣṇa consciousness, he must be thoroughly conscious of the personality of Gaurasundara as well as the personality of Kṛṣṇa. Knowing the personality of Gaurasundara means knowing the personalities of śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda. The author of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, pursuant to the authorities, stresses this principle for perfection in Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

TEXT 10

more nā mānile saba loka habe nāśa ithi lāgi' kṛpārdra prabhu karila sannyāsa

SYNONYMS

more-unto Me; nā-without; mānile-accepting; saba-all; loka-people in general; habe-will go to; nāśa-destruction; ithi-for this; lāgi'-for the reason of; kṛpā-ārdra-all merciful; prabhu-Lord Caitanya; karila-accepted; sannyāsa-the sannyāsa order.

TRANSLATION

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu thought, "Unless people accept Me they will all be destroyed." Thus the merciful Lord accepted the sannyāsa order.

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (12.3.51) it is said, kīrtanād eva kṛṣṇasya mukta-saṅgaḥ paraṁ vrajet: "Simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, or Lord Kṛṣṇa's name, one is liberated and goes back home, back to Godhead." This Kṛṣṇa consciousness must be achieved through the mercy of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. One cannot be complete in Kṛṣṇa consciousness unless he accepts Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His associates as the only means for success. It is because of these considerations that the Lord accepted sannyāsa, for thus people would offer Him respect and very quickly come to the platform of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Since Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is Kṛṣṇa Himself, inaugurated the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, without His mercy one cannot be elevated to the transcendental platform of Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

TEXT 11

sannyāsi-buddhye more karibe namaskāra tathāpi khaṇḍibe duḥkha, pāibe nistāra

SYNONYMS

sannyāsi-buddhye-by consideration of a sannyāsī; more-unto Me; karibe-they will; namaskāra-offer obeisances; tathāpi-therefore; khaṇḍibe-will diminish; duḥkha-distress; pāibe-will get; nistāra-liberation.

TRANSLATION

"If a person offers obeisances to Me, even due to accepting Meonly as an ordinary sannyāsī, his material distresses will diminish, and he will ultimately get liberation."

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇa is so merciful that He always thinks of how to liberate the conditioned souls from the material platform. It is for this reason that Kṛṣṇa incarnates, as clearly indicated in the Bhagavad-gītā (4.7):

yadā yadā hi dharmasya
glānir bhavati bhārata
abhyutthānam adharmasya
tadātmānaṁ sṛjāmy aham

"Whenever and wherever there is a decline in religious practice, O descendant of Bharata, and a predominant rise of irreligion-at that time I descend Myself."Kṛṣṇa always protects the living entities in many ways. He comes Himself, He sends His own confidential devotees, and He leaves behind Him śāstras like the Bhagavad-gītā Why? It is so that people may take advantage of the benediction to be liberated from the clutches of māyā. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted sannyāsa so that even a foolish person who accepted Him as an ordinary sannyāsī would offer Him respect, for this would help diminish his material distresses and ultimately liberate him from the material clutches. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī points out in this connection that Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the combined form of Śrī Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa (mahāprabhu śrī-caitanya, rādha-kṛṣṇa-nahe anya). Therefore when fools considered Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be an ordinary human being and thus treated Him disrespectfully, the merciful Lord, in order to deliver these offenders, accepted sannyāsa so that they would offer Him obeisances, accepting Him as a sannyāsī. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted sannyāsa to bestow His great mercy on people in general, who cannot appreciate Him as Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa Themselves.

hena kṛpāmaya caitanya nā bhaje yei jana sarvottama ha-ileo tāre asure gaṇana

SYNONYMS

hena-such; kṛpāmaya-merciful; caitanya-Lord Srī Caitanya; nā-does not; bhaje-worship; yei-one; jana-person; sarvottama-supreme; ha-ileo-in spite of his being; tāre-unto him; asure-among the demons; gaṇana-the calculation.

TRANSLATION

One who does not show respect unto this merciful Lord, Caitanya Mahāprabhu, or does not worship Him should be considered a demon, even if he is very exalted in human society.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Mahārāja says in this connection: "O living entities, simply engage yourselves in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. This is the message of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu." Lord Caitanya preached this cult, instructing the philosophy of Kṛṣṇa consciousness in His eight verses, or Śikṣāṣṭaka, and He said, ihā haite sarva-siddhi haibe tomāra: "By chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, one will get all perfection in life." Therefore one who does not show Him respect or cannot appreciate His mercy despite all these merciful gestures is still an asura, or opponent of bona fide devotional service to Lord Viṣṇu, even though he is very exalted in human society. The word asura refers to one who is against devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Viṣṇu. It should be noted that unless one worships Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu it is useless to become a devotee of Kṛṣṇa, and unless one worships Kṛṣṇa it is also useless to become a devotee of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Such devotional service is to be understood to be a product of Kali-yuga. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura remarks in this connection that atheist smārtas, or worshipers of the five kinds of demigods, worship Lord Viṣṇu for a little satisfaction in material success but have no respect for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Thinking Him to be one of the ordinary living entities, they discriminate between Gaurasundara and Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Such understanding is also demoniac and is against the conclusion of the ācāryas. Such a conclusion is a product of Kali-yuga.

TRANSLATION

Therefore I say again, lifting my arms: O fellow human beings, please worship Śrī Caitanya and Nityānanda without false arguments!

PURPORT

Because a person who performs kṛṣṇa-bhakti but does not understand Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya and Prabhu Nityānanda will simply waste his time, the author, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī; requests that everyone take to the worship of Śrī Caitanya and Nityānanda Prabhu and the Pañca-tattva. He assures everyone that any person who does so will be successful in Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

TRANSLATION

If you are indeed interested in logic and argument, kindly apply it to the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. If you do so, you will find it to be strikingly wonderful.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvati Ṭhākura comments in this connection that people in general, in their narrow-minded conception of life, create many different types of humanitarian activities, but the humanitarian activities inaugurated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are different. For logicians who want to accept only that which is proven through logic and argument, it is a fact that without logic and reason there can be no question of accepting the Absolute Truth. Unfortunately, when such logicians take to this path without the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, they remain on the platform of logic and argument and do not advance in spiritual life. However, if one is intelligent enough to apply his arguments and logic to the subtle understanding of the fundamental spiritual substance, he will be able to know that a poor fund of knowledge established on the basis of material logic cannot help one understand the Absolute Truth, which is beyond the reach of imperfect senses. The Mahābhārata therefore says: acintyāḥ khalu ye bhāvā na tāṁs tarkeṇa yojayet. (Mahābhārata, Bhīṣma-parva 5.22) How can that which is beyond the imagination or sensory speculation of mundane creatures be approached simply by logic? Logic and argument are very poor in spiritual strength and always imperfect when applied to spiritual understanding. By putting forward mundane logic one frequently comes to the wrong conclusion regarding the Absolute Truth, and as a result of such a conclusion one may fall down to accept a body like that of a jackal.

Despite all this, those who are actually inquisitive to understand the philosophy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu through logic and argument are welcome. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī addresses them, ”Please put Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s mercy to your crucial test, and if you are actually a logician you will come to the right conclusion that there is no personality more merciful than Lord Caitanya.” Let the logicians compare all the results of other humanitarian work with the merciful activities of Lord Caitanya. If their judgment is impartial, they will understand that no other humanitarian activities can surpass those of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Everyone is engaged in humanitarian activities on the basis of the body, but from the Bhagavad-gītā (2.18) we understand, antavanta ime dehā nityasyoktāḥ śarīriṇaḥ: The material body is ultimately subject to destruction, whereas the spiritual soul is eternal. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s philanthropic activities are performed in connection with the eternal soul. However one tries to benefit the body, it will be destroyed, and one will have to accept another body according to his present activities. If one does not, therefore, understand this science of transmigration but considers the body to be all in all, his intelligence is not very advanced. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, without neglecting the necessities of the body, imparted spiritual advancement to purify the existential condition of humanity. Therefore if a logician makes his judgment impartially, he will surely find that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the mahā-vadānyāvatāra, the most magnanimous incarnation. He is even more magnanimous than Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself. Lord Kṛṣṇa demanded that one surrender unto Him, but He did not distribute love of Godhead as magnanimously as Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Therefore Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī offers Lord Caitanya his respectful obeisances with the words namo mahā-vadānyāya kṛṣṇa-prema-pradāya te kṛṣṇāya kṛṣṇa-caitanya-nāmne gaura-tviṣe namaḥ. Lord Kṛṣṇa simply gave the Bhagavad-gītā, by which one can understand Lord Kṛṣṇa as He is, but Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is also Kṛṣṇa Himself, gave people love of Kṛṣṇa without discrimination.

SYNONYMS

bahu-many; janma-births; kare-does; yadi-if; śravaṇa-hearing; kīrtana-chanting; tabu-still; ta'-in spite of; nā-does not; pāya-get; kṛṣṇa-pade-unto the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; prema-dhana-love of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

If one is infested with the ten offenses in the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, despite his endeavor to chant the holy name for many births, he will not get the love of Godhead that is the ultimate goal of this chanting.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says in this connection that unless one accepts Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, although one goes on chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra for many, many years, there is no possibility of his attaining the platform of devotional service. One must follow strictly the instruction of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu given in the Śikṣāṣṭaka (3):

tṛṇād api sunīcena
taror iva sahiṣṇunā
amāninā mānadena
kīrtanīyaḥ sadā hariḥ

"One should chant the holy name of the Lord in a humble state of mind, thinking oneself lower than the straw in the street; one should be more tolerant than a tree, devoid of all sense of false prestige, and should be ready to offer all respect to others. In such a state of mind one can chant the holy name of the Lord constantly." One who follows this direction, being freed from the ten kinds of offenses, becomes successful in Kṛṣṇa consciousness and ultimately reaches the platform of loving service to the Personality of Godhead.

One must come to the understanding that the holy name of the Lord and the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself are identical. One cannot reach this conclusion unless one is offenseless in chanting the holy name. By our material calculation we see a difference between the name and the substance, but in the spiritual world the Absolute is always absolute; the name, form, quality and pastimes of the Absolute are all as good as the Absolute Himself. As such, one is understood to be an eternal servant of the Supreme Personality of Godhead if he considers himself an eternal servant of the holy name and in this spirit distributes the holy name to the world. One who chants in that spirit, without offenses, is certainly elevated to the platform of understanding that the holy name and the Personality of Godhead are identical. To associate with the holy name and chant the holy name is to associate with the Personality of Godhead directly. In Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu it is clearly said: sevonmukhe hi jihvādau svayam eva sphuraty adaḥ. The holy name becomes manifest when one engages in the service of the holy name. This service in a submissive attitude begins with one's tongue. Sevonmukhe hi jihvādau: One must engage his tongue in the service of the holy name. Our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is based on this principle. We try to engage all the members of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement in the service of the holy name. Since the holy name and Kṛṣṇa are nondifferent, the members of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement not only chant the holy name of the Lord offenselessly, but also do not allow their tongues to eat anything that is not first offered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Supreme Lord declares:

patraṁ puṣpaṁ phalaṁ toyaṁ
yo me bhaktyā prayacchati tad ahaṁ bhakty-upahṛtaṁ
aśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ

"If one offers Me with love and devotion a leaf, a flower, a fruit or water, I will accept it." (Bg. 9.26) Therefore the International Society for Krishna Consciousness has many temples all over the world, and in each and every temple the Lord is offered these foods. On the basis of His demands, the devotees chant the holy name of the Lord offenselessly and never eat anything that is not first offered to the Lord. The functions of the tongue in devotional service are to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and eat prasāda that is offered to the Lord.

SYNONYMS

jñānataḥ-by cultivation of knowledge; su-labhā-easily obtainable; muktiḥ-liberation; bhuktiḥ-sense enjoyment; yajña-ādi-performance of sacrifices, etc.; puṇyataḥ-and by performing pious activities; sā-that; iyam-this; sādhana-sāhasraiḥ-execution of thousands of sacrifices; hari-bhaktiḥ-devotional service; su-durlabhā-is very rare.

TRANSLATION

"By cultivating philosophical knowledge one can understand his spiritual position and thus be liberated, and by performing sacrifices and pious activities one can achieve sense gratification in a higher planetary system, but the devotional service of the Lord is so rare that even by executing hundreds and thousands of such sacrifices one cannot obtain it."

PURPORT

Prahlāda Mahārāja instructs:

matir na kṛṣṇe parataḥ svato vā
mitho 'bhipadyeta gṛha-vratānām (Bhāg. 7.5.30)
naiṣāṁ matis tāvad urukramāṅghriṁ spṛśaty anarthāpagamo yad-arthaḥ mahīyasāṁ pāda-rajo-'bhiṣekaṁ niṣkiñcanānāṁ na vṛṇīta yāvat
(Bhāg. 7.5.32)

These ślokas are to be discussed. Their purport is that one cannot obtain kṛṣṇa-bhakti, or the devotional service of the Lord, by official execution of the Vedic rituals. One has to approach a pure devotee. Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura sings, chāḍiyā vaiṣṇava-sevā nistāra pāyeche kebā: "Who has been elevated without rendering service to a pure Vaiṣṇava?" It is the statement of Prahlāda Mahārāja that unless one is able to accept the dust from the lotus feet of a pure Vaiṣṇava there is no possibility of achieving the platform of devotional service. That is the secret. The above-mentioned tantra-vacana, quoted from the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.1.36), is our perfect guidance in this connection.

TRANSLATION

"The great sage Nārada said, 'My dear Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira, the Supreme Personality of Godhead Kṛṣṇa is always ready to help you. He is your master, guru, God, very dear friend and head of your family. Yet sometimes He agrees to act as your servant or order-carrier. You are greatly fortunate because this relationship is possible only by bhakti-yoga. The Lord can give liberation [mukti] very easily, but He does not very easily give one bhakti-yoga, because by that process He is bound to the devotee.' "

PURPORT

This passage is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.6.18). While Śukadeva Gosvāmī was describing the character of Ṛṣabhadeva, he distinguished between bhakti-yoga and liberation by reciting this verse. In relationship with the Yadus and Pāṇḍavas, the Lord acted sometimes as their master, sometimes as their advisor, sometimes as their friend, sometimes as the head of their family and sometimes even as their servant. Kṛṣṇa once had to carry out an order of Yudhiṣṭhira's by carrying a letter Yudhiṣṭhira had written to Duryodhana regarding peace negotiations. Similarly, He also became the chariot driver of Arjuna. This illustrates that in bhakti-yoga there is a relationship established between the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the devotee. Such a relationship is established in the transcendental mellows known as dāsya, sakhya, vātsalya and mādhurya. If a devotee wants simple liberation, he gets it very easily from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, as confirmed by Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura. Muktiḥ svayaṁ mukulitāñjali sevate 'smān: for a devotee, mukti is not very important because mukti is always standing on his doorstep waiting to serve him in some way. A devotee, therefore, must be attracted by the behavior of the inhabitants of Vṛndāvana, who live in a relationship with Kṛṣṇa. The land, water, cows, trees and flowers serve Kṛṣṇa in śānta-rasa, His servants serve Him in dāsya-rasa, and His cowherd friends serve Him in sakhya-rasa. Similarly, the elder gopīs and gopas serve Kṛṣṇa as father and mother, uncle and other relatives, and the gopīs, the young girls, serve Kṛṣṇa in conjugal love.

While executing devotional service, one must be naturally inclined to serve Kṛṣṇa in one of these transcendental relationships. That is the actual success of life. For a devotee, to get liberation is not very difficult. Even one who is unable to establish a relationship with Kṛṣṇa can achieve liberation by merging in the Brahman effulgence. This is called sāyujya-mukti. Vaiṣṇavas never accept sāyujya-mukti, although sometimes they accept the other forms of liberation, namely, sārūpya, sālokya, sāmīpya and sārṣṭi. A pure devotee, however, does not accept any kind of mukti. He wants only to serve Kṛṣṇa in a transcendental relationship. This is the perfectional stage of spiritual life. Māyāvādī philosophers desire to merge into the existence of the Brahman effulgence, although this aspect of liberation is always neglected by devotees. Śrīla Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, describing this kind of mukti, which is called kaivalya, or becoming one with the Supreme, has said, kaivalyaṁ narakāyate: "Becoming one with the Supreme is as good as going to hell." Therefore the ideal of Māyāvāda philosophy, becoming one with the Supreme, is hellish for a devotee; he never accepts it. Māyāvādī philosophers do not know that even if they merge in the effulgence of the Supreme, this will not give them ultimate rest. An individual soul cannot live in the Brahman effulgence in a state of inactivity; after some time, he must desire to be active. However, since he is not related with the Supreme Personality of Godhead and therefore has no spiritual activity, he must come down for further activities in this material world. This is confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32):

patanty adho 'nādṛta-yuṣmad-aṅghrayaḥ

Because Māyāvādī philosophers have no information regarding the transcendental service of the Lord, even after attaining liberation from material activities and merging into the Brahman effulgence, they must come down again to this material world to open hospitals or schools or perform similar philanthropic activities.

hena prema śrī-caitanya dilā yathā tathā jagāi mādhāi paryanta–anyera kā kathā hena-such; prema-love of Godhead; śrī-caitanya-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dilā-has given; yathā-anywhere; tathā-everywhere; jagāi-of the name Jagāi; mādhāi-of the name Mādhāi; paryanta-up to them; anyera-of others; kā-what to speak; kathā-words.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has freely given this love of Kṛṣṇa everywhere and anywhere, even to the most fallen, such as Jagāi and Mādhāi. What then to speak of those who are already pious and elevated?

PURPORT

The distinction between Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's gift to human society and the gifts of others is that whereas so-called philanthropic and humanitarian workers have given some relief to human society as far as the body is concerned, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu offers the best facilities for going back home, back to Godhead, with love of Godhead. If one seriously makes a comparative study of the two gifts, certainly if he is at all sober he will give the greatest credit to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. It was with this purpose that Kavirāja Gosvāmī said:

śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-dayā karaha vicāra vicāra karile citte pābe camatkāra

"If you are indeed interested in logic and argument, kindly apply it to the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. If you do so, you will find it to be strikingly wonderful." (Cc. Ādi 8.15)

Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says:

dīna-hīna yata chila, hari-nāme uddhārila, tā'ra sākṣī jagāi mādhāi

The two brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi epitomize the sinful population of this Age of Kali. They were most disturbing elements in society because they were meat-eaters, drunkards, woman-hunters, rogues and thieves. Yet Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu delivered them, to say nothing of others who were sober, pious, devoted and conscientious. The Bhagavad-gītā confirms that to say nothing of the brahminically qualified devotees and rājarṣis (kiṁ punar brāhmaṇāḥ puṇyā bhaktā rājarṣayas tathā), anyone who by the association of a pure devotee comes to Kṛṣṇa consciousness becomes eligible to go back home, back to Godhead. In the Bhagavad-gītā (9.32) the Lord thus declares:

māṁ hi pārtha vyapāśritya
ye 'pi syuḥ pāpa-yonayaḥ striyo vaiśyās tathā śūdrās
te 'pi yānti parāṁ gatim

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu delivered the two fallen brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi, but the entire world is presently full of Jagāis and Mādhāis, or, in other words, woman-hunters, meat-eaters, gamblers, thieves and other rogues, who create all kinds of disturbance in society. The activities of such persons have now become common practices. It is no longer considered abominable to be a drunkard, woman-hunter, meat-eater, thief or rogue, for these elements have been assimilated by human society. That does not mean, however, that the abominable qualities of such persons will help free human society from the clutches of māyā. Rather, they will entangle humanity more and more in the reactions of the stringent laws of material nature. One's activities are all performed under the influence of the modes of material nature (prakṛteḥ kriyamāṇāni guṇaiḥ karmāṇi sarvaśaḥ). Because people are now associating with the modes of ignorance (tamo-guṇa) and, to some extent, passion (rajo-guṇa), with no trace of goodness (sattva-guṇa), they are becoming increasingly greedy and lusty, for that is the effect of associating with these modes. Tadā rajas-tamo-bhavāḥ kāma-lobhādayaś ca ye: "By associating with the two lower qualities of material nature, one becomes lusty and greedy." (Bhāg. 1.2.19) Actually, in modern human society, everyone is greedy and lusty, and therefore the only means for deliverance is Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's saṅkīrtana movement, which can promote all the Jagāis and Mādhāis to the topmost position of sattva-guṇa, or brahminical culture.

Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.18-19) states:

naṣṭa-prāyeṣv abhadreṣu nityaṁ bhāgavata-sevayā bhagavaty uttama-śloke bhaktir bhavati naiṣṭhikī tadā rajas-tamo-bhāvāḥ kāma-lobhādayaś ca ye ceta etair anāviddhaṁ sthitaṁ sattve prasīdati

Considering the chaotic condition of human society, if one actually wants peace and tranquillity, one must take to the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and engage always in bhāgavata-dharma. Engagement in bhāgavata-dharma dissipates all ignorance and passion, and when ignorance and passion are dissipated one is freed from greed and lust. When freed from greed and lust, one becomes brahminically qualified, and when a brahminically qualified person makes further advancement, he becomes situated on the Vaiṣṇava platform. It is only on this Vaiṣṇava platform that it is possible to awaken one's dormant love of Godhead, and as soon as one does so, his life is successful.

At present, human society is specifically cultivating the mode of ignorance (tamo-guṇa), although there may also be some symptoms of passion (rajo-guṇa). Full of kāma and lobha, lust and greed, the entire population of the world consists mostly of śūdras and a few vaiśyas, and gradually it is coming about that there are śūdras only. Communism is a movement of śūdras, and capitalism is meant for vaiśyas. In the fighting between these two factions, the śūdras and vaiśyas, gradually, due to the abominable condition of society, the communists will emerge triumphant, and as soon as this takes place, whatever is left of society will be ruined. The only possible remedy that can counteract the tendency toward communism is the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, which can give even communists the real idea of communist society. According to the doctrine of communism, the state should be the proprietor of everything. But the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, expanding this same idea, accepts God as the proprietor of everything. People can't understand this because they have no sense of God, but the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement can help them to understand God and to understand that everything belongs to God. Since everything is the property of God, and all living entities-not only human beings but even animals, birds, plants and so on-are children of God, everyone has the right to live at the cost of God with God consciousness. This is the sum and substance of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement.

SYNONYMS

svatantra-fully independent; īśvara-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; prema-love of God; nigūḍha-very confidential; bhāṇḍāra-stock; bilāila-distributed; yāre-to anyone; tāre-to everyone; nā-not; kaila-did; vicāra-consideration.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself, is fully independent. Therefore, although it is the most confidentially stored benediction, He can distribute love of Godhead to anyone and everyone without consideration.

PURPORT

This is the benefit of Lord Caitanya's movement. If one somehow or other comes in contact with the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement, without consideration of his being a śūdra, vaiśya, Jagāi, Mādhāi or even lower, he becomes advanced in spiritual consciousness and immediately develops love of Godhead. We now have actual experience that throughout the entire world this movement is making many such persons lovers of God simply by the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Actually, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has appeared as the spiritual master of the entire world. He does not discriminate between offenders and the innocent. Kṛṣṇa-prema-pradāya te: He liberally gives love of Godhead to anyone and everyone. This can be actually experienced, as stated in the next verse.

SYNONYMS

adyāpiha-even up to date; dekha-you see; caitanya-nāma-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's name; yei-anyone; laya-who takes; kṛṣṇa-preme-in love of Kṛṣṇa; pulaka-aśru-tears in ecstasy; vihvala-overwhelmed; se-he; haya-becomes.

TRANSLATION

Whether he is offensive or inoffensive, anyone who even now chants śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda is immediately overwhelmed with ecstasy, and tears fill his eyes.

PURPORT

The prākṛta-sahajiyās who chant nitāi-gaura rādhe śyāma have very little knowledge of the Bhāgavata conclusion, and they hardly follow the Vaiṣṇava rules and regulations, and yet because they chant bhaja nitāi-gaura, their chanting immediately invokes tears and other signs of ecstasy. Although they do not know the principles of Vaiṣṇava philosophy and are not very advanced in education, by these symptoms they attract many men to become their followers. Their ecstatic tears will of course help them in the long run, for as soon as they come in contact with a pure devotee their lives will become successful. Even in the beginning, however, because they are chanting the holy names of nitāi-gaura, their swift advancement on the path of love of Godhead is very prominently visible.

nityānanda balite-while talking of Nityānanda Prabhu; haya-it so becomes; kṛṣṇa-prema-udaya-awakening of love of Kṛṣṇa; āulāya-agitated; sakala-all; aṅga-limbs of the body; aśru-gaṅgā-tears like the Ganges waters; vaya-flow down.

TRANSLATION

Simply by talking of Nityānanda Prabhu one awakens his love for Kṛṣṇa. Thus all his bodily limbs are agitated by ecstasy, and tears flow from his eyes like the waters of the Ganges.

TEXT 24

'kṛṣṇa-nāma' kare aparādhera vicāra kṛṣṇa balile aparādhīra nā haya vikāra

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kare-takes; aparādhera-of offenses; vicāra-consideration; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; balile-if one chants; aparādhīra-of the offenders; nā-never; haya-becomes; vikāra-changed.

TRANSLATION

There are offenses to be considered while chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Therefore simply by chanting Hare Kṛṣṇa one does not become ecstatic.

PURPORT

It is very beneficial to chant the names śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda before chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra because by chanting these two holy names-śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda-one immediately becomes ecstatic, and if he then chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra he becomes free of offenses.

There are ten offenses to avoid in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. The first offense is to blaspheme great personalities who are engaged in distributing the holy name of the Lord. It is said in the śāstra (Cc. Antya 7.11), kṛṣṇa-śakti vinā nahe tāra pravartana:

one cannot distribute the holy names of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra unless he is empowered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore one should not criticize or blaspheme a devotee who is thus engaged.

Śrī Padma Purāṇa states:

satāṁ nindā nāmnaḥ paramam aparādhaṁ vitanute yataḥ khyātiṁ yātaṁ katham u sahate tad-vigarhām

To blaspheme the great saintly persons who are engaged in preaching the glories of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is the worst offense at the lotus feet of the holy name. One should not criticize a preacher of the glories of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. If one does so, he is an offender. The Nāma-prabhu, who is identical with Kṛṣṇa, will never tolerate such blasphemous activities, even from one who passes as a great devotee.

The second nāmāparādha is described as follows:

śivasya śrī-viṣṇor ya iha guṇa-nāmādi-sakalaṁ dhiyā bhinnaṁ paśyet sa khalu hari-nāmāhita-karaḥ

In this material world, the holy name of Viṣṇu is all-auspicious. Viṣṇu's name, form, qualities and pastimes are all transcendental, absolute knowledge. Therefore, if one tries to separate the Absolute Personality of Godhead from His holy name or His transcendental form, qualities and pastimes, thinking them to be material, that is offensive. Similarly, to think the names of demigods such as Lord Śiva to be as good as the name of Lord Viṣṇu-or, in other words, to think Lord Śiva and the other demigods to be other forms of God and therefore equal to Viṣṇu-is also blasphemous. This is the second offense at the lotus feet of the Lord.

The third offense at the lotus feet of the holy name, which is called guror avajñā, is to consider the spiritual master to be material and therefore envy his exalted position. The fourth offense (śruti-śāstra-nindanam) is to blaspheme Vedic scriptures such as the four Vedas and the Puraṇas. The fifth offense (artha-vādaḥ) is to consider the glories of the holy name to be exaggerations. Similarly, the sixth offense (hari-nāmni kalpanam) is to consider the holy name of the Lord to be imaginary.

The seventh offense is described as follows:

nāmno balād yasya hi pāpa-buddhir na vidyate tasya yamair hi śuddhiḥ

To think that since the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra can counteract all sinful reactions one may therefore go on with his sinful activities and at the same time chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra to neutralize them is the greatest offense at the lotus feet of hari-nāma.

The eighth offense is stated thus:

dharma-vrata-tyāga-hutādi-sarva-śubha-kriyā-sāmyam api pramādaḥ

It is offensive to consider the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra to be a religious ritualistic ceremony. Performing religious ceremonies, following vows and practicing renunciation and sacrifice are all materialistic auspicious activities. The chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra must not be compared to such materialistic religiosity.This is an offense at the lotus feet of the Lord.

The ninth offense is described as follows:

aśraddadhāne vimukhe 'py aśṛṇvati yaś copadeśaḥ śiva-nāmāparādhaḥ

It is an offense to preach the glories of the holy name among persons who have no intelligence or no faith in the subject matter. Such people should be given the chance to hear the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, but in the beginning they should not be instructed about the glories or the spiritual significance of the holy name. By constant hearing of the holy name, their hearts will be purified, and then they will be able to understand the transcendental position of the holy name.

The tenth offense is as follows:

śrute 'pi nāma-māhātmye yaḥ prīti-rahito naraḥ ahaṁ-mamādi-paramo nāmni so 'py aparādha-kṛt

If one has heard the glories of the transcendental holy name of the Lord but nevertheless continues in a materialistic concept of life, thinking "I am this body and everything belonging to this body is mine [ahaṁ mameti]," and does not show respect and love for the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, that is an offense.

SYNONYMS

tat-that; aśma-sāram-as hard as iron; hṛdayam-heart; bata-O; idam-this; yat-which; gṛhyamāṇaiḥ-in spite of taking the chanting; hari-nāmadheyaiḥ-meditating on the holy name of the Lord; na-does not; vikriyeta-change; atha-thus; yadā-when; vikāraḥ-transformation; netre-in the eyes; jalam-tears; gātra-ruheṣu-in the pores of the body; harṣaḥ-ecstasy.

TRANSLATION

"If one's heart does not change, tears do not flow from his eyes, his body does not shiver, and his bodily hairs do not stand on end as he chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, it should be understood that his heart is as hard as iron. This is due to his offenses at the lotus feet of the Lord's holy name."

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, commenting on this verse, which is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.3.24), remarks that sometimes a mahā-bhāgavata, or very advanced devotee, does not manifest such transcendental symptoms as tears in the eyes, and sometimes a kaniṣṭha-adhikārī, a neophyte devotee, displays them artificially. This does not mean, however, that the neophyte is more advanced than the mahā-bhāgavata devotee. The test of the real change of heart that takes place when one chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is that one becomes detached from material enjoyment. This is the real change. Bhaktir pareśānubhavo viraktir anyatra ca (Bhāg. 11.2.42). If one is actually advancing in spiritual life, he must become very much detached from material enjoyment. If it is sometimes found that a kaniṣṭha-adhikārī (neophyte devotee) shows artificial tears in his eyes while chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra but is still completely attached to material things, his heart has not really changed. The change must be manifested in terms of one's real activities.

TEXT 26

'eka' kṛṣṇa-nāme kare sarva-pāpa nāśa premera kāraṇa bhakti karena prakāśa

SYNONYMS

eka-one; kṛṣṇa-nāme-by chanting the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kare-makes; sarva-all; pāpa-sinful life; nāśa-exhausted; premera-of love of Godhead; kāraṇa-cause; bhakti-devotional service; karena-becomes; prakāśa-manifest.

TRANSLATION

Simply chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra without offenses vanquishes all sinful activities. Thus pure devotional service, which is the cause of love of Godhead, becomes manifest.

PURPORT

One cannot be situated in the devotional service of the Lord unless one is free from sinful life. This is confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (7.28):

yeṣāṁ tv anta-gataṁ pāpaṁ janānāṁ puṇya-karmanām te dvandva-moha-nirmuktā
bhajante māṁ dṛḍha-vratāḥ

"Persons who have acted piously in previous lives and in this life and whose sinful actions are completely eradicated are freed from the duality of delusion, and they engage themselves in My service with determination." A person who is already cleansed of all tinges of sinful life engages without deviation or duality of purpose in the transcendental loving service of the Lord. In this age, although people are greatly sinful, simply chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra can relieve them from the reactions of their sins. Eka kṛṣṇa-nāme: only by chanting Kṛṣṇa's name is this possible. This is also confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (kīrtanād eva kṛṣṇasya). Caitanya Mahāprabhu has also taught us this. While passing on the road, He used to chant:

kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa he kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa rakṣa mām kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa pāhi mām rāma rāghava rāma rāghava rāma rāghava rakṣa mām kṛṣṇa keśava kṛṣṇa keśava kṛṣṇa keśava pāhi mām

If one always chants the holy name Kṛṣṇa, gradually one is freed from all reactions of sinful life, provided he chants offenselessly and does not commit more sinful activities on the strength of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. In this way one is purified, and his devotional service causes the arousal of his dormant love of God. Simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra and not committing sinful activities and offenses, one's life is purified, and thus one comes to the fifth stage of perfection, or engagement in the loving service of the Lord (premā pum-artho mahān).

TEXT 27

premera udaye haya premera vikāra sveda-kampa-pulakādi gadgadāśrudhāra

SYNONYMS

premera-of love of Godhead; udaye-when there is awakening; haya-it becomes so; premera-of love of Godhead; vikāra-transformation; sveda-perspiration; kampa-trembling; pulaka-ādi-throbbing of the heart; gadgada-faltering; aśru-dhāra-tears in the eyes.

TRANSLATION

When one's transcendental loving service to the Lord is actually awakened, it generates transformations in the body such as perspiration, trembling, throbbing of the heart, faltering of the voice and tears in the eyes.

PURPORT

These bodily transformations are automatically manifested when one is actually situated in love of Godhead. One should not artificially imitate them. Our disease is desire for that which is material; even while advancing in spiritual life, we want material acclaim. One must be freed from this disease. Pure devotion must be anyābhilāṣitā-śūnyam, without desire for anything material. Advanced devotees manifest many bodily transformations, which are symptoms of ecstasy, but one should not imitate them to achieve cheap adoration from the public. When one actually attains the advanced stage, the ecstatic symptoms will appear automatically; one does not need to imitate them.

TEXT 28

anāyāse bhava-kṣaya, kṛṣṇera sevana eka kṛṣṇa-nāmera phale pāi eta dhana

SYNONYMS

anāyāse-without hard labor; bhava-kṣaya-stoppage of repetition of birth and death; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; sevana-service; eka-one; kṛṣṇa-nāmera-chanting the name of Kṛṣṇa; phale-as a result of; pāi-we achieve; eta-so much; dhana-wealth.

TRANSLATION

As a result of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, one makes such great advancement in spiritual life that simultaneously his material existence terminates and he receives love of Godhead. The holy name of Kṛṣṇa is so powerful that by chanting even one name, one very easily achieves these transcendental riches.

TEXTS 29-30

hena kṛṣṇa-nāma yadi laya bahu-bāra

SYNONYMS

hena-such; kṛṣṇa-nāma-holy name of the Lord; yadi-if; laya-one takes; bahu-bāra-again and again; tabu-still; yadi-if; prema-love of Godhead; nahe-is not visible; nahe aśru-dhāra-there are no tears in the eyes; tabe-then; jāni-I understand; aparādha-offense; tāhāte-there (in that process); pracura-enough; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; bīja-seed; tāhe-in those activities; nā-does not; kare-do; aṅkura-sprout.

TRANSLATION

If one chants the exalted holy name of the Lord again and again and yet his love for the Supreme Lord does not develop and tears do not appear in his eyes, it is evident that because of his offenses in chanting, the seed of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa does not sprout.

PURPORT

If one chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra offensively, one does not achieve the desired result. Therefore one should carefully avoid the offenses which have already been described in connection with verse 24.

TEXT 31

caitanya-nityānande nāhi esaba vicāra nāma laite prema dena, vahe aśrudhāra

SYNONYMS

caitanya-nityānande-when chanting the holy names of Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda; nāhi-there are not; esaba-all these; vicara-considerations; nāma-the holy name; laite-simply by chanting; prema-love of Godhead; dena-they give; vahe-there is a flow; aśru-dhāra-tears in the eyes.

TRANSLATION

But if one only chants, with some slight faith, the holy names of Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda, very quickly he is cleansed of all offenses. Thus as soon as he chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, he feels the ecstasy of love for God.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura remarks in this connection that if one takes shelter of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda, follows Their instructions to become more tolerant than the tree and humbler than the grass,and in this way chants the holy name of the Lord, very soon he achieves the platform of transcendental loving service to the Lord, and tears appear in his eyes. There are offenses to be considered in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, but there are no such considerations in chanting the names of Gaura-Nityānanda. Therefore, if one chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra but his life is still full of sinful activities, it will be very difficult for him to achieve the platform of loving service to the Lord. But if in spite of being an offender one chants the holy names of Gaura-Nityānanda, he is very quickly freed from the reactions to his offenses. Therefore, one should first approach Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda, or worship Guru-Gaurāṅga, and then come to the stage of worshiping Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, our students are first advised to worship Guru-Gaurāṅga, and then, when they are somewhat advanced, the Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa Deity is installed, and they are engaged in the worship of the Lord.

One should first take shelter of Gaura-Nityānanda in order to reach, ultimately, Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura sings in this connection:

gaurāṅga balite habe pulaka śarīra hari hari balite nayane ba'be nīra āra kabe nitāicāṅdera karuṇā ha-ibe saṁsāra-vāsanā mora kabe tuccha habe viṣaya chāḍiyā kabe śuddha habe mana kabe hāma heraba śrī-vṛndāvana

In the beginning one should very regularly chant Śrī Gaurasundara's holy name and then chant the holy name of Lord Nityānanda. Thus one's heart will be cleansed of impure desires for material enjoyment. Then one can approach Vṛndāvana-dhāma to worship Lord Kṛṣṇa. Unless one is favored by Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda, there is no need to go to Vṛndāvana, for unless one's mind is purified, he cannot see Vṛndāvana, even if he goes there. Actually going to Vṛndāvana involves taking shelter of the six Gosvāmīs by reading Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, Vidagdha-mādhava, Lalita-mādhava and the other books that they have given. In this way one can understand the transcendental loving affairs between Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. Kabe hāma bujhaba se yugala-pirīti. The conjugal love between Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa is not an ordinary human affair; it is fully transcendental. In order to understand Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa, worship Them and engage in Their loving service, one must be guided by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Nityānanda Prabhu and the six Gosvāmīs, Lord Caitanya's direct disciples.

For an ordinary man, worship of Śrī Caitanya and Nityānanda Prabhu or the Pañca-tattva is easier than worship of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. Unless one is very fortunate, he should not be induced to worship Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa directly. A neophyte student who is not sufficiently educated or enlightened should not indulge in the worship of Śrī Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa or the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Even if he does so, he cannot get the desired result. One should therefore chant the names of Nitāi-Gaura and worship Them without false prestige. Since everyone within this material world is more or less influenced by sinful activities, in the beginning it is essential that one take to the worship of Guru-Gaurāṅga and ask their favor, for thus despite all his disqualifications one will very soon become qualified to worship the Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa vigraha.

It should be noted in this connection that the holy names of Lord Kṛṣṇa and Gaurasundara are both identical with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore one should not consider one name to be more potent than the other. Considering the position of the people of this age, however, the chanting of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's name is more essential than the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra because Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the most magnanimous incarnation and His mercy is very easily achieved. Therefore one must first take shelter of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by chanting śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda. By serving Gaura-Nityānanda one is freed from the entanglements of material existence and thus becomes qualified to worship the Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa Deity.

svatantra īśvara prabhu atyanta udāra tāṅre nā bhajile kabhu nā haya nistāra svatantra īśvara-the fully independent Supreme Lord; prabhu-the Lord; atyanta-very much; udāra-magnanimous; tāṅre-unto Him; nā-without; bhajile-worshiping; kabhu nā-never at any time; haya-becomes so; nistāra-liberation.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the independent Supreme Personality of Godhead, is greatly magnanimous. Unless one worships Him, one can never be liberated.

PURPORT

Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura here remarks that one should not give up the worship of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa to worship Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. By worshiping either Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa or Lord Caitanya alone, one cannot become advanced. One should not try to supersede the instructions of the six Gosvāmīs, for they are ācāryas and very dear to Lord Caitanya. Therefore Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura sings:

rūpa-raghunātha-pade haibe ākuti
kabe hāma bujhaba se yugala-pirīti

One must be a submissive student of the six Gosvāmīs, from Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī to Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī. Not following their instructions but imagining how to worship Gaurasundara and Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa is a great offense, as a result of which one clears a path to hell. If one neglects the instructions of the six Gosvāmīs and yet becomes a so-called devotee of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa, he merely criticizes the real devotees of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa. As a result of speculation, he considers Gaurasundara to be an ordinary devotee and therefore cannot make progress in serving the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

O fools, just read Śrī Caitanya-maṅgala! By reading this book you can understand all the glories of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

Śrī Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura's Caitanya-bhāgavata was originally entitled Caitanya-maṅgala, but when Śrīla Locana dāsa Ṭhākura later wrote another book named Caitanya-maṅgala, Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura changed the name of his own book, which is now therefore known as Caitanya-bhāgavata. The life of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is very elaborately described in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, and Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī has already informed us that in his Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta he has described whatever Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has not mentioned. This acceptance of Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī indicates his acceptance of the disciplic succession. A writer of transcendental literature never tries to surpass the previous ācāryas.

TRANSLATION

By reading Śrī Caitanya-maṅgala one can understand all the glories and truths of Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda and come to the ultimate conclusion of devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrīmad-Bhagavatam is the authoritative reference book from which to understand devotional service, but because it is very elaborate, few men can understand its purpose. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is the original commentary on the Vedānta-sūtra, which is called nyāya-prasthāna. It was written to enable one to understand the Absolute Truth through infallible logic and argument, and therefore its natural commentary, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, is extremely elaborate. Professional reciters have created the impression that Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam deals only with Kṛṣṇa's rāsa-līlā, although Kṛṣṇa's rāsa-līlā is described only in the Tenth Canto (chapters 29-35). They have in this way presented Kṛṣṇa to the Western world as a great woman-hunter, and therefore we sometimes have to deal with such misconceptions in preaching. Another difficulty in understanding Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is that the professional reciters have introduced bhāgavata-saptāha, or seven-day readings of the Bhāgavatam. They want to finish Śrīmad-Bhagavatam in a week, although it is so sublime that even one verse of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, if properly explained, cannot be completed in three months. Under these circumstances, it is a great aid for the common man to read Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura's Caitanya-bhāgavata, for thus he can actually understand devotional service, Kṛṣṇa, Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī has said:

śruti-smṛti-purāṇādi-
pañcarātra-vidhiṁ vinā
aikāntikī harer bhaktir
utpātāyaiva kalpate

"Devotional service to the Lord that ignores the authorized Vedic scriptures like the Upaniṣads, Purāṇas, Nārada-pañcarātra, etc., is simply an unnecessary disturbance in society." Due to misunderstanding Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, people are misled regarding the science of Kṛṣṇa. However, by reading Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura's book one can very easily understand this science.

TRANSLATION

In Śrī Caitanya-maṅgala [later known as Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata] Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has given the conclusion and essence of devotional service by quoting the authoritative statements of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TRANSLATION

The subject matter of this book is so sublime that it appears that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has personally spoken through the writings of Śrī Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura.

PURPORT

Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī has written in his Hari-bhakti-vilāsa:

avaiṣṇava-mukhodgīrṇaṁ pūtaṁ hari-kathāmṛtam śravaṇaṁ naiva kartavyaṁ sarpocchiṣṭaṁ yathā payaḥ

Transcendental literature that strictly follows the Vedic principles and the conclusion of the Purāṇas and pañcarātrika-vidhi can be written only by a pure devotee.

It is not possible for a common man to write books on bhakti, for his writings will not be effective. He may be a very great scholar and expert in presenting literature in flowery language, but this is not at all helpful in understanding transcendental literature. Even if transcendental literature is written in faulty language, it is acceptable if it is written by a devotee, whereas so-called transcendental literature written by a mundane scholar, even if it is a very highly polished literary presentation, cannot be accepted. The secret in a devotee's writing is that when he writes about the pastimes of the Lord, the Lord helps him; he does not write himself. As stated in the Bhagavad-gītā (10.10), dadāmi buddhi-yogaṁ taṁ yena mām upayānti te. Since a devotee writes in service to the Lord, the Lord from within gives him so much intelligence that he sits down near the Lord and goes on writing books. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī confirms that what Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura wrote was actually spoken by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and he simply repeated it. The same holds true for Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī wrote Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta in his old age, in an invalid condition, but it is such a sublime scripture that Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī Mahārāja used to say, ”The time will come when the people of the world will learn Bengali to read Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta.” We are trying to present Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta in English and do not know how successful it will be, but if one reads the original Caitanya-caritāmṛta in Bengali he will relish increasing ecstasy in devotional service.

SYNONYMS

vṛndāvana-dāsa-pade-unto the lotus feet of Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; koṭi-millions; namaskāra-obeisances; aiche-such; grantha-book; kari'-compiling; teṅho-he; tarilā-delivered; saṁsāra-all the world.

TRANSLATION

I offer millions of obeisances unto the lotus feet of Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura. No one else could write such a wonderful book for the deliverance of all fallen souls.

TEXT 41

nārāyaṇī–caitanyera ucchiṣṭa-bhājana tāṅra garbhe janmilā śrī-dāsa-vṛndāvana nārāyaṇī-of the name Nārāyaṇī; caitanyera-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ucchiṣṭa-bhājana-eater of the remnants of food; tāṅra-of her; garbhe-in the womb; janmilā-took birth; śrī-dāsa-vṛndāvana-Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Thākura.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Nārāyaṇī eternally eats the remnants of the food of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura was born of her womb.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, a book written by Kavi-karṇapūra that describes all the associates of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and who they previously were, there is the following statement regarding Nārāyaṇī:

ambikāyāḥ svasā yāsīn nāmnā śrīla-kilimbikā kṛṣṇocchiṣṭaṁ prabhuñjānā seyaṁ nārāyaṇī matā

When Lord Kṛṣṇa was a child, He was nursed by a woman named Ambikā, who had a younger sister named Kilimbikā. During the time of Lord Caitanya's incarnation, the same Kilimbikā used to eat the remnants of food left by Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. That Kilimbikā was Nārāyaṇī, who was a niece of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's. Later on, when she grew up and married, Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura was born from her womb. A devotee of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa is celebrated in terms of devotional service rendered to the Lord; thus we know Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura as the son of Nārāyaṇī. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura notes in this connection that there is no reference to his paternal ancestry because there is no need to understand it.

SYNONYMS

rāja-sevā-majestic service; haya-render; tāṅhā-there; vicitra-varieties; prakāra-all kinds of; divya-spiritual; sāmagrī-ingredients; divya-spiritual; vastra-garments; alaṅkāra-ornaments.

TRANSLATION

Varieties of majestic service are rendered to Govinda there. His garments, ornaments and paraphernalia are all transcendental.

TEXT 53

sahasra sevaka sevā kare anukṣaṇa sahasra-vadane sevā nā yāya varṇana

SYNONYMS

sahasra-many thousands; sevaka-servitors; sevā-service; kare-render; anukṣaṇa-always; sahasra-thousands; vadane-mouths; sevā-process of service; nā-not possible; yāya-goes on; varṇana-description.

TRANSLATION

In that temple of Govindajī, thousands of servitors always render service to the Lord in devotion. Even with thousands of mouths, one could not describe this service.

TEXT 54

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; ye-that; sādhāraṇa-general; sat-guṇa-good qualities; pañcāśa-fifty; se-those; saba-all; guṇera-qualities; tāṅra-his; śarīre-in the body; nivāsa-were always present.

TRANSLATION

The fifty qualities of Lord Kṛṣṇa were all present in his body.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, the transcendental qualities of Śrī Kṛṣṇa are mentioned. Among these, fifty are primary (ayaṁ netā su-ramyāṅgaḥ, etc.), and in minute quantity they were all present in the body of Śrī Haridāsa Paṇḍita. Since every living entity is a part of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, all fifty of these good qualities of Śrī Kṛṣṇa are originally minutely present in every living being. Due to his contact with material nature, these qualities are not visible in the conditioned soul, but when one becomes a purified devotee, they all automatically manifest themselves. This is stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.18.12), as mentioned in the text below.

TEXT 58

yasyāsti bhaktir bhagavaty akiñcanā harāv abhaktasya kuto mahad-guṇā mano-rathenāsati dhāvato bahiḥ

SYNONYMS

yasya-one who; asti-has; bhaktiḥ-devotional service; bhagavati-unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead; akiñcanā-without motive; sarvaiḥ-all; guṇaiḥ-qualities; tatra-there; samāsate-become manifested; surāḥ-with all the demigods; harau-unto the Supreme Personality; abhaktasya-one who is not a devotee; kutaḥ-where; mahat-guṇāḥ-high qualities; manaḥ-rathena-concoction; asati-the material existence; dhāvataḥ-run on; bahiḥ-externally.

TRANSLATION

"In one who has unflinching devotional faith in Kṛṣṇa, all the good qualities of Kṛṣṇa and the demigods are consistently manifested. However, one who has no devotion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead has no good qualifications because he is engaged by mental concoction in material existence, which is the external feature of the Lord."

SYNONYMS

tāṅhāra-his; ananta-unlimited; guṇa-qualities; ke-who; karu-can; prakāśa-display; tāṅra-his; priya-dear; śiṣya-disciple; iṅha-this person; paṇḍita haridāsa-of the name Haridāsa Paṇḍita.

TRANSLATION

Ananta Ācārya was a reservoir of all good qualities. No one can estimate how great he was. Paṇḍita Haridāsa was his beloved disciple.

PURPORT

Śrī Ananta Ācārya is one of the eternal associates of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Previously, during the advent of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Ananta Ācārya was Sudevī, one of the eight gopīs. This is stated in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 165, as follows: anantācārya-gosvāmī yā sudevī purā vraje. ”Ananta Ācārya Gosvāmī was formerly Sudevī-gopī in Vraja [Vṛndāvana].” In Jagannātha Purī, or Puruṣottama-kṣetra, there is a monastery known as Gaṅgā-mātā Maṭha that was established by Ananta Ācārya. In the disciplic succession of the Gaṅgā-mātā Maṭha, he is known as Vinoda-mañjarī. One of his disciples was Haridāsa Paṇḍita Gosvāmī, who is also known as Śrī Raghu Gopāla and as Śrī Rāsa-mañjarī. His disciple Lakṣmīpriyā was the maternal aunt of Gaṅgā-mātā, a princess who was the daughter of the King of Puṭiyā. Gaṅgā-mātā brought a Deity of the name Śrī Rasika-rāya from Kṛṣṇa Miśra of Jaipur and installed Him in the house of Sārvabhauma in Jagannātha Purī. The disciple in the fifth generation after Śrī Ananta Ācārya was Śrī Vanamālī; in the sixth generation, Śrī Bhagavān dāsa, who was a Bengali; in the seventh generation, Madhusūdana dāsa, who was an Oriyā; in the eighth generation, Nīlāmbara dāsa; in the ninth generation, Śrī Narottama dāsa; in the tenth generation, Pītāmbara dāsa; and in the eleventh generation, Śrī Mādhava dāsa. The disciple in the twelfth generation is presently in charge of the Gaṅgā-mātā monastery.

SYNONYMS

caitanya-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nityānande-in Lord Nityānanda; tāṅra-his; parama-very great; viśvāsa-faith; caitanya-carite-in the pastimes of Lord Caitanya; tāṅra-his; parama-great; ullāsa-satisfaction.

TRANSLATION

Paṇḍita Haridāsa had great faith in Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda. Therefore he took great satisfaction in knowing about Their pastimes and qualities.

TEXT 62

SYNONYMS

vaiṣṇavera-of devotees; guṇa-grāhī-accepting good qualities; nā-never; dekhaye-sees; doṣa-any fault; kāya-manaḥ-vākye-with heart and soul; kare-does; vaiṣṇava-devotee; santoṣa-pacification.

TRANSLATION

He always accepted the good qualities of Vaiṣṇavas and never found fault in them. He engaged his heart and soul only to satisfy the Vaiṣṇavas.

PURPORT

It is a qualification of a Vaiṣṇava that he is adoṣa-darśī: he never sees others’ faults. Of course, every human being has both good qualities and faults. Therefore it is said, saj-janā guṇam icchanti doṣam icchanti pāmarāḥ: everyone has a combination of faults and glories. But a Vaiṣṇava, a sober man, accepts only a man’s glories and not his faults, for flies seek sores whereas honeybees seek honey. Haridāsa Paṇḍita never found fault with a Vaiṣṇava but considered only his good qualities.

TRANSLATION

Like the full moon, he illuminated the entire assembly of the Vaiṣṇavas by speaking Śrī Caitanya-maṅgala, and by the nectar of his qualities he increased their transcendental bliss.

TRANSLATION

By his causeless mercy he ordered me to write about the last pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 66

kāśīśvara gosāñira śiṣya–govinda gosāñi govindera priya-sevaka tāṅra sama nāñi kāśīśvara gosāñira-of Kāśīśvara Gosvāmī; śiṣya-disciple; govinda-of the name Govinda; gosāñi-spiritual master; govindera-of Govinda; priya-sevaka-most confidential servitor; tāṅra-his; sama-equal; nāñi-is none.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Govinda Gosāñi, the priest engaged in the service of Lord Govinda in Vṛndāvana, was a disciple of Kāśīśvara Gosāñi. There was no servant more dear to the Govinda Deity.

PURPORT

Kāśīśvara Gosāñi was one of the contemporaries of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu who was with the Lord in Jagannātha Purī. Also known as Kāśīśvara Paṇḍita, he was a disciple of Īśvara Purī and son of Vāsudeva Bhaṭṭācārya, who belonged to the dynasty of Kāñjilāla Kānu. His surname was Caudhurī. His nephew, his sister's son, who was named Rudra Paṇḍita, was the original priest of Vallabhapura, which is situated about one mile from the Śrīrāmapura railway station in the village of Cātarā. Installed there are the Deities of Rādhā-Govinda and Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Kāśīśvara Gosāñi was a very strong man, and therefore when Lord Caitanya visited the temple of Jagannātha, he used to protect the Lord from the crowds. Another of his duties was to distribute prasāda to the devotees after kīrtana.

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura also visited this temple at Vallabhapura. At that time the person in charge was a Śaivite, Śrī Śivacandra Caudhurī, who was a descendant of Kāśīśvara Gosāñi's brother. In Vallabhapura there was a permanent arrangement to cook nine kilos of rice, vegetables and other foodstuffs, and near the village there is sufficient land, which belongs to the Deity, on which this rice was grown. Unfortunately, the descendants of Kāśīśvara Gosāñi's brother have sold a major portion of this land, and therefore the Deity worship has now been hampered.

It is said in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā that the servant of Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana named Bhṛṅgāra descended as Kāśīśvara Gosāñi during the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In our householder life we also sometimes visited this temple of Vallabhapura and took prasāda there at noon. The Deities of this temple, Śrī Śrī Rādhā-Govinda and the Gaurāṅga vigraha, are extremely beautiful. Near Vallabhapura is another beautiful temple of Jagannātha. We sometimes used to take prasāda in this Jagannātha temple also. These two temples are situated within a one mile-radius of the Śrīrāmapura railway station, near Calcutta.

TEXT 67

SYNONYMS

āra yata-there are many others; vṛndāvane-in Vṛndāvana; baise-residents; bhakta-gaṇa-great devotees; śeṣa-līlā-the last portions of Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes; śunite-to hear; sabāra-of everyone; haila-became; mana-the mind.

TRANSLATION

In Vṛndāvana there were also many other great devotees, all of whom desired to hear the last pastimes of Lord Caitanya.

TEXT 72

more ājñā karilā sabe karuṇā kariyā tāṅ-sabāra bole likhi nirlajja ha-iyā

SYNONYMS

more-unto me; ājñā-order; karilā-gave; sabe-all; karuṇā-merciful; kariyā-doing so; tāṅ-sabāra-of all of them; bole-by the order; likhi-I write; nirlajja-without shame; ha-iyā-becoming.

TRANSLATION

By their mercy, all these devotees ordered me to write of the last pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Because of their order only, although I am shameless, I have attempted to write this Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

PURPORT

To write about the transcendental pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is not an ordinary endeavor. Unless one is empowered by the higher authorities, or advanced devotees, one cannot write transcendental literature, for all such literature must be above suspicion, or, in other words, it must have none of the defects of conditioned souls, namely, mistakes, illusions, cheating and imperfect sense perceptions. The words of Kṛṣṇa and the disciplic succession that carries the orders of Kṛṣṇa are actually authoritative. To be empowered to write transcendental literature is a privilege in which a writer can take great pride. As a humble Vaiṣṇava, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, being thus empowered, felt very much ashamed that it was he who was to narrate the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

SYNONYMS

vaiṣṇavera-of all the Vaiṣṇava devotees; ājñā-order; pāñā-receiving; cintita-antare-anxiety within myself; madana-gopāle-to the temple of Śrī Madana-mohana; gelāṅ-I went; ājñā-order; māgibāre-to receive.

TRANSLATION

Having received the order of the Vaiṣṇavas but being anxious within my heart, I went to the temple of Madana-mohana in Vṛndāvana to ask His permission also.

PURPORT

A Vaiṣṇava always follows the order of guru and Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta was written by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī by their mercy. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī considered all the devotees that have been mentioned to be his preceptor gurus, or spiritual masters, and Madana-gopāla (Śrī Madana-mohana vigraha) is Kṛṣṇa Himself. Thus he took permission from both of them, and when he received the mercy of both guru and Kṛṣṇa, he was able to write this great literature, Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta. This example should be followed. Anyone who attempts to write about Kṛṣṇa must first take permission from the spiritual master and Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa is situated in everyone's heart, and the spiritual master is His direct external representative. Thus Kṛṣṇa is situated antar-bahiḥ, within and without. One must first become a pure devotee by following the strict regulative principles and chanting sixteen rounds daily, and when one thinks that he is actually on the Vaiṣṇava platform, he must then take permission from the spiritual master, and that permission must also be confirmed by Kṛṣṇa from within his heart. Then, if one is very sincere and pure, he can write transcendental literature, either prose or poetry.

TEXT 74

daraśana kari kailuṅ caraṇa vandana gosāñi-dāsa pūjārī kare caraṇa-sevana

SYNONYMS

daraśana-by visiting; kari-doing; kailuṅ-made; caraṇa-lotus feet; vandana-worship; gosāñi-dāsa-of the name Gosāñi dāsa; pūjārī-priest; kare-does; caraṇa-lotus feet; sevana-service.

TRANSLATION

When I visited the temple of Madana-mohana, the priest Gosāñi dāsa was serving the feet of the Lord, and I also prayed at the Lord's lotus feet.

TEXT 75

prabhura caraṇe yadi ājñā māgila prabhu-kaṇṭha haite mālā khasiyā paḍila prabhura-of the Lord; caraṇe-lotus feet; yadi-when; ājñā-order; māgila-requested; prabhu-kaṇṭha-the neck of the Lord; haite-from; mālā-garland; khasiyā-slipped; paḍila-fell down.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When I prayed to the Lord for permission, a garland from His neck immediately slipped down.

TEXT 76

saba vaiṣṇava-gaṇa hari-dhvani dila gosāñi-dāsa āni' mālā mora gale dila

SYNONYMS

saba-all; vaiṣṇava-devotees; gaṇa-group; hari-dhvani-chanting Hare Kṛṣṇa; dila-made; gosāñi-dāsa-of the name Gosāñi dāsa; āni'-bringing; mālā-garland; mora-my; gale-on the neck; dila-gave it.

TRANSLATION

As soon as this happened, the Vaiṣṇavas standing there all loudly chanted, "Haribol!" and the priest, Gosāñi dāsa, brought me the garland and put it around my neck.

TEXT 77

ājñā-mālā pāñā āmāra ha-ila ānanda tāhāṅi karinu ei granthera ārambha

SYNONYMS

ājñā-mālā-the garland of order; pāñā-receiving; āmāra-my; ha-ila-became; ānanda-great pleasure; tāhāṅi-then and there; karinu-attempted; ei-this; granthera-of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta; ārambha-beginning.

TRANSLATION

I was greatly pleased to have the garland signifying the order of the Lord, and then and there I commenced to write this book.

TEXT 78

ei grantha lekhāya more 'madana-mohana' āmāra likhana yena śukera paṭhana

SYNONYMS

ei-this; grantha-great scripture; lekhāya-causes me to write; more-unto me; madana-mohana-the Deity; āmāra-my; likhana-writing; yena-like; śukera-of the parrot; paṭhana-responding.

TRANSLATION

Actually Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta is not my writing but the dictation of Śrī Madana-mohana. My writing is like the repetition of a parrot.

PURPORT

This should be the attitude of all devotees. When the Supreme Personality of Godhead recognizes a devotee, He gives him intelligence and dictates how he may go back home, back to Godhead. This is confirmed in Śrīmad Bhagavad-gītā (10.10):

teṣāṁ satata-yuktānāṁ
bhajatāṁ prīti-pūrvakam
dadāmi buddhi-yogaṁ taṁ
yena mām upayānti te

"To those who are constantly devoted to serving Me with love, I give the understanding by which they can come to Me." The opportunity to engage in the transcendental loving service of the Lord is open to everyone because every living entity is constitutionally a servant of the Lord. To engage in the service of the Lord is the natural function of the living entity, but because he is covered by the influence of mayā, the material energy, he thinks it to be a very difficult task. But if he places himself under the guidance of a spiritual master and does everything sincerely, immediately the Lord, who is situated within everyone's heart, dictates how to serve Him (dadāmi buddhi-yogaṁ tam). The Lord gives this direction, and thus the devotee's life becomes perfect. Whatever a pure devotee does is done by the dictation of the Supreme Lord. Thus it is confirmed by the author of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta that whatever he wrote was written under the direction of the Śrī Madana-mohana Deity.

TEXT 79

sei likhi, madana-gopāla ye likhāya kāṣṭhera puttalī yena kuhake nācāya

SYNONYMS

sei likhi-I write that; madana-gopāla-the Deity Madana-gopāla; ye-whatever; likhāya-dictates to me; kāṣṭhera-wooden; puttalī-a doll; yena-like; kuhake-the enchanter; nācāya-causes to dance.

TRANSLATION

As a wooden doll is made to dance by a magician, I write as Madana-gopāla orders me to do so.

PURPORT

This is the position of a pure devotee. One should not take any responsibility on his own but should be a soul surrendered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who will then give him dictation as caitya-guru, or the spiritual master within. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is pleased to guide a devotee from within and without. From within He guides him as the Supersoul, and from without He guides him as the spiritual master.

TEXT 80

SYNONYMS

vṛndāvana-dāsera-of Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; pāda-padma-lotus feet; kari'-doing; dhyāna-meditation; tāṅra-his; ājñā-order; lañā-receiving; likhi-I write; yāhāte-in which permission; kalyāṇa-all auspiciousness.

TRANSLATION

I took permission from Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura by praying at his lotus feet, and upon receiving his order I have attempted to write this auspicious scripture.

PURPORT

Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī took permission not only from the Vaiṣṇavas and Madana-mohana but also from Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura, who is understood to be the Vyāsa of the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 82

tāṅra kṛpā vinā anye nā haya prakāśa

SYNONYMS

caitanya-līlāte-in describing the pastimes of Lord Caitanya; vyāsa-Vyāsadeva; vṛndāvana-dāsa-is Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; tāṅra-his; kṛpā-mercy; vinā-without; anye-other; nā-never; haya-becomes; prakāśa-manifest.

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura is the authorized writer on the pastimes of Lord Caitanya. Without his mercy, therefore, one cannot describe these pastimes.

TEXT 83

SYNONYMS

mūrkha-foolish; nīca-lowborn; kṣudra-very insignificant; muñi-I; viṣaya-material; lālasa-desires; vaiṣṇava-of the Vaiṣṇavas; ājñā-order; bale-on the strength of; kari-I do; eteka-so much; sāhasa-energy.

TRANSLATION

I am foolish, lowborn and insignificant, and I always desire material enjoyment; yet by the order of the Vaiṣṇavas I am greatly enthusiastic to write this transcendental literature.

TEXT 84

SYNONYMS

śrī-rūpa-Rūpa Gosvāmī; raghunātha-Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; caraṇera-of the lotus feet; ei-this; bala-strength; yāṅra-whose; smṛte-by remembrance; siddha-successful; haya-becomes; vāñchita-sakala-all desires.

TRANSLATION

The lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī are my source of strength. Remembering their lotus feet can fulfill all one's desires.

TEXT 85

śrī-rūpa-raghunātha-pade yāra āśa caitanya-caritāmṛta kahe kṛṣṇadāsa

SYNONYMS

śrī-rūpa-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; raghunātha-Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; pade-at the lotus feet; yāra-whose; āśa-expectation; caitanya-caritāmṛta-the book named Caitanya-caritāmṛta; kahe-describes; kṛṣṇa-dāsa-Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Eighth Chapter, in the matter of the author's receiving the orders of the authorities-Kṛṣṇa and guru.

18.4.9 Chapter 9

The Tree of Devotional Service

A summary of Chapter Nine has been given as follows by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. In the Ninth Chapter the author of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta has devised a figurative example by describing the "plant of bhakti." He considers Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is known as Viśvambhara, to be the gardener of this plant because He is the main personality who has taken charge of it. As the supreme enjoyer, He enjoyed the flowers Himself and distributed them as well. The seed of the plant was first sown in Navadvīpa, the birthsite of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and then the plant was brought to Puruṣottama-kṣetra (Jagannātha Purī) and then to Vṛndāvana. The seed fructified first in Śrīla Mādhavendra Purī and then his disciple Śrī Īśvara Purī. It is figuratively described that both the tree itself and the trunk of the tree are Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The devotees, headed by Paramānanda Purī and eight other great sannyāsīs, are like the spreading roots of the tree. From the main trunk there extend two special branches, Advaita Prabhu and Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, and from those branches grow other branches and twigs. The tree surrounds the entire world, and the flowers of the tree are to be distributed to everyone. In this way the tree of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu intoxicates the entire world. It should be noted that this is a figurative example meant to explain the mission of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

taṁ śrīmat-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-devaṁ vande jagad-gurum yasyānukampayā śvāpi mahābdhiṁ santaret sukham

SYNONYMS

tam-unto Him; śrīmat-with all opulence; kṛṣṇa-caitanya-devam-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa Caitanyadeva; vande-I offer obeisances; jagat-gurum-spiritual master of the world; yasya-whose; anukampayā-by the mercy of; śvā api-even a dog; mahā-abdhīm-great ocean; santaret-can swim; sukham-without difficulty.

TRANSLATION

Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto the spiritual master of the entire world, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu, by whose mercy even a dog can swim across a great ocean.

PURPORT

Sometimes it is to be seen that a dog can swim in the water for a few yards and then come back to the shore. Here, however, it is stated that if a dog is blessed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he can swim across an ocean. Similarly, the author of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, placing himself in a helpless condition, states that he has no personal power, but by the desire of Lord Caitanya, expressed through the Vaiṣṇavas and Madana-mohana vigraha, it is possible for him to cross a transcendental ocean to present Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

TEXT 2

jaya jaya śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya gauracandra jaya jayādvaita jaya jaya nityānanda

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya-all glories; śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-to Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; gauracandra-whose name is Gaurahari; jaya jaya-all glories; advaita-to Advaita Gosāñi; jaya jaya-all glories; nityānanda-to Nityānanda.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya, who is known as Gaurahari! All glories to Advaita and Nityānanda Prabhu!

TEXT 3

jaya jaya śrīvāsādi gaura-bhakta-gaṇa sarvābhīṣṭa-pūrti-hetu yāṅhāra smaraṇa

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya-all glories; śrīvāsa-ādi-to Śrīvāsa and others; gaura-bhakta-gaṇa-all the devotees of Lord Caitanya; sarva-abhīṣṭa-all ambition; pūrti-satisfaction; hetu-for the matter of; yāṅhāra-whose; smaraṇa-remembrance.

TRANSLATION

All glories to the devotees of Lord Caitanya, headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura! In order to fulfill all my desires, I remember their lotus feet.

PURPORT

The author here continues to follow the same principles of worship of the Pañca-tattva that were described in the Seventh Chapter of the Ādi-līlā.

TEXT 4

śrī-rūpa, sanātana, bhaṭṭa raghunātha śrī-jīva, gopāla-bhaṭṭa, dāsa-raghunātha

SYNONYMS

śrī-rūpa-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; sanātana-Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī; bhaṭṭa raghunātha-Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī; śrī-jīva-Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī; gopāla-bhaṭṭa-Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī; dāsa-raghunātha-Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

I also remember the six Gosvāmīs-Rūpa, Sanātana, Bhaṭṭa Raghunātha, Śrī Jīva, Gopāla Bhaṭṭa and Dāsa Raghunātha.

PURPORT

This is the process for writing transcendental literature. A sentimentalist who has no Vaiṣṇava qualifications cannot produce transcendental writings. There are many fools who consider kṛṣṇa-līlā to be a subject of art and write or paint pictures about the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa with the gopīs, sometimes depicting them in a manner practically obscene. These fools take pleasure in material sense gratification, but one who wants to make advancement in spiritual life must scrupulously avoid their literature. Unless one is a servant of Kṛṣṇa and the Vaiṣṇavas, as Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī presents himself to be in offering respects to Lord Caitanya, His associates and His disciples, one should not attempt to write transcendental literature.

TEXT 5

esaba-prasāde likhi caitanya-līlā-guṇa jāni vā nā jāni, kari āpana-śodhana

SYNONYMS

esaba-all these; prasāde-by the mercy of; likhi-I write; caitanya-of Lord Caitanya; līlā-guṇa-pastimes and qualities; jāni-know; vā-or; nā-not; jāni-know; kari-do; āpana-self; śodhana-purification.

TRANSLATION

It is by the mercy of all these Vaiṣṇavas and gurus that I attempt to write about the pastimes and qualities of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Whether I know or know not, it is for self-purification that I write this book.

PURPORT

This is the sum and substance of transcendental writing. One must be an authorized Vaiṣṇava, humble and pure. One should write transcendental literature to purify oneself, not for credit. By writing about the pastimes of the Lord, one associates with the Lord directly. One should not ambitiously think, "I shall become a great author. I shall be celebrated as a writer." These are material desires. One should attempt to write for self-purification. It may be published or it may not be published, but that does not matter. If one is actually sincere in writing, all his ambitions will be fulfilled. Whether one is known as a great author is incidental. One should not attempt to write transcendental literature for material name and fame.

TEXT 6

mālā-kāraḥ svayaṁ kṛṣṇapremāmara-taruḥ svayam dātā bhoktā tat-phalānāṁ

SYNONYMS

mālā-kāraḥ-gardener; svayam-Himself; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; prema-love; amara-transcendental; taruḥ-tree; svayam-Himself; dātā-giver; bhoktā-enjoyer; tat-phalānām-of all the fruits of that tree; yaḥ-one who; tam-unto Him; caitanyam-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āśraye-I take shelter.

TRANSLATION

I take shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who Himself is the tree of transcendental love of Kṛṣṇa, its gardener and also the bestower and enjoyer of its fruits.

TEXT 7

prabhu kahe, āmi 'viśvambhara' nāma dhari nāma sārthaka haya, yadi preme viśva bhari

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord said; āmi-I; viśvambhara-Viśvambhara; nāma-named; dhari-accept; nāma-the name; sārthaka-complete; haya-becomes; yadi-if; preme-in love of God; viśva-the whole universe; bhari-fulfilled.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya thought, "My name is Viśvambhara, 'one who maintains the entire universe.' Its meaning will be actualized if I can fill the whole universe with love of Godhead."

TEXT 8

eta cinti' lailā prabhu mālākāra-dharma navadvīpe ārambhilā phalodyāna-karma eta cinti'-thinking like this; lailā-took; prabhu-the Lord; mālā-kāra-dharma-the business of a gardener; navadvīpe-in Navadvīpa; ārambhilā-began; phala-udyāna-garden; karma-activities.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thinking in this way, He accepted the duty of a planter and began to grow a garden in Navadvīpa.

TEXT 9

śrī-caitanya mālākāra pṛthivīte āni' bhakti-kalpataru ropilā siñci' icchā-pāni

SYNONYMS

śrī-caitanya-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mālā-kāra-gardener; pṛthivīte-on this planet; āni'-bringing; bhakti-kalpa-taru-the desire tree of devotional service; ropilā-sowed; siñci'-watering; icchā-will; pāni-water.

TRANSLATION

Thus the Lord brought the desire tree of devotional service to this earth and became its gardener. He sowed the seed and sprinkled upon it the water of His will.

PURPORT

In many places devotional service has been compared to a creeper. One has to sow the seed of the devotional creeper, bhakti-latā, within his heart. As he regularly hears and chants, the seed will fructify and gradually grow into a mature plant and then produce the fruit of devotional service, namely, love of Godhead, which the gardener (mālā-kāra) can then enjoy without impediments.

TEXT 10

jaya śrī mādhavapurī kṛṣṇa-prema-pūra bhakti-kalpatarura teṅho prathama aṅkura

SYNONYMS

jaya-all glories; śrī mādhava-purī-unto Mādhavendra Purī; kṛṣṇa-prema-pūra-a storehouse of all love of Godhead; bhakti-kalpa-tarura-of the desire tree of devotional service; teṅho-he is; prathama-first; aṅkura-fructification.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Śrī Mādhavendra Purī, the storehouse of all devotional service unto Kṛṣṇa! He is a desire tree of devotional service, and it is in him that the seed of devotional service first fructified.

PURPORT

Śrī Mādhavendra Purī, also known as Śrī Mādhava Purī, belonged to the disciplic succession from Madhvācārya and was a greatly celebrated sannyāsī. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was the third disciplic descendant from Śrī Mādhavendra Purī. The process of worship in the disciplic succession of Madhvācārya was full of ritualistic ceremonies, with hardly a sign of love of Godhead; Śrī Mādhavendra Purī was the first person in that disciplic succession to exhibit the symptoms of love of Godhead and the first to write a poem beginning with the words ayi dīna-dayārdra nātha, "O supremely merciful Personality of Godhead." In that poem is the seed of Caitanya Mahāprabhu's cultivation of love of Godhead.

TEXT 11

śrī-iśvarapurī-rūpe aṅkura puṣṭa haila āpane caitanya-mālī skandha upajila

SYNONYMS

śrī-īśvara-purī-by the name Śrī Īśvara Purī; rūpe-in the form of; aṅkura-the seed; puṣṭa-cultivated; haila-became; āpane-Himself; caitanya-mālī-the gardener of the name Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; skandha-trunk; upajila-expanded.

TRANSLATION

The seed of devotional service next fructified in the form of Śrī Īśvara Purī, and then the gardener Himself, Caitanya Mahāprabhu, became the main trunk of the tree of devotional service.

PURPORT

Śrī Īśvara Purī was a resident of Kumāra-haṭṭa, where there is now a railroad station known as Kāmarhaṭṭa. Nearby there is also another station named Hālisahara, which belongs to the Eastern Railway that runs from the eastern section of Calcutta.

Īśvara Purī appeared in a brāhmaṇa family and was the most beloved disciple of Śrīla Mādhavendra Purī. In the last portion of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Antya 8.28-31), it is stated:

īśvara-purī gosāñi kare śrī-pada sevana sva-haste karena mala-mūtrādi mārjana nirantara kṛṣṇa-nāma karāya smaraṇa kṛṣṇa-nāma kṛṣṇa-līlā śunāya anukṣaṇa tuṣṭa hañā purī tāṅre kaila āliṅgana vara dilā kṛṣṇe tomāra ha-uka prema-dhana sei haite īśvara-purī premera sāgara

"At the last stage of his life Śrī Mādhavendra Purī became an invalid and was completely unable to move, and Īśvara Purī so completely engaged himself in his service that he personally cleaned up his stool and urine. Always chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and reminding Śrī Mādhavendra Purī about the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa in the last stage of his life, Īśvara Purī gave the best service among his disciples. Thus Mādhavendra Purī, being very pleased with him, blessed him, saying, 'My dear boy, I can only pray to Kṛṣṇa that He will be pleased with you.' Thus Īśvara Purī, by the grace of his spiritual master, Śrī Mādhavendra Purī, became a great devotee in the ocean of love of Godhead." Śrīla Viśvanātha Cakravartī states in his Gurv-aṣṭaka prayer, yasya prasādād bhagavat-prasādo yasyāprasādān na gatiḥ kuto 'pi: "By the mercy of the spiritual master one is blessed by the mercy of Kṛṣṇa. Without the grace of the spiritual master one cannot make any advancement." It is by the mercy of the spiritual master that one becomes perfect, as vividly exemplified here. A Vaiṣṇava is always protected by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but if he appears to be an invalid, this gives a chance to his disciples to serve him. Īśvara Purī pleased his spiritual master by service, and by the blessings of his spiritual master he became such a great personality that Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted him as His spiritual master.

Śrīla Īśvara Purī was the spiritual master of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, but before initiating Lord Caitanya he went to Navadvīpa and lived for a few months in the house of Gopīnātha Ācārya. At that time Lord Caitanya became acquainted with him, and it is understood that he served Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by reciting his book, Kṛṣṇa-līlāmṛta. This is explained in Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, Chapter Eleven.

To teach others by example how to be a faithful disciple of one's spiritual master, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, visited the birthplace of Īśvara Purī at Kāmarhaṭṭa and collected some earth from his birthsite. This He kept very carefully, and He used to eat a small portion of it daily. This is stated in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, Chapter Seventeen. It has now become customary for devotees, following the example of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, to go there and collect some earth from that place.

TRANSLATION

Paramānanda Purī, Keśava Bhāratī, Brahmānanda Purī and Brahmānanda Bhāratī, Śrī Viṣṇu Purī, Keśava Purī, Kṛṣṇānanda Purī, Śrī Nṛsiṁha Tīrtha and Sukhānanda Purī-these nine sannyāsī roots all sprouted from the trunk of the tree. Thus the tree stood steadfastly on the strength of these nine roots.

PURPORT

Paramānanda Purī: Paramānanda Purī belonged to a brāhmaṇa family of the Trihut district in Uttara Pradesh. Mādhavendra Purī was his spiritual master. In relationship with Mādhavendra Purī, Paramānanda Purī was very dear to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā, there is the following statement:

sannyāsīra madhye īśvarera priya-pātra āra nāhi eka purī gosāñi se mātra dāmodara-svarūpa paramānanda-purī prabhura sannyāse kare daṇḍera grahaṇa purī dhyāna-para dāmodarera kīrtana yata-prīti īśvarera purī-gosāñire dāmodara-svarūpereo tata prīti kare

”Among his sannyāsī disciples, Īśvara Purī and Paramānanda Purī were very dear to Mādhavendra Purī. Thus Paramānanda Purī, like Svarūpa Dāmodara, who was also a sannyāsī, was very dear to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and was His constant associate. When Lord Caitanya accepted the renounced order, Paramānanda Purī offered Him the daṇḍa. Paramānanda Purī was always engaged in meditation, and Śrī Svarūpa was always engaged in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. As Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu offered full respect to His spiritual master, Īśvara Purī, He similarly respected Paramānanda Purī and Svarūpa Dāmodara.” It is described in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā, Chapter Three, that when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu first saw Paramānanda Purī He made the following statement:

āji dhanya locana, saphala āji janma saphala āmāra āji haila sarva-dharma prabhu bale āji mora saphala sannyāsa āji mādhavendra more ha-ilā prakāśa

”My eyes, My mind, My religious activities and My acceptance of the sannyāsa order have now all become perfect because today Mādhavendra Purī is manifest before Me in the form of Paramānanda Purī.” The Caitanya-bhāgavata further states:

kathokṣaṇe anyo ’nye karena praṇāma paramānanda-purī caitanyera priya-dhāma

”Thus Śri Caitanya Mahāprabhu exchanged respectful obeisances with Paramānanda Purī, who was very dear to Him.” Paramānanda Purī established a small monastery behind the western side of the Jagannātha temple, where he had a well dug to supply water. The water, however, was bitter, and therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu prayed to Lord Jagannātha to allow Ganges water to come into the well to make it sweet. When Lord Jagannātha granted the request, Lord Caitanya told all the devotees that from that day hence, the water of Paramānanda Purī’s well should be celebrated as Ganges water, for any devotee who would drink it or bathe in it would certainly get the same benefit as that derived from drinking or bathing in the waters of the Ganges. Such a person would certainly develop pure love of Godhead. It is stated in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā:

prabhu bale āmi ye āchiye pṛthivīte niścaya-i jāniha purī-gosāñira prīte

”Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to say: ’I am living in this world only on account of the excellent behavior of Śrī Paramānanda Purī.’ ” The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 118, states, purī śrī-paramānando ya āsīd uddhavaḥ purā. ”Paramānanda Purī is none other than Uddhava.” Uddhava was Lord Kṛṣṇa’s friend and uncle, and in caitanya-līlā the same Uddhava became the friend of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His uncle in terms of their relationship in the disciplic succession.

Keśava Bhāratī: The Sarasvatī, Bhāratī and Purī sampradāyas belong to the Śṛṅgerī Maṭha in South India, and Śrī Keśava Bhāratī, who at that time was situated in a monastery in Katwa, belonged to the Bhāratī-sampradāya. According to some authoritative opinions, although Keśava Bhāratī belonged to the Śaṅkara-sampradāya, he had formerly been initiated by a Vaiṣṇava. He is said to have been a Vaiṣṇava on account of having been initiated by Mādhavendra Purī, for some say that he took sannyāsa from Mādhavendra Purī. The temple and Deity worship started by Keśava Bhāratī are still existing in the village known as Khāṭundi, which is under the postal jurisdiction of Kāndarā in the district of Burdwan. According to the managers of that maṭha, the priests are descendants of Keśava Bhāratī, and some say that the worshipers of the Deity are descendants of the sons of Keśava Bhāratī. In his householder life he had two sons, Niśāpati and Ūṣāpati, and a brāhmaṇa of the name Śrī Nakaḍicandra Vidyāratna, who was a member of the family of Niśāpati, was the priest in charge at the time that Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī visited this temple. According to some, the priests of the temple belong to the family of Keśava Bhāratī’s brother. Still another opinion is that they descend from Mādhava Bhāratī, who was another disciple of Keśava Bhāratī’s. Mādhava Bhāratī’s disciple Balabhadra, who also later became a sannyāsī of the Bhāratī-sampradāya, had two sons in his family life, named Madana and Gopāla. Madana, whose family's surname was Bhāratī, lived in the village of Āuriyā, and Gopāla, whose family's surname was Brahmacārī, lived in the village of Denduḍa. There are still many living descendants of both families.

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 52, it is said:

mathurāyāṁ yajña-sūtraṁ purā kṛṣṇāya yo muniḥ dadau sāndīpaniḥ so 'bhūd adya keśava-bhāratī

"Sāndīpani Muni, who formerly offered the sacred thread to Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, later became Keśava Bhāratī." It is he who offered sannyāsa to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. There is another statement from the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 117: iti kecit prabhāṣante 'krūraḥ keśava-bhāratī. "According to some authoritative opinions, Keśava Bhāratī is an incarnation of Akrūra." Keśava Bhāratī offered the sannyāsa order to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in the year 1432 śakābda (A.D. 1510) in Katwa. This is stated in the Vaiṣṇava-mañjuṣā, Part Two.

Brahmānanda Purī: Śrī Brahmānanda Purī was one of the associates of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu while He was performing kīrtana in Navadvīpa, and he also joined Lord Caitanya in Jagannātha Purī. We may note in this connection that the name Brahmānanda is accepted not only by Māyāvādī sannyāsīs but by Vaiṣṇava sannyāsīs also. One of our foolish Godbrothers criticized our sannyāsī Brahmānanda Svāmī, saying that this was a Māyāvādī name. The foolish man did not know that Brahmānanda does not always refer to the impersonal. Parabrahman, the Supreme Brahman, is Kṛṣṇa. A devotee of Kṛṣṇa can therefore also be called Brahmānanda; this is evident from the fact that Brahmānanda Purī was one of the chief sannyāsī associates of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Brahmananda Bhāratī: Brahmānanda Bhāratī went to see Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha-dhāma. At that time he used to wear only a deerskin to cover himself, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu indirectly indicated that He did not like this deerskin covering. Brahmānanda Bhāratī therefore gave it up and accepted a loincloth of saffron color, as used by Vaiṣṇava sannyāsīs. For some time he lived with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī.

TEXT 16

madhya-mūla paramānanda purī mahā-dhīra aṣṭa dike aṣṭa mūla vṛkṣa kaila sthira madhya-mūla-the middle root; paramānanda purī-of the name Paramānanda Purī; mahā-dhīra-most sober; aṣṭa dike-in the eight directions; aṣṭa mūla-eight roots; vṛkṣa-the tree; kaila sthira-fixed.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

With the sober and grave Paramānanda Purī as the central root and the other eight roots in the eight directions, the tree of Caitanya Mahāprabhu stood firmly.

TEXT 17

skandhera upare bahu śākhā upajila upari upari śākhā asaṅkhya ha-ila

SYNONYMS

skandhera upare-upon the trunk; bahu śākhā-many branches; upajila-grew; upari upari-over and above them; śākhā-other branches; asaṅkhya-innumerable; ha-ila-fructified.

TRANSLATION

From the trunk grew many branches and above them innumerable others.

TEXT 18

viśa viśa śākhā kari' eka eka maṇḍala mahā-mahā-śākhā chāila brahmāṇḍa sakala

SYNONYMS

viśa viśa-twenty, twenty; śākhā-branches; kari'-making a group; eka eka maṇḍala-form a society; mahā-mahā-śākhā-big branches; chāila-covered; brahmāṇḍa-the whole universe; sakala-all.

TRANSLATION

Thus the branches of the Caitanya tree formed a cluster or society, with great branches covering all the universe.

PURPORT

Our International Society for Krishna Consciousness is one of the branches of the Caitanya tree.

TEXT 19

ekaika śākhāte upaśākhā śata śata yata upajila śākhā ke gaṇibe kata

SYNONYMS

ekaika-each branch; śākhāte-in the branch; upaśākhā-subbranches; śata śata-hundreds and hundreds; yata-all; upajila-grew; śākhā-branches; ke-who; gaṇibe-can count; kata-how much.

TRANSLATION

From each branch grew many hundreds of subbranches. No one can count how many branches thus grew.

TEXT 20

mukhya mukhya śākhā-gaṇera nāma agaṇana āge ta' kariba, śuna vṛkṣera varṇana

SYNONYMS

mukhya mukhya-the foremost of them all; śākhā-gaṇera-of the branches; nāma-name; agaṇana-uncountable; āge-subsequently; ta' kariba-I shall do; śuna-please hear; vṛkṣera varṇana-the description of the Caitanya tree.

TRANSLATION

I shall try to name the foremost of the innumerable branches. Please hear the description of the Caitanya tree.

TEXT 21

vṛkṣera upare śākhā haila dui skandha eka 'advaita' nāma, āra 'nityānanda'

SYNONYMS

vṛkṣera-of the tree; upare-on the top; śākhā-branch; haila-became; dui-two; skandha-trunks; eka-one; advaita-Śrī Advaita Prabhu; nāma-of the name; āra-and; nityānanda-of the name Nityānanda Prabhu.

TRANSLATION

At the top of the tree the trunk branched into two. One trunk was named Śrī Advaita Prabhu and the other Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu.

TEXT 22

sei dui-skandhe bahu śākhā upajila tāra upaśākhā-gaṇe jagat chāila

SYNONYMS

sei-that; dui-skandhe-in two trunks; bahu-many; śākhā-branches; upajila-grew; tāra-of them; upaśākhā-gaṇe-subbranches; jagat-the whole world; chāila-covered.

TRANSLATION

From these two trunks grew many branches and subbranches that covered the entire world.

TEXT 23

baḍa śākhā, upaśākhā, tāra upaśākhā yata upajila tāra ke karibe lekhā

SYNONYMS

baḍa śākhā-the big branches; upaśākhā-subbranches; tāra-their; upaśākhā-subbranches; yata-all that; upajila-grew; tāra-of them; ke-who; karibe-can count; lekhā-or write.

TRANSLATION

These branches and subbranches and their subbranches became so numerous that no one can actually write about them.

TEXT 24

śiṣya, praśiṣya, āra upaśiṣya-gaṇa jagat vyāpila tāra nāhika gaṇana

SYNONYMS

śiṣya-disciples; praśiṣya-granddisciples; ara-and; upaśiṣya-gaṇa-admirers; jagat-the whole world; vyāpila-spread; tāra-of that; nāhika-there is none; gaṇana-enumeration.

TRANSLATION

Thus the disciples and the granddisciples and their admirers spread throughout the entire world, and it is not possible to enumerate them all.

TEXT 25

uḍumbara-vṛkṣa yena phale sarva aṅge ei mata bhakti-vṛkṣe sarvatra phala lāge uḍumbara-vṛkṣa-a big fig tree; yena-as if; phale-grew fruits; sarva-all; aṅge-parts of the body; ei-this; mata-like; bhakti-vṛkṣe-in the tree of devotional service; sarvatra-all over; phala-fruit; lāge-appears.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

As a big fig tree bears fruits all over its body, each part of the tree of devotional service bore fruit.

PURPORT

This tree of devotional service is not of this material world. It grows in the spiritual world, where there is no distinction between one part of the body and another. It is something like a tree of sugar, for whichever part of such a tree one tastes, it is always sweet. The tree of bhakti has varieties of branches, leaves and fruits, but they are all meant for the service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. There are nine different processes of devotional service (śravaṇaṁ kīrtanaṁ viṣṇoḥ smaraṇaṁ pāda-sevanam arcanaṁ vandanaṁ dāsyaṁ sakhyam ātma-nivedanam), but all of them are meant only for the service of the Supreme Lord. Therefore whether one hears, chants, remembers or worships, his activities will yield the same result. Which one of these processes will be the most suitable for a particular devotee depends upon his taste.

TEXT 26

mūla-skandhera śākhā āra upaśākhā-gaṇe lāgilā ye prema-phala,–amṛtake jine

SYNONYMS

mūla-skandhera-of the chief trunk; śākhā-branches; āra-and; upaśākhā-gaṇe-subbranches; lāgilā-as it grew; ye-that; prema-phala-the fruit of love; amṛtake jine-such a fruit conquers nectar.

TRANSLATION

Since Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu was the original trunk, the taste of the fruits that grew on the branches and subbranches surpassed the taste of nectar.

TEXT 27

pākila ye prema-phala amṛta-madhura vilāya caitanya-mālī, nāhi laya mūla

SYNONYMS

pākila-ripened; ye-that; prema-phala-the fruit of love of Godhead; amṛta-nectarean; madhura-sweet; vilāya-distributes; caitanya-mālī-the gardener, Lord Caitanya; nāhi-does not; laya-take; mūla-price.

TRANSLATION

The fruits ripened and became sweet and nectarean. The gardener, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, distributed them without asking any price.

TEXT 28

tri-jagate yata āche dhana-ratnamaṇi eka-phalera mūlya kari' tāhā nāhi gaṇi tri-jagate-in the three worlds; yata-as much as; āche-there is; dhana-ratna-maṇi-wealth and riches; eka-phalera-one fruit's; mūlya-price; kari'-calculated; tāhā-that; nāhi-do not; gaṇi-count.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

All the wealth in the three worlds cannot equal the value of one such nectarean fruit of devotional service.

TEXT 29

māge vā nā māge keha, pātra vā apātra ihāra vicāra nāhi jāne, deya mātra

SYNONYMS

māge-begs; vā-or; nā-not; māge-begs; keha-anyone; pātra-candidate; vā-or; apātra-not a candidate; ihāra-of this; vicāra-consideration; nāhi-does not; jāne-know; deya-gives; mātra-only.

TRANSLATION

Not considering who asked for it and who did not, nor who was fit and who unfit to receive it, Caitanya Mahāprabhu distributed the fruit of devotional service.

PURPORT

This is the sum and substance of Lord Caitanya's saṅkīrtana movement. There is no distinction made between those who are fit and those who are not fit to hear or take part in the saṅkīrtana movement. It should therefore be preached without discrimination. The only purpose of the preachers of the saṅkīrtana movement must be to go on preaching without restriction. That is the way in which Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu introduced this saṅkīrtana movement to the world.

TEXT 30

añjali añjali bhari' phele caturdiśe daridra kuḍāñā khāya, mālākāra hāse

SYNONYMS

añjali-handful; añjali-handful; bhari'-filling; phele-distributes; catur-diśe-in all directions; daridra-poor; kuḍāñā-picking up; khāya-eats; mālā-kāra-the gardener; hāse-smiles.

TRANSLATION

The transcendental gardener, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, distributed handful after handful of fruit in all directions, and when the poor hungry people ate the fruit, the gardener smiled with great pleasure.

TEXT 31

mālākāra kahe,–śuna, vṛkṣa-parivāra mūlaśākhā-upaśākhā yateka prakāra

SYNONYMS

mālā-kāra-the gardener; kahe-said; śuna-hear; vṛkṣa-parivāra-the family of this transcendental tree of devotional service; mūla-śākhā-chief branches; upaśākhā-subbranches; yateka-as many; prakāra-varieties.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya thus addressed the multifarious varieties of branches and subbranches of the tree of devotional service:

TEXT 32

alaukika vṛkṣa kare sarvendriya-karma sthāvara ha-iyā dhare jaṅgamera dharma

SYNONYMS

alaukika-transcendental; vṛkṣa-tree; kare-does; sarva-indriya-all senses; karma-activities; sthāvara-immovable; ha-iyā-becoming; dhare-accepts; jaṅgamera-of the movable; dharma-activities.

TRANSLATION

"Since the tree of devotional service is transcendental, every one of its parts can perform the action of all the others. Although a tree is supposed to be immovable, this tree nevertheless moves.

PURPORT

It is our experience in the material world that trees stand in one place, but in the spiritual world a tree can go from one place to another. Therefore everything in the spiritual world is called alaukika, uncommon or transcendental. Another feature of such a tree is that it can act universally. In the material world the roots of a tree go deep within the earth to gather food, but in the spiritual world the twigs, branches and leaves of the upper portion of the tree can act like the roots.

TEXT 33

e vṛkṣera aṅga haya saba sa-cetana bāḍiyā vyāpila sabe sakala bhuvana

SYNONYMS

e-this; vṛkṣera-of the Caitanya tree; aṅga-parts; haya-are; saba-all; sa-cetana-spiritually cognizant; bāḍiyā-increasing; vyāpila-overflooded; sabe-all the parts; sakala-all; bhuvana-the world.

TRANSLATION

”All the parts of this tree are spiritually cognizant, and thus as they grow up they spread all over the world.

TEXT 34

ekalā mālākāra āmi kāhāṅ kāhāṅ yāba ekalā vā kata phala pāḍiyā vilāba

SYNONYMS

ekalā-alone; mālā-kāra-gardener; āmi-I am; kāhāṅ-where; kāhāṅ-where; yāba-shall I go; ekalā-alone; vā-or; kata-how many; phala-fruits; pāḍiyā-picking; vilāba-shall distribute.

TRANSLATION

”I am the only gardener. How many places can I go? How many fruits can I pick and distribute?

PURPORT

Here Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu indicates that the distribution of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra should be performed by combined forces. Although He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, He laments, ”How can I act alone? How can I alone pick the fruit and distribute it all over the world?” This indicates that all classes of devotees should combine to distribute the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra without consideration of the time, place or situation.

TEXT 35

ekalā uṭhāñā dite haya pariśrama keha pāya, keha nā pāya, rahe mane bhrama

SYNONYMS

ekalā-alone; uṭhāñā-picking up; dite-to give; haya-it becomes; pariśrama-too laborious; keha-someone; pāya-does get; keha-someone; nā-not; pāya-does get; rahe-remains; mane-in the mind; bhrama-suspicion.

TRANSLATION

”It would certainly be a very laborious task to pick the fruits and distribute them alone, and still I suspect that some would receive them and others would not.

TEXT 36

ataeva āmi ājñā diluṅ sabākāre yāhāṅ tāhāṅ prema-phala deha’ yāre tāre ataeva-therefore; āmi-I; ājñā-order; diluṅ-give; sabākāre-to everyone; yāhāṅ-wherever; tāhāṅ-everywhere; prema-phala-the fruit of love of Godhead; deha’-distribute; yāre-anyone; tāre-everyone.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Therefore I order every man within this universe to accept this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and distribute it everywhere.

PURPORT

In this connection there is a song sung by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura:

enechi auṣadhi māyā nāśibāra lāgi’ hari-nāma-mahā-mantra lao tumi māgi’ bhakativinoda prabhu-caraṇe paḍiyā sei hari-nāma-mantra laila māgiyā

The saṅkīrtana movement has been introduced by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu just to dispel the illusion of māyā, by which everyone in this material world thinks himself to be a product of matter and therefore to have many duties pertaining to the body. Actually, the living entity is not his material body: he is a spirit soul. He has a spiritual need to be eternally blissful and full of knowledge, but unfortunately he identifies himself with the body, sometimes as a human being, sometimes as an animal, sometimes a tree, sometimes an aquatic, sometimes a demigod, and so on. Thus with each change of body he develops a different type of consciousness with different types of activity and thus becomes increasingly entangled in material existence, transmigrating perpetually from one body to another. Under the spell of māyā, or illusion, he does not consider the past or future but is simply satisfied with the short life span that he has gotten for the present. To eradicate this illusion, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has brought the saṅkīrtana movement, and He requests everyone to accept and distribute it. A person who is actually a follower of Śrī Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura must immediately accept the request of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu by offering respectful obeisances unto His lotus feet and thus beg from Him the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. If one is fortunate enough to beg from the Lord this Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, his life is successful.

TEXT 37

ekalā mālākāra āmi kata phala khāba nā diyā vā ei phala āra ki kariba

SYNONYMS

ekalā-alone; mālā-kāra-gardener; āmi-I; kata-how many; phala-fruits; khāba-eat; nā-without; diyā-giving; vā-or; ei-this; phala-fruits; āra-else; ki-what; kariba-shall I do.

TRANSLATION

”I am the only gardener. If I do not distribute these fruits, what shall I do with them? How many fruits can I alone eat?

PURPORT

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu produced so many fruits of devotional service that they must be distributed all over the world; otherwise, how could He alone relish and taste each and every fruit? The original reason that Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa descended as Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was to understand Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī’s love for Kṛṣṇa and to taste that love. The fruits of the tree of devotional service were innumerable, and therefore He wanted to distribute them unrestrictedly to everyone. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī therefore writes:

anarpita-carīṁ cirāt karuṇayāvatīrṇaḥ kalau samarpayitum unnatojjvala-rasāṁ sva-bhakti-śriyam hariḥ puraṭa-sundara-dyuti-kadamba-sandīpitaḥ sadā hṛdaya-kandare sphuratu vaḥ śacī-nandanaḥ

There were many precious incarnations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but none were so generous, kind and magnanimous as Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, for He distributed the most confidential aspect of devotional service, namely, the conjugal love of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. Therefore Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī Prabhupāda desires that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu live perpetually in the hearts of all devotees, for thus they can understand and relish the loving affairs of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 38

ātma-icchāmṛte vṛkṣa siñci nirantara tāhāte asaṅkhya phala vṛkṣera upara

SYNONYMS

ātma-self; icchā-amṛte-by the nectar of the will; vṛkṣa-the tree; siñci-sprinkle; nirantara-constantly; tāhāte-there; asaṅkhya-unlimited; phala-fruits; vṛkṣera-on the tree; upara-upper.

TRANSLATION

”By the transcendental desire of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, water has been sprinkled all over the tree, and thus there are innumerable fruits of love of Godhead.

PURPORT

God is unlimited, and His desires are also unlimited. This example of unlimited fruits is factually appropriate even within the material context, for with the good will of the Supreme Personality of Godhead there can be enough fruits, grains and other foodstuffs produced so that all the people in the world could not finish them, even if they ate ten times their capacity. In this material world there is actually no scarcity of anything but Kṛṣṇa consciousness. If people become Kṛṣṇa conscious, by the transcendental will of the Supreme Personality of Godhead there will be enough foodstuffs produced so that people will have no economic problems at all. One can very easily understand this fact. The production of fruits and flowers depends not upon our will but the supreme will of the Personality of Godhead. If He is pleased, He can supply enough fruits, flowers, etc., but if people are atheistic and godless, nature, by His will, restricts the supply of food. For example, in several provinces in India, especially Maharashtra, Uttar Pradesh and other adjoining states, there is sometimes a great scarcity of foodstuffs due to lack of rainfall. So-called scientists and economists cannot do anything about this. Therefore, to solve all problems, one must seek the good will of the Supreme Personality of Godhead by becoming Kṛṣṇa conscious and worshiping Him regularly in devotional service.

TEXT 39

ataeva saba phala deha’ yāre tāre khāiyā ha-uk loka ajara amare

SYNONYMS

ataeva-therefore; saba-all; phala-fruits; deha’-distribute; yāre tāre-to everyone and anyone; khāiyā-eating; ha-uk-let them become; loka-all people; ajara-without old age; amare-without death.

TRANSLATION

”Distribute this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement all over the world. Let people eat these fruits and ultimately become free from old age and death.

PURPORT

The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement introduced by Lord Caitanya is extremely important because one who takes to it becomes eternal, being freed from birth, death and old age. People do not recognize that the real distresses in life are the four principles of birth, death, old age and disease. They are so foolish that they resign themselves to these four miseries, not knowing the transcendental remedy of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, one can become free from all misery, but because they are enchanted by the illusory energy, people do not take this movement seriously. Therefore those who are actually servants of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu must seriously distribute this movement all over the world to render the greatest benefit to human society. Of course, animals and other lower species are not capable of understanding this movement, but if even a small number of living beings take it seriously, by their chanting loudly, all living entities, including even trees, animals and other lower species, will be benefited. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu inquired from Haridāsa Ṭhākura how he was to benefit living entities other than humans, Śrīla Haridāsa Ṭhākura replied that the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is so potent that if it is chanted loudly, everyone will benefit, including the lower species of life.

SYNONYMS

jagat vyāpiyā-spreading all over the world; mora-My; habe-there will be; puṇya-pious; khyāti-reputation; sukhī-happy; ha-iyā-becoming; loka-all the people; mora-My; gāhibeka-glorify; kīrti-reputation.

TRANSLATION

”If the fruits are distributed all over the world, My reputation as a pious man will be known everywhere, and thus all people will glorify My name with great pleasure.

PURPORT

This prediction of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s is now actually coming to pass. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is being distributed all over the world through the chanting of the holy name of the Lord, the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, and people who were leading confused, chaotic lives are now feeling transcendental happiness. They are finding peace in saṅkīrtana, and therefore they are acknowledging the supreme benefit of this movement. This is the blessing of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. His prediction is now factually being fulfilled, and those who are sober and conscientious are appreciating the value of this great movement.

TRANSLATION

"One who has taken his birth as a human being in the land of India [Bhārata-varṣa] should make his life successful and work for the benefit of all other people.

PURPORT

The magnanimity of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is expressed in this very important verse. Although He was born in Bengal and Bengalis therefore have a special duty toward Him, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is addressing not only Bengalis but all the inhabitants of India. It is in the land of India that actual human civilization can be developed.

Human life is especially meant for God realization, as stated in the Vedānta-sūtra: athāto brahma-jijñāsā. Anyone who takes birth in the land of India (Bhārata-varṣa) has the special privilege of being able to take advantage of the instruction and guidance of the Vedic civilization. He automatically receives the basic principles of spiritual life, for 99.9% of the Indian people, even simple village farmers and others who are neither educated nor sophisticated, believe in the transmigration of the soul, believe in past and future lives, believe in God and naturally want to worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead or His representative. These ideas are the natural inheritance of a person born in India. India has many holy places of pilgrimage, such as Gayā, Benares, Mathurā, Prayāga, Vṛndāvana, Haridvāra, Rāmeśvaram and Jagannātha Purī, and still people go there by the hundreds and thousands. Although the present leaders of India are influencing the people not to believe in God, not to believe in a next life and not to believe in a distinction between pious and impious life, and they are teaching them how to drink wine, eat meat and become supposedly civilized, people are nevertheless afraid of the four activities of sinful life-namely, illicit sex, meat-eating, intoxication and gambling-and whenever there is a religious festival, they gather together by the thousands. We have actual experience of this. Whenever the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement holds a saṅkīrtana festival in a big city like Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Ahmedabad or Hyderabad, thousands of people come to hear. Sometimes we speak in English, but even though most people do not understand English, they nevertheless come to hear us. Even when imitation incarnations of Godhead speak, people gather in the thousands, for everyone who is born in the land of India has a natural spiritual inclination and is taught the basic principles of spiritual life; they merely need to be a little more educated in the Vedic principles. Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, janma sārthaka kari' kara para-upakāra: if an Indian is educated in the Vedic principles, he is able to perform the most beneficial welfare activity for the entire world.

At present, for want of Kṛṣṇa consciousness, or God consciousness, the entire world is in darkness, having been covered by the four principles of sinful life-meat-eating, illicit sex, gambling and intoxication. Therefore there is a need for vigorous propaganda to educate people to refrain from sinful activities. This will bring peace and prosperity; the rogues, thieves and debauchees will naturally decrease in number, and all of human society will be God conscious.

The practical effect of our spreading the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement all over the world is that now the most degraded debauchees are becoming the most elevated saints. This is only one Indian's humble service to the world. If all Indians had taken to this path, as advised by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, India would have given a unique gift to the world, and thus India would have been glorified. Now, however, India is known as a poverty-stricken country, and whenever anyone from America or another opulent country goes to India, he sees many people lying by the footpaths for whom there are not even provisions for two meals a day. There are also institutions collecting money from all parts of the world in the name of welfare activities for poverty-stricken people, but they are spending it for their own sense gratification. Now, on the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement has been started, and people are benefiting from this movement. Therefore it is now the duty of the leading men of India to consider the importance of this movement and train many Indians to go outside of India to preach this cult. People will accept it, there will be cooperation among the Indian people and among the other people of the world, and the mission of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu will then be fulfilled. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu will then be glorified all over the world, and people will naturally be happy, peaceful and prosperous, not only in this life but also in the next, for as stated in the Bhagavad-gītā, anyone who understands Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, will very easily get salvation, or freedom from the repetition of birth and death, and go back home, back to Godhead. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore requests every Indian to become a preacher of His cult to save the world from disastrous confusion.

This is not only the duty of Indians but the duty of everyone, and we are very happy that American and European boys and girls are seriously cooperating with this movement. One should know definitely that the best welfare activity for all of human society is to awaken man's God consciousness, or Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Therefore everyone should help this great movement. This is confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Tenth Canto, Twenty-second Chapter, verse 35, which is next quoted in Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

SYNONYMS

etāvat-up to this; janma-of birth; sāphalyam-perfection; dehinām-of every living being; iha-in this world; dehiṣu-toward those who are embodied; prāṇaiḥ-by life; arthaiḥ-by wealth; dhiyā-by intelligence; vācā-by words; śreyaḥ-eternal good fortune; ācaraṇam-acting practically; sadā-always.

TRANSLATION

"It is the duty of every living being to perform welfare activities for the benefit of others with his life, wealth, intelligence and words."

PURPORT

There are two kinds of general activities-śreyas, or activities which are ultimately beneficial and auspicious, and preyas, or those which are immediately beneficial and auspicious. For example, children are fond of playing. They don't want to go to school to receive an education, and they think that to play all day and night and enjoy with their friends is the aim of life. Even in the transcendental life of Lord Kṛṣṇa, we find that when He was a child He was very fond of playing with His friends of the same age, the cowherd boys. He would not even go home to take His dinner. Mother Yaśodā would have to come out to induce Him to come home. Thus it is a child's nature to engage all day and night in playing, not caring even for his health and other important concerns. This is an example of preyas, or immediately beneficial activities. But there are also śreyas, or activities which are ultimately auspicious. According to Vedic civilization, a human being must be God conscious. He should understand what God is, what this material world is, who he is, and what their interrelationships are. This is called śreyas, or ultimately auspicious activity.

In this verse of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam it is said that one should be interested in śreyas. To achieve the ultimate goal of śreyas, or good fortune, one should engage everything, including his life, wealth and words, not only for himself but for others also. However, unless one is interested in śreyas in his own life, he cannot preach of śreyas for the benefit of others.

This verse cited by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu applies to human beings, not to animals. As indicated in the previous verse by the words manuṣya-janma, these injunctions are for human beings. Unfortunately, human beings, although they have the bodies of men, are becoming less than animals in their behavior. This is the fault of modern education. Modern educators do not know the aim of human life; they are simply concerned with how to develop the economic condition of their countries or of human society. This is also necessary; the Vedic civilization considers all aspects of human life, including dharma (religion), artha (economic development), kāma (sense gratification) and mokṣa (liberation). But humanity's first concern should be religion. To be religious, one must abide by the orders of God, but unfortunately people in this age have rejected religion, and they are busy in economic development. Therefore they will adopt any means to get money. For economic development one does not need to get money by hook or by crook; one needs only sufficient money to maintain his body and soul. However, because modern economic development is going on with no religious background, people have become lusty, greedy and mad after money. They are simply developing the qualities of rajas (passion) and tamas (ignorance), neglecting the other quality of nature, sattva (goodness), and the brahminical qualifications. Therefore the entire society is in chaos.

The Bhāgavatam says that it is the duty of an advanced human being to act in such a way as to facilitate human society's attainment of the ultimate goal of life. There is a similar verse in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, Part Three, Chapter Twelve, verse 45, which is quoted in this chapter of Caitanya-caritāmṛta as verse 43.

prāṇinām upakārāya

SYNONYMS

prāṇinām-of all living entities; upakārāya-for the benefit; yat-whichever; eva-certainly; iha-in this world or in this life; paratra-in the next life; ca-and; karmaṇā-by work; manasā-by the mind; vācā-by words; tat-that; eva-certainly; mati-mān-an intelligent man; bhajet-must act.

TRANSLATION

" 'By his work, thoughts and words, an intelligent man must perform actions which will be beneficial for all living entities in this life and in the next.'

PURPORT

Unfortunately, people in general do not know what is to take place in the next life. To prepare oneself for his next life is common sense, and it is a principle of the Vedic civilization, but presently people throughout the world do not believe in a next life. Even influential professors and other educators say that as soon as the body is finished, everything is finished. This atheistic philosophy is killing human civilization. People are irresponsibly performing all sorts of sinful activities, and thus the privilege of the human life is being taken away by the educational propaganda of the so-called leaders. Actually it is a fact that this life is meant for preparation for the next life; by evolution one has come through many species, or forms, and this human form of life is an opportunity to promote oneself to a better life. This is explained in the Bhagavad-gītā (9.25):

yānti deva-vratā devān pitṝn yānti pitṛ-vratāḥ bhūtāni yānti bhūtejyā yānti mad-yājino 'pi mām

"Those who worship the demigods will take birth among the demigods;those who worship ghosts and spirits will take birth among such beings; those who worship ancestors go to the ancestors; and those who worship Me will live with Me." Therefore, one may promote himself to the higher planetary systems, which are the residence of the demigods, one can promote himself to the Pitṛloka, one can remain on earth, or one can also go back home, back to Godhead. This is further confirmed elsewhere in the Bhagavad-gītā (4.9): tyaktvā dehaṁ punar janma naiti mām eti so 'rjuna. After giving up the body, one who knows Kṛṣṇa in truth does not come back again to this world to accept a material body, but he goes back home, back to Godhead. This knowledge is in the śāstras, and people should be given the opportunity to understand it. Even if one is not able to go back to Godhead in one life, the Vedic civilization at least gives one the opportunity to be promoted to the higher planetary systems, where the demigods live, and not glide down again to animal life. At present, people do not understand this knowledge, although it constitutes a great science, for they are uneducated and trained not to accept it. This is the horrible condition of modern human society. As such, the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is the only hope to direct the attention of intelligent men to a greater benefit in life.

TEXT 44

mālī manuṣya āmāra nāhi rājya-dhana phala-phula diyā kari' puṇya upārjana

SYNONYMS

mālī-gardener; manuṣya-man; āmāra-My; nāhi-there is none; rājya-kingdom; dhana-wealth; phala-fruit; phula-flowers; diyā-giving; kari'-do; puṇya-piety; upārjana-achievement.

TRANSLATION

"I am merely a gardener. I have neither a kingdom nor very great riches. I simply have some fruits and flowers that I wish to utilize to achieve piety in My life.

PURPORT

In performing welfare activities for human society, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu presents Himself as being not very rich, thus indicating that a man need not be rich or opulent to act for the welfare of humanity. Sometimes rich men are very proud that they can perform beneficial activities for human society whereas others cannot. A practical example is that when there is a scarcity of food in India on account of meager rainfall, some members of the richer class very proudly distribute foodstuffs, making huge arrangements with the help of the government, as if merely by such activities people will be benefited. Suppose there were no food grains. How would the rich men distribute food? Production of grains is completely in the hands of God. If there were no rain, there would be no grains, and these so-called rich men would be unable to distribute grains to the people.

The real purpose of life, therefore, is to satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī describes in his Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu that devotional service is so exalted that it is beneficial and auspicious for every man. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu also declared that to propagate the bhakti cult of devotional service in human society, one does not need to be very rich. Anyone can do it and thus render the highest benefit to humanity if he knows the art. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu takes the part of a gardener because although a gardener is naturally not a very rich man, he has some fruits and flowers. Any man can collect some fruits and flowers and satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead in devotional service, as the Lord recommends in the Bhagavad-gītā (9.26):-

yo me bhaktyā prayacchati
tad ahaṁ bhakty-upahṛtam
aśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ

One cannot satisfy the Supreme Lord by his riches, wealth or opulent position, but anyone can collect a little fruit or a flower and offer it to the Lord. The Lord says that if one brings such an offering in devotion, He will accept it and eat it. When Kṛṣṇa eats, the entire world becomes satisfied. There is a story in the Mahābhārata illustrating how by Kṛṣṇa's eating, the sixty thousands disciples of Durvāsā Muni were all satisfied. Therefore it is a fact that if by our life (prāṇaiḥ), by our wealth (arthaiḥ), by our intelligence (dhiyā) or by our words (vācā) we can satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead, naturally the entire world will become happy. Therefore our main duty is to satisfy the Supreme Godhead by our actions, our money and our words. This is very simple. Even if one does not have money, he can preach the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra to everyone. One can go everywhere, to every home, and request everyone to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Thus the entire world situation will become very happy and peaceful.

TEXT 45

mālī hañā vṛkṣa ha-ilāṅ ei ta' icchāte sarva-prāṇīra upakāra haya vṛkṣa haite

SYNONYMS

mālī hañā-although I am the gardener; vṛkṣa ha-ilāṅ-I am also the tree; ei ta'-this is; icchāte-by My will; sarva-prāṇīra-of all living entities; upakāra-welfare; haya-there is; vṛkṣa-the tree; haite-from.

TRANSLATION

"Although I am acting as a gardener, I also want to be the tree, for thus I can bestow benefit upon all.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the most benevolent personality in human society because His only desire is to make people happy. His saṅkīrtana movement is especially meant for the purpose of making people happy. He wanted to become the tree Himself because a tree is supposed to be the most benevolent living entity. In the following verse, which is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.22.33), Kṛṣṇa Himself highly praised the existence of a tree.

TEXT 46

aho eṣāṁ varaṁ janma sarva-prāṇy-upajīvinām su-janasyeva yeṣāṁ vai vimukhā yānti nārthinaḥ

SYNONYMS

aho-oh, just see; eṣām-of these trees; varam-superior; janma-birth; sarva-all; prāṇi-living entities; upajīvinām-one who provides maintenance; su-janasya iva-like the great personalities; yeṣām-from whose; vai-certainly; vimukhāḥ-disappointed; yānti-goes away; na-never; arthinaḥ-one who is asking for something.

TRANSLATION

" 'Just see how these trees are maintaining every living entity! Their birth is successful. Their behavior is just like that of great personalities, for anyone who asks anything from a tree never goes away disappointed.' "

PURPORT

According to Vedic civilization, kṣatriyas are considered to be great personalities because if anyone goes to a kṣatriya king to ask for charity, the king will never refuse. The trees are compared to those noble kṣatriyas because everyone derives all kinds of benefits from them-some people take fruit, others take flowers, others take leaves, others take twigs, and others even cut the tree, and yet the tree gives to everyone without hesitation.

Unnecessarily cutting trees without consideration is another example of human debauchery. The paper industry cuts many hundreds and thousands of trees for its mills, and with the paper so much rubbish literature is published for the whimsical satisfaction of human society. Unfortunately, although these industrialists are now happy in this life by dint of their industrial development, they do not know that they will incur the responsibility for killing these living entities who are in the forms of trees.

This verse, quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, was spoken by Lord Kṛṣṇa to His friends when He was taking rest underneath a tree after His pastime of stealing the clothes of the gopīs (vastra-haraṇa-līlā). By quoting this verse, Caitanya Mahāprabhu teaches us that we should be tolerant like trees and also beneficial like trees, which give everything to the needy persons who come underneath them. A needy person may derive many advantages from trees and also from many animals, but in modern civilization people have become so ungrateful that they exploit the trees and animals and kill them. These are some of the sinful activities of modern civilization.

parama ānanda pāila vṛkṣa-parivāra

SYNONYMS

ei-this; ājñā-order; kaila-gave; yadi-when; caitanya-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mālā-kāra-as a gardener; parama-the greatest; ānanda-pleasure; pāila-got; vṛkṣa-of the tree; parivāra-descendants.

TRANSLATION

The descendants of the tree [the devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu] were very glad to receive this order directly from the Lord.

PURPORT

It is the desire of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu that the benevolent activities of the saṅkīrtana movement, which was inaugurated five hundred years ago in Navadvīpa, be spread all over the world for the benefit of all human beings. Unfortunately, there are many so-called followers of Caitanya Mahāprabhu who are satisfied simply to construct a temple, make a show of the Deities, collect some funds and utilize them for eating and sleeping. There is no question of their preaching the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu all over the world. But even though they are unable to do so, if anyone else does it they become envious. This is the condition of the modern followers of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Age of Kali is so strong that it affects even the so-called followers of Lord Caitanya. At least the followers of Caitanya Mahāprabhu must come out of India to preach His cult all over the world, for this is the mission of Lord Caitanya. The followers of Lord Caitanya must execute His will with heart and soul, being more tolerant than the trees and humbler than the straw in the street.

TEXT 48

SYNONYMS

yei-anyone; yāhāṅ-wherever; tāhāṅ-anywhere; dāna-charity; kare-gives in; prema-phala-the fruit of love of Godhead; phala-fruit; āsvāde-by tasting; matta-intoxicated; loka-people; ha-ila-become; sakala-all.

TRANSLATION

The fruit of love of God is so relishable that wherever a devotee distributes it, those who taste the fruit, anywhere in the world, immediately become intoxicated.

PURPORT

Here the wonderful fruit of love of Godhead distributed by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is described. We have practical experience that anyone who accepts this fruit and sincerely tastes it immediately becomes mad after it and gives up all his bad habits, being intoxicated by Caitanya Mahāprabhu's gift, the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. The statements of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta are so practical that anyone can test them. As far as we are concerned, we are most confident of the success of the distribution of the great fruit of love of Godhead through the medium of chanting the mahā-mantra-Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare.

TEXT 49

mahā-mādaka prema-phala peṭa bhari' khāya

SYNONYMS

mahā-mādaka-great intoxicant; prema-phala-this fruit of love of God; peṭa-belly; bhari'-filling; khāya-let them eat; mātila-became mad; sakala loka-all the people in general; hāse-laugh; nāce-dance; gāya-chant.

TRANSLATION

The fruit of love of Godhead distributed by Caitanya Mahāprabhu is such a great intoxicant that anyone who eats it, filling his belly, immediately becomes maddened by it, and automatically he chants, dances, laughs and enjoys.

TEXT 50

SYNONYMS

keha-some of them; gaḍāgaḍi yāya-roll on the floor; keha-some of them; ta'-certainly; huṅkāra-hum very loudly; dekhi'-seeing this; ānandita-gladdened; hañā-becoming so; hāse-smiles; mālā-kāra-the great gardener.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the great gardener, sees that people are chanting, dancing and laughing and that some of them are rolling on the floor and some are making loud humming sounds, He smiles with great pleasure.

PURPORT

This attitude of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is very important for persons engaged in the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. In every center of our institution, ISKCON, we have arranged for a love feast every Sunday, and when we actually see people come to our center, chant, dance, take prasāda, become jubilant and purchase books, we know that certainly Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is always present in such transcendental activities, and He is very pleased and satisfied. Therefore the members of ISKCON must increase this movement more and more, according to the principles that we are presently trying to execute. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, thus being pleased, will smilingly glance upon them, bestowing His favor, and the movement will be successful.

TEXT 51

ei mālākāra khāya ei prema-phala niravadhi matta rahe, vivaśa-vihvala

SYNONYMS

ei-this; mālā-kāra-great gardener; khāya-eats; ei-this; prema-phala-fruit of love of Godhead; niravadhi-always; matta-maddened; rahe-remains; vivaśa-as if helpless; vihvala-as if bewildered.

TRANSLATION

The great gardener, Lord Caitanya, personally eats this fruit, and as a result He constantly remains mad, as if helpless and bewildered.

PURPORT

It is the mission of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to act Himself and teach the people. He says, āpani ācari' bhakti karila pracāra (Cc. Ādi 4.41). One must first act himself and then teach. This is the function of a real teacher. Unless one is able to understand the philosophy that he speaks, it will not be effective. Therefore one should not only understand the philosophy of the Caitanya cult but also implement it practically in one's life.

While chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu sometimes fainted and remained unconscious for many hours. He prays in His Śikṣāṣṭaka (7):

yugāyitaṁ nimeṣeṇa
cakṣuṣā prāvṛṣāyitam
śūnyāyitaṁ jagat sarvaṁ
govinda-viraheṇa me

"O Govinda! Feeling Your separation, I am considering a moment to be like twelve years or more. Tears are flowing from My eyes like torrents of rain, and I am feeling all vacant in the world in Your absence." This is the perfectional stage of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra and eating the fruit of love of Godhead, as exhibited by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. One should not artificially imitate this stage, but if one is serious and sincerely follows the regulative principles and chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, the time will come when these symptoms will appear. Tears will fill his eyes, he will be unable to chant distinctly the mahā-mantra, and his heart will throb in ecstasy. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu says that one should not imitate this, but a devotee should long for the day to come when such symptoms of trance will automatically appear in his body.

TEXT 52

TRANSLATION

With His saṅkīrtana movement the Lord made everyone mad like Himself. We do not find anyone who was not intoxicated by His saṅkīrtana movement.

TEXT 53

SYNONYMS

ye ye-persons who; pūrve-before; nindā-blasphemy; kaila-made; bali'-saying; mātoyāla-drunkard; seho-such persons; phala-fruit; khāya-takes; nāce-dance; bale-say; bhāla bhāla-very good, very good.

TRANSLATION

Persons who had formerly criticized Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, calling Him a drunkard, also ate the fruit and began to dance, saying, "Very good! Very good!"

PURPORT

When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu started the saṅkīrtana movement, even He was unnecessarily criticized by Māyāvādīs, atheists and fools. Naturally we are also criticized by such men. They will always remain and will always criticize anything that is actually good for human society. But the preachers of the saṅkīrtana movement should not be deterred by such criticism. Our method should be to convert such fools gradually by asking them to come and take prasāda and chant and dance with us. This should be our policy. Anyone who comes to join us, of course, must be sincere and serious regarding spiritual advancement in life; then such a person, simply by joining us, chanting with us, dancing with us and taking prasāda with us, will gradually also come to say that this movement is very good. But one who joins with an ulterior purpose, to get material benefit or personal gratification, will never be able to grasp the philosophy of this movement.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Ninth Chapter, describing the tree of devotional service.

18.4.10 Chapter 10

The Trunk, Branches and Subbranches of the Caitanya Tree

This chapter describes the branches of the tree named Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 1

SYNONYMS

śrī-caitanya-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; pada-ambhoja-the lotus feet; madhu-honey; pebhyaḥ-unto those who drink; namaḥ-respectful obeisances; namaḥ-respectful obeisances; kathañcit-a little of it; āśrayāt-taking shelter of; yeṣām-of whom; śvā-dog; api-also; tat-gandha-the aroma of the lotus flower; bhāk-shareholder; bhavet-may become.

TRANSLATION

Let me repeatedly offer my respectful obeisances unto the beelike devotees who always taste the honey of the lotus feet of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. If even a doggish nondevotee somehow takes shelter of such devotees, he enjoys the aroma of the lotus flower.

PURPORT

The example of a dog is very significant in this connection. A dog naturally does not become a devotee at any time, but still it is sometimes found that a dog of a devotee gradually becomes a devotee also. We have actually seen that a dog has no respect even for the tulasī plant. Indeed, a dog is especially inclined to pass urine on the tulasī plant. Therefore the dog is the number one nondevotee. But Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's saṅkīrtana movement is so strong that even a doglike nondevotee can gradually become a devotee by the association of a devotee of Lord Caitanya. Śrīla Śivānanda Sena, a great householder devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, attracted a dog on the street while going to Jagannātha Purī. The dog began to follow him and ultimately went to see Caitanya Mahāprabhu and was liberated. Similarly, cats and dogs in the household of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura were also liberated. Cats and dogs and other animals are not expected to become devotees, but in the association of a pure devotee they are also delivered.

TRANSLATION

I offer my obeisances to all the dear devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the eternal tree of love of Godhead. I offer my respects to all the branches of the tree, the devotees of the Lord who distribute the fruit of love of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrī Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī sets the example of offering obeisances to all the preacher devotees of Lord Caitanya, without distinction as to higher and lower. Unfortunately, at present there are many foolish so-called devotees of Lord Caitanya who make such distinctions. For example, the title Prabhupāda is offered to a spiritual master, especially to a distinguished spiritual master such as Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī Prabhupāda, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī Prabhupāda or Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī Prabhupāda. When our disciples similarly wanted to address their spiritual master as Prabhupāda, some foolish people became envious. Not considering the propaganda work of the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement, simply because these disciples addressed their spiritual master as Prabhupāda they became so envious that they formed a faction along with other such envious persons just to minimize the value of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. To chastise such fools, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī very frankly says, keha karibāre nāre jyeṣṭha-laghu-krama. Anyone who is a bona fide preacher of the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu must be respectful to the real devotees of Lord Caitanya; one should not be envious, considering one preacher to be very great and another to be very lowly. This is a material distinction and has no place on the platform of spiritual activities. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī therefore offers equal respect to all the preachers of the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who are compared to the branches of the tree. ISKCON is one of these branches, and it should therefore be respected by all sincere devotees of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

SYNONYMS

śrīvāsa paṇḍita-of the name Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita; āra-and; śrī-rāma paṇḍita-of the name Śrī Rāma Paṇḍita; dui bhāi-two brothers; dui śākhā-two branches; jagate-in the world; vidita-well known.

TRANSLATION

The two brothers Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita and Śrī Rāma Paṇḍita started two branches that are well known in the world.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 90, Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita (Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura) is described as an incarnation of Nārada Muni, and Śrī Rāma Paṇḍita, his younger brother, is said to be an incarnation of Parvata Muni, a great friend of Nārada's. Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita's wife, Mālinī, is celebrated as an incarnation of the nurse Ambikā, who fed Lord Kṛṣṇa with her breast milk, and as already noted, his niece Nārāyaṇī, the mother of Ṭhākura Vṛndāvana dāsa, the author of Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, was the sister of Ambikā in kṛṣṇa-līlā. We also understand from the description of Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata that after Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's acceptance of the sannyāsa order, Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita left Navadvīpa, possibly because of feelings of separation, and domiciled at Kumārahaṭṭa.

TRANSLATION

There is no counting the subbranches of these two branches. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu held congregational chanting daily at the house of Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita.

TEXT 11

SYNONYMS

cāri bhāi-four brothers; sa-vaṁśe-with all family members; kare-do; caitanyera-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sevā-service; gauracandra-Gaurasundara (Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu); vinā-except; nāhi jāne-they do not know; devī-goddess; devā-or god.

TRANSLATION

These four brothers and their family members fully engaged in the service of Lord Caitanya. They knew no other god or goddess.

PURPORT

Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has said, anya-devāśraya nāi, tomāre kahinu bhāi, ei bhakti parama-kāraṇa: if one wants to become a pure, staunch devotee, one should not take shelter of any of the demigods or -goddesses. Foolish Māyāvādīs say that worshiping demigods is as good as worshiping the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but that is not a fact. This philosophy misleads people to atheism. One who has no idea what God actually is thinks that any form he imagines or any rascal he accepts can be God. This acceptance of cheap gods or incarnations of God is actually atheism. It is to be concluded, therefore, that those who worship demigods or self-proclaimed incarnations of God are all atheists. They have lost their knowledge, as confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (7.20): kāmais tais tair hṛta-jñānāḥ prapadyante 'nya-devatāḥ. "Those whose minds are distorted by material desires surrender unto demigods." Unfortunately, those who do not cultivate Kṛṣṇa consciousness and do not properly understand the Vedic knowledge accept any rascal to be an incarnation of God, and they are of the opinion that one can become an incarnation simply by worshiping a demigod. This philosophical hodge-podge exists under the name of the Hindu religion, but the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement does not approve of it. Indeed, we strongly condemn it. Such worship of demigods and so-called incarnations of God should never be confused with the pure Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement.

SYNONYMS

ācāryaratnera-of Ācāryaratna; nāma-name; śrī-candraśekhara-of the name Śrī Candraśekhara; yāṅra-of whom; ghare-in the home; devī-bhāve-as the goddess; nācilā-danced; īśvara-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Ācāryaratna was also named Śrī Candraśekhara Ācārya. In a drama in his house, Lord Caitanya played the goddess of fortune.

PURPORT

Dramatic performances were also enacted during the presence of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, but the players who took part in such dramas were all pure devotees; no outsiders were allowed. The members of ISKCON should follow this example. Whenever they stage dramatic performances about the lives of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu or Lord Kṛṣṇa, the players must be pure devotees. Professional players and dramatic actors have no sense of devotional service, and therefore although they can perform very artistically, there is no life in such performances. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura used to refer to such an actor as yātrā-dale nārada, which means "farcical Nārada." Sometimes an actor in a drama plays the part of Nārada Muni, although in his private life he is not at all like Nārada Muni because he is not a devotee. Such actors are not needed in dramatic performances about the lives of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lord Kṛṣṇa.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to perform dramas with Advaita Prabhu, Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura and other devotees in the house of Candraśekhara. The place where Candraśekhara's house was situated is now known as Vrajapattana. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura established a branch of his Śrī Caitanya Maṭha at this place. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu decided to accept the renounced order of life, Candraśekhara Ācārya was informed of this by Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, and therefore he was also present when Lord Caitanya accepted sannyāsa from Keśava Bhāratī in Katwa. It is he who first spread the word in Navadvīpa of Lord Caitanya's accepting sannyāsa. Śrī Candraśekhara Ācārya was present during many important incidents in the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He therefore forms the second branch of the tree of Lord Caitanya.

puṇḍarīka vidyānidhi–baḍa-śākhā jāni yāṅra nāma lañā prabhu kāndilā āpani

SYNONYMS

puṇḍarīka vidyānidhi-of the name Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi; baḍa-śākhā-another big branch; jāni-I know; yāṅra nāma-whose name; lañā-taking; prabhu-the Lord; kāndilā-cried; āpani-Himself.

TRANSLATION

Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi, the third big branch, was so dear to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu that in his absence Lord Caitanya Himself would sometimes cry.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā Śrīla Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi is described as the father of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī in kṛṣṇa-līlā. Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore treated him as His father. Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi's father was known as Bāṇeśvara or, according to another opinion, Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī, and his mother's name was Gaṅgādevī. According to one opinion, Bāṇeśvara was a descendent of Śrī Śivarāma Gaṅgopādhyāya. The original home of Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi was in East Bengal, in a village near Dacca named Bāghiyā, which belonged to the Vārendra group of brāhmaṇa families. Sometimes these Vārendra brāhmaṇas were at odds with another group known as Rāḍhīya brāhmaṇas, and therefore Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi's family was ostracized and at that time was not living as a respectable family. Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī informs us that one of the members of this family is living in Vṛndāvana and is named Sarojānanda Gosvāmī. One special characteristic of this family is that each of its members had only one son or no son at all, and therefore the family was not very expansive. There is a place in the district of Caṭṭagrāma in East Bengal that is known as Hāta-hājāri, and a short distance from this place is a village known as Mekhalā-grāma in which Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi's forefathers lived. One can approach Mekhalā-grāma from Caṭṭagrāma either on horseback, by bullock cart or by steamer. The steamer station is known as Annapūrṇāra-ghāṭa. The birthplace of Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi is about two miles southwest of Annapūrṇāra-ghāṭa. The temple constructed there by Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi is now very old and much in need of repair. Without repair, the temple may soon crumble. There are two inscriptions on the bricks of that temple, but they are so old that one cannot read them. There is another temple, however, about two hundred yards south of this one, and some people say that this is the old temple constructed by Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu called Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi "father," and He gave him the title Premanidhi. Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi later became the spiritual master of Gadādhara Paṇḍita and an intimate friend of Svarūpa Dāmodara's. Gadādhara Paṇḍita at first misunderstood Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi to be an ordinary pounds-and-shillings man, but later, upon being corrected by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he became his disciple. Another incident in the life of Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi involves his criticizing the priest of the Jagannātha temple, for which Jagannātha Prabhu chastised him personally by slapping his cheeks. This is described in Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā, Chapter Seven. Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura informs us that there are still two living descendants of the family of Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi, who are named Śrī Harakumāra Smṛtitīrtha and Śrī Kṛṣṇakiṅkara Vidyālaṅkāra. For further information one should refer to the dictionary known as Vaiṣṇava-mañjuṣā.

SYNONYMS

baḍa śākhā-big branch; gadādhara paṇḍita-gosāñi-the descendants or disciplic succession of Gadādhara Paṇḍita; teṅho-Gadādhara Paṇḍita; lakṣmī-rūpā-incarnation of the pleasure potency of Lord Kṛṣṇa; tāṅra-his; sama-equal; keha-anyone; nāi-there is none.

TRANSLATION

Gadādhara Paṇḍita, the fourth branch, is described as an incarnation of the pleasure potency of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. No one, therefore, can equal him.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verses 147 through 153, it is stated: "The pleasure potency of Śrī Kṛṣṇa formerly known as Vṛndāvaneśvarī is now personified in the form of Śrī Gadādhara Paṇḍita in the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu." Śrī Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī has pointed out that in the shape of Lakṣmī, the pleasure potency of Kṛṣṇa, she was formerly very dear to the Lord as Śyāmasundara-vallabhā. The same Śyāmasundara-vallabhā is now present as Gadādhara Paṇḍita. Formerly, as Lalitā-sakhī, she was always devoted to Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. In the Twelfth Chapter of this part of the Caitanya-caritāmṛta there is a description of the descendants or disciplic succession of Gadādhara Paṇḍita.

vakreśvara paṇḍita–prabhura baḍa priya bhṛtya eka-bhāve cabbiśa prahara yāṅra nṛtya vakreśvara paṇḍita-of the name Vakreśvara Paṇḍita; prabhura-of the Lord; baḍa-very; priya-dear; bhṛtya-servant; eka-bhāve-continuously in the same ecstasy; cabbiśa-twenty-four; prahara-a duration of time comprising three hours; yāṅra-whose; nṛtya-dancing.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Vakreśvara Paṇḍita, the fifth branch of the tree, was a very dear servant of Lord Caitanya's. He could dance with constant ecstasy for seventy-two hours.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 71, it is stated that Vakreśvara Paṇḍita was an incarnation of Aniruddha, one of the quadruple expansions of Viṣṇu (Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Aniruddha and Pradyumna). He could dance wonderfully for seventy-two continuous hours. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu played in dramatic performances in the house of Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita, Vakreśvara Paṇḍita was one of the chief dancers, and he danced continuously for that length of time. Śrī Govinda dāsa, an Oriyā devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, has described the life of Vakreśvara Paṇḍita in his book Gaura-kṛṣṇodaya. There are many disciples of Vakreśvara Paṇḍita in Orissa, and they are known as Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇavas although they are Oriyās. Among these disciples are Śrī Gopālaguru and his disciple Śrī Dhyānacandra Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally sang while Vakreśvara Paṇḍita danced, and thus Vakreśvara Paṇḍita fell at the lotus feet of the Lord and spoke as follows.

TEXT 19

"daśa-sahasra gandharva more deha' candramukha

SYNONYMS

daśa-sahasra-ten thousand; gandharva-residents of Gandharvaloka; more-unto me; deha'-please deliver; candra-mukha-O moon-faced one; tārā gāya-let them sing; muñi nācoṅ-let me dance; tabe-then; mora-my; sukha-happiness.

TRANSLATION

"O Candramukha! Please give me ten thousand Gandharvas. Let them sing as I dance, and then I will be greatly happy."

PURPORT

The Gandharvas, who are residents of Gandharvaloka, are celebrated as celestial singers. Whenever singing is needed in the celestial planets, the Gandharvas are invited to sing. The Gandharvas can sing continuously for days, and therefore Vakreśvara Paṇḍita wanted to dance as they sang.

SYNONYMS

paṇḍita jagadānanda-of the name Paṇḍita Jagadānanda; prabhura-of the Lord; prāṇa-rūpa-life and soul; loke-in the world; khyāta-celebrated; yeṅho-who; satyabhāmāra-of Satyabhāmā; svarūpa-personification.

TRANSLATION

Paṇḍita Jagadānanda, the sixth branch of the Caitanya tree, was celebrated as the life and soul of the Lord. He is known to have been an incarnation of Satyabhāmā [one of the chief queens of Lord Kṛṣṇa].

PURPORT

There are many dealings of Jagadānanda Paṇḍita with Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Most importantly, he was the Lord's constant companion and especially took part in all the pastimes of the Lord in the houses of Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita and Candraśekhara Ācārya.

TEXT 22

tāṅra eka śākhā mukhya–makaradhvaja kara

SYNONYMS

rāghava paṇḍita-of the name Rāghava Paṇḍita; prabhura-of the Lord; ādya-original; anucara-follower; tāṅra-his; eka-one; śākhā-branch; mukhya-chief; makaradhvaja-of the name Makaradhvaja; kara-surname.

TRANSLATION

Rāghava Paṇḍita, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's original follower, is understood to have been the seventh branch. From him proceeded another subbranch, headed by Makaradhvaja Kara.

PURPORT

Kara was the surname of Makaradhvaja. At present this surname is generally found in the Kāyastha community. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 166, states:

dhaniṣṭhā bhakṣya-sāmagrīṁ kṛṣṇāyādād vraje 'mitām saiva sāmprataṁ gaurāṅga-priyo rāghava-paṇḍitaḥ

Rāghava Paṇḍita was formerly a confidential gopī in Vraja during the time of Lord Kṛṣṇa's pastimes, and his former name was Dhaniṣṭhā. This gopī, Dhaniṣṭhā, always engaged in preparing foods for Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

tāṅhāra-his; bhaginī-sister; damayantī-of the name Damayantī; prabhura-of the Lord; priya-dear; dāsī-maidservant; prabhura-of the Lord; bhoga-sāmagrī-cooking materials; ye-who; kare-does; vāra-māsi-throughout the whole year.

TRANSLATION

Rāghava Paṇḍita's sister Damayantī was the dear maidservant of the Lord. She always collected various ingredients with which to cook for Lord Caitanya.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 167, it is mentioned, guṇamālā vraje yāsīd damayantī tu tat-svasā: The gopī named Guṇamālā appeared as Rāghava Paṇḍita's sister Damayantī. On the East Bengal railway line beginning from the Sealdah station in Calcutta, there is a station named Sodapura, which is not very far from Calcutta. Within one mile of this station, toward the western side of the Ganges, is a village known as Pāṇihāṭī, in which the residential quarters of Rāghava Paṇḍita still exist. On Rāghava Paṇḍita's tomb is a creeper on a concrete platform. There is also a Madana-mohana Deity in a broken-down temple nearby. This temple is managed by a local Zamindar of the name Śrī Śivacandra Rāya Caudhurī. Makaradhvaja Kara was also an inhabitant of Pāṇihāṭī.

The foods Damayantī cooked for Lord Caitanya when He was at Purī were carried in bags by her brother Rāghava without the knowledge of others.

TEXT 27

vāra-māsa tāhā prabhu karena aṅgīkāra
'rāghavera jhāli' bali' prasiddhi yāhāra

SYNONYMS

vāra-māsa-the whole year; tāhā-all those foods; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; karena-did; aṅgīkāra-accept; rāghavera jhāli-the bags of Rāghava Paṇḍita; bali'-so called; prasiddhi-celebrated; yāhāra-of which.

TRANSLATION

The Lord accepted these foods throughout the entire year. Those bags are still celebrated as rāghavera jhāli [”the bags of Rāghava Paṇḍita”].

TEXT 28

se-saba sāmagrī āge kariba vistāra yāhāra śravaṇe bhaktera vahe aśrudhāra

SYNONYMS

se-saba-all these things; sāmagrī-ingredients of the foods; āge-further on; kariba-I shall describe; vistāra-vividly; yāhāra-of which; śravaṇe-by the hearing; bhaktera-of a devotee; vahe-flowing; aśru-dhāra-tears.

TRANSLATION

I shall describe the contents of the bags of Rāghava Paṇḍita later in this book. Hearing this narration, devotees generally cry, and tears glide down from their eyes.

PURPORT

A vivid description of these rāghavera jhāli is to be found in Chapter Ten of the Antya-līlā portion of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

TEXT 29

prabhura atyanta priya–paṇḍita gaṅgādāsa yāṅhāra smaraṇe haya sarva-bandha-nāśa prabhura-of the Lord; atyanta-very much; priya-dear; paṇḍita gaṅgādāsa-of the name Paṇḍita Gaṅgādāsa; yāṅhāra-who; smaraṇe-by remembering; haya-it becomes; sarva-bandha-nāśa-freedom from all kinds of bondage.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Paṇḍita Gaṅgādāsa was the eighth dear branch of the tree of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. One who remembers his activities attains freedom from all bondage.

TEXT 30

caitanya-pārṣada–śrī-ācārya purandara pitā kari’ yāṅre bale gaurāṅga-sundara

SYNONYMS

caitanya-pārṣada-associate of Lord Caitanya; śrī-ācārya purandara-of the name Śrī Ācārya Purandara; pitā-father; kari’-taking him; yāṅre-whom; bale-says; gaurāṅga-sundara-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Ācārya Purandara, the ninth branch, was a constant associate of Lord Caitanya. The Lord accepted him as His father.

PURPORT

It is described in the Caitanya-bhāgavata that whenever Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited the house of Rāghava Paṇḍita, He also visited Purandara Ācārya immediately upon receiving an invitation. Purandara Ācārya is to be considered most fortunate because the Lord used to greet him by addressing him as His father and embracing him in great love.

SYNONYMS

daṇḍa-kathā-the narration of such chastisement; kahiba-I shall speak; āge-ahead; vistāra-detailed description; kariyā-making; daṇḍe-in the matter of chastisement; tuṣṭa prabhu-the Lord is very much satisfied; tāṅre-him; pāṭhāilā-sent back; nadīyā-Nadia (a district in Bengal).

TRANSLATION

Later in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta I shall describe this incident of chastisement in detail. The Lord, being very much satisfied by this chastisement, sent Dāmodara Paṇḍita to Navadvīpa.

PURPORT

Dāmodara Paṇḍita, who was formerly known as Śaibyā in Vraja-dhāma, used to carry messages from Lord Caitanya to Śacīmātā, and during the Ratha-yātrā festival he carried messages from Śacīmātā to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 33

SYNONYMS

sadāśiva-paṇḍita-of the name Sadāśiva Paṇḍita; yāṅra-whose; prabhu-pade-unto the lotus feet of the Lord; āśa-constant desire; prathamei-in the beginning; nityānandera-of Lord Nityānanda; yāṅra-of whom; ghare-in the home; vāsa-residence.

TRANSLATION

Sadāśiva Paṇḍita, the twelfth branch, was always anxious to serve the lotus feet of the Lord. It was his good fortune that when Lord Nityānanda came to Navadvīpa He resided at his house.

PURPORT

It is mentioned in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā, Chapter Nine, that Sadāśiva Paṇḍita was a pure devotee and that Nityānanda Prabhu resided at his house.

TEXT 35

śrī-nṛsiṁha-upāsaka–pradyumna brahmacārī prabhu tāṅra nāma kailā 'nṛsiṁhānanda' kari'

SYNONYMS

śrī-nṛsiṁha-upāsaka-the worshiper of Lord Nṛsiṁhadeva; pradyumna brahmacārī-of the name Pradyumna Brahmacārī; prabhu-the Lord; tāṅra-his; nāma-name; kailā-turned into; nṛsiṁhānanda-of the name Nṛsiṁhānanda; kari'-by such a name.

TRANSLATION

The thirteenth branch was Pradyumna Brahmacārī. Since he was a worshiper of Lord Nṛsiṁhadeva, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu changed his name to Nṛsiṁhānanda Brahmacārī.

PURPORT

Pradyumna Brahmacārī is described in the Antya-līlā, Second Chapter, of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta. He was a great devotee of Lord Caitanya's who changed his name to Nṛsiṁhānanda. While coming from the house of Rāghava Paṇḍita at Pānihāṭī to the house of Śivānanda, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu appeared in the heart of Nṛsiṁhānanda Brahmacārī. To acknowledge this, Nṛsiṁhānanda Brahmacārī used to accept as eatables the food of three Deities, namely, Jagannātha, Nṛsiṁhadeva and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This is stated in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Second Chapter, verses 48 through 78. Upon receiving information that Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was proceeding toward Vṛndāvana from Kuliyā, Nṛsiṁhānanda absorbed himself in meditation and by his mental activities began constructing a very nice road from Kuliyā to Vṛndāvana. All of a sudden, however, he broke his meditation and told the other devotees that this time Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu would not go to Vṛndāvana but only as far as the place known as Kānāi Nāṭaśālā. This is described in the Madhya-līlā, Chapter One, verses 155 through 162. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 74, says, āveśaś ca tathājñeyo miśre pradyumna-saṁjñake: Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu changed the name of Pradyumna Miśra, or Pradyumna Brahmacārī, to Nṛsiṁhānanda Brahmacārī, for in his heart Lord Nṛsiṁhadeva was manifest. It is said that Lord Nṛsiṁhadeva used to talk with him directly.

caitanya-caraṇa vinu nāhi jāne āra nārāyaṇa-paṇḍita-of the name Nārāyaṇa Paṇḍita; eka-one; baḍai-very; udāra-liberal; caitanya-caraṇa-the lotus feet of Lord Caitanya; vinu-except; nāhi-not; jāne-know; āra-anything else.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Nārāyaṇa Paṇḍita, the fourteenth branch, a great and liberal devotee, did not know any shelter but Lord Caitanya's lotus feet.

PURPORT

Nārāyaṇa Paṇḍita was one of the associates of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura. It is mentioned in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ninth Chapter, verse 93, that he went to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī with Ṭhākura's brother Śrī Rāma Paṇḍita.

TEXT 37

śrīmān-paṇḍita śākhā–prabhura nija bhṛtya deuṭi dharena, yabe prabhu karena nṛtya

SYNONYMS

śrīmān-paṇḍita-of the name Śrīmān Paṇḍita; śākhā-branch; prabhura-of the Lord; nija-own; bhṛtya-servant; deuṭi-torch light; dharena-carries; yabe-while; prabhu-Lord Caitanya; karena-does; nṛtya-dance.

TRANSLATION

The fifteenth branch was Śrīmān Paṇḍita, who was a constant servitor of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He used to carry a torch while the Lord danced.

PURPORT

Śrīmān Paṇḍita was among the companions of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu when the Lord performed saṅkīrtana. When Lord Caitanya dressed Himself in the form of the goddess Lakṣmī and danced in the streets of Navadvīpa, Śrīmān Paṇḍita carried a torch to light the way.

śuklāmbara-brahmacārī baḍa bhāgyavān yāṅra anna māgi' kāḍi' khāilā bhagavān śuklāmbara-brahmacārī-of the name Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī; baḍa-very; bhāgyavān-fortunate; yāṅra-whose; anna-food; māgi'-begging; kāḍi'-snatching; khāilā-ate; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The sixteenth branch, Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī, was very fortunate because Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu jokingly or seriously begged food from him or sometimes snatched it from him forcibly and ate it.

PURPORT

It is stated that Suklāmbara Brahmacārī, an inhabitant of Navadvīpa, was Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's first companion in the saṅkīrtana movement. When Lord Caitanya returned from Gayā after initiation, He stayed with Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī because He wanted to hear from this devotee about the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī collected alms of rice from the inhabitants of Navadvīpa, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu took pleasure in eating the rice that he cooked. It is said that Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī was one of the wives of the yajñic brāhmaṇas during the time of Lord Kṛṣṇa's pastimes in Vṛndāvana. Lord Kṛṣṇa begged food from the wives of the yajñic brāhmaṇas, and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu performed a similar pastime by begging rice from Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī.

SYNONYMS

nandana-ācārya-of the name Nandana Ācārya; śākhā-the seventeenth branch; jagate-in the world; vidita-celebrated; lukāiyā-hiding; dui-two; prabhura-of the Lords; yāṅra-of whom; ghare-in the house; sthita-situated.

TRANSLATION

Nandana Ācārya, the seventeenth branch of the Caitanya tree, is celebrated within the world because the two Prabhus [Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda] sometimes hid in his house.

PURPORT

Nandana Ācārya was another companion of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu during His kīrtana pastimes in Navadvīpa. Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu, as Avadhūta, traveled on many pilgrimages, and when He first came to Śrī Navadvīpa-dhāma He remained hidden in the house of Nandana Ācārya. It is there that He first met all the devotees of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When Caitanya Mahāprabhu exhibited His mahā-prakāśa, He asked Rāmāi Paṇḍita to call Advaita Prabhu, who was hiding in the home of Nandana Ācārya, for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu could understand that He was hiding. Similarly, Lord Caitanya also sometimes hid in the home of Nandana Ācārya. In this connection one may refer to Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-līlā Chapters Six and Seventeen.

śrī-mukunda-datta śākhā–prabhura samādhyāyī yāṅhāra kīrtane nāce caitanya-gosāñi

SYNONYMS

śrī-mukunda-datta-of the name Śrī Mukunda Datta; śākhā-another branch; prabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; samādhyāyī-class friend; yāṅhāra-whose; kīrtane-in saṅkīrtana; nāce-dances; caitanya-gosāñi-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Mukunda Datta, a class friend of Lord Caitanya's, was another branch of the Caitanya tree. Lord Caitanya danced while he sang.

PURPORT

Śrī Mukunda Datta was born in the Caṭṭagrāma district, in the village of Chanharā, which is under the jurisdiction of the police station named Paṭiyā. This village is situated ten krośas, or about twenty miles, from the home of Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (140) it is said:

vraje sthitau gāyakau yau madhukaṇṭha-madhuvratau mukunda-vāsudevau tau dattau gaurāṅga-gāyakau

"In Vraja there were two very nice singers named Madhukaṇṭha and Madhuvrata. They appeared in caitanya-līlā as Mukunda and Vāsudeva Datta, who were singers in the society of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu." When Lord Caitanya was a student, Mukunda Datta was His class friend, and they frequently engaged in logical arguments. Sometimes Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu would fight with Mukunda Datta, using tricks of logic. This is described in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, Chapters Eleven and Twelve. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu returned from Gayā, Mukunda Datta gave Him pleasure by reciting verses from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam about kṛṣṇa-līlā. It was by his endeavor that Gadādhara Paṇḍita Gosvāmī became a disciple of Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi, as stated in Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-līlā, Chapter Seven. When Mukunda Datta sang in the courtyard of Śrīvāsa Prabhu, Mahāprabhu danced with His singing, and when Lord Caitanya for twenty-one hours exhibited an ecstatic manifestation known as sāta-prahariyā, Mukunda Datta inaugurated the function by singing.

Sometimes Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu chastised Mukunda Datta by calling him khaḍajāṭhiyā beṭā because he attended many functions held by different classes of nondevotees. This is stated in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-līlā, Chapter Ten. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu dressed Himself as the goddess of fortune to dance in the house of Candraśekhara, Mukunda Datta began the first song.

Before disclosing His desire to take the renounced order of life, Lord Caitanya first went to the house of Mukunda Datta, but at that time Mukunda Datta requested Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu to continue His saṅkīrtana movement for a few days more before taking sannyāsa. This is stated in Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-līlā Chapter Twenty-six. The information of Lord Caitanya's accepting the renounced order was made known to Gadādhara Paṇḍita, Candraśekhara Ācārya and Mukunda Datta by Nityānanda Prabhu, and therefore all of them went to Katwa and arranged for kīrtana and all the paraphernalia for Lord Caitanya's acceptance of sannyāsa. After the Lord took sannyāsa, they all followed Him, especially Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, Gadādhara Prabhu and Govinda, who followed Him all the way to Puruṣottama-kṣetra. In this connection one may refer to Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā, Chapter Two. In the place known as Jaleśvara, Nityānanda Prabhu broke the sannyāsa rod of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Mukunda Datta was also present at that time. He went every year from Bengal to see Lord Caitanya at Jagannātha Purī.

sahasra-mukhe yāṅra guṇa kahile nā haya

SYNONYMS

vāsudeva datta-of the name Vāsudeva Datta; prabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhṛtya-servant; mahāśaya-great personality; sahasra-mukhe-with thousands of mouths; yāṅra-whose; guṇa-qualities; kahile-describing; nā-never; haya-becomes fulfilled.

TRANSLATION

Vāsudeva Datta, the nineteenth branch of the Śrī Caitanya tree, was a great personality and a most confidential devotee of the Lord. One could not describe his qualities even with thousands of mouths.

PURPORT

Vāsudeva Datta, the brother of Mukunda Datta, was also a resident of Caṭṭagrāma. In the Caitanya-bhāgavata it is said, yāṅra sthāne kṛṣṇa haya āpane vikraya: Vāsudeva Datta was such a powerful devotee that Kṛṣṇa was purchased by him. Vāsudeva Datta stayed at Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita's house, and in the Caitanya-bhāgavata it is described that Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was so pleased with Vāsudeva Datta and so affectionate toward him that He used to say, "I am only Vāsudeva Datta's man. My body is only meant to please Vāsudeva Datta, and he can sell Me anywhere." Thrice He vowed that this was a fact and that no one should disbelieve these statements. "All My dear devotees," He said, "I tell you the truth. My body is especially meant for Vāsudeva Datta." Vāsudeva Datta initiated Śrī Yadunandana Ācārya, the spiritual master of Raghunātha dāsa, who later became Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī. This will be found in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līla, Sixth Chapter, verse 161. Vāsudeva Datta spent money very liberally; therefore Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked Śivānanda Sena to become his sarakhela, or secretary, in order to control his extravagant expenses. Vāsudeva Datta was so kind to the living entities that he wanted to take all their sinful reactions so that they might be delivered by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This is described in the Fifteenth Chapter of the Caitanya-caritāmṛta's Madhya-līlā, verses 159 through 180.

There is a railway station named Pūrvasthalī near the Navadvīpa railway station, and about one mile away, in a village known as Māmagāchi, which is the birthplace of Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura, there is presently a temple of Madana-gopāla that was established by Vāsudeva Datta. The Gauḍīya Maṭha devotees have now taken charge of this temple, and the sevā-pūjā is going on very nicely. Every year all the pilgrims on the navadvīpa-parikrama visit Māmagāchi. Since Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura inaugurated the navadvīpa-parikrama function, the temple has been very well managed.

SYNONYMS

haridāsa-ṭhākura-of the name Haridāsa Ṭhākura; śākhāra-of the branch; adbhuta-wonderful; carita-characteristics; tina-three; lakṣa-hundred thousand; nāma-names; teṅho-he; layena-chanted; apatita-without fail.

TRANSLATION

The twentieth branch of the Caitanya tree was Haridāsa Ṭhākura. His character was wonderful. He used to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa 300,000 times a day without fail.

PURPORT

Certainly the chanting of 300,000 holy names of the Lord is wonderful. No ordinary person can chant so many names, nor should one artificially imitate Haridāsa Ṭhākura's behavior. It is essential, however, that everyone fulfill a specific vow to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Therefore we have prescribed in our Society that all our students must chant at least sixteen rounds daily. Such chanting must be offenseless in order to be of high quality. Mechanical chanting is not as powerful as chanting of the holy name without offenses. It is stated in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, Chapter Two, that Haridāsa Ṭhākura was born in a village known as Buḍhana but after some time came to live on the bank of the Ganges at Phuliyā near Śāntipura. From the description of his chastisement by a Muslim magistrate, which is found in the Sixteenth Chapter of the Ādi-līlā of Caitanya-bhāgavata, we can understand how humble and meek Haridāsa Ṭhākura was and how he achieved the causeless mercy of the Lord. In the dramas performed by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Haridāsa Ṭhākura played the part of a police chief. While chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra in Benāpola, he was personally tested by Māyādevī herself. Haridāsa Ṭhākura's passing away is described in the Antya-līlā of Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Eleventh Chapter. It is not definitely certain whether Śrī Haridāsa Ṭhākura appeared in the village named Buḍhana that is in the district of Khulnā. Formerly this village was within a district of twenty-four pargaṇas within the Sātakṣīrā division.

SYNONYMS

tāṅra upaśākhā-his subbranch; yata-all; kulīna-grāmī jana-the inhabitants of Kulīna-grāma; satyarāja-of the name Satyarāja; ādi-heading the list; tāṅra-his; kṛpāra-of mercy; bhājana-recipient.

TRANSLATION

One subbranch of Haridāsa Ṭhākura consisted of the residents of Kulīna-grāma. The most important among them was Satyarāja Khān, or Satyarāja Vasu, who was a recipient of all the mercy of Haridāsa Ṭhākura.

PURPORT

Satyarāja Khān was the son of Guṇarāja Khān and father of Rāmānanda Vasu. Haridāsa Ṭhākura lived for some time during the Cāturmāsya period in the village named Kulīna-grāma, where he chanted the holy name, the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, and distributed his mercy to the descendants of the Vasu family. Satyarāja Khān was allotted the service of supplying silk ropes for the Jagannātha Deity during the Rathayātrā festival. The answers to his inquiries from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu about the duty of householder devotees are vividly described in the Madhya-līlā, Chapters Fifteen and Sixteen. The village of Kulīna-grāma is situated two miles from the railway station named Jaugrāma on the Newcord line from Howrah to Burdwan. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu very highly praised the people of Kulīna-grāma, and He stated that even a dog of Kulīna-grāma was very dear to Him.

SYNONYMS

śrī-murāri gupta-of the name Śrī Murāri Gupta; śākhā-branch; premera-of love of Godhead; bhāṇḍāra-store; prabhura-of the Lord; hṛdaya-the heart; drave-melts; śuni'-hearing; dainya-humility; yāṅra-of whom.

TRANSLATION

Murāri Gupta, the twenty-first branch of the tree of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, was a storehouse of love of Godhead. His great humility and meekness melted the heart of Lord Caitanya.

PURPORT

Śrī Murāri Gupta wrote a book called Śrī Caitanya-carita. He belonged to a vaidya physician family of Śrīhaṭṭa, the paternal home of Lord Caitanya, and later became a resident of Navadvīpa. He was among the elders of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Lord Caitanya exhibited His Varāha form in the house of Murāri Gupta, as described in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-līlā, Third Chapter. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu exhibited His mahā-prakāśa form, He appeared before Murāri Gupta as Lord Rāmacandra. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu were sitting together in the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, Murāri Gupta first offered his respects to Lord Caitanya and then to Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. Nityānanda Prabhu, however, was older than Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and therefore Lord Caitanya remarked that Murāri Gupta had violated social etiquette, for he should have first shown respect to Nityānanda Prabhu and then to Him. In this way, by the grace of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Murāri Gupta was informed about the position of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, and the next day he offered obeisances first to Lord Nityānanda and then to Lord Caitanya. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu gave chewed pan, or betel nut, to Murāri Gupta. Once Śivānanda Sena offered food to Lord Caitanya that had been cooked with excessive ghee, and the next day the Lord became sick and went to Murāri Gupta for treatment. Lord Caitanya accepted some water from the waterpot of Murāri Gupta, and thus He was cured. The natural remedy for indigestion is to drink a little water, and since Murāri Gupta was a physician, he gave the Lord some drinking water and cured Him.

When Caitanya Mahāprabhu appeared in the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura in His Caturbhuja mūrti, Murāri Gupta became His carrier in the form of Garuḍa, and in these pastimes of ecstasy the Lord then got up on his back. It was the desire of Murāri Gupta to leave his body before the disappearance of Caitanya Mahāprabhu, but the Lord forbade him to do so. This is described in Caitanya-bhagāvata, Madhya-līlā, Chapter Twenty. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu one day appeared in ecstasy as the Varāha mūrti, Murāri Gupta offered Him prayers. He was a great devotee of Lord Rāmacandra, and his staunch devotion is vividly described in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Fifteenth Chapter, verses 137 through 157.

ātma-vṛtti kari' kare kuṭumba bharaṇa pratigraha nāhi kare-he did not accept charity from anyone; nā-not; laya-take; kāra-anyone's; dhana-wealth; ātma-vṛtti-own profession; kari'-executing; kare-maintained; kuṭumba-family; bharaṇa-provision.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Murāri Gupta never accepted charity from friends, nor did he accept money from anyone. He practiced as a physician and maintained his family with his earnings.

PURPORT

It should be noted that a gṛhastha (householder) must not make his livelihood by begging from anyone. Every householder of the higher castes should engage himself in his own occupational duty as a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya or vaiśya, but he should not engage in the service of others, for this is the duty of a śūdra. One should simply accept whatever he earns by his own profession. The engagements of a brāhmaṇa are yajana, yājana, paṭhana, pāṭhana, dāna and pratigraha. A brāhmaṇa should be a worshiper of Viṣṇu, and he should also instruct others how to worship Him. A kṣatriya can become a landholder and earn his livelihood by levying taxes or collecting rent from tenants. A vaiśya can accept agriculture or general trade as an occupational duty. Since Murāri Gupta was born in a physician's family (vaidya-vaṁśa), he practiced as a physician, and with whatever income he earned he maintained his family. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, everyone should try to satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead through the execution of his occupational duty. That is the perfection of life. This system is called daivī-varṇāśrama. Murāri Gupta was an ideal gṛhastha, for he was a great devotee of Lord Rāmacandra and Caitanya Mahāprabhu. By practicing as a physician he maintained his family and at the same time satisfied Lord Caitanya to the best of his ability. This is the ideal of householder life.

SYNONYMS

cikitsā-medical treatment; karena-did; yāre-upon whom; ha-iyā-becoming; sadaya-merciful; deha-roga-the disease of the body; bhāva-roga-the disease of material existence; dui-both; tāra-his; kṣaya-diminished.

TRANSLATION

As Murāri Gupta treated his patients, by his mercy both their bodily and spiritual diseases subsided.

PURPORT

Murāri Gupta could treat both bodily and spiritual disease because he was a physician by profession and a great devotee of the Lord in terms of spiritual advancement. This is an example of service to humanity. Everyone should know that there are two kinds of diseases in human society. One disease, which is called adhyātmika, or material disease, pertains to the body, but the main disease is spiritual. The living entity is eternal, but somehow or other, when in contact with the material energy, he is subjected to the repetition of birth, death, old age and disease. The physicians of the modern day should learn from Murāri Gupta. Although modern philanthropic physicians open gigantic hospitals, there are no hospitals to cure the material disease of the spirit soul. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement has taken up the mission of curing this disease, but people are not very appreciative because they do not know what this disease is. A diseased person needs both proper medicine and a proper diet, and therefore the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement supplies materially stricken people with the medicine of the chanting of the holy name, or the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, and the diet of prasāda. There are many hospitals and medical clinics to cure bodily diseases, but there are no such hospitals to cure the material disease of the spirit soul. The centers of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement are the only established hospitals that can cure man of birth, death, old age and disease.

TRANSLATION

Śrīmān Sena, the twenty-second branch of the Caitanya tree, was a very faithful servant of Lord Caitanya. He knew nothing else but the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

Śrīmān Sena was one of the inhabitants of Navadvīpa and was a constant companion of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Gadādhara dāsa, the twenty-third branch, was understood to be the topmost, for he induced all the Muslim Kāzīs to chant the holy name of Lord Hari.

PURPORT

About eight or ten miles from Calcutta on the banks of the Ganges is a village known as Eṅḍiyādaha-grāma. Śrīla Gadādhara dāsa was known as an inhabitant of this village (eṅḍiyādaha-vāsī gadādhara dāsa). The Bhakti-ratnākara (Seventh Wave), informs us that after the disappearance of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Gadādhara dāsa came from Navadvīpa to Katwa. Thereafter he came to Eṅḍiyādaha and resided there. He is stated to be the luster of the body of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, just as Śrīla Gadādhara Paṇḍita Gosvāmī is an incarnation of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī Herself. Caitanya Mahāprabhu is sometimes explained to be rādhā-bhāva-dyuti-suvalita, or characterized by the emotions and bodily luster of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. Gadādhara dāsa is this dyuti, or luster. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā he is described to be the expansion potency of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. He counts among the associates of both Śrīla Gaurahari and Nityānanda Prabhu; as a devotee of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu he was one of the associates of Lord Kṛṣṇa in conjugal love, and as a devotee of Lord Nityānanda he is considered to have been one of the friends of Kṛṣṇa in pure devotional service. Even though he was an associate of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu, he was not among the cowherd boys but was situated in the transcendental mellow of conjugal love. He established a temple of Śrī Gaurasundara in Katwa.

In 1434 śakābda (A.D. 1513), when Lord Nityānanda Prabhu was empowered by Lord Caitanya to preach the saṅkīrtana movement in Bengal, Śrī Gadādhara dāsa was one of Lord Nityānanda's chief assistants. He preached the saṅkīrtana movement by requesting everyone to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. This simple preaching method of Śrīla Gadādhara dāsa can be followed by anyone and everyone in any position of society. One must simply be a sincere and serious servant of Nityānanda Prabhu and preach this cult door to door.

When Śrīla Gadādhara dāsa Prabhu was preaching the cult of hari-kīrtana, there was a magistrate who was very much against his saṅkīrtana movement. Following in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Śrīla Gadādhara dāsa one night went to the house of the Kāzī and requested him to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. The Kāzī replied, "All right, I shall chant Hare Kṛṣṇa tomorrow." On hearing this, Śrīla Gadādhara dāsa Prabhu began to dance, and he said, "Why tomorrow? You have already chanted the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, so simply continue."

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (verses 154-55) it is said:

rādhā-vibhūti-rūpā yā candrakāntiḥ purā vraje sa śrī-gaurāṅga-nikaṭe dāsa-vaṁśyo gadādharaḥ pūrṇānandā vraje yāsīd baladeva-priyāgraṇī sāpi kārya-vaśād eva prāviśat taṁ gadādharam

Śrīla Gadādhara dāsa is considered to be a united form of Candrakānti, who is the effulgence of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, and Pūrṇānandā, who is the foremost of Lord Balarāma's very dear girlfriends. Thus Śrīla Gadādhara dāsa Prabhu was one of the associates of both Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu.

Once while Śrīla Gadādhara dāsa Prabhu was returning to Bengal from Jagannātha Purī with Nityānanda Prabhu, he forgot himself and began talking very loudly as if he were a girl of Vrajabhūmi selling yogurt, and Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu noted this. Another time, while absorbed in the ecstasy of the gopīs, he carried a jug filled with Ganges water on his head as if he were selling milk. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu appeared in the house of Rāghava Paṇḍita while going to Vṛndāvana, Gadādhara dāsa went to see Him, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was so glad that He put His foot on his head. When Gadādhara dāsa Prabhu was present in Eṅḍiyādaha he established a Bāla Gopāla mūrti for worship there. Śrī Mādhava Ghoṣa performed a drama known as "Dāna-khaṇḍa" with the help of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu and Śrī Gadādhara dāsa. This is explained in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā 5.318-94.

The tomb of Gadādhara dāsa Prabhu, which is in the village of Eṅḍiyādaha, was under the control of the Saṁyogī Vaiṣṇavas and later under the direction of Siddha Bhagavān dāsa Bābājī of Kālnā. By his order, Śrī Madhusūdana Mullik, one of the members of the aristocratic Mullik family of the Nārikelaḍāṅgā in Calcutta, established a pāṭavāṭī (monastery) there in the Bengali year 1256 (A.D. 1849). He also arranged for the worship of a Deity named Śrī Rādhākānta. His son Balāicāṅda Mullik established Gaura-Nitāi Deities there in the Bengali year 1312 (A.D. 1905). Thus on the throne of the temple are both Gaura-Nityānanda Deities and Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa Deities. Below the throne is a tablet with an inscription written in Sanskrit. In that temple there is also a small Deity of Lord Śiva as Gopeśvara. This is all described on a stone by the side of the entrance door.

SYNONYMS

bhakte-unto devotees; kṛpā-mercy; karena-bestows; prabhu-Lord Caitanya; e-these; tina-three; svarūpe-features; sākṣāt-directly; āveśa-empowered by the Lord; āra-and; āvirbhāva-appearance; rūpe-in the features.

TRANSLATION

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu bestows His causeless mercy upon His devotees in three features: His own direct appearance [sākṣāt], His prowess within someone He empowers [āveśa], and His manifestation [āvirbhāva].

PURPORT

The sākṣāt feature of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is His personal presence. Āveśa refers to invested power, like that invested in Nakula Brahmacārī. Āvirbhāva is a manifestation of the Lord that appears even though He is personally not present. For example, Śrī Śacīmātā offered food at home to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu although He was far away in Jagannātha Purī, and when she opened her eyes after offering the food she saw that it had actually been eaten by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Similarly, when Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura performed saṅkīrtana, everyone felt the presence of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, even in His absence. This is another example of āvirbhāva.

TRANSLATION

The appearance of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in every devotee's presence is called sākṣāt. His appearance in Nakula Brahmacārī as a symptom of special prowess is an example of āveśa.

SYNONYMS

tāṅhāte-in him; ha-ila-there was; caitanyera-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āvirbhāva-appearance; alaukika-uncommon; aiche-like that; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; aneka-various; svabhāva-features.

TRANSLATION

In his body there were symptoms of āvirbhāva. Such appearances are uncommon, but Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu displayed many such pastimes through His different features.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (74) it is said that Nakula Brahmacārī displayed the prowess (āveśa) and Pradyumna Brahmacārī the appearance (āvirbhāva) of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. There are many hundreds and thousands of devotees of Lord Caitanya among whom there are no special symptoms, but when a devotee of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu functions with specific prowess, he displays the feature called āveśa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally spread the saṅkīrtana movement, and He advised all the inhabitants of Bhāratavarṣa to take up His cult and preach it all over the world. The visible bodily symptoms of devotees who follow such instructions are called āveśa. Śrīla Śivānanda Sena observed such āveśa symptoms in Nakula Brahmacārī, who displayed symptoms exactly like those of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Caitanya-caritāmṛta states that in the Age of Kali the only spiritual function is to broadcast the holy name of the Lord, but this function can be performed only by one who is actually empowered by Lord Kṛṣṇa. The process by which a devotee is thus empowered is called āveśa, or sometimes it is called śakty-āveśa.

Pradyumna Brahmacārī was formerly a resident of a village known as Piyārīgañja in Kālnā. There is a description of him in the Antya-līlā of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Second Chapter, and in the Antya-līlā of Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, chapters Three and Nine.

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Śivānanda Sena experienced the three features sākṣāt, āveśa and āvirbhāva. Later I shall vividly describe this transcendentally blissful subject.

PURPORT

Śrīla Śivānanda Sena has been described by Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Mahārāja as follows: He was a resident of Kumārahaṭṭa, which is also known as Hālisahara, and was a great devotee of the Lord. About one and a half miles from Kumārahaṭṭa is another village, known as Kāṅcaḍāpāḍā, in which there are Gaura-Gopāla Deities installed by Śivānanda Sena, who also established a temple of Kṛṣṇarāya that is still existing. Śivānanda Sena was the father of Paramānanda Sena, who was also known as Purī dāsa or Kavi-karṇapūra. Paramānanda Sena wrote in his Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (176) that two of the gopīs of Vṛndāvana, whose former names were Vīrā and Dūtī, combined to become his father. Śrīla Śivānanda Sena guided all the devotees of Lord Caitanya who went from Bengal to Jagannātha Purī, and he personally bore all the expenses for their journey. This is described in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Chapter Sixteen, verses 19 through 27. Śrīla Śivānanda Sena had three sons, named Caitanya dāsa, Rāmadāsa and Paramānanda. This last son later became Kavi-karṇapūra, and he is the author of Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā. His spiritual master was Śrīnātha Paṇḍita, who was Śivānanda Sena's priest. Due to Vāsudeva Datta's lavish spending, Śivānanda Sena was engaged to supervise his expenditures.

Śrī Śivānanda Sena actually experienced Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's features of sākṣat, āveśa and āvirbhāva. He once picked up a dog while on his way to Jagannātha Purī, and it is described in the Antya-līlā, First Chapter, that this dog later attained salvation by his association. When Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa, who later became Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, fled his paternal home to join Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, his father wrote a letter to Śivānanda Sena to get information about him. Śivānanda Sena supplied him the details for which he asked, and later Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī's father sent some servants and money to Śivānanda Sena to take care of Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī. Once Śrī Śivānanda Sena invited Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu to his home and fed Him so sumptuously that the Lord felt indigestion and was somewhat sick. This became known to Śivānanda Sena's son, who gave the Lord the kinds of food that would help His digestion, and thus Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very pleased. This is described in the Antya-līlā, Tenth Chapter, verses 142 through 151.

Once while going to Jagannātha Purī all the devotees had to stay underneath a tree, without the shelter of a house or even a shed, and Nityānanda Prabhu became very angry, as if He were greatly disturbed by hunger. Thus He cursed Śivānanda's sons to die. Śivānanda's wife was very much aggrieved at this, and she began to cry. She very seriously thought that since her sons had been cursed by Nityānanda Prabhu, certainly they would die. When Śivānanda later returned and saw his wife crying, he said, "Why are you crying? Let us all die if Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu desires." When Śivānanda Sena returned and Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu saw him, the Lord kicked him severely, complaining that He was very hungry, and asked why he did not arrange for His food. Such is the behavior of the Lord with His devotees. Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu behaved like an ordinary hungry man, as if completely dependent on the arrangements of Śivānanda Sena.

There was a nephew of Śivānanda Sena's named Śrīkānta who left the company in protest of Nityānanda Prabhu's curse and went directly to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī, where the Lord pacified him. On that occasion, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu allowed His toe to be sucked by Purī dāsa, who was then a child. It is by the order of Caitanya Mahāprabhu that he could immediately compose Sanskrit verses. During the misunderstanding with Śivānanda's family, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu ordered His personal attendant Govinda to give them all the remnants of His food. This is described in the Antya-līlā, Chapter Twelve, verse 53.

SYNONYMS

caitanya-dāsa-of the name Caitanya dāsa; rāmadāsa-of the name Rāmadāsa; āra-and; karṇapūra-of the name Karṇapūra; tina putra-three sons; śivānandera-of Śivānanda Sena; prabhura-of the Lord; bhakta-śūra-of the heroic devotees.

TRANSLATION

The three sons of Śivānanda Sena, named Caitanya dāsa, Rāmadāsa and Karṇapūra, were all heroic devotees of Lord Caitanya.

PURPORT

Caitanya dāsa, the eldest son of Śivānanda Sena, wrote a commentary on Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta that was later translated by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his paper Sajjana-toṣaṇī. According to expert opinion, Caitanya dāsa was the author of the book Caitanya-carita (also known as Caitanya-caritāmṛta), which was written in Sanskrit. The author was not Kavi-karṇapūra, as generally supposed. This is the opinion of Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura. Śrī Rāmadāsa was the second son of Śivānanda Sena. It is stated in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (145) that the two famous parrots named Dakṣa and Vicakṣaṇa in kṛṣṇa-līlā became the elder brothers of Kavi-karṇapūra, namely, Caitanya dāsa and Rāmadāsa. Karṇapūra, the third son, who was also known as Paramānanda dāsa or Purī dāsa, was initiated by Śrīnātha Paṇḍita, who was a disciple of Śrī Advaita Prabhu. Karṇapūra wrote many books that are important in Vaiṣṇava literature, such as Ānanda-vṛndāvana-campū, Alaṅkāra-kaustubha, Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā and the great epic Caitanya-candrodaya-nāṭaka. He was born in the year 1448 śakābda (A.D. 1527). He continually wrote books for ten years, from 1488 until 1498.

TRANSLATION

Śrīvallabha Sena and Śrīkānta Sena were also subbranches of Śivānanda Sena, for they were not only his nephews but also unalloyed devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

When Lord Nityānanda Prabhu rebuked Śivānanda Sena on the way to Purī, these two nephews of Śivānanda left the company as a protest and went to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī. The Lord could understand the feelings of the boys, and He asked His personal assistant Govinda to supply them prasāda until the party of Śivānanda arrived. During the Ratha-yātrā saṅkīrtana festival these two brothers were members of the party led by Mukunda. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 174, it is said that the gopī whose name was Kātyāyanī appeared as Śrīkānta Sena.

śrī-vijaya-dāsa-of the name Śrī Vijaya dāsa; nāma-name; prabhura-of the Lord; ākhariyā-chief singer; prabhure-unto the Lord; aneka-many; puṅthi-literatures; diyāche-has given; likhiyā-by writing.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Vijaya dāsa, the twenty-seventh branch, another of the Lord's chief singers, gave the Lord many books written by hand.

PURPORT

Formerly there were no printing presses or printed books. All books were handwritten. Precious books were kept in manuscript form in temples or important places, and anyone who was interested in a book had to copy it by hand. Vijaya dāsa was a professional writer who copied many manuscripts and gave them to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

SYNONYMS

ratnabāhu-the title Ratnabāhu; bali'-calling him; prabhu-the Lord; thuila-kept; tāṅra-his; nāma-name; akiñcana-unalloyed; prabhura-of the Lord; priya-dear; kṛṣṇadāsa-of the name Kṛṣṇadāsa; nāma-name.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu gave Vijaya dāsa the name Ratnabāhu ["jewel-handed"] because he copied many manuscripts for Him. The twenty-eighth branch was Kṛṣṇadāsa, who was very dear to the Lord. He was known as Akiñcana Kṛṣṇadāsa.

PURPORT

Akiñcana means "one who possesses nothing in this world."

kholā-vecā śrīdhara prabhura priya-dāsa yāṅhā-sane prabhu kare nitya parihāsa kholā-vecā-a person who sells the bark of banana trees; śrīdhara-Śrīdhara Prabhu; prabhura-of the Lord; priya-dāsa-very dear servant; yāṅha-sane-with whom; prabhu-the Lord; kare-does; nitya-daily; parihāsa-joking.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The twenty-ninth branch was Śrīdhara, a trader in banana-tree bark. He was a very dear servant of the Lord. On many occasions, the Lord played jokes on him.

PURPORT

Śrīdhara was a poor brāhmaṇa who made a living by selling banana-tree bark to be made into cups. Most probably he had a banana-tree garden and collected the leaves, skin and pulp of the banana trees to sell daily in the market. He spent fifty percent of his income to worship the Ganges, and the balance he used for his subsistence. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu started His civil disobedience movement in defiance of the Kāzī, Śrīdhara danced in jubilation.The Lord used to drink water from his water jug. Śrīdhara presented a squash to Śacīdevī to cook before Lord Caitanya took sannyāsa. Every year he went to see Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī. According to Kavi-karṇapūra, Śrīdhara was a cowherd boy of Vṛndāvana whose name was Kusumāsava. In his Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 133, it is stated:

kholā-vecātayā khyātaḥ paṇḍitaḥ śrīdharo dvijaḥ āsīd vraje hāsya-karo yo nāmnā kusumāsavaḥ

”The cowherd boy known as Kusumāsava in kṛṣṇa-līlā later became Kholāvecā Śrīdhara during Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s līlā at Navadvīpa.”

SYNONYMS

jagadīśa paṇḍita-of the name Jagadīśa Paṇḍita; āra-and; hiraṇya-of the name Hiraṇya; mahāśaya-great personality; yāre-unto whom; kṛpā-mercy; kaila-showed; bālye-in childhood; prabhu-the Lord; dayāmaya-merciful.

TRANSLATION

The thirty-first branch was Jagadīśa Paṇḍita, and the thirty-second was Hiraṇya Mahāśaya, unto whom Lord Caitanya in His childhood showed His causeless mercy.

PURPORT

Jagadīśa Paṇḍita was formerly a great dancer in kṛṣṇa-līla and was known as Candrahāsa. Regarding Hiraṇya Paṇḍita, it is said that once when Lord Nityānanda, decorated with valuable jewels, was staying at his home, a great thief attempted all night long to plunder these jewels but was unsuccessful. Later he came to Nityānanda Prabhu and surrendered unto Him.

TEXT 71

ei dui-ghare prabhu ekādaśī dine

SYNONYMS

ei dui-ghare-in these two houses; prabhu-the Lord; ekādaśī dine-on the Ekādaśī day; viṣṇura-of Lord Viṣṇu; naivedya-food offered to Lord Viṣṇu; māgi’-begging; khāila-ate; āpane-personally.

TRANSLATION

In their two houses Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu begged food on the Ekādaśī day and personally ate it.

PURPORT

The injunction to fast on Ekādaśī is especially meant for devotees; on Ekādaśī there are no restrictions regarding food that may be offered to the Lord. Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu took the food of Lord Viṣṇu in His ecstasy as viṣṇu-tattva.

TEXT 72

prabhura paḍuyā dui,–puruṣottama, sañjaya vyākaraṇe dui śiṣya–dui mahāśaya

SYNONYMS

prabhura paḍuyā dui-the Lord's two students; puruṣottama-of the name Puruṣottama; sañjaya-of the name Sañjaya; vyākaraṇe-studying grammar; dui śiṣya-two disciples; dui mahāśaya-very great personalities.

TRANSLATION

The thirty-third and thirty-fourth branches were the two students of Caitanya Mahāprabhu named Puruṣottama and Sañjaya, who were stalwart students in grammar. They were very great personalities.

PURPORT

These two students were inhabitants of Navadvīpa and were the Lord's first companions in the saṅkīrtana movement. According to the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Puruṣottama Sañjaya was the son of Mukunda Sañjaya, but the author of Śrī Caitanya-caritamṛta has clarified that Puruṣottama and Sañjaya were two people, not one.

SYNONYMS

śrī-caitanyera-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ati priya-very dear; buddhimanta khān-of the name Buddhimanta Khān; ājanma-from the very beginning of his life; ājñā-kārī-follower of the orders; teṅho-he; sevaka-servant; pradhāna-chief.

TRANSLATION

The thirty-sixth branch, Buddhimanta Khān, was extremely dear to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He was always prepared to carry out the Lord's orders, and therefore he was considered a chief servant of the Lord.

PURPORT

Śrī Buddhimanta Khān was one of the inhabitants of Navadvīpa. He was very rich, and it is he who arranged for the marriage of Lord Caitanya with Viṣṇupriyā, the daughter of Sanātana Miśra, who was the priest of the local Zamindar. He personally defrayed all the expenditures for the marriage ceremony. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was attacked by vāyu-vyādhi (derangement of the air within the body) Buddhimanta Khān paid for all requisite medicines and treatments to cure the Lord. He was the Lord's constant companion in the kīrtana movement. He collected ornaments for the Lord when He played the part of the goddess of fortune in the house of Candraśekhara Ācārya. He also went to see Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu when He was staying at Jagannātha Purī.

bhāgavatī devānanda vakreśvara-kṛpāte bhāgavatera bhakti-artha pāila prabhu haite

SYNONYMS

bhāgavatī devānanda-Devānanda, who used to recite Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; vakreśvara-kṛpāte-by the mercy of Vakreśvara; bhāgavatera-of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; bhakti-artha-the bhakti interpretation; pāila-got; prabhu haite-from the Lord.

TRANSLATION

Devānanda Paṇḍita was a professional reciter of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, but by the mercy of Vakreśvara Paṇḍita and the grace of the Lord he understood the devotional interpretation of the Bhāgavatam.

PURPORT

In the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-līlā, Chapter Twenty-one, it is stated that Devānanda Paṇḍita and Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya's father, Viśārada, lived in the same village. Devānanda Paṇḍita was a professional reciter of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, but Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not like his interpretation of it. In the present town of Navadvīpa, which was formerly known as Kuliyā, Lord Caitanya showed such mercy to him that he gave up the Māyāvādī interpretation of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and learned how to explain Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in terms of bhakti. Formerly, when Devānanda was expounding the Māyāvādī interpretation, Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura was once present in his meeting, and when he began to cry, Devānanda's students drove him away. Some days later, Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed that way, and when He met Devānanda He chastised him severely because of his Māyāvāda interpretation of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. At that time Devānanda had little faith in Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as an incarnation of Lord Kṛṣṇa, but one night some time later Vakreśvara Paṇḍita was a guest in his house, and when he explained the science of Kṛṣṇa, Devānanda was convinced about the identity of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Thus he was induced to explain Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam according to the Vaiṣṇava understanding In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 106, it is described that he was formerly Bhāguri Muni, who was the sabhā-paṇḍita who recited Vedic literature in the house of Nanda Mahārāja.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Khaṇḍavāsī Mukunda and his son Raghunandana were the thirty-ninth branch of the tree, Narahari was the fortieth, Cirañjīva the forty-first and Sulocana the forty-second. They were all big branches of the all-merciful tree of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. They distributed the fruits and flowers of love of Godhead anywhere and everywhere.

PURPORT

Śrī Mukunda dāsa was the son of Nārāyaṇa dāsa and eldest brother of Narahari Sarakāra. His second brother's name was Mādhava dāsa, and his son was named Raghunandana dāsa. Descendants of Raghunandana dāsa still live four miles west of Katwa in the village named Śrīkhaṇḍa, where Raghunandana dāsa used to live. Raghunandana had one son named Kānāi, who had two sons-Madana Rāya, who was a disciple of Narahari Ṭhākura, and Vaṁśīvadana. It is estimated that at least four hundred men descended in this dynasty. All their names are recorded in the village known as Śrīkhaṇḍa. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 175, it is stated that the gopī whose name was Vṛndādevī became Mukunda dāsa, lived in Śrīkhaṇḍa village and was very dear to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. His wonderful devotion and love for Kṛṣṇa are described in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Chapter Fifteen. It is stated in the Bhakti-ratnākara (Eighth Wave), that Raghunandana used to serve a Deity of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Narahari dāsa Sarakāra was a very famous devotee. Locana dāsa Ṭhākura, the celebrated author of Śrī Caitanya-maṅgala, was his disciple. In the Caitanya-maṅgala it is stated that Śrī Gadādhara dāsa and Narahari Sarakāra were extremely dear to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, but there is no specific statement regarding the inhabitants of the village of Śrīkhaṇḍa.

Cirañjīva and Sulocana were both residents of Śrīkhaṇḍa, where their descendants are still living. Of Cirañjīva's two sons, the elder, Rāmacandra Kavirāja, was a disciple of Śrīnivāsācārya and an intimate associate of Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura. The younger son was Govinda dāsa Kavirāja, the famous Vaiṣṇava poet. Cirañjīva's wife was Sunandā, and his father-in-law was Dāmodara Sena Kavirāja. Cirañjīva previously lived on the bank of the Ganges River in the village of Kumāranagara. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 207, states that he was formerly Candrikā in Vṛndāvana.

ei tina śākhā vṛkṣera paścime sarvottama anupama-of the name Anupama; vallabha-of the name Vallabha; śrī-rūpa-of the name Śrī Rūpa; sanātana-of the name Sanātana; ei-these; tina-three; śākhā-branches; vṛkṣera-of the tree; paścime-on the western side; sarvottama-very great.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

On the western side were the forty-third, forty-fourth and forty-fifth branches-Śrī Sanātana, Śrī Rūpa and Anupama. They were the best of all.

PURPORT

Śrī Anupama was the father of Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī and youngest brother of Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī and Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī. His former name was Vallabha, but after Lord Caitanya met him He gave him the name Anupama. Because of working in the Muslim government, these three brothers were given the title Mullik. Our personal family is connected with the Mulliks of Mahatma Gandhi Road in Calcutta, and we often used to visit their Rādhā-Govinda temple. They belong to the same family as we do. (Our family gotra, or original genealogical line, is the Gautama-gotra, or line of disciples of Gautama Muni, and our surname is De.) But due to their accepting the posts of Zamindars in the Muslim government, they received the title Mullik. Similarly, Rūpa, Sanātana and Vallabha were also given the title Mullik. Mullik means "lord." Just as the English government gives rich and respectable persons the title "lord," so the Muslims give the title Mullik to rich, respectable families that have intimate connections with the government. The title Mullik is found not only among the Hindu aristocracy but also among Muslims. This title is not restricted to a particular family but is given to different families and castes. The qualifications for receiving it are wealth and respectabilityi Sanātana Gosvāmī and Rūpa Gosvāmī belonged to the Bharadvāja-gotra, which indicates that they belonged either to the family or disciplic succession of Bharadvāja Muni. As members of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement we belong to the family, or disciplic succession, of Sarasvatī Gosvāmī, and thus we are known as Sārasvatas. Obeisances are therefore offered to the spiritual master as sārasvata-deva, or a member of the Sārasvata family (namas te sārasvate deve), whose mission is to broadcast the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu (gaura-vāṇī-pracāriṇe) and to fight with impersonalists and voidists (nirviśeṣa-śūnyavādi-pāścātya-deśa-tāriṇe). This was also the occupational duty of Sanātana Gosvāmī, Rūpa Gosvāmī and Anupama Gosvāmī.

The genealogical table of Sanātana Gosvāmī, Rūpa Gosvāmī and Vallabha Gosvāmī can be traced back to the twelfth century śakābda, when a gentleman of the name Sarvajña appeared in a very rich and opulent brāhmaṇa family in the province of Karṇāṭa. He had two sons, named Aniruddhera Rūpeśvara and Harihara, who were both bereft of their kingdoms and thus obliged to reside in the highlands. The son of Rūpeśvara, who was named Padmanābha, moved to a place in Bengal known as Naihāṭī on the bank of the Ganges. There he had five sons, of whom the youngest, Mukunda, had a well-behaved son named Kumāradeva, who was the father of Rūpa, Sanātana and Vallabha. Kumāradeva lived in Bāklācandradvīpa, which was in the district of Jessore and is now known as Phateyābād. Of his many sons, three took to the path of Vaiṣṇavism. Later, Śrī Vallabha and his elder brothers Śrī Rūpa and Sanātana came from Candradvīpa to the village in the Maldah district of Bengal known as Rāmakeli. It is in this village that Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī took birth, accepting Vallabha as his father. Because of engaging in the service of the Muslim government, the three brothers received the title Mullik. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited the village of Rāmakeli, He met Vallabha there. Later, Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī, after meeting Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, resigned from government service, and when he went to Vṛndāvana to meet Lord Caitanya, Vallabha accompanied him. The meeting of Rūpa Gosvāmī and Vallabha with Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Allahabad is described in the Madhya-līlā, Chapter Nineteen.

Actually, it is to be understood from the statement of Sanātana Gosvāmī that Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī and Vallabha went to Vṛndāvana under the instructions of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. First they went to Mathurā, where they met a gentleman named Subuddhi Rāya, who maintained himself by selling dry fuel wood. He was very pleased to meet Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī and Anupama, and he showed them the twelve forests of Vṛndāvana. Thus they lived in Vṛndāvana for one month and then again went to search for Sanātana Gosvāmī. Following the course of the Ganges, they reached Allahabad, or Prayāga-tīrtha, but because Sanātana Gosvāmī had come there by a different road, they did not meet him there, and when Sanātana Gosvāmī came to Mathurā he was informed of the visit of Rūpa Gosvāmī and Anupama by Subuddhi Rāya. When Rūpa Gosvāmī and Anupama met Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Benares, they heard about Sanātana Gosvāmī's travels from Him, and thus they returned to Bengal, adjusted their affairs with the state and, on the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, went to see the Lord at Jagannātha Purī.

In the year 1436 śakābda (A.D. 1515), the youngest brother, Anupama, died and went back home, back to Godhead. He went to the abode in the spiritual sky where Śrī Rāmacandra is situated. At Jagannātha Purī, Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī informed Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu of this incident. Vallabha was a great devotee of Śrī Rāmacandra; therefore he could not seriously consider the worship of Rādhā-Govinda according to the instructions of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Yet he directly accepted Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as an incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead Rāmacandra. In the Bhakti-ratnākara there is the following statement: "Vallabha was given the name Anupama by Śrī Gaurasundara, but he was always absorbed in the devotional service of Lord Rāmacandra. He did not know anyone but Śrī Rāmacandra, but he knew that Caitanya Gosāñi was the same Lord Rāmacandra."

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (180) Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī is described to be the gopī named Śrī Rūpa-mañjarī. In the Bhakti-ratnākara there is a list of the books Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī compiled. Of all his books, the following sixteen are very popular among Vaiṣṇavas: (1) Haṁsadūta, (2) Uddhava-sandeśa, (3) Kṛṣṇa-janma-tithi-vidhi, (4 and 5) Rādhā-kṛṣṇa-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, Bṛhat (major) and Laghu (minor), (6) Stavamālā, (7) Vidagdha-mādhava, (8) Lalita-mādhava, (9) Dāna-keli-kaumudi, (10) Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (this is the most celebrated book by Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī), (11) Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi, (12) Ākhyāta-candrikā, (13) Mathurā-mahimā, (14) Padyāvalī, (15) Nāṭaka-candrikā and (16) Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta. Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī gave up all family connections, joined the renounced order of life and divided his money, giving fifty percent to the brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas and twenty-five percent to his kuṭumba (family members) and keeping twenty-five percent for personal emergencies. He met Haridāsa Ṭhākura in Jagannātha Purī, where he also met Lord Caitanya and His other associates. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to praise the handwriting of Rūpa Gosvāmī. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī could compose verses according to the desires of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and by His direction he wrote two books named Lalita-mādhava and Vidagdha-mādhava. Lord Caitanya desired the two brothers, Sanātana Gosvāmī and Rūpa Gosvāmī, to publish many books in support of the Vaiṣṇava religion. When Sanātana Gosvāmī met Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Lord advised him also to go to Vṛndāvana.

Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī is described in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (181). He was formerly known as Rati-mañjarī or sometimes Lavaṅga-mañjarī. In the Bhakti-ratnākara it is stated that his spiritual master, Vidyāvācaspati, sometimes stayed in the village of Rāmakeli, and Sanātana Gosvāmī studied all the Vedic literature from him. He was so devoted to his spiritual master that this cannot be described. According to the Vedic system, if someone sees a Muslim he must perform rituals to atone for the meeting. Sanātana Gosvāmī always associated with Muslim kings. Not giving much attention to the Vedic injunctions, he used to visit the houses of Muslim kings, and thus he considered himself to have been converted into a Muslim. He was therefore always very humble and meek. When Sanātana Gosvāmī presented himself before Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he admitted, "I am always in association with lower-class people, and my behavior is therefore very abominable." He actually belonged to a respectable brāhmaṇa family, but because he considered his behavior to be abominable, he did not try to place himself among the brāhmaṇas but always remained among people of the lower castes. He wrote the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa and Vaiṣṇava-toṣaṇī, which is a commentary on the Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. In the year 1476 śakābda (A.D. 1555) he completed the Bṛhad-vaiṣṇava-toṣaṇī commentary on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. In the year 1504 śakābda (A.D. 1583) he finished the Laghu-toṣaṇī.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu taught His principles through four chief followers. Among them, Rāmānanda Rāya is exceptional, for through him the Lord taught how a devotee can completely vanquish the power of Cupid. By Cupid's power, as soon as one sees a beautiful woman he is conquered by her beauty. Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya, however, vanquished Cupid's pride. Indeed, while rehearsing the Jagannātha-vallabha-nāṭaka he personally directed extremely beautiful young girls in dancing, but he was never affected by their youthful beauty. Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya personally bathed these girls, touching them and washing them with his own hands, yet he remained calm and passionless, as a great devotee should be. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu certified that this was possible only for Rāmānanda Rāya. Similarly, Dāmodara Paṇḍita was notable for his objectivity as a critic. He did not even spare Caitanya Mahāprabhu from his criticism. This also cannot be imitated by anyone else. Haridāsa Ṭhākura is exceptional for his forbearance because although he was beaten with canes in twenty-two marketplaces, nevertheless he was tolerant. Similarly, Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī, although he belonged to a most respectable brāhmaṇa family, was exceptional for his humility and meekness.

In the Madhya-līlā, Chapter Nineteen, the device adopted by Sanātana Gosvāmī to get free from the government service is described. He served a notice of sickness to the Nawab, the Moslem governer, but actually he was studying Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam with brāhmaṇas at home. The Nawab received information of this through a royal physician, and he immediately went to see Sanātana Gosvāmī to discover his intentions. The Nawab requested Sanātana to accompany him on an expedition to Orissa, but when Sanātana Gosvāmī refused, the Nawab ordered that he be imprisoned. When Rūpa Gosvāmī left home, he wrote a note for Sanātana Gosvāmī informing him of some money that he had entrusted to a local grocer. Sanātana Gosvāmī took advantage of this money to bribe the jail keeper and get free from detention. Then he left for Benares to meet Caitanya Mahāprabhu, bringing with him only one servant, whose name was Īśāna. On the way they stopped at a sarāi, or hotel, and when the hotel keeper found out that Īśāna had some gold coins with him, he planned to kill both Sanātana Gosvāmī and Īśāna to take away the coins. Later Sanātana Gosvāmī saw that although the hotel keeper did not know them, he was being especially attentive to their comfort. Therefore he concluded that Īśāna was secretly carrying some money and that the hotel keeper was aware of this and therefore planned to kill them for it. Upon being questioned by Sanātana Gosvāmī, Īśāna admitted that he indeed had money with him, and immediately Sanātana Gosvāmī took the money and gave it to the hotel keeper, requesting him to help them get though the jungle. Thus with the help of the hotel keeper, who was also the chief of the thieves of that territory, he crossed over the Hazipur mountains, which are presently known as the Hazaribags. He then met his brother-in-law Śrīkānta, who requested that he stay with him. Sanātana Gosvāmī refused, but before they parted Śrīkānta gave him a valuable blanket.

Somehow or other Sanātana Gosvāmī reached Vārāṇasī and met Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu at the house of Candraśekhara. By the order of the Lord, Sanātana Gosvāmī was cleanly shaved and his dress changed to that of a mendicant, or bābājī. He put on old garments of Tapana Miśra and took prasāda at the house of a Maharashtran brāhmaṇa. Then, in discourses with Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Lord Himself explained everything about devotional service to Sanātana Gosvāmī. He advised Sanātana Gosvāmī to write books on devotional service, including a book of directions for Vaiṣṇava activities, and to excavate the lost places of pilgrimage in Vṛndāvana. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu gave him His blessings to do all this work and also explained to Sanātana Gosvāmī the import of the ātmārāma verse from sixty-one different angles of vision.

Sanātana Gosvāmī went to Vṛndāvana by the main road, and when he reached Mathurā he met Subuddhi Rāya. Then he returned to Jagannātha Purī through Jhārikhaṇḍa, the Uttar Pradesh jungle. At Jagannātha Purī he decided to give up his body by falling down beneath a wheel of the Jagannātha ratha, but Caitanya Mahāprabhu saved him. Then Sanātana Gosvāmī met Haridāsa Ṭhākura and heard about the disappearance of Anupama. Sanātana Gosvāmī later described the glories of Haridāsa Ṭhākura. Sanātana observed the etiquette of Jagannātha's temple by going through the beach to visit Lord Caitanya, although it was extremely hot due to the sun. He requested Jagadānanda Paṇḍita to give him permission to return to Vṛndāvana. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu praised the character of Sanātana Gosvāmī, and He embraced Sanātana, accepting his body as spiritual. Sanātana Gosvāmī was ordered by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to live at Jagannātha Purī for one year. When he returned to Vṛndāvana after many years, he again met Rūpa Gosvāmī, and both brothers remained in Vṛndāvana to execute the orders of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

The place where Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī formerly lived has now become a place of pilgrimage. It is generally known as Gupta Vṛndāvana, or hidden Vṛndāvana, and is situated about eight miles south of English Bazaar. There the following places are still visited: (1) the temple of Śrī Madana-mohana Deity, (2) the Keli-kadamba tree under which Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu met Sanātana Gosvāmī at night and (3) Rūpasāgara, a large pond excavated by Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī. A society named Rāmakeli-saṁskāra-samiti was established in 1924 to repair the temple and renovate the pond.

tāṅra madhye rūpa-sanātana–baḍa śākhā anupama, jīva, rājendrādi upaśākhā

SYNONYMS

tāṅra-within that; madhye-in the midst of; rūpa-sanātana-the branch known as Rūpa-Sanātana; baḍa śākhā-the big branch; anupama-of the name Anupama; jīva-of the name Jīva; rājendra-ādi-and Rājendra and others; upaśākhā-their subbranches.

TRANSLATION

Among these branches, Rūpa and Sanātana were principal. Anupama, Jīva Gosvāmī and others, headed by Rājendra, were their subbranches.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 195, it is said that Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī was formerly Vilāsa-mañjarī gopī. From his very childhood Jīva Gosvāmī was greatly fond of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. He later came to Navadvīpa to study Sanskrit, and, following in the footsteps of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, he circumambulated the entire Navadvīpa-dhāma. After visiting Navadvīpa-dhāma he went to Benares to study Sanskrit under Madhusūdana Vācaspati, and after finishing his studies in Benares he went to Vṛndāvana and took shelter of his uncles, Śrī Rūpa and Sanātana. This is described in the Bhakti-ratnākara. As far as our information goes, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī composed and edited at least twenty-five books. They are all very celebrated, and they are listed as follows: (1) Hari-nāmāmṛta-vyākaraṇa, (2) Sūtra-mālikā, (3) Dhātu-saṅgraha, (4) Kṛṣṇārcā-dīpikā, (5) Gopāla-virudāvalī, (6) Rasāmṛta-śeṣa, (7) Śrī Mādhava-mahotsava, (8) Śrī Saṅkalpa-kalpavṛkṣa, (9) Bhāvārtha-sūcaka-campū, (10) Gopāla-tāpanī-ṭīkā, (11) a commentary on the Brahma-saṁhitā, (12) a commentary on the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, (13) a commentary on the Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi, (14) a commentary on the Yogasāra-stava, (15) a commentary on the Gāyatrī-mantra, as described in the Agni Purāṇa, (16) a description of the Lord's lotus feet derived from the Padma Purāṇa, (17) a description of the lotus feet of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, (18) Gopāla-campū (in two parts) and (19-25) seven sandarbhas: the Krama-, Tattva-, Bhagavat-, Paramātma-, Kṛṣṇa-, Bhakti- and Prīti-sandarbha. After the disappearance of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī in Vṛndāvana, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī became the ācārya of all the Vaiṣṇavas in Bengal, Orissa and the rest of the world, and it is he who used to guide them in their devotional service. In Vṛndāvana he established the Rādhā-Dāmodara temple, where we had the opportunity to live and retire until the age of sixty-five, when we decided to come to the United States of America. When Jīva Gosvāmī was still present, Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī compiled his famous Caitanya-caritāmṛta. Later, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī inspired Śrīnivāsa Ācārya, Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura and Duḥkhī Kṛṣṇadāsa to preach Kṛṣṇa consciousness in Bengal. Jīva Gosvāmī was informed that all the manuscripts that had been collected from Vṛndāvana and sent to Bengal for preaching purposes were plundered near Viṣṇupura, in Bengal, but later he received the information that the books had been recovered. Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī awarded the designation Kavirāja to Rāmacandra Sena, a disciple of Śrīnivāsa Ācārya's, and to Rāmacandra's younger brother Govinda. While Jīva Gosvāmī was alive, Śrīmatī Jāhnavī-devī, the pleasure potency of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, went to Vṛndāvana with a few devotees. Jīva Gosvāmī was very kind to the Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇavas, the Vaiṣṇavas from Bengal. Whoever went to Vṛndāvana he provided with a residence and prasāda. His disciple Kṛṣṇadāsa Adhikārī listed all the books of the Gosvāmīs in his diary.

The sahajiyās level three accusations against Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī. This is certainly not congenial for the execution of devotional service. The first accusation concerns a materialist who was very proud of his reputation as a great Sanskrit scholar and approached Śrī Rūpa and Sanātana to argue with them about the revealed scriptures. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī, not wanting to waste their time, gave him a written statement that he had defeated them in a debate on the revealed scriptures. Taking this paper, the scholar approached Jīva Gosvāmī for a similar certificate of defeat, but Jīva Gosvāmī did not agree to give him one. On the contrary, he argued with him regarding the scriptures and defeated him. Certainly it was right for Jīva Gosvāmī to stop such a dishonest scholar from advertising that he had defeated Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī, but due to their illiteracy the sahajiyā class refer to this incident to accuse Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī of deviating from the principle of humility. They do not know, however, that humility and meekness are appropriate when one's own honor is insulted but not when Lord Viṣṇu or the ācāryas are blasphemed. In such cases one should not be humble and meek but must act. One should follow the example given by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Lord Caitanya says in His Śikṣāṣṭaka (3):

tṛṇād api sunīcena
taror ivasahiṣṇunā
amāninā mānadena
kīrtanīyaḥ sadā hariḥ

”One can chant the holy name of the Lord in a humble state of mind, thinking himself lower than the straw in the street. One should be more tolerant than a tree, devoid of all sense of false prestige, and should be ready to offer all respect to others. In such a state of mind one can chant the holy name of the Lord constantly.” Nevertheless, when the Lord was informed that Nityānanda Prabhu was injured by Jagāi and Mādhāi, He immediately went to the spot, angry like fire, wanting to kill them. Thus Lord Caitanya has explained His verse by the example of His own behavior. One should tolerate insults against oneself, but when there is blasphemy committed against superiors such as other Vaiṣṇavas, one should be neither humble nor meek; one must take proper steps to counteract such blasphemy. This is the duty of a servant of a guru and Vaiṣṇavas. Anyone who understands the principle of eternal servitude to the guru and Vaiṣṇavas will appreciate the action of Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī in connection with the so-called scholar’s victory over his gurus, Śrīla Rūpa and Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī.

Another story fabricated to defame Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī states that after compiling Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī showed the manuscript to Jīva Gosvāmī, who thought that it would hamper his reputation as a big scholar and therefore threw it into a well. Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī was greatly shocked, and he died immediately. Fortunately a copy of the manuscript of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta had been kept by a person named Mukunda, and therefore later it was possible to publish the book. This story is another ignominious example of blasphemy against a guru and Vaiṣṇava. Such a story should never be accepted as authoritative.

According to another accusation, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī did not approve of the principles of the pārakīya-rasa of Vraja-dhāma and therefore supported svakīya-rasa, showing that Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa are eternally married. Actually, when Jīva Gosvāmī was alive, some of his followers disliked the pārakīya-rasa of the gopīs. Therefore Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī, for their spiritual benefit, supported svakīya-rasa, for he could understand that sahajiyās would otherwise exploit the pārakīya-rasa, as they are actually doing at the present. Unfortunately, in Vṛndāvana and Navadvīpa it has become fashionable among sahajiyās, in their debauchery, to find an unmarried sexual partner to live with to execute so-called devotional service in pārakīya-rasa. Foreseeing this, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī supported svakīya-rasa, and later all the Vaiṣṇava ācāryas also approved of it. Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī was never opposed to the transcendental pārakīya-rasa, nor has any other Vaiṣṇava disapproved of it. Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī strictly followed his predecessor gurus and Vaiṣṇavas, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī, and Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī accepted him as one of his instructor gurus.

SYNONYMS

ā-sindhu-nadī-to the border of the river Sindhu; tīra-border; āra-and; himālaya-the Himalayan Mountains; vṛndāvana-of the name Vṛndāvana; mathurā-of the name Mathurā; ādi-heading the list; yata-all; tīrtha-places of pilgrimage; haya-there are.

TRANSLATION

Extending to the borders of the river Sindhu and the Himalayan Mountain valleys, these two branches expanded throughout India, including all the places of pilgrimage, such as Vṛndāvana, Mathurā and Haridvāra.

TEXT 88

SYNONYMS

dui śākhāra-of the two branches; prema-phale-by the fruit of love of Godhead; sakala-all; bhāsila-became overflooded; prema-phala-the fruit of love of Godhead; āsvāde-by tasting; loka-all people; unmatta-maddened; ha-ila-became.

TRANSLATION

The fruits of love of Godhead which fructified on these two branches were distributed in abundance. Tasting these fruits, everyone became mad after them.

TEXT 89

paścimera loka saba mūḍha anācāra tāhāṅ pracārila doṅhe bhakti-sadācāra

SYNONYMS

paścimera-on the western side; loka-people in general; saba-all; mūḍha-less intelligent; anācāra-not well behaved; tāhāṅ-there; pracārila-preached; doṅhe-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī; bhakti-devotional service; sad-ācāra-good behavior.

TRANSLATION

The people in general on the western side of India were neither intelligent nor well behaved, but by the influence of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī they were trained in devotional service and good behavior.

PURPORT

Although it is not only in western India that people were contaminated by association with Muslims, it is a fact that the farther west one goes in India the more he will find the people to be fallen from the Vedic culture. Even until five thousand years ago, when the entire planet was under the control of Mahārāja Parīkṣit, the Vedic culture was current everywhere. Gradually, however, people were influenced by non-Vedic culture, and they lost sight of how to behave in connection with devotional service. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī very kindly preached the bhakti cult in western India, and following in their footsteps the propagators of the Caitanya cult in the Western countries are spreading the saṅkīrtana movement and inculcating the principles of Vaiṣṇava behavior, thus purifying and reforming many persons who were previously accustomed to the culture of mlecchas and yavanas. All of our devotees in the Western countries give up their old habits of illicit sex, intoxication, meat-eating and gambling. Of course, five hundred years ago these practices were unknown in India-at least in eastern India-but unfortunately at present all of India has been victimized by these non-Vedic principles, which are sometimes even supported by the government.

SYNONYMS

śāstra-dṛṣṭye-according to the directions of revealed scriptures; kaila-did; lupta-forgotten; tīrthera-places of pilgrimage; uddhāra-excavation; vṛndāvane-in Vṛndāvana; kaila-did; śrī-mūrti-Deity; sevāra-of worship; pracāra-propagation.

TRANSLATION

In accordance with the directions of the revealed scriptures, both Gosvāmīs excavated the lost places of pilgrimage and inaugurated the worship of Deities in Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

The spot where we now find Śrī Rādhā-kuṇḍa was an agricultural field during the time of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. A small reservoir of water was there, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu bathed in that water and pointed out that originally Rādhā-kuṇḍa existed in that location. Following His directions, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī renovated Rādhā-kuṇḍa. This is one of the brilliant examples of how the Gosvāmīs excavated lost places of pilgrimage. Similarly, it is through the endeavor of the Gosvāmīs that all the important temples at Vṛndāvana were established. Originally there were seven important Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇava temples established in Vṛndāvana, namely, the Madana-mohana temple, Govinda temple, Gopīnātha temple, Śrī Rādhāramaṇa temple, Rādhā-Śyāmasundara temple, Rādhā-Dāmodara temple and Gokulānanda temple.

mahāprabhura priya bhṛtya–raghunātha-dāsa sarva tyaji' kaila prabhura pada-tale vāsa mahāprabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; priya-very dear; bhṛtya-servant; raghunātha-dāsa-Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; sarva tyaji'-renouncing everything; kaila-did; prabhura-of the Lord; pada-tale-under the shelter of the lotus feet; vāsa-habitation.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, the forty-sixth branch of the tree, was one of the most dear servants of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He left all his material possessions to surrender completely unto the Lord and live at His lotus feet.

PURPORT

Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī was most probably born in the year 1416 śakābda (A.D. 1495) in a kāyastha family as the son of Govardhana Majumdāra, who was the younger brother of the then Zamindar, Hiraṇya Majumdāra. The village where he took birth is known as Śrī Kṛṣṇapura. On the railway line between Calcutta and Burdwan is a station named Triśābaghā, and about one and a half miles away is the village of Śrī Kṛṣṇapura, where the parental home of Śrī Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī was situated. A temple of Śrī Śrī Rādhā-Govinda is still there. In front of the temple is a large open area but no large hall for meetings. However, a rich Calcutta gentleman named Haricaraṇa Ghoṣa, who resided in the Simlā quarter, recently repaired the temple. The entire temple compound is surrounded by walls, and in a small room just to the side of the temple is a small platform on which Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī used to worship the Deity. By the side of the temple is the dying River Sarasvatī.

The forefathers of Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī were all Vaiṣṇavas and were very rich men. His spiritual master at home was Yadunandana Ācārya. Although Raghunātha dāsa was a family man, he had no attachment for his estate and wife. Seeing his tendency to leave home, his father and uncle engaged special bodyguards to watch over him, but nevertheless he managed to escape their vigilance and went away to Jagannātha Purī to meet Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This incident took place in the year 1439 śakābda (A.D. 1518). Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī compiled three books, named Stava-mālā (or Stavāvalī), Dāna-carita and Muktācarita. He lived a long time. For most of his life he resided at Rādhā-kuṇḍa. The place where Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī performed his devotional service still exists by Rādhā-kuṇḍa. He almost completely gave up eating, and therefore he was very skinny and of weak health. His only concern was to chant the holy name of the Lord. He gradually reduced his sleeping until he was almost not sleeping at all. It is said that his eyes were always full of tears. When Śrīnivāsa Ācārya went to see Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, the Gosvāmī blessed him by embracing him. Śrīnivāsa Ācārya requested his blessings for preaching in Bengal, and Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī granted them. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (186) it is stated that Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī was formerly the gopī named Rasa-mañjarī. Sometimes it is said that he was Rati-mañjarī.

SYNONYMS

prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; samarpila-handed over; tāṅre-him; svarūpera-Svarūpa Dāmodara; hāte-to the hand; prabhura-of the Lord; gupta-sevā-confidential service; kaila-did; svarūpera-Svarūpa Dāmodara; sāthe-with.

TRANSLATION

When Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī approached Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī, the Lord entrusted him to the care of Svarūpa Dāmodara, His secretary. Thus they both engaged in the confidential service of the Lord.

PURPORT

This confidential service was the personal care of the Lord. Svarūpa Dāmodara, acting as His secretary, attended to the Lord's baths, meals, rest and massages, and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī assisted him. In effect, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī acted as the assistant secretary of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

ṣoḍaśa-sixteen; vatsara-years; kaila-did; antaraṅga-confidential; sevana-service; svarūpera-of Svarūpa Dāmodara; antardhāne-disappearance; āilā-came; vṛndāvana-to Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

He rendered confidential service to the Lord for sixteen years at Jagannātha Purī, and after the disappearance of both the Lord and Svarūpa Dāmodara, he left Jagannātha Purī and went to Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 94

vṛndāvane dui bhāira caraṇa dekhiyā govardhane tyajiba deha bhṛgupāta kariyā vṛndāvane-at Vṛndāvana; dui bhāira-the two brothers (Rūpa and Sanātana); caraṇa-feet; dekhiyā-after seeing; govardhane-on the hill of Govardhana; tyajiba-will give up; deha-this body; bhṛgupāta-falling down; kariyā-doing so.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī intended to go to Vṛndāvana to see the lotus feet of Rūpa and Sanātana and then give up his life by jumping from Govardhana Hill.

PURPORT

Jumping from the top of Govardhana Hill is a system of suicide especially performed by saintly persons. After the disappearance of Lord Caitanya and Svarūpa Dāmodara, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī keenly felt separation from these two exalted personalities and therefore decided to give up his life by jumping from Govardhana Hill in Vṛndāvana. Before doing so, however, he wanted to see the lotus feet of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī.

TEXT 95

ei ta' niścaya kari' āila vṛndāvane āsi' rūpa-sanātanera vandila caraṇe ei ta'-thus; niścaya kari'-having decided; āila-came; vṛndāvane-to Vṛndāvana; āsi'-coming there; rūpa-sanātanera-of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī; vandila-offered respects; caraṇe-at the lotus feet.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thus Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī came to Vṛndāvana, visited Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī and offered them his obeisances.

TEXT 96

TRANSLATION

Because Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī was an assistant to Svarūpa Dāmodara, he knew much about the external and internal features of the pastimes of Lord Caitanya. Thus the two brothers Rūpa and Sanātana always used to hear of this from him.

SYNONYMS

rātri-dine-day and night; rādhā-kṛṣṇera-of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa; mānasa-within the mind; sevana-service; prahareka-about three hours; mahāprabhura-of Lord Caitanya; caritra-character; kathana-discussing.

TRANSLATION

Day and night he rendered service within his mind to Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa, and for three hours a day he discoursed about the character of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

We have many things to learn about bhajana, or worship of the Lord, by following in the footsteps of Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī. All the Gosvāmīs engaged in such transcendental activities, as described by Śrīnivāsa Ācārya in his poem about them (kṛṣṇotkīrtana-gāna-nartana-parau premāmṛtāmbho-nidhī). Following in the footsteps of Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī, one has to execute devotional service very strictly, specifically by chanting the holy name of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

tāṅhāra-his; sādhana-rīti-process of devotional service; śunite-to hear; camatkāra-wonderful; sei-that; rūpa-Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī; raghunātha-Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; prabhu-lord; ye-that; āmāra-my.

TRANSLATION

I am struck with wonder when I hear about the devotional service he executed. I accept Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī as my guides.

PURPORT

Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī accepted Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī as his special guide. Therefore at the end of every chapter he says, śrī-rūpa-raghunātha-pade yāra āśa caitanya-caritāmṛta kahe kṛṣṇadāsa. Sometimes it is misunderstood that by using the word raghunātha he wanted to offer his respectful obeisances to Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, for it is sometimes stated that Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī was his initiating spiritual master. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī does not approve of this statement; he does not accept Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī as the spiritual master of Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī.

SYNONYMS

śrī-gopāla bhaṭṭa-of the name Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa; eka-one; śākhā-branch; sarva-uttama-very exalted; rūpa-of the name Rūpa; sanātana-of the name Sanātana; saṅge-company; yāṅra-whose; prema-love of Godhead; ālāpana-discussion.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, the forty-seventh branch, was one of the great and exalted branches of the tree. He always engaged in discourses about love of Godhead in the company of Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī.

PURPORT

Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī was the son of Veṅkata Bhaṭṭa, a resident of Śrīraṅgam. Gopāla Bhaṭṭa formerly belonged to the disciplic succession of the Rāmānuja-sampradāya but later became part of the Gauḍīya-sampradāya. In the year 1433 śakābda (A.D. 1512), when Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was touring South India, He stayed for four months during the period of Cāturmāsya at the house of Veṅkata Bhaṭṭa, who then got the opportunity to serve the Lord to his heart's content. Gopāla Bhaṭṭa also got the opportunity to serve the Lord at this time. Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī was later initiated by his uncle, the great sannyāsī Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī. Both the father and mother of Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī were extremely fortunate, for they dedicated their entire lives to the service of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. They allowed Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī to go to Vṛndāvana, and they gave up their lives thinking of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When Lord Caitanya was later informed that Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī had gone to Vṛndāvana and met Śrī Rūpa and Sanātana Gosvāmī, He was very pleased, and He advised Śrī Rūpa and Sanātana to accept Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī as their younger brother and take care of him. Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī, out of his great affection for Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, compiled the Vaiṣṇava smṛti named Hari-bhakti-vilāsa and published it under his name. Under the instruction of Śrīla Rūpa and Sanātana, Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī installed one of the seven principal Deities of Vṛndāvana, the Rādhāramaṇa Deity. The sevaits (priests) of the Rādhāramaṇa temple belong to the Gauḍīya-sampradāya.

When Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī took permission from all the Vaiṣṇavas before writing Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī also gave him his blessings, but he requested him not to mention his name in the book. Therefore Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī has mentioned Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī only very cautiously in one or two passages of the Caitanya-caritāmṛta. Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī has written in the beginning of his Tattva-sandarbha, "A devotee from southern India who was born of a brāhmaṇa family and was a very intimate friend of Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī has written a book that he has not compiled chronologically. Therefore I, a tiny living entity known as jīva, am trying to assort the events of the book chronologically, consulting the direction of great personalities like Madhvācārya, Śrīdhara Svāmī, Rāmānujācārya and other senior Vaiṣṇavas in the disciplic succession." In the beginning of the Bhagavat-sandarbha there are similar statements by Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī. Śrīla Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī compiled a book called Sat-kriyā-sāra-dīpikā, edited the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa, wrote a forword to the Ṣaṭ-sandarbha and a commentary on the Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta, and installed the Rādhāramaṇa Deity in Vṛndāvana. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 184, it is mentioned that his previous name in the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa was Anaṅga-mañjarī. Sometimes he is also said to have been an incarnation of Guṇa-mañjarī. Śrīnivāsa Ācārya and Gopīnātha Pūjārī were two of his disciples.

mukunda, kāśīnātha, rudra–upaśākhā lekhā śaṅkarāraṇya-of the name Śaṅkarāraṇya; ācārya-vṛkṣera-of the tree of ācāryas; eka-one; śākhā-branch; mukunda-of the name Mukunda; kāśīnātha-of the name Kāśīnātha; rudra-of the name Rudra; upaśākhā lekhā-they are known as subbranches.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The ācārya Śaṅkarāraṇya was considered the forty-eighth branch of the original tree. From him proceeded the subbranches known as Mukunda, Kāśīnātha and Rudra.

PURPORT

It is said that Śaṅkarāraṇya was the sannyāsa name of Śrīla Viśvarūpa, who was the elder brother of Viśvambhara (the original name of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu). Śaṅkarāraṇya expired in 1432 śakābda (A.D. 1512) at Sholapur, where there is a place of pilgrimage known as Pāṇḍerapura. This is referred to in the Madhya-līlā, Chapter Nine, verses 299 and 300.

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu opened a primary school in the house of Mukunda, or Mukunda Sañjaya, and Mukunda's son, whose name was Puruṣottama, became the Lord's student. Kāśīnātha arranged the marriage of Lord Caitanya in His previous āśrama, when His name was Viśvambhara. Kāśīnātha induced the court paṇḍita, Sanātana, to offer Viśvambhara his daughter. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 50, it is mentioned that Kāśīnātha was an incarnation of the brāhmaṇa Kulaka, whom Satrājit sent to arrange the marriage of Kṛṣṇa and Satyabhāmā, and it is mentioned in verse 135 that Rudra, or Śrī Rudrarāma Paṇḍita, was formerly a friend of Lord Kṛṣṇa's named Varūthapa. Śrī Rudrarāma Paṇḍita constructed a big temple at Vallabhapura, which is one mile north of Māheśa, for the Deities named Rādhāvallabha. The descendants of his brother, Yadunandana Vandyopādhyāya, are known as Cakravartī Ṭhākuras, and they are in charge of the maintenance of this temple as sevaits. Formerly the Jagannātha Deity used to come to the temple of Rādhāvallabha from Māheśa during the Ratha-yātrā festival, but in the Bengali year 1262 (A.D. 1855), due to a misunderstanding between the priests of the two temples, the Jagannātha Deity stopped coming.

śrīnātha paṇḍita–prabhura kṛpāra bhājana yāṅra kṛṣṇa-sevā dekhi' vaśa tri-bhuvana śrīnātha paṇḍita-of the name Śrīnātha Paṇḍita; prabhura-of the Lord; kṛpāra-of mercy; bhājana-receiver; yāṅra-whose; kṛṣṇa-sevā-worship of Lord Kṛṣṇa; dekhi'-seeing; vaśa-subjugated; tri-bhuvana-all the three worlds.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrīnātha Paṇḍita, the forty-ninth branch, was the beloved recipient of all the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Everyone in the three worlds was astonished to see how he worshiped Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

About one and a half miles away from Kumārahaṭṭa, or Kāmarhaṭṭa, which is a few miles from Calcutta, is a village known as Kāṅcaḍāpāḍā which was the home of Śrī Śivānanda Sena. There he constructed a temple of Śrī Gauragopāla. Another temple was established there with Śrī Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa mūrtis by Śrīnātha Paṇḍita. The Deity of that temple is named Śrī Kṛṣṇa Rāya. The temple of Kṛṣṇa Rāya, which was constructed in the year 1708 śakābda (A.D. 1787) by a prominent Zamindar named Nimāi Mullik of Pāthuriyā-ghāṭa in Calcutta, is very large. There is a big courtyard in front of the temple, and there are residential quarters for visitors and good arrangements for cooking prasāda. The entire courtyard is surrounded by very high boundary walls, and the temple is almost as big as the Māheśa temple. Inscribed on a tablet are the names of Śrīnātha Paṇḍita and his father and grandfather and the date of construction of the temple. Śrīnātha Paṇḍita, one of the disciples of Advaita Prabhu, was the spiritual master of the third son of Śivānanda Sena, who was known as Paramānanda Kavi-karṇapūra. It is said that during the time of Kavi-karṇapūra the Kṛṣṇa Rāya Deity was installed. According to hearsay, Vīrabhadra Prabhu, the son of Nityānanda Prabhu, brought a big stone from Murśidābād from which three Deities were carved-namely, the Rādhāvallabha vigraha of Vallabhapura, the Śyāmasundara vigraha of Khaḍadaha and the Śrī Kṛṣṇa Rāya vigraha of Kāṅcaḍāpāḍā. The home of Śivānanda Sena was situated on the bank of the Ganges near an almost ruined temple. It is said that the same Nimāi Mullik of Calcutta saw this broken-down temple of Kṛṣṇa Rāya while he was going to Benares and thereafter constructed the present temple.

TRANSLATION

Jagannātha Ācārya, the fiftieth branch of the Caitanya tree, was an extremely dear servant of the Lord, by whose order he decided to live on the bank of the Ganges.

PURPORT

Jagannātha Ācārya is stated in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (111) to have formerly been Durvāsā of Nidhuvana.

TRANSLATION

The fifty-fifth branch was Śrīnātha Miśra, the fifty-sixth was Śubhānanda, the fifty-seventh was Śrīrāma, the fifty-eighth was Īśāna, the fifty-ninth was Śrīnidhi, the sixtieth was Śrī Gopīkānta, and the sixty-first was Miśra Bhagavān.

PURPORT

Śubhānanda, who formerly lived in Vṛndāvana as Mālatī, was one of the kīrtana performers who danced in front of the Ratha-yātrā car during the Jagannātha festival. It is said that he ate the foam that came out of the mouth of the Lord while He danced before the Ratha-yātrā car. Īśāna was a personal servant of Śrīmatī Śacīdevī, who showered her great mercy upon him. He was also very dear to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

The sixty-eighth branch of the original tree was Puruṣottama, the sixty-ninth was Śrī Gālīma, the seventieth was Jagannātha dāsa, the seventy-first was Śrī Candraśekhara Vaidya, and the seventy-second was Dvija Haridāsa.

PURPORT

There is some question about whether Dvija Haridāsa was the author of Aṣṭottara-śata-nāma. He had two sons named Śrīdāma and Gokulānanda, who were disciples of Śrī Advaita Ācārya. Their village, Kāñcana-gaḍiyā, is situated within five miles of the Bājārasāu station, the fifth station from Ājīmagañja in the district of Murśidābād, West Bengal.

TRANSLATION

The seventy-third branch of the original tree was Rāmadāsa, the seventy-fourth was Kavicandra, the seventy-fifth was Śrī Gopāla dāsa, the seventy-sixth was Bhāgavatācārya, and the seventy-seventh was Ṭhākura Sāraṅga dāsa.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (203) it is said, "Bhāgavatācārya compiled a book entitled Kṛṣṇa-prema-taraṅgiṇī, and he was the most beloved devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu." When Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited Varāhanagara, a suburb of Calcutta, He stayed in the house of a most fortunate brāhmaṇa who was a very learned scholar in Bhāgavata literature. As soon as this brāhmaṇa saw Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he began to read Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. When Mahāprabhu heard his explanation, which expounded bhakti-yoga, He immediately became unconscious in ecstasy. Lord Caitanya later said, "I have never heard such a nice explanation of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. I therefore designate you Bhāgavatācārya. Your only duty is to recite Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. That is My injunction." His real name was Raghunātha. His monastery, which is situated in Varāhanagara, about three and a half miles north of Calcutta on the bank of the Ganges, still exists, and it is managed by the initiated disciples of the late Śrī Rāmadāsa Bābājī. Presently, however, it is not as well managed as in the presence of Bābājī Mahārāja.

Another name of Ṭhākura Śāraṅga dāsa was Śārṅga Ṭhākura. Sometimes he was also called Śārṅgapāṇi or Śārṅgadhara. He was a resident of Navadvīpa in the neighborhood known as Modadruma-dvīpa, and he used to worship the Supreme Lord in a secluded place on the bank of the Ganges. He did not accept disciples, but he was repeatedly inspired from within by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to do so. Thus one morning he decided, "Whomever I see I shall make my disciple." When he went to the bank of the Ganges to take his bath, by chance he saw a dead body floating in the water, and he touched it with his feet. This immediately brought the body to life, and Ṭhākura Sāraṅga dāsa accepted him as his disciple. This disciple later became famous as Ṭhākura Murāri, and his name is always associated with that of Śrī Sāraṅga. His disciplic succession still inhabits the village of Śar. There is a temple at Māmagācchi that is said to have been started by Śārṅga Ṭhākura. Not long ago, a new temple building was erected in front of a bakula tree there, and it is now being managed by the members of the Gauḍīya Maṭha. It is said that the management of the temple is now far better than before. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (172) it is stated that Śāraṅga Ṭhākura was formerly a gopī named Nāndīmukhī. Some devotees say that he was formerly Prahlāda Mahārāja, but Śrī Kavi-karṇapūra says that his father, Śivānanda Sena, does not accept this proposition.

TRANSLATION

The seventy-eighth branch of the original tree was Jagannātha Tīrtha, the seventy-ninth was the brāhmaṇa Śrī Jānakīnātha, the eightieth was Gopāla Ācārya, and the eighty-first was the brāhmaṇa Vāṇīnātha.

PURPORT

Jagannātha Tīrtha was one of the nine principal sannyāsīs who were Lord Caitanya's associates. Vāṇīnātha Vipra was a resident of Cāṅpāhāṭi, a village in the district of Burdwan near the town of Navadvīpa, the police station of Pūrvasthalī and the post office of Samudragaḍa. The temple there was very much neglected, but it was renovated in the Bengali year 1328 (A.D. 1921) by Śrī Paramānanda Brahmacārī, one of Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura's disciples, who reorganized the sevā-pūjā (worship in the temple) and placed the temple under the management of the Śrī Caitanya Maṭha of Śrī Māyāpur. In the temple as it now exists, the Deity of Śrī Gaura-Gadādhara is worshiped strictly according to the principles of the revealed scriptures. Cāṅpāhāṭi is two miles away from both Samudragaḍa and the Navadvīpa station of the eastern railway.

TRANSLATION

The three brothers Govinda, Mādhava and Vāsudeva were the eighty-second, eighty-third and eighty-fourth branches of the tree. Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda used to dance in their kīrtana performances.

PURPORT

The three brothers Govinda, Mādhava and Vāsudeva Ghoṣa all belonged to a kāyastha family. Govinda established the Gopīnātha temple in Agradvīpa, where he resided. Mādhava Ghoṣa was expert in performing kīrtana. No one within this world could compete with him. He was known as the singer of Vṛndāvana and was very dear to Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. It is said that when the three brothers performed saṅkīrtana, immediately Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda would dance in ecstasy. According to the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (188), the three brothers were formerly Kalāvatī, Rasollāsā and Guṇatuṅgā, who recited the songs composed by Śrī Viśākhā-gopī. The three brothers were among one of the seven parties that performed kīrtana when Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu attended the Ratha-yātrā festival at Jagannātha Purī. Vakreśvara Paṇḍita was the chief dancer in their party. This is vividly described in the Madhya-līlā, Chapter Thirteen, verses 42 and 43.

TRANSLATION

Bhāgavatācārya, Cirañjīva, Śrī Raghunandana, Mādhavācārya, Kamalākānta and Śrī Yadunandana were all among the branches of the Caitanya tree.

PURPORT

Śrī Mādhavācārya was the husband of Lord Nityānanda's daughter, Gaṅgādevī. He took initiation from Puruṣottama, a branch of Nityānanda Prabhu. It is said that when Nityānanda Prabhu's daughter married Mādhavācārya, the Lord gave him the village named Pāñjinagara as a dowry. Mādhavācārya's temple is situated near the Jīrāṭ railway station on the eastern railway. According to the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (169) Śrī Mādhavācārya was formerly the gopī named Mādhavī. Kamalākānta belonged to the branch of Śrī Advaita Prabhu. His full name was Kamalākānta Viśvāsa.

SYNONYMS

mahā-kṛpā-pātra-object of very great mercy; prabhura-of the Lord; jagāi mādhāi-the two brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi; patita-pāvana-deliverer of the fallen; nāmera-of this name; sākṣī-witness; dui bhāi-these two brothers.

TRANSLATION

Jagāi and Mādhāi, the eighty-ninth and ninetieth branches of the tree, were the greatest recipients of Lord Caitanya's mercy. These two brothers were the witnesses who proved that Lord Caitanya was rightly named Patita-pāvana, "the deliverer of the fallen souls."

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (115) it is said that the two brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi were formerly the doorkeepers named Jaya and Vijaya, who later became Hiraṇyākṣa and Hiraṇyakaśipu. Jagāi and Mādhāi were born in respectable brāhmaṇa families, but they adopted the professions of thieves and rogues and thus became implicated in all kinds of undesirable activities, especially woman-hunting, intoxication and gambling. Later, by the grace of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, they were initiated, and they got the chance to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. As a result of chanting, both brothers became exalted devotees of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The descendants of Mādhāi still exist, and they are respectable brāhmaṇas. The tombs of these two brothers, Jagāi and Mādhāi, are in a place known as Ghoṣahāṭa, or Mādhāitalā-grāma, which is situated about one mile south of Katwa. It is said that Śrī Gopīcaraṇa dāsa Bābājī established a temple of Nitāi-Gaura at this place about two hundred years ago.

TRANSLATION

I have especially mentioned all these devotees because they accompanied Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu in Bengal and Orissa and served Him in many ways.

PURPORT

Most of the devotees of Lord Caitanya lived in Bengal and Orissa. Thus they are celebrated as Oriyās and Gauḍīyas. At present, however, by the grace of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, His cult is being propagated all over the world, and it is most probable that in the future history of Lord Caitanya's movement, Europeans, Americans, Canadians, Australians, South Americans, Asians and people from all over the world will be celebrated as devotees of Lord Caitanya. The International Society for Krishna Consciousness has already constructed a big temple at Māyāpur, Navadvīpa, which is being visited by devotees from all parts of the world, as foretold by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and anticipated by Śrī Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura.

TRANSLATION

Among the devotees who accompanied the Lord in Jagannātha Purī, two of them-Paramānanda Purī and Svarūpa Dāmodara-were the heart and soul of the Lord. Among the other devotees were Gadādhara, Jagadānanda, Śaṅkara, Vakreśvara, Dāmodara Paṇḍita, Ṭhākura Haridāsa, Raghunātha Vaidya and Raghunātha dāsa.

PURPORT

The Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā, Chapter Five, states that Raghunātha Vaidya came to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu when the Lord was staying at Pāṇihāṭī. He was a great devotee and had all good qualities. According to the Caitanya-bhāgavata, he was formerly Revatī, the wife of Balarāma. Anyone he glanced upon would immediately attain Kṛṣṇa consciousness. He lived on the seashore at Jagannātha Purī and compiled a book of the name Sthāna-nirūpaṇa.

SYNONYMS

baḍa-śākhā eka-one of the biggest branches; sārvabhauma bhaṭṭācārya-of the name Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya; tāṅra bhagnī-pati-his brother-in-law (the husband of Sārvabhauma’s sister); śrī-gopīnāthācārya-of the name Śrī Gopīnātha Ācārya.

TRANSLATION

There was Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya, one of the biggest branches of the tree of the Lord, and his sister’s husband, Śrī Gopīnātha Ācārya.

PURPORT

The original name of Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya was Vāsudeva Bhaṭṭācārya. His place of birth, which is known as Vidyānagara, is about two and a half miles away from the Navadvīpa railway station, or Cāṅpāhāṭī railway station. His father was a very celebrated man of the name Maheśvara Viśārada. It is said that Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya was the greatest logician of his time in India. At Mithilā in Bihar he became a student of a great professor named Pakṣadhara Miśra, who did not allow any student to note down his explanations of logic. Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya was so talented, however, that he learned the explanations by heart, and when he later returned to Navadvīpa he established a school for the study of logic, thus diminishing the importance of Mithilā. Students from various parts of India still come to Navadvīpa to study logic. According to some authoritative opinions, the celebrated logician Raghunātha Śiromaṇi was also a student of Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya’s. In effect, Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya became the leader of all students of logic. Although he was a gṛhastha (householder), he even taught many sannyāsīs in the knowledge of logic.

He started a school at Jagannātha Purī for the study of Vedānta philosophy, of which he was a great scholar. When Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya met Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he advised the Lord to learn Vedānta philosophy from him, but later he became a student of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu to understand the real meaning of Vedānta. Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya was so fortunate as to see the six-armed form of Lord Caitanya known as Ṣaḍbhuja. A Ṣaḍbhuja Deity is still situated at one end of the Jagannātha temple. Daily saṅkīrtana performances take place in this part of the temple. The meeting of Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya with Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is vividly described in the Madhya-līlā, Chapter Six. Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya wrote a book named Caitanya-śataka. In addition to the hundred verses of this book, two verses beginning with the words vairāgya-vidyā-nija-bhakti-yoga and kālān naṣṭaṁ bhakti-yogaṁ nijaṁ yaḥ are very famous among Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇavas. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (119) states that Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya was an incarnation of Bṛhaspati, the learned scholar from the celestial planets.

Gopīnātha Ācārya, who belonged to a respectable brāhmaṇa family, was also an inhabitant of Navadvīpa and a constant companion of the Lord. As mentioned in the present verse of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, he was the husband of Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya's sister. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (178) it is described that he was formerly the gopī named Ratnāvalī. According to the opinion of others, he was an incarnation of Brahmā.

TRANSLATION

In the list of devotees at Jagannātha Purī [which begins with Paramānanda Purī, Svarūpa Dāmodara, Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya and Gopīnātha Ācārya], Kāśī Miśra was the fifth, Pradyumna Miśra the sixth and Bhavānanda Rāya the seventh. Lord Caitanya took great pleasure in meeting with them.

PURPORT

In Jagannātha Purī Lord Caitanya lived at the house of Kāśī Miśra, who was the priest of the king. Later this house was inherited by Vakreśvara Paṇḍita and then by his disciple Gopālaguru Gosvāmī, who established there a Deity of Rādhākānta. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (193) states that Kāśī Miśra was formerly Kubjā in Mathurā.. Pradyumna Miśra, an inhabitant of Orissa, was a great devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Pradyumna Miśra was born of a brāhmaṇa family and Rāmānanda Rāya of a non-brāhmaṇa family, yet Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu advised Pradyumna Miśra to take instruction from Rāmānanda Rāya. This incident is described in the Antya-līlā, Chapter Five.

Bhavānanda Rāya was the father of Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya. His residence was in Ālālanātha (Brahmagiri), which is about twelve miles west of Jagannātha Purī. By caste he belonged to the karaṇa community of Orissa, whose members were sometimes known as kāyasthas and sometimes as śūdras, but he was the governor of Madras under the control of King Pratāparudra of Jagannātha Purī.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu told Bhavānanda Rāya, "Your five sons are all My dear devotees. Rāmānanda Rāya and I are one, although our bodies are different."

PURPORT

The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (120-24) states that Rāmānanda Rāya was formerly Arjuna. He is also considered to have been an incarnation of the gopī Lalitā, although in the opinion of others he was an incarnation of Viśākhādevī. He was a most confidential devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "Although I am a sannyāsī, My mind is sometimes perturbed when I see a woman. But Rāmānanda Rāya is greater than Me, for he is always undisturbed, even when he touches a woman." Only Rāmānanda Rāya was endowed with the prerogative to touch a woman in this way; no one should imitate him. Unfortunately, there are rascals who imitate the activities of Rāmānanda Rāya. We need not discuss them further.

In Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's final pastimes, both Rāmānanda Rāya and Svarūpa Dāmodara always engaged in reciting suitable verses from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam to pacify the Lord's ecstatic feelings of separation from Kṛṣṇa. It is said that when Lord Caitanya went to southern India, Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya advised Him to meet Rāmānanda Rāya, declaring that there was no devotee as advanced in understanding the conjugal love of Kṛṣṇa and the gopīs. While touring South India, Lord Caitanya met Rāmānanda Rāya by the bank of the Godāvarī, and in their long discourses the Lord took the position of a student, and Rāmānanda Rāya instructed Him. Caitanya Mahāprabhu concluded these discourses by saying, "My dear Rāmānanda Rāya, both you and I are madmen, and therefore we met intimately on an equal level." Lord Caitanya advised Rāmānanda Rāya to resign from his government post and come back to Jagannātha Purī to live with Him. Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu refused to see Mahārāja Pratāparudra because he was a king, Rāmānanda Rāya, by a Vaiṣṇava scheme, arranged a meeting between the Lord and the King. This is described in the Madhya-līlā, Chapter Twelve, verses 41-57. Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya was present during the water sports of the Lord after the Ratha-yātrā festival.

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu considered Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya and Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī to be equal in their renunciation, for although Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya was a gṛhastha engaged in government service and Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī was in the renounced order of complete detachment from material activities, they were both servants of the Supreme Personality of Godhead who kept Kṛṣṇa in the center of all their activities. Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya was one of the three and a half personalities with whom Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu discussed the most confidential topics of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu advised Pradyumna Miśra to learn the science of Kṛṣṇa from Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya. As Subala always assisted Kṛṣṇa in His dealings with Rādhārāṇī in kṛṣṇa-līlā, so Rāmānanda Rāya assisted Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu in His feelings of separation from Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya was the author of Jagannātha-vallabha-nāṭaka.

King Pratāparudra of Orissa, the Oriya devotees Kṛṣṇānanda and Śivānanda, Paramānanda Mahāpātra, Bhagavān Ācārya, Brahmānanda Bhāratī, Śrī Śikhi Māhiti and Murāri Māhiti constantly associated with Caitanya Mahāprabhu while He resided in Jagannātha Purī.

PURPORT

Pratāparudra Mahārāja, who belonged to the dynasty of the Gaṅgā kings and whose capital was in Cuttak, was the Emperor of Orissa and a great devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. It was by the arrangement of Rāmānanda Rāya and Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya that he was able to serve Lord Caitanya. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (118) it is said that King Indradyumna, who established the temple of Jagannātha thousands of years ago, later took birth again in his own family as Mahārāja Pratāparudra during the time of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Mahārāja Pratāparudra was as powerful as King Indra. The drama named Caitanya-candrodaya was written under his direction.

In the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā, Chapter Five, Paramānanda Mahāpātra is described as follows: "Paramānanda Mahāpātra was among the devotees who took birth in Orissa and accepted Caitanya Mahāprabhu as their only asset. In the ecstasy of conjugal love, he always thought of Caitanya Mahāprabhu." Bhagavān Ācārya, a very learned scholar, was formerly an inhabitant of Hālisahara, but he left everything to live with Caitanya Mahāprabhu in Jagannātha Purī. His relationship with Caitanya Mahāprabhu was friendly, like that of a cowherd boy. He was always friendly to Svarūpa Gosāñi, but he was staunchly devoted to the lotus feet of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He sometimes invited Caitanya Mahāprabhu to his house.

Bhagavān Ācārya was very liberal and simple. His father, Śatānanda Khān, was completely materialistic, and his younger brother, Gopāla Bhaṭṭācārya, was a staunch Māyāvādī philosopher who had studied very elaborately. When his brother came to Jagannātha Purī, Bhagavān Ācārya wanted to hear from him about Māyāvāda philosophy, but Svarūpa Dāmodara forbade him to do so, and there the matter stopped. Once a friend of Bhagavān Ācārya's from Bengal wanted to recite a drama that he had written that was against the principles of devotional service, and although Bhagavān Ācārya wanted to recite this drama before Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Svarūpa Dāmodara, the Lord's secretary, did not allow him to do so. Later Svarūpa Dāmodara pointed out in the drama many mistakes and disagreements with the conclusion of devotional service, and the author became aware of the faults in his writing and then surrendered to Svarūpa Dāmodara, begging his mercy. This is described in the Antya-līlā, Chapter Five, verses 91-158.

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 189, it is said that Śikhi Māhiti was formerly an assistant of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī named Rāgalekhā. His sister Mādhavī was also an assistant of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and was named Kalākelī. Śikhi Māhiti, Mādhavī and their brother Murāri Māhiti were all unalloyed devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu who could not forget Him for a moment of their lives. There is a book in the Oriya language called Caitanya-carita-mahākāvya in which there are many narrations about Śikhi Māhiti. One narration concerns his seeing an ecstatic dream. Śikhi Māhiti always engaged in serving the Lord in his mind. One night, while he was rendering such service, he fell asleep, and while he was asleep his brother and sister came to awaken him. At that time he was in full ecstasy because he was having a wonderful dream that Lord Caitanya, while visiting the temple of Jagannātha, was entering and again coming out of the body of Jagannātha and looking at the Jagannātha Deity. Thus as soon as he awakened he embraced his brother and sister and informed them, "My dear brother and sister, I have had a wonderful dream that I shall now explain to you. The activities of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the son of Mother Śacī, are certainly most wonderful. I saw that Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, while visiting the temple of Jagannātha, was entering the body of Jagannātha and again coming out of His body. I am still seeing the same dream. Do you think I have become deranged? I am still seeing the same dream! And the most wonderful thing is that as soon as I came near Caitanya Mahāprabhu, He embraced me with His long arms." As he spoke to his brother and sister in this way, Śikhi Māhiti's voice faltered, and there were tears in his eyes. Thus the brothers and sister went to the temple of Jagannātha, and there they saw Lord Caitanya in the Jagamohana (the kīrtana hall in the Jagannātha temple), looking at the beauty of the Śrī Jagannātha Deity just as in Śikhi Māhiti's dream. The Lord was so magnanimous that immediately He embraced Śikhi Māhiti, exclaiming, "You are the elder brother of Murāri!" Being thus embraced, Śikhi Māhiti felt ecstatic transcendental bliss. Thus he and his brother and sister always engaged in rendering service to the Lord. Murāri Māhiti, the youngest brother of Śikhi Māhiti, is described in the Madhya-līlā, Chapter Ten, verse 44.

TRANSLATION

Mādhavīdevī, the seventeenth of the prominent devotees, was the younger sister of Śikhi Māhiti. She is considered to have formerly been a maidservant of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.

PURPORT

In the Antya-līlā of Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Chapter Two, verses 104-106, there is a description of Mādhavīdevī. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu considered her one of the maidservants of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. Within this world, Caitanya Mahāprabhu had three and a half very confidential devotees. The three were Svarūpa Gosāñi, Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya and Śikhi Māhiti, and Śikhi Māhiti's sister, Mādhavīdevī, being a woman, was considered the half. Thus it is known that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had three and a half confidential devotees.

īśvara-purīra śiṣya-disciple of Īśvara Purī; brahmacārī kāśīśvara-of the name Brahmacārī Kāśīśvara; śrī-govinda-of the name Śrī Govinda; nāma-name; tāṅra-his; priya-very dear; anucara-follower.

TRANSLATION

Brahmacārī Kāśīśvara was a disciple of Īśvara Purī, and Śrī Govinda was another of his dear disciples.

PURPORT

Govinda was the personal servant of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 137, it is stated that the servants formerly named Bhṛṅgāra and Bhaṅgura in Vṛndāvana became Kāśīśvara and Govinda in Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes. Govinda always engaged in the service of the Lord, even at great risk.

TEXT 139

tāṅra siddhi-kāle doṅhe tāṅra ājñā pāñā nīlācale prabhu-sthāne milila āsiyā

SYNONYMS

tāṅra siddhi-kāle-at the time of Īśvara Purī's passing away; doṅhe-the two of them; tāṅra-his; ājñā-order; pāñā-getting; nīlācale-at Jagannātha Purī; prabhu-sthāne-at the place of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; milila-met; āsiyā-coming there.

TRANSLATION

In the list of prominent devotees at Nīlācala [Jagannātha Purī], Kāśīśvara was the eighteenth and Govinda the nineteenth. They both came to see Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī, being thus ordered by Īśvara Purī at the time of his passing away.

TEXT 140

gurura sambandhe mānya kaila duṅhākāre tāṅra ājñā māni' sevā dilena doṅhāre gurura sambandhe-in relationship with His spiritual master; mānya-honor; kaila-offered; duṅhākāre-to both of them; tāṅra ājñā-his order; māni'-accepting; sevā-service; dilena-gave them; doṅhāre-the two of them.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Both Kāśīśvara and Govinda were Godbrothers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and thus the Lord duly honored them as soon as they arrived. But because Īśvara Purī had ordered them to give Caitanya Mahāprabhu personal service, the Lord accepted their service.

TEXT 141

aṅga-sevā govindere dilena īśvara jagannātha dekhite calena āge kāśīśvara

SYNONYMS

aṅga-sevā-taking care of the body; govindere-unto Govinda; dilena-He gave; īśvara-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; jagannātha-the Jagannātha Deity; dekhite-while going to visit; calena-goes; āge-in front; kāśīśvara-of the name Kāśīśvara.

TRANSLATION

Govinda cared for the body of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, whereas Kāśīśvara went in front of the Lord when He went to see Jagannātha in the temple.

TEXT 142

aparaśa yāya gosāñi manuṣya-gahane manuṣya ṭheli' patha kare kāśī balavāne

SYNONYMS

aparaśa-untouched; yāya-goes; gosāñi-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; manuṣya-gahane-in the crowd; manuṣya theli'-pushing the crowd of men; patha kare-clears the way; kāśī-Kāśīśvara; balavāne-very strong.

TRANSLATION

When Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to the temple of Jagannātha, Kāśīśvara, being very strong, cleared the crowds aside with his hands so that Caitanya Mahāprabhu could pass untouched.

TEXT 143

rāmāi-nandāi–doṅhe prabhura kiṅkara govindera saṅge sevā kare nirantara

SYNONYMS

rāmāi-nandāi-of the names Rāmāi and Nandāi; doṅhe-both of them; prabhura-Lord Caitanya's; kiṅkara-servants; govindera-with Govinda; saṅge-with him; sevā-service; kare-rendered; nirantara-twenty-four hours a day.

TRANSLATION

Rāmāi and Nandāi, the twentieth and twenty-first among the important devotees in Jagannātha Purī, always assisted Govinda twenty-four hours a day in rendering service to the Lord.

TEXT 144

bāiśa ghaḍā jala dine bharena rāmāi govinda-ājñāya sevā karena nandāi

SYNONYMS

bāiśa-twenty-two; ghaḍā-big waterpots; jala-water; dine-daily; bharena-fills; rāmāi-of the name Rāmāi; govinda-ājñāya-by the order of Govinda; sevā-service; karena-renders; nandāi-of the name Nandāi.

TRANSLATION

Every day Rāmāi filled twenty-two big waterpots, whereas Nandāi personally assisted Govinda.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā (139) it is stated that two servants who formerly supplied milk and water to Lord Kṛṣṇa became Rāmāi and Nandāi in the pastimes of Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 145

kṛṣṇadāsa nāma śuddha kulīna brāhmaṇa yāre saṅge laiyā kailā dakṣiṇa gamana kṛṣṇadāsa-of the name Kṛṣṇadāsa; nāma-name; śuddha-pure; kulīna-respectable; brāhmaṇa-brāhmaṇa; yāre-whom; saṅge-with; laiyā-taking; kailā-did; dakṣiṇa-southern India; gamana-touring.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The twenty-second devotee, Kṛṣṇadāsa, was born of a pure and respectable brāhmaṇa family. While touring southern India, Lord Caitanya took Kṛṣṇadāsa with Him.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇadāsa is described in the Madhya-līlā, chapters Seven and Nine. He went with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to carry His waterpot. In the Malabar state, members of the Bhaṭṭathāri cult tried to captivate Kṛṣṇadāsa by supplying a woman to seduce him, but although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu saved him from being harmed, when they returned to Jagannātha Purī He asked Kṛṣṇadāsa to remain there, for the Lord was never favorably disposed toward an associate who was attracted by a woman. Thus Kṛṣṇadāsa lost the personal association of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 146

balabhadra bhaṭṭācārya–bhakti adhikārī mathurā-gamane prabhura yeṅho brahmacārī ballabhadra bhaṭṭācārya-of the name Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; bhakti adhikārī-bona fide devotee; mathurā-gamane-while touring Mathurā; prabhura-of the Lord; yeṅho-who; brahmacārī-acted as a brahmacārī.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

As a bona fide devotee, Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya, the twenty-third principal associate, acted as the brahmacārī of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu when He toured Mathurā.

PURPORT

Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya acted as a brahmacārī, or personal assistant of a sannyāsī. A sannyāsī is not supposed to cook. Generally a sannyāsī takes prasāda at the house of a gṛhastha, and a brahmacārī helps in this connection. A sannyāsī is supposed to be a spiritual master and a brahmacārī his disciple. Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya acted as a brahmacārī for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu when the Lord toured Mathurā and Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 147

SYNONYMS

baḍa haridāsa-of the name Baḍa Haridāsa; āra-and; choṭa haridāsa-of the name Choṭa Haridāsa; dui kīrtanīyā-both of them were good singers; rahe-stay; mahā-prabhura-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; pāśa-with.

TRANSLATION

Baḍa Haridāsa and Choṭa Haridāsa, the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth devotees in Nīlācala, were good singers who always accompanied Lord Caitanya.

PURPORT

Choṭa Haridāsa was later banished from the company of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as stated in the Antya-līlā, Chapter Two.

TEXT 148

TRANSLATION

Acyutānanda, the thirty-fifth devotee, was the son of Advaita Ācārya. He also lived with Lord Caitanya, taking shelter of His lotus feet at Jagannātha Purī.

PURPORT

There is a statement about Acyutānanda in Chapter Twelve, verse 13, of Ādi-līlā.

TEXT 151

TRANSLATION

The prominent devotees at Vārāṇasī were the physician Candraśekhara, Tapana Miśra and Raghunātha Bhaṭṭācārya, Tapana Miśra's son. When Lord Caitanya came to Vārāṇasī after seeing Vṛndāvana, for two months He lived at the residence of Candraśekhara Vaidya and accepted prasāda at the house of Tapana Miśra.

PURPORT

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was in Bengal, Tapana Miśra approached Him to discuss spiritual advancement. Thus he was favored by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and received hari-nāma initiation. After that, by the order of the Lord, Tapana Miśra resided in Vārāṇasī, and when Lord Caitanya visited Vārāṇasī He stayed at the home of Tapana Miśra.

tāṅra sthāne-in his place; rūpa-gosāñi-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; śunena-heard; bhāgavata-the recitation of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; prabhura kṛpāya-by the mercy of Lord Caitanya; teṅho-he; kṛṣṇa-preme-in love of Kṛṣṇa; matta-always maddened.

TRANSLATION

While he stayed with Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, his engagement was to recite Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam for him to hear. As a result of this Bhāgavatam recitation, he attained perfectional love of Kṛṣṇa, by which he remained always maddened.

PURPORT

Raghunātha Bhaṭṭācārya, or Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, one of the six Gosvāmīs, was the son of Tapana Miśra. Born in approximately 1425 śakābda (A.D. 1504), he was expert in reciting Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, and in the Antya-līlā, Chapter Thirteen, it is stated that he was also expert in cooking; whatever he cooked would be nectarean. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was greatly pleased to accept the food that he cooked, and Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa used to take the remnants of food left by Śri Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Raghunātha Bhaṭṭācārya lived for eight months in Jagannātha Purī, after which Lord Caitanya ordered him to go to Vṛndāvana to join Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked Raghunātha Bhaṭṭācārya not to marry but to remain a brahmacārī, and He also ordered him to read Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam constantly. Thus he went to Vṛndāvana, where he engaged in reciting Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam to Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī. He was so expert in reciting Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam that he would recite each and every verse in three melodious tunes. While Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī was living with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Lord blessed him by offering him betel nuts offered to the Jagannātha Deity and a garland of tulasī said to be as long as fourteen cubits. Under Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī's order, one of his disciples constructed the Govinda temple. Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī supplied all the ornaments of the Govinda Deity. He never talked of nonsense or worldly matters but always engaged in hearing about Kṛṣṇa twenty-four hours a day. He never cared to hear blasphemy of a Vaiṣṇava. Even when there were points to be criticized, he used to say that since all the Vaiṣṇavas were engaged in the service of the Lord, he did not mind their faults. Later Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī lived by Rādhā-kuṇḍa in a small cottage. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 185, it is said that Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī was formerly the gopī named Rāga-mañjarī.

TRANSLATION

From each branch of the tree have grown hundreds and thouands of subbranches of disciples and granddisciples.

PURPORT

It was the desire of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu that His cult be spread all over the world. Therefore there is a great necessity for many, many disciples of the branches of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's disciplic succession. His cult should be spread not only in a few villages, or in Bengal, or in India, but all over the world. It is very much regrettable that complacent so-called devotees criticize the members of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness for accepting sannyāsa and spreading the cult of Lord Caitanya all over the world. It is not our business to criticize anyone, but because they try to find fault with this movement, the real truth must be stated. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted devotees all over the world, and Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura and Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura also confirmed this. It is in pursuit of their will that the ISKCON movement is spreading all over the world. Genuine devotees of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu must take pride in the spread of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement instead of viciously criticizing its propaganda work.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Tenth Chapter, in the matter of the main trunk of the Caitanya tree, its branches and its subbranches.

18.4.11 Chapter 11

The Expansions of Lord Nityānanda

As the branches and subbranches of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu were described in the Tenth Chapter, in this Eleventh Chapter the branches and subbranches of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu are similarly listed.

TEXT 1

āpanā śodhite kahi mukhya mukhya jana

SYNONYMS

asaṅkhya-innumerable; ananta-unlimited; gaṇa-devotees; ke-who; karu-can; gaṇana-count; āpanā-the self; śodhite-to purify; kahi-I speak; mukhya mukhya-only the chief; jana-persons.

TRANSLATION

These branches and subbranches of devotees are innumerable and unlimited. Who could count them? For my personal purification I shall try to enumerate only the most prominent among them.

PURPORT

One should not write books or essays on transcendental subject matter for material name, fame or profit. Transcendental literature must be written under the direction of a superior authority because it is not meant for material purposes. If one tries to write under superior authority, he becomes purified. All Kṛṣṇa conscious activities should be undertaken for personal purification (āpanā śodhite), not for material gain.

SYNONYMS

śrī-vīrabhadra gosāñi-of the name Śrī Vīrabhadra Gosāñi; skandha-of the trunk; mahā-śākhā-the biggest branch; tāṅra-his; upaśākhā-subbranches; yata-all; asaṅkhya-innumerable; tāra-of that; lekhā-the description.

TRANSLATION

After Nityānanda Prabhu, the greatest branch is Vīrabhadra Gosāñi, who also has innumerable branches and subbranches. It is not possible to describe them all.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura describes Vīrabhadra Gosāñi as the direct son of Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu and a disciple of Jāhnavā-devī. His real mother was Vasudhā. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 67, he is mentioned as an incarnation of Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu. Therefore Vīrabhadra Gosāñi is nondifferent from Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In a village of the name Jhāmaṭapura, in the district of Hugali, Vīrabhadra Gosāñi had a disciple named Yadunāthācārya, who had two daughters-a real daughter named Śrīmatī and a foster daughter named Nārāyaṇī. Both these daughters married, and they are mentioned in Bhakti-ratnākara (Thirteenth Wave). Vīrabhadra Gosāñi had three disciples who are celebrated as his sons-Gopījana-vallabha, Rāmakṛṣṇa and Rāmacandra. The youngest, Rāmacandra, belonged to the Śāṇḍilya dynasty and had the surname Vaṭavyāla. He established his family at Khaḍadaha, and its members are known as the gosvāmīs of Khaḍadaha. The eldest disciple, Gopījana-vallabha, was a resident of a village known as Latā, near the Mānakara railway station in the district of Burdwan. The second, Rāmakṛṣṇa, lived near Māladaha, in a village named Gayeśapura. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura notes that since these three disciples belonged to different gotras, or dynasties, and also had different surnames and lived in different places, it is not possible to accept them as real sons of Vīrabhadra Gosāñi. Rāmacandra had four sons, of whom the eldest was Rādhāmādhava, whose third son was named Yādavendra. Yādavendra's son was Nandakiśora, his son was Nidhikṛṣṇa, his son was Caitanyacāṇḍa, his son was Kṛṣṇamohana, his son was Jaganmohana, his son was Vrajanātha, and his son was Śyāmalāla Gosvāmī. This is the genealogical table given by Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura for the descendants of Vīrabhadra Gosāñi.

SYNONYMS

śrī-rāmadāsa-of the name Śrī Rāmadāsa; āra-and; gadādhara dāsa-of the name Gadādhara dāsa; caitanya-gosāñira-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhakta-devotees; rahe-stay; tāṅra pāśa-with Him.

TRANSLATION

Two devotees of Lord Caitanya, named Śrī Rāmadāsa and Gadādhara dāsa, always lived with Śrī Vīrabhadra Gosāñi.

PURPORT

Śrī Rāmadāsa, later known as Abhirāma Ṭhākura, was one of the twelve gopālas, cowherd boyfriends, of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 126, states that Śrī Rāmadāsa was formerly Śrīdāmā. In Bhakti-ratnākara (Fourth Wave), there is a description of Śrīla Abhirāma Ṭhākura. By the order of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, Abhirāma Ṭhākura became a great ācārya and preacher of the Caitanya cult of devotional service. He was a very influential personality, and nondevotees were very afraid of him. Empowered by Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, he was always in ecstasy and was extremely kind to all fallen souls. It is said that if he offered obeisances to any stone other than a śālagrāma-śilā, it would immediately fracture.

Ten miles southwest of the Cāṅpāḍāṅgā railway station on the narrow-gauge railway line from Howrah, in Calcutta, to Āmtā, a village in the Hugalī district, is a small town named Khānākūla-kṛṣṇanagara, where the temple of Abhirāma Ṭhākura is situated. During the rainy season, when this area is inundated with water, people must go there by another line, which is now called the southeastern railway. On this line there is a station named Kolāghāṭa, from which one has to go by steamer to Rāṇīcaka. Seven and a half miles north of Rāṇīcaka is Khānākūla. The temple of Abhirāma Ṭhākura is situated in Kṛṣṇanagara, which is near the kūla (bank) of the Khānā (Dvārakeśvara River); therefore this place is celebrated as Khānākūla-kṛṣṇanagara. Outside of the temple is a bakula tree. This place is known as Siddha-bakula-kuñja. It is said that when Abhirāma Ṭhākura came there, he sat down under this tree. In Khānākūla-kṛṣṇanagara there is a big fair held every year in the month of Caitra (March-April) on the Kṛṣṇa-saptamī, the seventh day of the dark moon. Many hundreds and thousands of people gather for this festival. The temple of Abhirāma Ṭhākura has a very old history. The Deity in the temple is known as Gopīnātha. There are many sevaita families living near the temple. It is said that Abhirāma Ṭhākura had a whip and that whoever he touched with it would immediately become an elevated devotee of Kṛṣṇa. Among his many disciples, Śrīmān Śrīnivāsa Ācārya was the most famous and the most dear, but it is doubtful that he was his initiated disciple.

SYNONYMS

nityānande-unto Lord Nityānanda; ājñā-order; dila-gave; yabe-when; gauḍe-to Bengal; yāite-to go; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ei dui-these two; dilā-gave; tāṅra sāthe-with Him; ataeva-therefore; dui-gaṇe-in both the parties; duṅhāra-two of them; gaṇana-are counted; mādhava-of the name Mādhava; vāsudeva-of the name Vāsudeva; ghoṣerao-of the surname Ghoṣa; ei-this; vivaraṇa-description.

TRANSLATION

When Nityānanda Prabhu was ordered to go to Bengal to preach, these two devotees [Śrī Rāmadāsa and Gadādhara dāsa] were ordered to go with Him. Thus they are sometimes counted among the devotees of Lord Caitanya and sometimes among the devotees of Lord Nityānanda. Similarly, Mādhava and Vāsudeva Ghoṣa belonged to both groups of devotees simultaneously.

PURPORT

There is a place named Dāṅihāṭa, near the Agradvīpa railway station and Pāṭuli in the district of Burdwan, where the Deity of Śrī Gopīnāthajī is still situated. This Deity accepted Govinda Ghoṣa as His father. Even until today, the Deity performs the śrāddha ceremony on the anniversary of the death of Govinda Ghoṣa. The temple of this Deity is managed by the rāja-vaṁśa family of Kṛṣṇanagara, whose members are descendants of Rājā Kṛṣṇacandra. Every year in the month of Vaiśākha, when there is a bāradola ceremony, this Gopīnātha Deity is taken to Kṛṣṇanagara. The ceremony is performed with eleven other Deities, and then Śrī Gopīnāthajī is brought back to the temple in Agradvīpa.

murāri-caitanya-dāsera alaukika līlā vyāghra-gāle caḍa māre, sarpa-sane khelā murāri-of the name Murāri; caitanya-dāsera-of the servant of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; alaukika-uncommon; līlā-pastimes; vyāghra-tiger; gāle-on the cheek; caḍa māre-slaps; sarpa-a snake; sane-with; khelā-playing.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

There were many extraordinary activities performed by Murāri, a great devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Sometimes in his ecstasy he would slap the cheek of a tiger, and sometimes he would play with a venomous snake.

PURPORT

Murāri Caitanya dāsa was born in the village of Sar-vṛndāvana-pura, which is situated about two miles from the Galaśī station on the Burdwan line. When Murāri Caitanya dāsa came to Navadvīpa, he settled in the village of Modadruma, or Māmagāchi-grāma. At that time he became known as Śārṅga or Sāraṅga Murāri Caitanya dāsa. The descendants of his family still reside in Sarer Pāṭa. In the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-līlā, Chapter Five, there is the following statement: "Murāri Caitanya dāsa had no material bodily features, for he was completely spiritual. Thus he would sometimes chase after tigers in the jungle and treat them just like cats and dogs. He would slap the cheek of a tiger and take a venomous snake on his lap. He had no fear for his external body, of which he was completely forgetful. He could spend all twenty-four hours of the day chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra or speaking about Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda. Sometimes he would remain submerged in water for two or three days, but he would feel no bodily inconvenience. Thus he behaved almost like stone or wood, but he always used his energy in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. No one can describe his specific characteristics, but it is understood that wherever Murāri Caitanya dāsa passed, whoever was present would be enlightened in Kṛṣṇa consciousness simply by the atmosphere he created."

TRANSLATION

The physician Raghunātha, also known as Upādhyāya, was so great a devotee that simply by seeing him one would awaken his dormant love of Godhead.

TEXT 23

sundarānanda–nityānandera śākhā, bhṛtya marma yāṅra saṅge nityānanda kare vraja-narma

SYNONYMS

sundarānanda-of the name Sundarānanda; nityānandera śākhā-a branch of Nityānanda Prabhu; bhṛtya marma-very intimate servant; yāṅra saṅge-with whom; nityānanda-Lord Nityānanda; kare-performs; vraja-narma-activities of Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

Sundarānanda, another branch of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, was Lord Nityānanda's most intimate servant. Lord Nityānanda Prabhu perceived the life of Vrajabhūmi in his company.

PURPORT

In the Caitanya-bhagavata, Antya-līlā, Chapter Fives, it is stated that Sundarānanda was an ocean of love of Godhead and the chief associate of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā he is stated to have been Sudāmā in kṛṣṇa-līlā. Thus he was one of the twelve cowherd boys who came down with Balarāma when He descended as Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. The holy place where Sundarānanda lived is situated in the village known as Maheśapura, which is about fourteen miles east of the Mājadiyā railway station of the eastern railway from Calcutta to Burdwan. This place is within the district of Jeshore, which is now in Bangladesh. Among the relics of this village, only the old residential house of Sundarānanda still exists. At the end of the village resides a bāula (pseudo-Vaiṣṇava), and all the buildings, both the temples and the house, appear to be newly constructed. In Maheśapura there are Deities of Śrī Rādhāvallabha and Śrī Śrī Rādhāramaṇa. Near the temple is a small river of the name Vetravatī.

Sundarānanda Prabhu was a naiṣṭhika-brahmacārī: he never married in his life. Therefore he had no direct descendants except his disciples, but the descendants of his family still reside in the village known as Maṅgalaḍihi in the district of Birbhum. In that same village is a temple of Balarāma, and the Deity there is regularly worshiped. The original Deity of Maheśapura, Rādhāvallabha, was taken by the Saidābād Gosvāmīs of Berhampur, and since the present Deities were installed, a Zamindar family of Maheśapura has looked after Their worship. On the full moon day of the month of Māgha (January-February), the anniversary of Sundarānanda's disappearance is regularly celebrated, and people from the neighboring areas gather together to observe this festival.

kamalākara pippalāi–alaukika rīta alaukika prema tāṅra bhuvane vidita kamalākara pippalāi-of the name Kamalākara Pippalāi; alaukika-uncommon; rīta-behavior or pastime; alaukika-uncommon; prema-love of Godhead; tāṅra-his; bhuvane-in the world; vidita-celebrated.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Kamalākara Pippalāi is said to have been the third gopāla. His behavior and love of Godhead were uncommon, and thus he is celebrated all over the world.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 128, Kamalākara Pippalāi is described as the third gopāla. His former name was Mahābala. The Jagannātha Deity at Māheśa in Śrī Rāmapura was installed by Kamalākara Pippalāi. This village of Māheśa is situated about two and a half miles from the Śrī Rāmapura railway station. The genealogy of the family of Kamalākara Pippalāi is given as follows. Kamalākara Pippalāi had a son named Caturbhuja, who had two sons named Nārāyaṇa and Jagannātha. Nārāyaṇa had one son named Jagadānanda, and his son's name was Rājīvalocana. During the time of Rājīvalocana, there was a scarcity of finances for the worship of the Jagannātha Deity, and it is said that the Nawab of Dacca, whose name was Shah Sujā, donated 1,185 bighās of land in the Bengali year 1060 (A.D. 1653). The land being the possession of Jagannātha, the village was named Jagannātha-pura. It is said that when Kamalākara Pippalāi left home his younger brother Nidhipati Pippalāi searched for him and in due course of time found him in the village of Māheśa. Nidhipati Pippalāi tried his best to bring his elder brother home, but he would not return. Under these circumstances, Nidhipati Pippalāi, with all his family members, came to Māheśa to reside. The members of this family still reside in the vicinity of the Māheśa village. Their family name is Adhikārī, and they are a brāhmaṇa family.

The history of the Jagannātha temple in Māheśa is as follows. One devotee of the name Dhruvānanda went to see Lord Jagannātha, Balarāma and Subhadrā at Jagannātha Purī, wanting to offer food to Jagannāthajī that he had cooked with his own hands. This being his desire, one night Jagannāthajī appeared to him in a dream and asked him to go to Māheśa on the bank of the Ganges and there start worship of Him in a temple. Thus Dhruvānanda went to Māheśa, where he saw the three deities-Jagannātha, Balarāma and Subhadrā-floating in the Ganges. He picked up all those deities and installed them in a small cottage, and with great satisfaction he executed the worship of Lord Jagannātha. When he became old, he was very anxious to hand over the worship to the charge of someone reliable, and in a dream he got permission from Jagannātha Prabhu to hand it over to a person whom he would meet the next morning. The next morning he met Kamalākara Pippalāi, who was formerly an inhabitant of the village Khālijuli in the Sundaravana Forest area of Bengal and was a pure Vaiṣṇava, a great devotee of Lord Jagannātha; thus he immediately gave him charge of the worship. In this way, Kamalākara Pippalāi became the worshiper of Lord Jagannātha, and since then his family members have been designated as Adhikārī, which means "one who is empowered to worship the Lord." These Adhikārīs belong to a respectable brāhmaṇa family. Five types of upper-class brāhmaṇas are recognized by the surname Pippalāi.

SYNONYMS

sūryadāsa sarakhela-of the name Sūryadāsa Sarakhela; tāṅra bhāi-his brother; kṛṣṇadāsa-of the name Kṛṣṇadāsa; nityānande-unto Lord Nityānanda; dṛḍha viśvāsa-firm faith; premera nivāsa-the reservoir of all love of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

Sūryadāsa Sarakhela and his younger brother Kṛṣṇadāsa Sarakhela both possessed firm faith in Nityānanda Prabhu. They were a reservoir of love of Godhead.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-ratnākara (Twelfth Wave), it is stated that a few miles from Navadvīpa is a place called Śāligrāma that was the residence of Sūryadāsa Sarakhela. He was employed as a secretary in the Muslim government of that time, and thus he amassed a good fortune. Sūryadāsa had four brothers, all of whom were pure Vaiṣṇavas. Vasudhā and Jāhnavā were two daughters of Sūryadāsa Sarakhela.

gaurīdāsa paṇḍita yāṅra premoddaṇḍa-bhakti kṛṣṇa-premā dite, nite, dhare mahāśakti

SYNONYMS

gaurīdāsa paṇḍita-of the name Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita; yāṅra-whose; prema-uddaṇḍa-bhakti-the most elevated in love of Godhead and devotional service; kṛṣṇa-premā-love of Kṛṣṇa; dite-to deliver; nite-and to receive; dhare-empowered; mahāśakti-great potency.

TRANSLATION

Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita, the emblem of the most elevated devotional service in love of Godhead, had the greatest potency to receive and deliver such love.

PURPORT

It is said that Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita was always patronized by King Kṛṣṇadāsa, the son of Harihoḍa. Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita lived in the village of Śāligrāma, which is situated a few miles from the railway station Muḍāgāchā, and later he came to reside in Ambikā-kālanā. It is stated in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 128, that formerly he was Subala, one of the cowherd boyfriends of Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma in Vṛndāvana. Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita was the younger brother of Sūryadāsa Sarakhela, and with the permission of his elder brother he shifted his residence to the bank of the Ganges, living there in the town known as Ambikā-kālanā. Some of the names of the descendants of Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita are as follows: (1) Śrī Nṛsiṁha-caitanya, (2) Kṛṣṇadāsa, (3) Viṣṇudāsa, (4) Baḍa Balarāma dāsa, (5) Govinda, (6) Raghunātha, (7) Baḍu Gaṅgādāsa, (8) Āuliyā Gaṅgārāma, (9) Yādavācārya, (10) Hṛdaya-caitanya, (11) Cānda Hāladāra, (12) Maheśa Paṇḍita, (13) Mukuṭa Rāya, (14) Bhātuyā Gaṅgārāma, (15) Āuliyā Caitanya, (16) Kāliyā Kṛṣṇadāsa, (17) Pātuyā Gopāla, (18) Baḍa Jagannātha, (19) Nityānanda, (20) Bhāvi, (21) Jagadīśa, (22) Rāiyā Kṛṣṇadāsa and (22 12) Annapūrṇā. The eldest son of Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita was known as big Balarāma, and the youngest was known as Raghunātha. The sons of Raghunātha were Maheśa Paṇḍita and Govinda. Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita's daughter was known as Annapūrṇā.

The village Ambikā-kālanā, which is situated just across the river Ganges from Śāntipura, is two miles east of the Kālanā-korṭa railway station, on the eastern railway. In Ambikā-kālanā there is a temple constructed by the Zamindar of Burdwan. In front of the temple there is a big tamarind tree, and it is said that Gaurīdāsa Paṇḍita and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu met underneath this tree. The place where the temple is situated is known as Ambikā, and because it is in the area of Kālanā, the village is known as Ambikā-kālanā. It is said that a copy of the Bhagavad-gītā written by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu still exists in this temple.

kṛṣṇa-bhakti pāya, tāṅre ye kare smaraṇa parameśvara-dāsa-of the name Parameśvara dāsa; nityānanda-eka-śaraṇa-completely surrendered to the lotus feet of Nityānanda; kṛṣṇa-bhakti pāya-gets love of Kṛṣṇa; tāṅre-him; ye-anyone; kare-does; smaraṇa-remembering.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Parameśvara dāsa, said to be the fifth gopāla of kṛṣṇa-līlā, completely surrendered to the lotus feet of Nityānanda. Anyone who remembers his name, Parameśvara dāsa, will get love of Kṛṣṇa very easily.

PURPORT

The Caitanya-bhāgavata states that Parameśvara dāsa, known sometimes as Parameśvarī dāsa, was the life and soul of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. The body of Parameśvara dāsa was the place of Lord Nityānanda's pastimes. Parameśvara dāsa, who lived for some time at Khaḍadaha village, was always filled with the ecstasy of a cowherd boy. Formerly he was Arjuna, a friend of Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma. He was the fifth among the twelve gopālas. He accompanied Śrīmatī Jāhnavā-devī when she performed the festival at Kheturi. It is stated in the Bhakti-ratnākara that by the order of Śrīmatī Jāhnavā-mātā, he installed Rādhā-Gopīnātha in the temple at Āṭapura in the district of Hugalī. The Āṭapura station is on the narrow-gauge railway line between Howrah and Āmatā. Another temple in Āṭapura, established by the Mitra family, is known as the Rādhā-Govinda temple. In front of the temple, in a very attractive place among two bakula trees and a kadamba tree, is the tomb of Parameśvarī Ṭhākura, and above it is an altar with a tulasī bush. It is said that only one flower a year comes out of the kadamba tree. It is offered to the Deity.

Parameśvarī Ṭhākura belonged, it is said, to a vaidya family. A descendant of his brother's is at present a worshiper in the temple. Some of their family members still reside in the district of Hugalī, near the post office of Caṇḍītalā. The descendants of Parameśvarī Ṭhākura took many disciples from brāhmaṇa families, but as these descendants gradually took to the profession of physicians, persons from brāhmaṇa families ceased becoming their disciples. The family titles of Parameśvarī's descendants are Adhikārī and Gupta. Unfortunately, his family members do not worship the Deity directly; they have engaged paid brāhmaṇas to worship the Deity. In the temple, Baladeva and Śrī Śrī Rādhā-Gopinātha are together on the throne. It is supposed that the Deity of Baladeva was installed later because according to transcendental mellow, Baladeva, Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā cannot stay on the same throne. On the full moon day of Vaiśākha (April-May), the disappearance festival of Parameśvarī Ṭhākura is observed in this temple.

jagadīśa paṇḍita haya jagat-pāvana kṛṣṇa-premāmṛta varṣe, yena varṣā ghana

SYNONYMS

jagadīśa paṇḍita-of the name Jagadīśa Paṇḍita; haya-becomes; jagat-pāvana-the deliverer of the world; kṛṣṇa-prema-amṛta varṣe-he always pours torrents of devotional service; yena-like; varṣā-rainfall; ghana-heavy.

TRANSLATION

Jagadīśa Paṇḍita, the fifteenth branch of Lord Nityānanda's followers, was the deliverer of the entire world. Devotional love of Kṛṣṇa showered from him like torrents of rain.

PURPORT

Descriptions of Jagadīśa Paṇḍita are available from Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, Chapter Six, and Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-lila, Chapter Fourteen. He belonged to the village of Yaśaḍā-grāma, in the district of Nadia near the Cākadaha railway station. His father, the son of Bhaṭṭa Nārāyaṇa, was named Kamalākṣa. Both his father and mother were great devotees of Lord Viṣṇu, and after their death, Jagadīśa, with his wife Duḥkhinī and brother Maheśa, left his birthplace and came to Śrī Māyāpur to live in the company of Jagannātha Miśra and other Vaiṣṇavas. Lord Caitanya asked Jagadīśa to go to Jagannātha Purī to preach the hari-nāma-saṅkīrtana movement. After returning from Jagannātha Purī, on the order of Lord Jagannātha he established Deities of Jagannātha in the village of Yaśaḍā-grāma. It is said that when Jagadīśa Paṇḍita brought the Deity of Jagannātha to Yaśaḍā-grāma, he tied the heavy Deity to a stick and thus brought Him to the village. The priests of the temple still show the stick used by Jagadīśa Paṇḍita to carry the Jagannātha Deity.

nityānanda-priyabhṛtya paṇḍita dhanañjaya atyanta virakta, sadā kṛṣṇa-premamaya nityānanda-priya-bhṛtya-another dear servant of Nityānanda Prabhu; paṇḍita dhanañjaya-of the name Paṇḍita Dhanañjaya; atyanta-very much; virakta-renounced; sadā-always; kṛṣṇa-prema-maya-merged in love of Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The sixteenth dear servant of Nityānanda Prabhu was Dhanañjaya Paṇḍita. He was very much renounced and always merged in love of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Paṇḍita Dhanañjaya was a resident of the village in Katwa named Śītala. He was one of the twelve gopālas. His former name, according to Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 127, was Vasudāma. Śītala-grāma is situated near the Maṅgalakoṭa police station and Kaicara post office in the district of Burdwan. On the narrow railway from Burdwan to Katwa is a railway station about nine miles from Kutwa known as Kaicara. One has to go about a mile northeast of this station to reach Śītala. The temple was a thatched house with walls made of dirt. Some time ago, the Zamindars of Bājāravana Kābāśī, the Mulliks, constructed a big house for the purpose of a temple, but for the last sixty-five years the temple has been broken down and abandoned. The foundation of the old temple is still visible. There is a tulasī pillar near the temple, and every year during the month of January the disappearance day of Dhanañjaya is observed. It is said that for some time Paṇḍita Dhanañjaya was in a saṅkīrtana party under the direction of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and then he went to Vṛndāvana. Before going to Vṛndāvana, he lived for some time in a village named Sāṅcaḍāpāṅcaḍā, which is six miles south of the Memārī railway station. Sometimes this village is also known as "the place of Dhanañjaya" (Dhanañjayera Pāṭa). After some time, he left the responsibility for worship with a disciple and went back to Vṛndāvana. After returning from Vṛndāvana to Śītala-grāma, he established a Deity of Gaurasundara in the temple. The descendants of Paṇḍita Dhanañjaya still live in Śītala-grāma and look after the temple worship.

SYNONYMS

maheśa paṇḍita-of the name Maheśa Paṇḍita; vrajera-of Vṛndāvana; udāra-very liberal; gopāla-cowherd boy; ḍhakkā-vādye-with the beating of a kettledrum; nṛtya kare-used to dance; preme-in love; mātoyāla-as if a madman.

TRANSLATION

Maheśa Paṇḍita, the seventh of the twelve gopālas, was very liberal. In great love of Kṛṣṇa he danced to the beating of a kettledrum like a madman.

PURPORT

The village of Maheśa Paṇḍita, which is known as Pālapāḍā, is situated in the district of Nadia within a forest about one mile south of the Cākadaha railway station. The Ganges flows nearby. It is said that formerly Maheśa Paṇḍita lived on the eastern side of Jirāṭ in the village known as Masipura or Yaśīpura, and when Masipura merged into the riverbed of the Ganges, the Deities there were brought to Pālapāḍā, wh ich is situated in the midst of various villages such as Beleḍāṅgā, Berigrāma, Sukhasāgara, Cānduḍe and Manasāpotā. (There are about fourteen villages, and the entire neighborhood is known as Pāñcanagara Paragaṇā.) It is mentioned that Maheśa Paṇḍita joined the festival performed by Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu at Pāṇihāṭī. Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura also joined in the festival, and Maheśa Paṇḍita saw him on that occasion. In the temple of Maheśa Paṇḍita there are Deities of Gaura-Nityānanda, Śrī Gopīnātha, Śrī Madana-mohana and Rādhā-Govinda, as well as a śālagrāma-śilā.

TRANSLATION

The twenty-second devotee of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu was Kālā Kṛṣṇadāsa, who was the ninth cowherd boy. He was a first-class Vaiṣṇava and did not know anything beyond Nityānanda Prabhu.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 132), it is said that Kālā Kṛṣṇadāsa, who was also known as Kāliyā Kṛṣṇadāsa, was formerly a gopa (cowherd boy) of the name Lavaṅga. He was one of the twelve cowherd boys. Kāliyā Kṛṣṇadāsa had his headquarters in a village named Ākāihāṭa, which is situated in the district of Burdwan within the jurisdiction of the post office and police station of Katwa. It is situated on the road to Navadvīpa. To reach Akāihāṭa, one has to go from the Vyāṇḍela junction station to the Katwa railway station and then go about two miles, or one has to get off at the Dāṅihāṭa station and from there go one mile. The village of Akāihāṭa is very small. In the month of Caitra, on the day of Vāruṇī, there is a festival commemorating the disappearance day of Kālā Kṛṣṇadāsa.

TRANSLATION

From birth, Puruṣottama dāsa was merged in the service of the lotus feet of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu, and he always engaged in childish play with Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Sadāśiva Kavirāja and Nāgara Puruṣottama, who were father and son, are described in the Caitanya-bhāgavata as mahā-bhāgyavān, greatly fortunate. They belonged to the vaidya caste of physicians. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 156, says that Candrāvalī, a most beloved gopī of Kṛṣṇa's, later took birth as Sadāśiva Kavirāja. In verses 194 and 200 it is said that Kaṁsāri Sena, the father of Sadāśiva Kavirāja, was formerly the gopī named Ratnāvalī in Kṛṣṇa's pastimes. All the family members of Sadāśiva Kavirāja were great devotees of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Puruṣottama dāsa Ṭhākura sometimes lived at Sukhasāgara, near the Cākadaha and Śimurāli railway stations. All the Deities installed by Puruṣottama Ṭhākura were formerly situated in Beleḍāṅgā-grāma, but when the temple was destroyed the Deities were brought to Sukhasāgara. When that temple merged into the bed of the Ganges, the Deities were brought with Jāhnavā-mātā's Deity to Sāhebaḍāṅgā Beḍigrāma. Since that place also has been destroyed, all the Deities are now situated in the village named Cānduḍe-grāma, which is situated one mile up from Pālapāḍā, as referred to above.

tāṅra putra–mahāśaya śrī-kānu ṭhākura yāṅra dehe rahe kṛṣṇa-premāmṛta-pūra

SYNONYMS

tāṅra putra-his son; mahāśaya-a respectable gentleman; śrī-kānu ṭhākura-of the name Śrī Kānu Ṭhākura; yāṅra-whose; dehe-in the body; rahe-remained; kṛṣṇa-prema-amṛta-pūra-the nectar of devotional service to Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Kānu Ṭhākura, a very respectable gentleman, was the son of Puruṣottama dāsa Ṭhākura. He was such a great devotee that Lord Kṛṣṇa always lived in his body.

PURPORT

To go to the headquarters of Kānu Ṭhākura, one has to proceed by boat from the Jhikaragāchā-ghāṭa station to the river known as Kapotākṣa. Otherwise, if one goes about two or two and a half miles from the Jhikaragāchā-ghāṭa station, he can see Bodhakhānā, the headquarters of Kānu Ṭhākura. The son of Sadāśiva was Puruṣottama Ṭhākura, and his son was Kānu Ṭhākura. The descendants of Kānu Ṭhākura know him as Nāgara Puruṣottama. He was the cowherd boy named Dāma during kṛṣṇa-līlā. It is said that just after the birth of Kānu Ṭhākura, his mother, Jāhnavā, died. When he was about twelve days old, Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu took him to His home at Khaḍadaha. It is ascertained that Kānu Ṭhākura was born some time in the Bengali year 942 (A.D. 1535). It is said that he took birth on the Ratha-yātrā day. Because he was a great devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa from the very beginning of his life, Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu gave him the name Śiśu Kṛṣṇadāsa. When he was five years old he went to Vṛndāvana with Jāhnavā-mātā, and upon seeing the ecstatic symptoms of Kānu Ṭhākura, the Gosvāmīs gave him the name Kānāi Ṭhākura.

In the family of Kānu Ṭhākura there is a Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa Deity known as Prāṇavallabha. It is said that his family worshiped this Deity long before the appearance of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When there was a Maharashtrian invasion of Bengal, the family of Kānu Ṭhākura was scattered, and after the invasion one Harikṛṣṇa Gosvāmī of that family came back to their original home, Bodhakhānā, and re-established the Prāṇavallabha Deity. The descendants of the family still engage in the service of Prāṇavallabha. Kānu Ṭhākura was present during the Kheṭari utsava, when Jāhnavā-devī and Vīrabhadra Gosvāmī were also present. One of Kānu Ṭhākura's family members, Mādhavācārya, married the daughter of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, who was named Gaṅgādevī. Both Puruṣottama Ṭhākura and Kānu Ṭhākura had many disciples from brāhmaṇa families. Most of the disciplic descendants of Kānu Ṭhākura now reside in the village named Gaḍabetā, by the river Śilāvatī, in the Midnapore district.

mahā-bhāgavata-śreṣṭha datta uddhāraṇa sarva-bhāve seve nityānandera caraṇa

SYNONYMS

mahā-bhāgavata-great devotee; śreṣṭha-chief; datta-the surname Datta; uddhāraṇa-of the name Uddhāraṇa; sarva-bhāve-in all respects; seve-worships; nityānandera-of Lord Nityānanda; caraṇa-lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura, the eleventh among the twelve cowherd boys, was an exalted devotee of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu. He worshiped the lotus feet of Lord Nityānanda in all respects.

PURPORT

The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 129, states that Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura was formerly the cowherd boy of Vṛndāvana named Subāhu. Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura, previously known as Śrī Uddhāraṇa Datta, was a resident of Saptagrāma, which is situated on the bank of the Sarasvatī River near the Triśabighā railway station in the district of Hugalī. At the time of Uddhāraṇa Ṭhākura, Saptagrāma was a very big town, encompassing many other places such as Vāsudeva-pura, Bāṅśabeḍiyā, Kṛṣṇapura, Nityānanda-pura, Śivapura, Śaṅkhanagara and Saptagrāma.

Calcutta was developed under British rule by the influential mercantile community, and especially by the suvarṇa-vaṇik community who came down from Saptagrāma to establish their businesses and homes all over Calcutta. They were known as the Saptagrāmī mercantile community of Calcutta, and most of them belonged to the Mullik and Sil families. More than half of Calcutta belonged to this community, as did Śrīla Uddhāraṇa Ṭhākura. Our paternal family also came from this district and belonged to the same community. The Mulliks of Calcutta are divided into two families, namely, the Sil family and De family. All the Mulliks of the De family originally belong to the same family and gotra. We also formerly belonged to the branch of the De family whose members, intimately connected with the Muslim rulers, received the title Mullik.

In the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-khaṇḍa, Chapter Five, it is said that Uddhāraṇa Datta was an extremely elevated and liberal Vaiṣṇava. He was born with the right to worship Nityānanda Prabhu. It is also stated that Nityānanda Prabhu, after staying for some time in Khaḍadaha, came to Saptagrāma and stayed in the house of Uddhāraṇa Datta. The suvarṇa-vaṇik community to which Uddhāraṇa Datta belonged was actually a Vaiṣṇava community. Its members were bankers and gold merchants (suvarṇa means "gold," and vaṇik means "merchant"). Long ago there was a misunderstanding between Balla Sena and the suvarṇa-vaṇik community because of the great banker Gaurī Sena. Balla Sena was taking loans from Gaurī Sena and spending money extravagantly, and therefore Gaurī Sena stopped supplying money. Balla Sena took revenge by instigating a social conspiracy to make the suvarṇa-vaṇiks outcastes, and since then they have been ostracized from the higher castes, namely, the brāhmaṇas, kṣatriyas and vaiśyas. But by the grace of Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu, the suvarṇa-vaṇik community was again elevated. It is said in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, yateka vaṇik-kula uddhāraṇa haite pavitra ha-ila dvidhā nāhika ihāte: there is no doubt that all the community members of the suvarṇa-vaṇik society were again purified by Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu.

In Saptagrāma there is still a temple with a six-armed Deity of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu that was personally worshiped by Śrīla Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura. On the right side of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is a Deity of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, and on the left side is Gadādhara Prabhu. There are also a Rādhā-Govinda mūrti and a śālagrāma-śilā, and below the throne is a picture of Śrī Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura. In front of the temple there is now a big hall, and in front of the hall is a Mādhavī-latā plant. The temple is in a very shady, cool and nicely situated location. When we returned from America in 1967, the executive committee members of this temple invited us to visit it, and thus we had the opportunity to visit this temple with some American students. Formerly, in our childhood, we visited this temple with our parents because all the members of the suvarṇa-vaṇik community enthusiastically take interest in this temple of Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura. In the Bengali year 1283 (A.D. 1876) one bābājī of the name Nitāi dāsa arranged for a donation of twelve bighās of land for this temple. The management of the temple later deteriorated, but then in 1306 (A.D. 1899), through the cooperation of the famous Balarāma Mullik of Hugalī, who was a subjudge, and many rich suvarṇa-vaṇik community members, the management of the temple improved greatly. Not more than fifty years ago, one of the family members of Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura named Jagamohana Datta established a wooden mūrti(statue) of Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura in the temple, but that mūrti is no longer there; at present, a picture of Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura is worshiped. It is understood, however, that the wooden mūrti of Uddhāraṇa Ṭhākura was taken away by Śrī Madana-mohana Datta and is now being worshiped with a śālagrāma-śilā by Śrīnātha Datta.

Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura was the manager of the estate of a big Zamindar in Naihāṭī, about one and a half miles north of Katwa. The relics of this royal family are still visible near the Dāiṅhāṭa station. Since Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura was the manager of the estate, it was also known as Uddhāraṇa-pura. Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura installed Nitāi-Gaura Deities that were later brought to the house of the Zamindar, which was known as Vanaoyārībāda. Śrīla Uddhāraṇa Datta Ṭhākura remained a householder throughout his life. His father's name was Śrīkara Datta, his mother's name was Bhadrāvatī, and his son's name was Śrīnivāsa Datta.

TRANSLATION

Another important devotee of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu was Viṣṇudāsa, who had two brothers, Nandana and Gaṅgādāsa. Lord Nityānanda Prabhu sometimes stayed at their house.

PURPORT

The three brothers Viṣṇudāsa, Nandana and Gaṅgādāsa were residents of Navadvīpa and belonged to the Bhaṭṭācārya brāhmaṇa family. Both Viṣṇudāsa and Gaṅgādāsa stayed for some time with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī, and the Caitanya-bhāgavata states that formerly Nityānanda Prabhu stayed at their house.

TRANSLATION

Paramānanda Upādhyāya was Nityānanda Prabhu's great servitor. Śrī Jīva Paṇḍita glorified the qualities of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu.

PURPORT

Śrī Paramānanda Upādhyāya was an advanced devotee. His name is mentioned in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, where Śrī Jīva Paṇḍita is also mentioned as the second son of Ratnagarbha Ācārya and a childhood friend of Hāḍāi Ojhā, the father of Nityānanda Prabhu. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 169, it is said that Śrī Jīva Paṇḍita was formerly the gopī named Indirā.

paramānanda gupta-of the name Paramānanda Gupta; kṛṣṇa-bhakta-a great devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa; mahā-mati-advanced in spiritual consciousness; pūrve-formerly; yāṅra-whose; ghare-in the house; nityānandera-of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; vasati-residence.

TRANSLATION

The thirty-first devotee of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu was Paramānanda Gupta, who was greatly devoted to Lord Kṛṣṇa and highly advanced in spiritual consciousness. Formerly Nityānanda Prabhu also resided at his house for some time.

PURPORT

Paramānanda Gupta composed a prayer to Lord Kṛṣṇa known as Kṛṣṇa-stavāvalī. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verses 194 and 199, it is stated that he was formerly the gopī named Mañjumedhā.

SYNONYMS

vasanta-of the name Vasanta; navanī hoḍa-of the name Navanī Hoḍa; gopāla-of the name Gopāla; sanātana-of the name Sanātana; viṣṇāi hājarā-of the name Viṣṇāi Hājarā; kṛṣṇānanda-of the name Kṛṣṇānanda; sulocana-of the name Sulocana.

TRANSLATION

Vasanta was the fifty-first, Navanī Hoḍa the fifty-second, Gopāla the fifty-third, Sanātana the fifty-fourth, Viṣṇāi the fifty-fifth, Kṛṣṇānanda the fifty-sixth and Sulocana the fifty-seventh.

PURPORT

Navanī Hoḍa appears to have been the same person as Hoḍa Kṛṣṇadāsa, the son of the King of Baḍagāchi. His father's name was Hari Hoḍa. One can visit Baḍagāchi by taking the Lālagolā-ghāṭa railway line. Formerly the Ganges flowed by Baḍagāchi, but now it has become a canal known as the Kālśira Khāla. Near the Muḍāgāchā station is a village known as Śāligrāma in which King Kṛṣṇadāsa arranged for the marriage of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, as described in the Bhakti-ratnākara,(Twelfth Wave). It is sometimes said that Navanī Hoḍa was the son of Rāja Kṛṣṇadāsa. His descendants still live in Rukuṇapura, a village near Bahiragāchi. They belong to the dakṣiṇa-rāḍhīya-kāyastha community, but, having been reformed as brāhmaṇas, they still initiate all classes of men.

kaṁsāri sena, rāmasena, rāmacandra kavirāja govinda, śrīraṅga, mukunda, tina kavirāja kaṁsāri sena-of the name Kaṁsāri Sena; rāmasena-of the name Rāmasena; rāmacandra kavirāja-of the name Rāmacandra Kavirāja; govinda-of the name Govinda; śrīraṅga-of the name Śrīraṅga; mukunda-of the name Mukunda; tina kavirāja-all three are Kavirājas, or physicians.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The fifty-eighth great devotee of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu was Kaṁsāri Sena, the fifty-ninth was Rāmasena, the sixtieth was Rāmacandra Kavirāja, and the sixty-first, sixty-second and sixty-third were Govinda, Śrīraṅga and Mukunda, who were all physicians.

PURPORT

Śrī Rāmacandra Kavirāja, the son of Khaṇḍavāsī Cirañjīva and Sunanda, was a disciple of Śrīnivāsa Ācārya and the most intimate friend of Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura, who prayed several times for his association. His youngest brother was Govinda Kavirāja. Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī very much appreciated Śrī Rāmacandra Kavirāja's great devotion to Lord Kṛṣṇa and therefore gave him the title Kavirāja. Śrī Rāmacandra Kavirāja, who was perpetually disinterested in family life, greatly assisted in the preaching work of Śrīnivāsa Ācārya and Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura. He resided at first in Śrīkhaṇḍa but later in the village of Kumāra-nagara on the bank of the Ganges.

Govinda Kavirāja was the brother of Rāmacandra Kavirāja and youngest son of Cirañjīva of Śrīkhaṇḍa. Although at first a śākta, or worshiper of Goddess Durgā, he was later initiated by Śrīnivāsa Ācārya Prabhu. Govinda Kavirāja also resided first in Śrīkhaṇḍa and then in Kumāra-nagara, but later he moved to the village known as Teliyā Budhari, on the southern bank of the river Padmā. Since Govinda Kavirāja, the author of two books, Saṅgīta-mādhava and Gītāmṛta, was a great Vaiṣṇava kavi, or poet, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī gave him the title Kavirāja. He is described in the Bhakti-ratnākara (Ninth Wave).

Kaṁsāri Sena was formerly Ratnāvalī in Vraja, as described in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verses 194 and 200.

TRANSLATION

The dancer Gopāla was the seventy-first, Rāmabhadra the seventy-second, Gaurāṅga dāsa the seventy-third, Nṛsiṁha-caitanya the seventy-fourth and Mīnaketana Rāmadāsa the seventy-fifth.

PURPORT

The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 68, describes Mīnaketana Rāmadāsa as an incarnation of Saṅkarṣaṇa.

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Vyāsadeva described the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. The Vyāsa of the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was Vṛndāvana dāsa.

PURPORT

Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura was an incarnation of Vedavyāsa and also a friendly cowherd boy named Kusumāpīḍa in kṛṣṇa-līlā. In other words, the author of Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura, the son of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's niece Nārāyaṇī, was a combined incarnation of Vedavyāsa and the cowherd boy Kusumāpīḍa. There is a descriptive statement by Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura in his commentary on Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata giving the biographical details of the life of Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura.

SYNONYMS

anargala-unchecked; prema-love of Kṛṣṇa; sabāra-of everyone of them; ceṣṭā-activity; anargala-unchecked; prema dite-to give love of Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa dite-to deliver Kṛṣṇa; dhare-they possess; mahābala-great strength.

TRANSLATION

All these devotees had unlimited strength to deliver unobstructed, unceasing love of Kṛṣṇa. By their own strength they could offer anyone Kṛṣṇa and love of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has sung, kṛṣṇa se tomāra, kṛṣṇa dite pāra, tomāra śakati āche. In this song, Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura describes that a pure Vaiṣṇava, as the proprietor of Kṛṣṇa and love of Kṛṣṇa, can deliver both to anyone and everyone he likes. Therefore to get Kṛṣṇa and love of Kṛṣṇa one must seek the mercy of pure devotees. Śrīla Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura also says, yasya prasādād bhagavat-prasādo yasyāprasādān na gatiḥ kuto 'pi: "By the mercy of the spiritual master one is blessed by the mercy of Kṛṣṇa. Without the grace of the spiritual master one cannot make any advancement." By the grace of a Vaiṣṇava or bona fide spiritual master one can get both love of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, and Kṛṣṇa Himself.

TRANSLATION

With an ardent desire to serve the purpose of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Eleventh Chapter, in the matter of the expansions of Lord Nityānanda.

18.4.12 Chapter 12

The Expansions of Advaita Ācārya and Gadādhara Paṇḍita

Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives a summary of the Twelfth Chapter of Ādi-līlā in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. This Twelfth Chapter describes the followers of Advaita Prabhu, among whom the followers of Acyutānanda, the son of Advaita Ācārya, are understood to be the pure followers who received the cream of the philosophy Śrī Advaita Ācārya enunciated. Other so-called descendants and followers of Advaita Ācārya are not to be recognized.This chapter also includes narrations concerning he son of Advaita Ācārya named Gopāla Miśra and Advaita Ācārya's servant named Kamalākānta Viśvāsa. In his early life Gopāla fainted during the cleansing of the Guṇḍicā-mandira at Jagannātha Purī and thus became a recipient of the mercy of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The story of Kamalākānta Viśvāsa concerns his borrowing three hundred rupees from Pratāparudra Mahārāja to clear the debts of Advaita Ācārya, for which Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu chastised him when He came to know of it. Kamalākānta Viśvāsa was then purified by the request of Śrī Advaita Ācārya. After describing the descendants of Advaita Ācārya, the chapter concludes by describing the followers of Gadādhara Paṇḍita Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

As the trunk and branches were watered, the branches and subbranches spread lavishly, and the tree grew full with fruits and flowers.

TEXT 8

prathame ta' eka-mata ācāryera gaṇa pāche dui-mata haila daivera kāraṇa

SYNONYMS

prathame-in the beginning; ta'-however; eka-mata-one opinion; ācāryera-of Advaita Ācārya; gaṇa-followers; pāche-later; dui-mata-two opinions; haila-became; daivera-of providence; kāraṇa-the cause.

TRANSLATION

At first all the followers of Advaita Ācārya shared a single opinion. But later they followed two different opinions, as ordained by providence.

PURPORT

The words daivera kāraṇa indicate that by dint of providence, or by God's will, the followers of Advaita Ācārya divided into two parties. Such disagreement among the disciples of one ācārya is also found among the members of the Gauḍīya Maṭha. In the beginning, during the presence of Oṁ Viṣṇupāda Paramahaṁsa Parivrājakācārya Aṣṭottara-śata Śrī Śrīmad Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura Prabhupāda, all the disciples worked in agreement; but just after his disappearance, they disagreed. One party strictly followed the instructions of Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, but another group created their own concoction about executing his desires. Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, at the time of his departure, requested all his disciples to form a governing body and conduct missionary activities cooperatively. He did not instruct a particular man to become the next ācārya. But just after his passing away, his leading secretaries made plans, without authority, to occupy the post of ācārya, and they split into two factions over who the next ācārya would be. Consequently, both factions were asāra, or useless, because they had no authority, having disobeyed the order of the spiritual master. Despite the spiritual master's order to form a governing body and execute the missionary activities of the Gauḍīya Maṭha, the two unauthorized factions began litigation that is still going on after forty years with no decision.

Therefore, we do not belong to any faction. But because the two parties, busy dividing the material assets of the Gauḍīya Maṭha institution, stopped the preaching work, we took up the mission of Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura and Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura to preach the cult of Caitanya Mahāprabhu all over the world, under the protection of all the predecessor ācāryas, and we find that our humble attempt has been successful. We followed the principles especially explained by Śrīla Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura in his commentary on the Bhagavad-gītā verse vyavasāyātmikā buddhir ekeha kuru-nandana. According to this instruction of Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura, it is the duty of a disciple to follow strictly the orders of his spiritual master. The secret of success in advancement in spiritual life is the firm faith of the disciple in the orders of his spiritual master. The Vedas confirm this:

yasya deve parā bhaktir
yathā deve tathā gurau
tasyaite kathitā hy arthāḥ
prakāśante mahātmanaḥ

"To one who has staunch faith in the words of the spiritual master and the words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the secret of success in Vedic knowledge is revealed." The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is being propagated according to this principle, and therefore our preaching work is going on successfully, in spite of the many impediments offered by antagonistic demons, because we are getting positive help from our previous ācāryas. One must judge every action by its result. The members of the self-appointed ācārya's party who occupied the property of the Gauḍīya Maṭha are satisfied, but they could make no progress in preaching. Therefore by the result of their actions one should know that they are asāra, or useless, whereas the success of the ISKCON party, the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, which strictly follows guru and Gaurāṅga, is increasing daily all over the world. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura wanted to print as many books as possible and distribute them all over the world. We have tried our best in this connection, and we are getting results beyond our expectations.

TEXT 9

keha ta' ācārya ājñāya, keha ta' svatantra sva-mata kalpanā kare daiva-paratantra

SYNONYMS

keha ta'-some; ācārya-the spiritual master; ājñāya-upon His order; keha ta'-some; sva-tantra-independently; sva-mata-their own opinions; kalpanā kare-they concoct; daiva-paratantra-under the spell of māyā.

TRANSLATION

Some of the disciples strictly accepted the orders of the ācārya, and others deviated, independently concocting their own opinions under the spell of daivī-māyā.

PURPORT

This verse describes the beginning of a schism. When disciples do not stick to the principle of accepting the order of their spiritual master, immediately there are two opinions. Any opinion different from the opinion of the spiritual master is useless. One cannot infiltrate materially concocted ideas into spiritual advancement. That is deviation. There is no scope for adjusting spiritual advancement to material ideas.

TEXT 10

ācāryera mata yei, sei mata sāra tāṅra ājñā laṅghi' cale, sei ta' asāra

SYNONYMS

ācāryera-of the spiritual master (Advaita Prabhu); mata-opinion; yei-what is; sei-that; mata-opinion; sāra-active principle; tāṅra-his; ājñā-order; laṅghi'-transgressing; cale-becomes; sei-that; ta'-however; asāra-useless.

TRANSLATION

The order of the spiritual master is the active principle in spiritual life. Anyone who disobeys the order of the spiritual master immediately becomes useless.

PURPORT

Here is the opinion of Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī. Persons who strictly follow the orders of the spiritual master are useful in executing the will of the Supreme, whereas persons who deviate from the strict order of the spiritual master are useless.

TEXT 11

asārera nāme ihāṅ nāhi prayojana

SYNONYMS

asārera-of the useless persons; nāme-in their name; ihāṅ-in this connection; nāhi-there is no; prayojana-use; bheda-differences; jānibāre-to know; kari-I do; ekatra-in one list; gaṇana-counting.

TRANSLATION

There is no need to name those who are useless. I have mentioned them only to distinguish them from the useful devotees.

dhānya-rāśi māpe yaiche pātnā sahite paścāte pātnā uḍāñā saṁskāra karite

SYNONYMS

dhānya-rāśi-heaps of paddy; māpe-measures; yaiche-as it is; pātnā-useless straw; sahite-with; paścāte-later; pātnā-useless straw; uḍāñā-fanning; saṁskāra-purification; karite-to do.

TRANSLATION

Paddy is mixed with straw at first, and one must fan it to separate the paddy from the straw.

PURPORT

This example given by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī is very appropriate. In the case of the Gauḍīya Maṭha members, one can apply a similar process. There are many disciples of Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, but to judge who is actually his disciple, to divide the useful from the useless, one must measure the activities of such disciples in executing the will of the spiritual master. Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura tried his best to spread the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to countries outside India. When he was present he patronized the disciples to go outside India to preach the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, but they were unsuccessful because within their minds they were not actually serious about preaching His cult in foreign countries; they simply wanted to take credit for having gone to foreign lands and utilize this recognition in India by advertising themselves as repatriated preachers. Many svāmīs have adopted this hypocritical means of preaching for the last eighty years or more, but no one could preach the real cult of Kṛṣṇa consciousness all over the world. They merely came back to India falsely advertising that they had converted all the foreigners to the ideas of Vedānta or Kṛṣṇa consciousness, and then they collected funds in India and lived satisfied lives of material comfort. As one fans paddy to separate the real paddy from useless straw, by accepting the criterion recommended by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī one can very easily understand who is a genuine world-preacher and who is useless.

TRANSLATION

When Advaita Ācārya heard this statement from His five-year-old son Acyutānanda, He felt great satisfaction because of his conclusive judgment.

PURPORT

Commenting on verses 13 through 17, Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura gives an extensive description of the descendants of Advaita Ācārya. The Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-khaṇḍa, Chapter One, states that Acyutānanda was the eldest son of Advaita Ācārya. The Sanskrit book Advaita-carita states, "Advaita Ācārya Prabhu had three sons, named Acyuta, Kṛṣṇa Miśra and Gopāla dāsa, all born of the womb of His wife, Sītādevī, who were devotees of Lord Caitanya. Advaita Ācārya also had three more sons, whose names were Balarāma, Svarūpa and Jagadīśa. Thus there were six sons of Advaita Ācārya." Among the six sons, three were strict followers of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and of these three, Acyutānanda was the eldest.

Advaita Prabhu married in the beginning of the fifteenth century śakābda (late fifteenth century A.D.). When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to visit the village of Rāmakeli while going from Jagannātha Purī to Vṛndāvana during the śakābda years 1433 and 1434 (A.D. 1512 and 1513), Acyutānanda was only five years old. The Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-khaṇḍa, Fourth Chapter, describes Acyutānanda at that time as pañca-varṣa vayasa madhura digambara, "only five years old and standing naked." Therefore it is to be concluded that Acyutānanda was born sometime in the year 1428 (A.D. 1507). Before the birth of Acyutānanda, Advaita Prabhu's wife, Sītādevī, came to see Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu at His birth. Thus it is not impossible that she had the other three sons by Advaita within the twenty-one years between 1407 and 1428 śakābda (A.D. 1486 and 1507). In an unauthorized book of the name Sītādvaita-carita, published in Bengali in the unauthorized newspaper Nityānanda-dāyinī in 1792 śakābda (A.D. 1871), it is mentioned that Acyutānanda was a class friend of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. According to Caitanya-bhāgavata, this statement is not at all valid. When Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the renounced order of sannyāsa, He came to the house of Advaita Prabhu at Śāntipura in the year 1431 śakābda (A.D. 1510). At that time, as stated in Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-khaṇḍa, Chapter One, Acyutānanda was only three years old. The Caitanya-bhāgavata further states that the naked child, the son of Advaita Prabhu, immediately came and fell down at the lotus feet of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Lord immediately took him on His lap, although he was not very clean, having dust all over his body. Lord Caitanya said, "My dear Acyuta, Advaita Ācārya is My father, and thus we are brothers."

Before Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu exhibited His spiritual forms during His residence at Navadvīpa, He asked Śrī Rāma Paṇḍita, Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's brother, to go to Śāntipura and bring back Advaita Ācārya. Acyutānanda joined his father at that time. It is said, advaitera tanaya 'acyutānanda' nāma parama-bālaka, seho kānde avirāma. Acyutānanda also joined in crying in transcendental bliss. Again, when Lord Caitanya beat Advaita Ācārya for explaining Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from an impersonalist viewpoint opposed to the principles of bhakti-yoga, Acyutānanda was also present. Therefore all these incidents must have occurred only two or three years before Lord Caitanya accepted the sannyāsa order. In the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Antya-khaṇḍa, Chapter One, it is stated that Acyutānanda, the son of Advaita Ācārya, offered his obeisances to the Lord. Therefore it should be concluded that from the very beginning of his life Acyutānanda was a great devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

There is no information that Acyutānanda ever married, but he is described as the biggest branch of the Advaita Ācārya family. From a book named Śākhā-nirṇayāmṛta it is understood that Acyutānanda was a disciple of Gadādhara and that he took shelter of Lord Caitanya in Jagannātha Purī and engaged in devotional service. The Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Chapter Ten, states that Acyutānanda, the son of Advaita Ācārya, lived in Jagannātha Purī, taking shelter of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Gadādhara Paṇḍita, in the last years of his life, also lived with Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī. There is no doubt, therefore, that Acyutānanda was a disciple of Paṇḍita Gadādhara. In the accounts of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's dancing in front of the car during the Ratha-yātrā festival, Acyutānanda's name is to be found many times. It is stated that in the party of Advaita Ācārya from Śāntipura, Acyutānanda was dancing and others were singing. At that time the boy was only six years old. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, compiled by Śrī Kavi-karṇapūra, has described Acyutānanda as a disciple of Gadādhara Paṇḍita and a great and dear devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. According to the opinion of some, he was an incarnation of Kārttikeya, the son of Lord Śiva, and according to others he was formerly the gopī named Acyutā. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā has supported both these opinions. Another book, Narottama-vilāsa, compiled by Śrī Narahari dāsa, mentions Acyutānanda's presence during the festival at Khetari. According to Śrī Narahari dāsa, during the last days of his life Acyutānanda stayed in his house at Śāntipura, but during the presence of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu he lived at Jagannātha Purī with Gadādhara Paṇḍita.

Of the six sons of Advaita Ācārya, three-Acyutānanda, Kṛṣṇa Miśra and Gopāla dāsa-lived faithfully in the service of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Since Acyutānanda did not accept a wife, he had no issue. The second son of Advaita Ācārya, Kṛṣṇa Miśra, had two sons, Raghunātha Cakravartī and Dola-govinda. The descendants of Raghunātha still live in Śāntipura in the neighborhoods of Madana-gopāla-pāḍa, Gaṇakara, Mṛjāpura and Kumārakhāli. Dola-govinda had three sons, namely, Cāṅda, Kandarpa and Gopīnātha. The descendants of Kandarpa live in Maldah in the village Jikābāḍī. Gopīnātha had three sons, Śrīvallabha, Prāṇavallabha and Keśava. The descendants of Śrīvallabha live in the villages known as Maśiyāḍārā (Mahiṣaḍerā), Dāmukadiyā and Caṇḍīpura. There is a genealogical table for the family of Śrī Vallabha beginning from his eldest son, Gaṅgā-nārāyaṇa. The descendants of Śrī Vallabha's youngest son, Rāmagopāla, still live in Dāmukadiyā, Caṇḍīpura, Śolamāri, and so on. The descendants of Prāṇavallabha and Keśava live in Uthalī. The son of Prāṇavallabha was Ratneśvara, and his son was Kṛṣṇarāma, whose youngest son was Lakṣmī-nārāyaṇa. His son was Navakiśora, and Navakiśora's second son was Rāmamohana, whose eldest son was Jagabandhu and whose third son, Vīracandra, accepted the sannyāsa order and established a Deity of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu in Katwa. These two sons of Rāmamohana were known as Baḍa Prabhu and Choṭa Prabhu, and they inaugurated the circumambulation of Navadvīpa-dhāma. One may refer to the Vaiṣṇava-mañjuṣā for the complete genealogical table of Advaita Prabhu in the line of Kṛṣṇa Miśra.

SYNONYMS

guṇḍicā-mandire-in the Guṇḍicā-mandira in Jagannātha Purī; mahāprabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sammukhe-in front; kīrtane-in saṅkīrtana; nartana-dancing; kare-does; baḍa-very; prema-sukhe-in transcendental bliss.

TRANSLATION

When Lord Caitanya personally cleansed the Guṇḍicā-mandira in Jagannātha Purī, Gopāla danced in front of the Lord with great love and happiness.

PURPORT

The Guṇḍicā-mandira is situated in Jagannātha Purī, and every year Jagannātha, Balabhadra and Subhadrā come there from the Jagannātha temple to stay for eight days. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu lived at Jagannātha Purī, every year He personally cleansed this temple with His principal devotees. The Guṇḍicā-mārjana chapter of Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Madhya 12) describes this vividly.

ācāryera āra putra–śrī-balarāma āra putra–'svarūpa'-śākhā, 'jagadīśa' nāma ācāryera-of Śrīla Advaita Ācārya; āra-another; putra-son; śrī-balarāma-of the name Śrī Balarāma; āra putra-another son; svarūpa-of the name Svarūpa; śākhā-branch; jagadīśa nāma-of the name Jagadīśa.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The other sons of Advaita Ācārya were Śrī Balarāma, Svarūpa and Jagadīśa.

PURPORT

The Sanskrit book Advaita-carita states that Balarāma, Svarūpa and Jagadīśa were the fourth, fifth and sixth sons of Advaita Ācārya. Therefore Śrī Advaita Ācārya had six sons. Balarāma, Svarūpa and Jagadīśa, being smārtas, or Māyāvādīs, were rejected by Vaiṣṇava society. Sometimes Māyāvādīs pose themselves as Vaiṣṇavas, or worshipers of Lord Viṣṇu, but actually they do not believe in Lord Viṣṇu as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, for they consider demigods like Lord Śiva, Durgā, the sun-god and Gaṇeśa equal to Him. They are generally known as pañcopāsaka-smārtas, and one should not count them among the Vaiṣṇavas.

Balarāma had three wives and nine sons. The youngest son of his first wife was known as Madhusūdana Gosvāmī. He took the title Bhaṭṭācārya and accepted the path of the smārta or Māyāvāda philosophy. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura notes that the son of Gosvāmī Bhaṭṭācārya, Śrī Rādhāramaṇa Gosvāmī Bhaṭṭācārya, refused the title gosvāmī because it is generally meant for sannyāsīs, those who have taken the renounced order of life. One who is still in family life should not misuse the title gosvāmī. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura did not recognize the caste gosvāmīs because they were not in the line of the six Gosvāmīs in the renounced order who were direct disciples of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu-namely, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī, Śrīla Bhaṭṭa Raghunātha Gosvāmī, Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī and Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura said that the gṛhastha āśrama, or the status of family life, is a sort of concession for sense gratification. Therefore a gṛhastha should not falsely adopt the title gosvāmī. The ISKCON movement has never conferred the title gosvāmī upon a householder. Although all the sannyāsīs we have initiated in ISKCON are young, we have awarded them the titles of the renounced order of life, svāmī and gosvāmī, because they have completely dedicated their lives to preach the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura mentions that not only do the householder caste gosvāmīs disrespect the title gosvāmī, but also, following the principles of the smārta Raghunandana, they exhibit great foolishness by burning a straw image of Advaita Ācārya in a śrāddha ceremony, thus acting as Rākṣasas and disrespecting the cause of Hari-bhakti-vilāsa, which is the guide for Vaiṣṇavas. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that sometimes these smārta caste gosvāmīs write books on Vaiṣṇava philosophy or commentaries on the original scriptures, but a pure devotee should cautiously avoid reading them.

SYNONYMS

kamalākānta viśvāsa-of the name Kamalākānta Viśvāsa; nāma-name; ācārya-kiṅkara-servant of Advaita Ācārya; ācārya-vyavahāra-the dealings of Advaita Ācārya; saba-all; tāṅhāra-his; gocara-with in the knowledge.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya's very confidential servant named Kamalākānta Viśvāsa knew all the dealings of Advaita Ācārya.

PURPORT

The name Kamalānanda mentioned in the Ādi-līlā (10.149) and the name Kamalākānta mentioned in the Madhya-līlā (10.94) both refer to the same man. Kamalākānta, a very confidential servant of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu born in a brāhmaṇa family, engaged in the service of Śrī Advaita Ācārya as His secretary. When Paramānanda Purī went from Navadvīpa to Jagannātha Purī, he took Kamalākānta Viśvāsa with him, and they both went to see Lord Caitanya at Jagannātha Purī. It is mentioned in the Madhya-līlā (10.94) that one of the devotees of Lord Caitanya, the brāhmaṇa Kamalākānta, went with Paramānanda Purī to Jagannātha Purī.

SYNONYMS

īśvarera-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; dainya-poverty; kari'-establishing; kariyāche-has done; bhikṣā-begging; ataeva-therefore; danda-punishment; kari'-giving him; karāiba-shall cause; śikṣā-instruction.

TRANSLATION

"But he has made the incarnation of Godhead a poverty-stricken beggar. Therefore I shall punish him for his correction."

PURPORT

To describe a man as an incarnation of God, or Nārāyaṇa, and at the same time present him as poverty-stricken is contradictory, and it is the greatest offense. The Māyāvādī philosophers, engaged in the missionary work of spoiling the Vedic culture by preaching that everyone is God, describe a poverty-stricken man as daridra-nārāyaṇa, or "poor Nārāyaṇa." Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu never accepted such foolish and unauthorized ideas. He strictly warned, māyāvādi-bhāṣya śunile haya sarva-nāśa: "Anyone who follows the principles of Māyāvāda philosophy is certainly doomed." Such a fool needs to be reformed by punishment.

Although it is contradictory to say that the Supreme Personality of Godhead or His incarnation is poverty-stricken, we find in the revealed scriptures that when the Lord incarnated as Vāmana, He begged some land from Mahārāja Bali. Everyone knows, however, that Vāmanadeva was not at all poverty-stricken. His begging from Mahārāja Bali was a device to favor him. When Mahārāja Bali actually gave the land, Vāmanadeva exhibited His all-powerful position by covering the three worlds with three steps. One should not accept the so-called daridra-nārāyaṇas as incarnations because they are completely unable to show the opulence of the genuine incarnations of God.

govindere ājñā dila,–"iṅhā āji haite bāuliyā viśvāse ethā nā dibe āsite"

SYNONYMS

govindere-unto Govinda; ājñā dila-ordered; iṅhā-to this place; āji-today; haite-from; bāuliyā-the Māyāvādī; viśvāse-unto Kamalākānta Viśvāsa; ethā-here; nā-do not; dibe-allow; āsite-to come.

TRANSLATION

The Lord ordered Govinda, "From today on, do not allow that bāuliyā Kamalākānta Viśvāsa to come here."

PURPORT

The bāuliyās, or bāulas, are one of thirteen unauthorized sects that pass as followers of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Lord ordered Govinda, His personal assistant, not to allow Kamalākānta Viśvāsa to come in His presence because he had become a bāuliyā. Thus although the bāula-sampradāya, āula-sampradāya and sahajiyā-sampradāya, as well as the smārtas, jāta-gosāñis, atibāḍis, cūḍādhārīs and gaurāṅga-nāgarīs, claim to belong to the disciplic succession of Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Lord actually rejected them.

śuniyā prabhura daṇḍa ācārya harṣita daṇḍa-punishment; śuni'-hearing; viśvāsa-Kamalākānta Viśvāsa; ha-ila-became; parama-very; duḥkhita-unhappy; śuniyā-hearing; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; daṇḍa-punishment; ācārya-Śrī Advaita Ācārya Prabhu; harṣita-very much pleased.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Kamalākānta Viśvāsa heard about this punishment by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he was very unhappy, but when Advaita Prabhu heard about it, He was greatly pleased.

PURPORT

In Bhagavad-gītā the Lord says, samo 'haṁ sarva-bhūteṣu na me dveṣyo 'sti na priyaḥ: "I envy no one, nor am I partial to anyone. I am equal to all." (Bg. 9.29) The Supreme Personality of Godhead being equal to everyone, no one can be His enemy, nor can anyone be His friend. Since everyone is a part or son of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Lord cannot partially regard someone as a friend and someone as an enemy. Thus when Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu punished Kamalākānta Viśvāsa by no longer allowing him to come in His presence, although the punishment was actually very hard on him, Śrī Advaita Prabhu, understanding the inner meaning of such punishment, was happy because He appreciated that the Lord had actually favored Kamalākānta Viśvāsa. Therefore He was not at all unhappy. Devotees should always be happy with all the dealings of their master, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. A devotee may be put into difficulty or opulence, but he should accept both as gifts of the Supreme personality of Godhead and jubilantly engage in the service of the Lord in all circumstances.

TEXT 38

viśvāsere kahe,–tumi baḍa bhāgyavān

SYNONYMS

viśvāsere-unto Kamalākānta Viśvāsa; kahe-said; tumi-you; baḍa-very; bhāgyavān-fortunate; tomāre-unto you; karila-did; daṇḍa-punishment; prabhu-the Lord; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

Seeing Kamalākānta Viśvāsa unhappy, Advaita Ācārya Prabhu told him, "You are greatly fortunate to have been punished by the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

This is an authoritative judgment by Śrī Advaita Prabhu. He clearly advises that one should not be unhappy when reverses come upon him by the order of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. A devotee should always be happy to receive the fortune awarded him by the Supreme Lord, which seems pleasant or unpleasant according to one's judgment.

SYNONYMS

mukti-liberation; śreṣṭha-the topmost; kari'-accepting; kainu-I did; vāśiṣṭha-the book known as Yoga-vāśiṣṭha; vyākhyāna-explanation; kruddha-angry; hañā-becoming; prabhu-the Lord; more-unto Me; kaila-did; apamāna-disrespect.

TRANSLATION

”Thus I expounded the Yoga-vāśiṣṭha, which considers liberation the ultimate goal of life. For this the Lord became angry at Me and treated Me with apparent disrespect.

PURPORT

There is a book of the name Yoga-vāśiṣṭha that Māyāvādīs greatly favor because it is full of impersonal misunderstandings regarding the Supreme Personality of Godhead, with no touch of Vaiṣṇavism. Factually, all Vaiṣṇavas should avoid such a book, but Advaita Ācārya Prabhu, wanting punishment from the Lord, began to support the impersonal statements of the Yoga-vāśiṣṭha. Thus Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu became extremely angry at Him and seemingly treated Him disrespectfully.

ye daṇḍa pāila bhāgyavān śrī-mukunda daṇḍa pāñā-receiving the punishment; haila-became; mora-My; parama-very great; ānanda-happiness; ye daṇḍa-the punishment; pāila-got; bhāgyavān-the most fortunate; śrī-mukunda-of the name Śrī Mukunda.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”When chastised by Lord Caitanya, I was very happy to receive a punishment similar to that awarded Śrī Mukunda.

PURPORT

Śrī Mukunda, a great friend and associate of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, used to visit many places where people were against the Vaiṣṇava cult. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu came to know of this, He punished Mukunda, forbidding him to see Him again. Although Caitanya Mahāprabhu was soft like a flower, He was also strict like a thunderbolt, and everyone was afraid to allow Mukunda to come again into the presence of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Mukunda, therefore, being very sorry, asked his other friends whether he would one day be allowed to see Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When the devotees brought this inquiry to Lord Caitanya, the Lord replied, ”Mukunda will get permission to see Me after many millions of years.” When they gave this information to Mukunda, he danced with jubilation, and when Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard that Mukunda was so patiently waiting to meet Him after millions of years, He immediately asked him to return. There is a statement about this punishment of Mukunda in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-līlā, Tenth Chapter.

TEXT 42

SYNONYMS

ye daṇḍa-the punishment; pāila-got; śrī-śacī bhāgyavatī-the most fortunate mother Śacīdevī; se daṇḍa-the same punishment; prasāda-favor; anya-other; loka-person; pābe-can get; kati-how.

TRANSLATION

”A similar punishment was awarded to mother Śacīdevī. Who could be more fortunate than she to receive such punishment?”

PURPORT

Mother Śacīdevī was similarly punished, as mentioned in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-līlā, Chapter Twenty-two. Mother Śacīdevī, apparently showing her feminine nature, accused Advaita Prabhu of encouraging her son to become a sannyāsī. Caitanya Mahāprabhu, taking this accusation as an offense, asked Śacīdevī to touch the lotus feet of Advaita Ācārya to mitigate the offense she had supposedly committed.

SYNONYMS

āmāreha-even upon Me; kabhu-at any time; yei-that; nā-never; haya-becomes; prasāda-favor; tomāra caraṇe-at Your lotus feet; āmi-I; ki-what; kainu-have done; aparādha-offense.

TRANSLATION

”The favor You have shown Kamalākānta is so great that even to Me You have never shown such favor. What offense have I committed at Your lotus feet so as not to be shown such favor?”

PURPORT

This is a reference to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's former punishment of Advaita Ācārya. When Advaita Ācārya Prabhu was reading Yoga-vāśiṣṭha, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu beat Him, but He never told Him not to come in His presence. But Kamalākānta was punished with the order never to come in the Lord's presence. Therefore Śrī Advaita Ācārya Prabhu wanted to impress upon Caitanya Mahāprabhu that He had shown more favor to Kamalākānta Viśvāsa because He had prohibited Kamalākānta from seeing Him, whereas He had not done so to Advaita Ācārya. Therefore the favor shown Kamalākānta Viśvāsa was greater than that shown Advaita Ācārya.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu laughed with satisfaction and immediately called Kamalākānta Viśvāsa.

TEXT 47

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord said; bāuliyā-one who does not know what is right; aiche-in that way; kāhe-why; kara-do; ācāryera-of Śrī Advaita Ācārya; lajjā-privacy; dharma-religion; hāni-loss; se-that; ācara-you act.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu instructed Kamalākānta, "You are a bāuliyā, one who does not know things as they are. Why do you act in this way? Why do you invade the privacy of Advaita Ācārya and damage His religious principles?

PURPORT

Kamalākānta Viśvāsa, out of his ignorance, asked the King of Jagannātha Purī, Mahārāja Pratāparudra, to liquidate the three-hundred-rupee debt of Advaita Ācārya, but at the same time he established Advaita Ācārya as an incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is contradictory. An incarnation of the Supreme Godhead cannot be indebted to anyone in this material world. Caitanya Mahāprabhu is never satisfied by such a contradiction, which is technically called rasābhāsa, or overlapping of one humor (rasa) with another. This is the same type of idea as the contradiction that Nārāyaṇa is poverty-stricken (daridra-nārāyaṇa).

TEXT 50

pratigraha kabhu nā karibe rāja-dhana viṣayīra anna khāile duṣṭa haya mana pratigraha-acceptance of alms; kabhu-at any time; nā-not; karibe-should do; rāja-dhana-charity by kings; viṣayīra-of men who are materialistic; anna-food; khāile-by eating; duṣṭa-polluted; haya-becomes; mana-mind.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Advaita Ācārya, My spiritual master, should never accept charity from rich men or kings because if a spiritual master accepts money or grains from such materialists his mind becomes polluted.

PURPORT

It is very risky to accept money or food from materialistic persons, for such acceptance pollutes the mind of the charity's recipient. According to the Vedic system, one should give charity to sannyāsīs and brāhmaṇas because one who thus gives charity becomes free from sinful activities. Formerly, therefore, brāhmaṇas would not accept charity from a person unless he were very pious. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu gave this instruction for all spiritual masters. Materialistic persons who are not inclined to give up their sinful activities like illicit sex, intoxication, gambling and meat-eating sometimes want to become our disciples, but, unlike professional spiritual masters who accept disciples regardless of their condition, Vaiṣṇavas do not accept such cheap disciples. One must at least agree to abide by the rules and regulations for a disciple before a Vaiṣṇava ācārya can accept him. In fact, a Vaiṣṇava should not even accept charity or food from persons who do not follow the rules and regulations of the Vaiṣṇava principles.

kṛṣṇa-smṛti vinu haya niṣphala jīvana mana-mind; duṣṭa-polluted; ha-ile-becoming; nahe-is not possible; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; smaraṇa-remembrance; kṛṣṇa-smṛti-remembrance of Lord Kṛṣṇa; vinu-without; haya-becomes; niṣphala-without any result; jīvana-life.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”When one’s mind is polluted, it is very difficult to remember Kṛṣṇa; and when remembrance of Lord Kṛṣṇa is hampered, one’s life is unproductive.

PURPORT

A devotee should always be alert, keeping his mind in a sanguine state so that he can always remember Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa. The śāstras state, smartavyaḥ satataṁ viṣṇuḥ: in devotional life one should always remember Lord Viṣṇu. Śrīla Śukadeva Gosvāmī also advised Mahārāja Parīkṣit, smartavyo nityaśaḥ. In the Second Canto, First Chapter, of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Śukadeva Gosvāmī advised Parīkṣit Mahārāja:

tasmād bhārata sarvātmā bhagavān īśvaro hariḥ śrotavyaḥ kīrtitavyaś ca smartavyaś cecchatābhayam

”O descendant of King Bharata, one who desires to be free from all miseries must hear, glorify and also remember the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the Supersoul, the controller and the savior from all miseries.” (Bhāg. 2.1.5) This is the summary of all the activities of a Vaiṣṇava, and the same instruction is repeated here (kṛṣṇa-smṛti vinu haya niṣphala jīvana). Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī states in Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, avyartha-kālatvam: A Vaiṣṇava must be very alert not to waste even a second of his valuable lifetime. This is a symptom of a Vaiṣṇava. But association with pounds-and-shillings men, or viṣayīs, materialists who are simply interested in sense gratification, pollutes one’s mind and hampers such continuous remembrance of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore advised, asat-saṅga-tyāga–ei vaiṣṇava-ācāra: a Vaiṣṇava should behave in such a way as to never associate with nondevotees or materialists (Cc. Madhya 22.87). One can avoid such association simply by always remembering Kṛṣṇa within his heart.

TRANSLATION

”Thus one becomes unpopular in the eyes of the people in general, for this damages his religiosity and fame. A Vaiṣṇava, especially one who acts as a spiritual master, must not act in such a way. One should always be conscious of this fact.”

TRANSLATION

The fifth branch of Advaita Ācārya was Śrī Yadunandana Ācārya, who had so many branches and subbranches that it is impossible to write of them.

PURPORT

Yadunandana Ācārya was the official initiator spiritual master of Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī. In other words, when Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī was a householder, Yadunandana Ācārya initiated him at home. Later Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī took shelter of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Yadunandana Ācārya was a student of Vāsudeva Datta, and he received all his mercy. Therefore he could accept Lord Caitanya's lotus feet, from all angles of vision, as the supreme shelter.

PURPORT

The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 140, describes that Vāsudeva Datta was formerly Madhuvrata, a singer in Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

Bhāgavata Ācārya, Viṣṇudāsa Ācārya, Cakrapāṇi Ācārya and Ananta Ācārya were the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth branches of Advaita Ācārya.

PURPORT

In his Anubhāṣya Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī Prabhupāda says that Bhāgavata Ācārya was formerly among the followers of Advaita Ācārya but was later counted among the followers of Gadādhara Paṇḍita. The sixth verse of Śākhā-nirṇayāmṛta, a book written by Yadunandana dāsa, states that Bhāgavata Ācārya compiled a famous book of the name Prema-taraṅgiṇī. According to the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 195, Bhāgavata Ācārya formerly lived in Vṛndāvana as Śveta-mañjarī. Viṣṇudāsa Ācārya was present during the Khetari-mahotsava. He went there with Acyutānanda, as stated in the Bhakti-ratnākara, Tenth Taraṅga. Ananta Ācārya was one of the eight principal gopīs. His former name was Sudevī. Although he was among Advaita Ācārya's followers, he later became an important devotee of Gadādhara Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Vijaya Paṇḍita and Śrīrāma Paṇḍita were two important branches of Advaita Ācārya. There are innumerable branches, but I am unable to mention them all.

PURPORT

Since Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita was an incarnation of Nārada Muni, his younger brother, Śrīrāma Paṇḍita, is accepted as an incarnation of Parvata Muni, Nārada Muni's most intimate friend.

māli-datta jala advaita-skandha yogāya sei jale jīye śākhā,–phula-phala pāya

SYNONYMS

māli-datta-given by the gardener; jala-water; advaita-skandha-the branch known as Advaita Ācārya; yogāya-supplies; sei-by that; jale-water; jīye-lives; śākhā-branches; phula-phala-fruits and flowers; pāya-grow.

TRANSLATION

The Advaita Ācārya branch received the water supplied by the original gardener, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In this way, the subbranches were nourished, and their fruits and flowers grew luxuriantly.

PURPORT

The branches of Advaita Ācārya nourished by the water (jala) supplied by Sri Caitanya Mahāprabhu are to be considered bona fide ācāryas. As we have discussed hereinbefore, the representatives of Advaita Ācārya later divided into two groups-the bona fide branches of the ācārya's disciplic succession and the pretentious branches of Advaita Ācārya. Those who followed the principles of Caitanya Mahāprabhu flourished, whereas the others, who are mentioned below in the sixty-seventh verse, dried up.

TEXT 67

ihāra madhye mālī pāche kona śākhā-gaṇa nā māne caitanya-mālī durdaiva kāraṇa

SYNONYMS

ihāra-of them; madhye-within; mālī-the gardener; pāche-later on; kona-some; śākhā-gaṇa-branches; nā-does not; māne-accept; caitanya-mālī-the gardener Lord Caitanya; durdaiva-unfortunate; kāraṇa-reason.

TRANSLATION

After the disappearance of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, some of the branches, for unfortunate reasons, deviated from His path.

TEXT 68

sṛjāila, jīyāila, tāṅre nā mānila kṛtaghna ha-ilā, tāṅre skandha kruddha ha-ila

SYNONYMS

sṛjāila-fructified; jīyāila-maintained; tāṅre-Him; nā-not; mānila-accepted; kṛtaghna-ungrateful; ha-ilā-thus became; tāṅre-to them; skandha-trunk; kruddha-angry; ha-ila-became.

TRANSLATION

Some branches did not accept the original trunk that vitalized and maintained the entire tree. When they thus became ungrateful, the original trunk was angry at them.

TEXT 69

kruddha hañā skandha tāre jala nā sañcāre jalābhāve kṛśa śākhā śukāiyā mare

SYNONYMS

kruddha hañā-being angry; skandha-the trunk; tāre-onto them; jala-water; nā-did not; sañcāre-sprinkle; jala-abhāve-for want of water; kṛśa-thinner; śākhā-branch; śukāiyā-dried up; mare-died.

TRANSLATION

Thus Lord Caitanya did not sprinkle upon them the water of His mercy, and they gradually withered and died.

TEXT 70

caitanya-rahita deha–śuṣkakāṣṭha-sama jīvitei mṛta sei, maile daṇḍe yama caitanya-rahita-without consciousness; deha-body; śuṣka-kāṣṭha-sama-exactly like dry wood; jīvitei-while living; mṛta-dead; sei-that; maile-after death; daṇḍe-punishes; yama-Yamarāja.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

A person without Kṛṣṇa consciousness is no better than dry wood or a dead body. He is understood to be dead while living, and after death he is punishable by Yamarāja.

PURPORT

In the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Sixth Canto, Third Chapter, twenty-ninth verse, Yamarāja, the superintendent of death, tells his assistants what class of men they should bring before him. There he states, ”A person whose tongue never describes the qualities and holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose heart never throbs as he remembers Kṛṣṇa and His lotus feet, and whose head never bows in obeisances to the Supreme Lord must be brought before me for punishment.” In other words, nondevotees are brought before Yamarāja for punishment, and thus material nature awards them various types of bodies. After death, which is dehāntara, a change of body, nondevotees are brought before Yamarāja for justice. By the judgment of Yamarāja, material nature gives them bodies suitable for the reactions of their past activities. This is the process of dehāntara, or transmigration of the self from one body to another. Kṛṣṇa conscious devotees, however, are not subject to be judged by Yamarāja. For devotees there is an open road, as confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā. After giving up the body (tyaktvā deham), a devotee never again has to accept another material body, for in a spiritual body he goes back home, back to Godhead. The punishments of Yamarāja are meant for persons who are not Kṛṣṇa conscious.

TEXT 71

SYNONYMS

ki paṇḍita-whether a learned scholar; ki tapasvī-whether a great ascetic; kibā-or; gṛhī-householder; yati-or sannyāsī; caitanya-vimukha-one who is against the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yei-anyone; tāra-his; ei-this; gati-destination.

TRANSLATION

Be one a learned scholar, a great ascetic, a successful householder or a famous sannyāsī, if one is against the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he is destined to suffer the punishment meted out by Yamarāja.

TEXT 73

ye ye laila śrī-acyutānandera mata sei ācāryera gaṇa–mahā-bhāgavata ye ye-anyone who; laila-accepted; śrī-acyutānandera-of Śrī Acyutānanda; mata-the path; sei-those; ācāryera gaṇa-descendants of Advaita Ācārya; mahā-bhāgavata-are all great devotees.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The descendants of Advaita Ācārya who accepted the path of Śrī Acyutānanda were all great devotees.

PURPORT

In this connection, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura, in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, gives this short note: ”Śrī Advaita Ācārya is one of the important trunks of the bhakti-kalpataru, or desire tree of devotional service. Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as a gardener, poured water on the root of the bhakti tree and thus nourished all its trunks and branches. But nevertheless, under the spell of māyā, the most unfortunate condition of a living entity, some of the branches, not accepting the gardener who poured water on them, considered the trunk the only cause of the great bhakti-kalpataru. In other words, the branches or descendants of Advaita Ācārya who considered Advaita Ācārya the original cause of the devotional creeper, and who thus neglected or disobeyed the instructions of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, deprived themselves of the effect of being watered and thus dried up and died. It is further to be understood that not only the misguided descendants of Advaita Ācārya but anyone who has no connection with Caitanya Mahāprabhu-even if he is independently a great sannyāsī, learned scholar or ascetic-is like a dead branch of a tree.”

This analysis by Śrī Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura, supporting the statements of Śrī Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, depicts the position of the present so-called Hindu religion, which, being predominantly conducted by the Māyāvāda philosophy, has become a hodgepodge institution of various concocted ideas. Māyāvādīs greatly fear the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and accuse it of spoiling the Hindu religion because it accepts people from all parts of the world and all religious sects and scientifically engages them in the daiva-varṇāśrama-dharma. As we have explained several times, however, we find no such word as ”Hindu” in the Vedic literature. The word most probably came from Afghanistan, a predominantly Muslim country, and originally referred to a pass in Afghanistan known as Hindukush that is still a part of a trade route between India and various Muslim countries.

The actual Vedic system of religion is called varṇāśrama-dharma, as confirmed in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa:

varṇāśramācāravatā puruṣeṇa paraḥ pumān viṣṇur ārādhyate panthā nānyat tat-toṣa-kāraṇam
(Viṣṇu Purāṇa 3.8.9)

The Vedic literature recommends that a human being follow the principles of varṇāśrama-dharma. Accepting the process of varṇāśrama-dharma will make a person’s life successful because this will connect him with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the goal of human life. Therefore the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is meant for all of humanity. Although human society has different sections or subdivisions, all human beings belong to one species, and therefore we accept that they all have the ability to understand their constitutional position in connection with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Viṣṇu. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu confirms, jīvera ’svarūpa’ haya–kṛṣṇera nitya-dāsa: ”Every living entity is an eternal part, an eternal servant, of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.” Every living entity who attains the human form of life can understand the importance of his position and thus become eligible to become a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa. We take it for granted, therefore, that all humanity should be educated in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Indeed, in all parts of the world, in every country where we preach the saṅkīrtana movement, we find that people very easily accept the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra without hesitation. The visible effect of this chanting is that the members of the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement, regardless of their backgrounds, all give up the four principles of sinful life and come to an elevated standard of devotion.

Although posing as great scholars, ascetics, householders and svāmīs, the so-called followers of the Hindu religion are all useless, dried-up branches of the Vedic religion. They are impotent; they cannot do anything to spread the Vedic culture for the benefit of human society. The essence of the Vedic culture is the message of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Lord Caitanya instructed:

yāre dekha, tāre kaha ’kṛṣṇa’ upadeśa
āmāra ājñāya guru hañā tāra’ ei deśa
(Cc. Madhya 7.128)

One should simply instruct everyone he meets regarding the principles of kṛṣṇa-kathā, as expressed in Bhagavad-gītā As It Is and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. One who has no interest in kṛṣṇa-kathā or the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is like dry, useless wood with no living force. The ISKCON branch, being directly watered by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, is becoming undoubtedly successful, whereas the disconnected branches of the so-called Hindu religion that are envious of ISKCON are drying up and dying.

TEXT 74

sei sei,–ācāryera kṛpāra bhājana anāyāse pāila sei caitanya-caraṇa

SYNONYMS

sei sei-whoever; ācāryera-of Advaita Ācārya; kṛpāra-of the mercy; bhājana-eligible candidate; anāyāse-without difficulty; pāila-got; sei-he; caitanya-caraṇa-the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

By the mercy of Advaita Ācārya, the devotees who strictly followed the path of Caitanya Mahāprabhu attained the shelter of Lord Caitanya’s lotus feet without difficulty.

TEXT 75

SYNONYMS

acyutera-of Acyutānanda; yei-which; mata-direction; sei-that; mata-direction; sāra-essential; āra-other; yata-all; mata-directions; saba-all; haila-became; chārakhāra-dismantled.

TRANSLATION

It should be concluded, therefore, that the path of Acyutānanda is the essence of spiritual life. Those who did not follow this path simply scattered.

TEXT 76

sei ācārya-gaṇe mora koṭi namaskāra acyutānanda-prāya, caitanya–jīvana yāṅhāra

SYNONYMS

sei-those; ācārya-gaṇe-unto the spiritual masters; mora-my; koṭi-millions; namaskāra-obeisances; acyutānanda-prāya-almost as good as Acyutānanda; caitanya-Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jīvana-life; yāṅhāra-whose.

TRANSLATION

I therefore offer my respectful obeisances millions of times to Acyutānanda's actual followers, whose life and soul was Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 77

TRANSLATION

After describing the branches and subbranches of Advaita Ācārya, I shall now attempt to describe some of the descendants of Śrī Gadādhara Paṇḍita, the most important among the branches.

TEXT 80

śākhā-śreṣṭha dhruvānanda, śrīdhara brahmacārī bhāgavatācārya, haridāsa brahmacārī

SYNONYMS

śākhā-śreṣṭha-the chief branch; dhruvānanda-of the name Dhruvānanda; śrīdhara brahmacārī-of the name Śrīdhara Brahmacārī; bhāgavatācārya-of the name Bhāgavatācārya; haridāsa brahmacārī-of the name Haridāsa Brahmacārī.

TRANSLATION

The chief branches of Śrī Gadādhara Paṇḍita were (1) Śrī Dhruvānanda, (2) Śrīdhara Brahmacārī, (3) Haridāsa Brahmacārī and (4) Raghunātha Bhāgavatācārya.

PURPORT

Verse 152 of the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā describes Śrī Dhruvānanda Brahmacārī as an incarnation of Lalitā, and verse 194 describes Śrīdhara Brahmacārī as the gopī known as Candralatikā.

TEXT 81

ananta ācārya, kavidatta, miśra-nayana gaṅgāmantrī māmu ṭhākura, kaṇṭhābharaṇa

SYNONYMS

ananta ācārya-of the name Ananta Ācārya; kavi-datta-of the name Kavi Datta; miśra-nayana-of the name Nayana Miśra; gaṅgāmantrī-of the name Gaṅgāmantrī; māmu ṭhākura-of the name Māmu Ṭhākura; kaṇṭhābharaṇa-of the name Kaṇṭhābharaṇa.

TRANSLATION

The fifth branch was Ananta Ācārya; the sixth, Kavi Datta; the seventh, Nayana Miśra; the eighth, Gaṅgāmantrī; the ninth, Māmu Ṭhākura; and the tenth, Kaṇṭhābharaṇa.

PURPORT

Verses 197 and 207 of the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā describe Kavi Datta as the gopī named Kalakaṇṭhī, verses 196 and 207 describe Nayana Miśra as the gopī named Nitya-mañjarī, and verses 196 and 205 describe Gaṅgāmantrī as the gopī named Candrikā. Māmu Ṭhākura, whose real name was Jagannātha Cakravartī, was the nephew of Śrī Nīlāmbara Cakravartī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's grandfather. In Bengal a maternal uncle is called māmā, and in East Bengal and Orissa, māmu. Thus Jagannātha Cakravartī was known as Māmā or Māmu Ṭhākura. Māmu Ṭhākura's residence was in the district of Faridpur in the village known as Magaḍobā. After the demise of Śrī Gadādhara Paṇḍita, Māmu Ṭhākura became the priest in charge of the temple known as Ṭoṭā-gopīnātha in Jagannātha Purī. According to the opinion of some Vaiṣṇavas, Māmu Ṭhākura was formerly known as Śrī Rūpa-mañjarī. The followers of Māmu Ṭhākura were Raghunātha Gosvāmī, Rāmacandra, Rādhāvallabha, Kṛṣṇajīvana, Śyāmasundara, Śāntāmaṇi, Harinātha, Navīnacandra, Matilāla, Dayāmayī and Kuñjavihārī.

Kaṇṭhābharaṇa, whose original name was Śrī Ananta Caṭṭarāja, was the gopī named Gopālī in kṛṣṇa-līlā.

TEXT 82

bhūgarbha gosāñi, āra bhāgavata-dāsa yei dui āsi' kaila vṛndāvane vāsa bhūgarbha gosāñi-of the name Bhūgarbha Gosāñi; āra-and; bhāgavata-dāsa-of the name Bhāgavata dāsa; yei dui-both of them; āsi'-coming; kaila-did; vṛndāvane vāsa-residing in Vṛndāvana.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The eleventh branch of Gadādhara Gosvāmī was Bhūgarbha Gosāñi, and the twelfth was Bhāgavata dāsa. Both of them went to Vṛndāvana and resided there for life.

PURPORT

Bhūgarbha Gosāñi, formerly known as Prema-mañjarī, was a great friend of Lokanātha Gosvāmī, who constructed the temple of Gokulānanda, one of the seven important temples of Vṛndāvana-namely, Govinda, Gopīnātha, Madana-mohana, Rādhāramaṇa, Śyāmasundara, Rādhā-Dāmodara and Gokulānanda-that are authorized institutions of Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇavas.

TEXT 83

vāṇīnātha brahmacārī–baḍa mahāśaya vallabha-caitanya-dāsa–kṛṣṇa-premamaya

SYNONYMS

vāṇīnātha brahmacārī-of the name Vāṇīnātha Brahmacārī; baḍa mahāśaya-very great personality; vallabha-caitanya-dāsa-of the name Vallabha-caitanya dāsa; kṛṣṇa-prema-maya-always filled with love of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

The thirteenth branch was Vāṇīnātha Brahmacārī, and the fourteenth was Vallabha-caitanya dāsa. Both of these great personalities were always filled with love of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrī Vāṇīnātha Brahmacārī is described in the Tenth Chapter, verse 114, of Ādi-līlā. A disciple of Vallabha-caitanya named Nalinī-mohana Gosvāmī established a temple of Madana-gopāla in Navadvīpa.

TEXT 84

śrīnātha cakravartī, āra uddhava dāsa jitāmitra, kāṣṭhakāṭā-jagannātha-dāsa śrīnātha cakravartī-of the name Śrīnātha Cakravartī; āra-and; uddhava dāsa-of the name Uddhava dāsa; jitāmitra-of the name Jitāmitra; kāṣṭhakāṭā jagannātha-dāsa-of the name Kāṣṭhakāṭā Jagannātha dāsa.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The fifteenth branch was Śrīnātha Cakravartī; the sixteenth, Uddhava; the seventeenth, Jitāmitra; and the eighteenth, Jagannātha dāsa.

PURPORT

The Śākhā-nirṇaya, verse 13, mentions Śrīnātha Cakravartī as a reservoir of all good qualities and an expert in the service of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Similarly, verse 35 mentions Uddhava dāsa as being greatly qualified in distributing love of Godhead to everyone. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 202, mentions Jitāmitra as the gopī named Śyāma-mañjarī. Jitāmitra wrote a book entitled Kṛṣṇa-māyurya. Jagannātha dāsa was a resident of Vikramapura, near Dacca. His birthplace was the village known as Kāṣṭhakāṭā or Kāṭhādiyā. His descendants now reside in villages known as Āḍiyala, Kāmārapāḍā and Pāikapāḍā. He established a temple of Yaśomādhava. The worshipers in this temple are the Gosvāmīs of Āḍiyala. As one of the sixty-four sakhīs, he was formerly an assistant of Citrādevī-gopī named Tilakinī. The following is a list of his descendants: Rāmanṛsiṁha, Rāmagopāla, Rāmacandra, Sanātana, Muktārāma, Gopīnātha, Goloka, Harimohana Śiromaṇi, Rākhālarāja, Mādhava and Lakṣmīkānta. The Śākhā-nirṇaya mentions that Jagannātha dāsa preached the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement in the district or state of Tripura.

TEXT 85

śrī-hari ācārya, sādi-puriyā gopāla kṛṣṇadāsa brahmacārī, puṣpa-gopāla

SYNONYMS

śrī-hari ācārya-of the name Śrī Hari Ācārya; sādi-puriyā gopāla-of the name Sādipuriyā Gopāla; kṛṣṇadāsa brahmacārī-of the name Kṛṣṇadāsa Brahmacārī; puṣpa-gopāla-of the name Puṣpagopāla.

TRANSLATION

The nineteenth branch was Śrī Hari Ācārya; the twentieth, Sādipuriyā Gopāla; the twenty-first, Kṛṣṇadāsa Brahmacārī; and the twenty-second, Puṣpagopāla.

PURPORT

The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verses 196 and 207, mentions that Hari Ācārya was formerly the gopī named Kālākṣī. Sādipuriyā Gopāla is celebrated as a preacher of the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement in Vikramapura, in East Bengal. Kṛṣṇadāsa Brahmacārī was formerly among the group of sakhīs known as the aṣta-sakhīs. His name was Indulekhā. Kṛṣṇadāsa Brahmacārī lived in Vṛndāvana. There is a tomb in the Rādhā-Dāmodara temple known as Kṛṣṇadāsa's tomb. Some say that this is the tomb of Kṛṣṇadāsa Brahmacārī and others Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī. In either case we offer our respects because both of them were expert in distributing love of Godhead to the fallen souls of this age. The Śākhā-nirṇaya mentions that Puṣpagopāla was formerly known as Svarṇagrāmaka.

TEXT 86

śrīharṣa, raghu-miśra, paṇḍita lakṣmīnātha baṅgavāṭī-caitanya-dāsa, śrī-raghunātha

SYNONYMS

śrīharṣa-of the name Śrīharṣa; raghu-miśra-of the name Raghu Miśra; paṇḍita lakṣmīnātha-of the name Lakṣmīnātha Paṇḍita; baṅgavāṭī-caitanya-dāsa-of the name Baṅgavāṭī Caitanya dāsa; śrī-raghunātha-of the name Śrī Raghunātha.

TRANSLATION

The twenty-third branch was Śrīharṣa; the twenty-fourth, Raghu Miśra; the twenty-fifth, Lakṣmīnātha Paṇḍita; the twenty-sixth, Baṅgavāṭī Caitanya dāsa; and the twenty-seventh, Raghunātha.

PURPORT

Raghu Miśra is described in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verses 195 and 201, as Karpūra-mañjarī. Similarly, Lakṣmīnātha Paṇḍita is mentioned as Rasonmādā, and Baṅgavāṭī Caitanya dāsa is mentioned as Kālī. The Śākhā-nirṇaya states that Baṅgavāṭī Caitanya dāsa was always seen with eyes full of tears. He also had a branch of descendants. Their names were Mathurāprasāda, Rukmiṇīkānta, Jīvanakṛṣna, Yugalakiśora, Ratanakṛṣṇa, Rādhāmādhava, Ūṣāmaṇi, Vaikuṇṭhanātha and Lālamohana, or Lālamohana Śāhā Śāṅkhānidhi. Lālamohana was a great merchant in the city of Dacca. The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verses 194 and 200, mentions that Raghunātha was formerly Varāṅgadā.

amogha paṇḍita, hasti-gopāla, caitanya-vallabha yadu gāṅguli āra maṅgala vaiṣṇava

SYNONYMS

amogha paṇḍita-of the name Amogha Paṇḍita; hasti-gopāla-of the name Hastigopāla; caitanya-vallabha-of the name Caitanya-vallabha; yadu gāṅguli-of the name Yadu Gāṅguli; āra-and; maṅgala vaiṣṇava-of the name Maṅgala Vaiṣṇava.

TRANSLATION

The twenty-eighth branch was Amogha Paṇḍita; the twenty-ninth, Hastigopāla; the thirtieth, Caitanya-vallabha; the thirty-first, Yadu Gāṅguli; and the thirty-second, Maṅgala Vaiṣṇava.

PURPORT

Śrī Maṅgala Vaiṣṇava was a resident of the village Ṭiṭakaṇā in the district of Murśidābāda. His forefathers were śāktas who worshiped the goddess Kirīṭeśvarī. It is said that Maṅgala Vaiṣṇava, formerly a staunch brahmacārī, left home and later married the daughter of his disciple Prāṇanātha Adhikārī in the village of Mayanāḍāla. The descendants of this family are known as the Ṭhākuras of Kāṅdaḍā, which is a village in the district of Burdwan near Katwa. Scattered descendants of Maṅgala Vaiṣṇava, thirty-six families altogether, still live there. Among the celebrated disciples of Maṅgala Ṭhākura are Prāṇanātha Adhikārī, Puruṣottama Cakravartī of the village of Kāṅdaḍā, and Nṛsiṁha-prasāda Mitra, whose family members are well-known mṛdaṅga players. Sudhākṛṣṇa Mitra and Nikuñjavihārī Mitra are both especially famous mṛdaṅga players. In the family of Puruṣottama Cakravartī there are famous persons like Kuñjavihārī Cakravartī and Rādhāvallabha Cakravartī, who now live in the district of Birbhum. They professionally recite songs from Caitanya-maṅgala. It is said that when Maṅgala Ṭhākura was constructing a road from Bengal to Jagannātha Purī, he found a Deity of Rādhāvallabha while digging a lake. At that time he was living in the locality of Kāṅdaḍā in the village named Rāṇīpura. The śālagrāma-śilā personally worshiped by Maṅgala Ṭhākura still exists in the village of Kāṅdaḍā. A temple has been constructed there for the worship of Vṛndāvana-candra. Maṅgala Ṭhākura had three sons-Rādhikāprasāda, Gopīramaṇa and Śyāmakiśora. The descendants of these three sons are still living.

SYNONYMS

cakravartī śivānanda-of the name Śivānanda Cakravartī; sadā-always; vraja-vāsī-resident of Vṛndāvana; mahā-śākhā-madhye-amongst the great branches; teṅho-he is; sudṛḍha viśvāsī-possessing firm faith.

TRANSLATION

Śivānanda Cakravartī, the thirty-third branch, who always lived in Vṛndāvana with firm conviction, is considered an important branch of Gadādhara Paṇḍita.

PURPORT

The Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 183, mentions that Śivānanda Cakravartī was formerly Lavaṅga-mañjarī. The Śākhā-nirṇaya, written by Yadunandana dāsa, also names other branches of Gadādhara Paṇḍita, as follows: (1) Mādhava Ācārya, (2) Gopāla dāsa, (3) Hṛdayānanda, (4) Vallabha Bhaṭṭa (the Vallabha-sampradāya, or Puṣṭimārga-sampradāya, is very famous), (5) Madhu Paṇḍita (this famous devotee lived near Khaḍadaha in the village known as Sāṅibonā-grāma, about two miles east of the Khaḍadaha station, and constructed the temple of Gopīnāthajī in Vṛndāvana), (6) Acyutānanda, (7) Candraśekhara, (8) Vakreśvara Paṇḍita, (9) Dāmodara, (10) Bhagavān Ācārya, (11) Ananta Ācāryavarya, (12) Kṛṣṇadāsa, (13) Paramānanda Bhaṭṭācārya, (14) Bhavānanda Gosvāmī, (15) Caitanya dāsa, (16) Lokanātha Bhaṭṭa (this devotee, who lived in the village of Tālakhaḍi in the district of Yaśohara and constructed the temple of Rādhāvinoda, was the spiritual master of Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura and a great friend of Bhūgarbha Gosvāmī), (17) Govinda Ācārya, (18) Akrūra Ṭhākura, (19) Saṅketa Ācārya, (20) Pratāpāditya, (21) Kamalākānta Ācārya, (22) Yādava Ācārya and (23) Nārāyaṇa Paḍihārī (a resident of Jagannātha Purī).

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Twelfth Chapter, describing the expansions of Advaita Ācārya and Gadādhara Paṇḍita.

18.4.13 Chapter 13

The Advent of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu

This Thirteenth Chapter of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta describes Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's appearance. The entire Ādi-līlā section describes Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's household life, and similarly the Antya-līlā describes His life in the sannyāsa order. Within the Antya-līlā, the first six years of His sannyāsa life are called Madhya-līlā. During this time, Caitanya Mahāprabhu toured southern India, went to Vṛndāvana, returned from Vṛndāvana and preached the saṅkīrtana movement.

A learned brāhmaṇa named Upendra Miśra who resided in the district of Śrīhaṭṭa was the father of Jagannātha Miśra, who came to Navadvīpa to study under the direction of Nīlāmbara Cakravartī and then settled there after marrying Nīlāmbara Cakravartī's daughter, Śacīdevī. Śrī Śacīdevī gave birth to eight children, all daughters, who died one after another immediately after birth. After her ninth pregnancy, she gave birth to a son, who was named Viśvarūpa. Then, in 1407 Śaka Era (A.D. 1486), on the full moon evening of the month of Phālguna, during the constellation of siṁha-lagna, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu appeared as the son of Śrī Śacīdevī and Jagannātha Miśra. After hearing of the birth of Caitanya Mahāprabhu, learned scholars and brāhmaṇas, bringing many gifts, came to see the newly born baby. Nīlāmbara Cakravartī, who was a great astrologer, immediately prepared a horoscope, and by astrological calculation he saw that the child was a great personality. This chapter describes the symptoms of this great personality.

sadyaḥ syād adhamo 'py ayam

SYNONYMS

saḥ-He; prasīdatu-may bestow His blessings; caitanya-devaḥ-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yasya-of whom; prasādataḥ-by the grace; tat-līlā-His pastimes; varṇane-in the description; yogyaḥ-able; sadyaḥ-immediately; syāt-becomes possible; adhamaḥ-the most fallen; api-although; ayam-I am.

TRANSLATION

I wish the grace of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, by whose mercy even one who is fallen can describe the pastimes of the Lord.

PURPORT

To describe Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu or Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, one needs supernatural power, which is the grace and mercy of the Lord. Without this grace and mercy, one cannot compose transcendental literature. By dint of the grace of the Lord, however, even one who is unfit for a literary career can describe wonderful transcendental topics. Description of Kṛṣṇa is possible for one who is empowered. Kṛṣṇa-śakti vinā nahe tāra pravartana (Cc. Antya 7.11). Unless endowed with the mercy of the Lord, one cannot preach of the Lord's name, fame, quality, form, entourage and so on. It should be concluded, therefore, that the description of Caitanya-caritāmṛta by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī manifests specific mercy bestowed upon the author, although he thought of himself as the most fallen. We should not consider him fallen because he describes himself as such. Rather, anyone who is able to compose such transcendental literature is our esteemed master.

TEXT 5

jaya śrī-caitanyacandrera bhakta candra-gaṇa sabāra prema jyotsnāya ujjvala tri-bhuvana

SYNONYMS

jaya-all glories; śrī-caitanya-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; candrera-who is as bright as the moon; bhakta-devotees; candra-gaṇa-other moons; sabāra-of all of them; prema-jyotsnāya-by the full light of love of Godhead; ujjvala-bright; tri-bhuvana-all the three worlds.

TRANSLATION

All glories to the moons who are devotees of the principal moon, Lord Caitanyacandra! Their bright moonshine illuminates the entire universe.

PURPORT

In this verse we find the moon described as candra-gaṇa, which is plural in number. This indicates that there are many moons. In the Bhagavad-gītā the Lord says, nakṣatrāṇām ahaṁ śaśī: "Among the stars, I am the moon." (Bg. 10.21) All the stars are like the moon. Western astronomers consider the stars to be suns, but Vedic astronomers, following the Vedic scriptures, consider them moons. The sun has the ability to shine powerfully, and the moons reflect the sunshine and therefore look brilliant. In Caitanya-caritāmṛta Kṛṣṇa is described to be like the sun. The supreme powerful is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Śrī Kṛṣṇa, or Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and His devotees are also bright and illuminating because they reflect the supreme sun. The Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Madhya 22.31) states:

kṛṣṇa–sūrya-sama; māyā haya andhakāra yāhāṅ kṛṣṇa, tāhāṅ nāhi māyāra adhikāra

"Kṛṣṇa is bright like the sun. As soon as the sun appears, there is no question of darkness or nescience." Similarly, this verse also describes that by the illumination of all the moons, brightened by the reflection of the Kṛṣṇa sun, or by the grace of all the devotees of Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the entire world will be illuminated, despite the darkness of Kali-yuga. Only the devotees of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu can dissipate the darkness of Kali-yuga, the ignorance of the population of this age. No one else can do so. We therefore wish that all the devotees of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement may reflect the supreme sun and thus dissipate the darkness of the entire world.

śiṣyera pratīta haya,–prabhāva āścarya sūtra-aphorisms; vṛtti-explanation; pāṅji-application; ṭīkā-notes; kṛṣṇete-unto Kṛṣṇa; tātparya-culmination; śiṣyera-of the disciple; pratīta-realization; haya-becomes; prabhāva-influence; āścarya-wonderful.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When teaching a course in grammar [vyākaraṇa] and explaining it with notes, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu taught His disciples about the glories of Lord Kṛṣṇa. All explanations culminated in Kṛṣṇa, and His disciples would understand them very easily. Thus His influence was wonderful.

PURPORT

Śrīla Jiva Gosvāmī compiled a grammar in two parts named Laghu-hari-nāmāmṛta-vyākaraṇa and Bṛhad-dhari-nāmāmṛta-vyākaraṇa. If someone studies these two texts in vyākaraṇa, or grammar, he learns the grammatical rules of the Sanskrit language and simultaneously learns how to become a great devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

In the Caitanya-bhāgavata, First Chapter, there is a statement about the method by which Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu taught grammar. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu explained the aphorisms of grammar to be eternal, like the holy name of Kṛṣṇa. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā (15.15), vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ. The purport of all revealed scriptures is understanding of Kṛṣṇa. Therefore if a person explains anything that is not Kṛṣṇa, he simply wastes his time laboring hard without fulfilling the aim of his life. If one simply becomes a teacher or professor of education but does not understand Kṛṣṇa, it is to be understood that he is among the lowest of mankind, as stated in Bhagavad-gītā (7.15): narādhamā māyayāpahṛta-jñānāḥ. If one does not know the essence of all revealed scriptures but still becomes a teacher, his teaching is like the disturbing braying of an ass.

TEXT 30

yāre dekhe, tāre kahe,–kaha kṛṣṇa-nāma kṛṣṇa-nāme bhāsāila navadvīpa-grāma

SYNONYMS

yāre-whomever; dekhe-He sees; tāre-to him; kahe-He says; kaha-speak; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa-nāme-by the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; bhāsāila-was inundated; navadvīpa-the place of the name Navadvīpa; grāma-village.

TRANSLATION

When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was a student, He asked whomever He met to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. In this way He inundated the whole town of Navadvīpa with the chanting of Hare Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

The present Navadvīpa-dhāma is but a part of the whole of Navadvīpa. Navadvīpa means "nine islands." These nine islands, which occupy an area of land estimated at thirty-two square miles, are surrounded by different branches of the Ganges. In all nine of those islands of the Navadvīpa area there are different places for cultivating devotional service. It is stated in the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.5.23) that there are nava-vidha bhakti, nine different activities of devotional service:

śravaṇaṁ kīrtanaṁ viṣṇoḥ
smaraṇaṁ pāda-sevanam
arcanaṁ vandanaṁ dāsyaṁ
sakhyam ātma-nivedanam

There are different islands in the Navadvīpa area for cultivation of these nine varieties of devotional service. They are as follows: (1) Antardvīpa, (2) Sīmantadvīpa, (3) Godrumadvīpa, (4) Madhyadvīpa, (5) Koladvīpa, (6) Ṛtudvīpa, (7) Jahnudvīpa, (8) Modadruma-dvīpa and (9) Rudradvīpa. According to the settlement map, our ISKCON Navadvīpa center is situated on the Rudradvīpa island. Below Rudradvīpa, in Antardvīpa, is Māyāpur. There Śrī Jagannātha Miśra, the father of Caitanya Mahāprabhu, used to reside. In all these different islands, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as a young man, used to lead His saṅkīrtana party. He thus inundated the entire area with the waves of love of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 31

SYNONYMS

kiśora vayase-just before the beginning of His youthful life; ārambhilā-began; saṅkīrtana-the saṅkīrtana movement; rātra-dine-night and day; preme-in ecstasy; nṛtya-dancing; saṅge-along with; bhakta-gaṇa-the devotees.

TRANSLATION

Just prior to His youthful life, He began the saṅkīrtana movement. Day and night He used to dance in ecstasy with His devotees.

TEXT 32

nagare nagare bhrame kīrtana kariyā bhāsāila tri-bhuvana prema-bhakti diyā

SYNONYMS

nagare nagare-in different parts of the town; bhrame-wanders; kīrtana-chanting; kariyā-performing; bhāsāila-inundated; tri-bhuvana-all the three worlds; prema-bhakti-love of Godhead; diyā-distributing.

TRANSLATION

The saṅkīrtana movement went on from one part of the town to another, as the Lord wandered everywhere performing kīrtana. In this way He inundated the whole world by distributing love of Godhead.

PURPORT

One may raise the question how all three worlds became inundated with love of Kṛṣṇa since Caitanya Mahāprabhu performed kīrtana only in the Navadvīpa area. The answer is that Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is Kṛṣṇa Himself. The entire cosmic manifestation results from the Lord's first setting it in motion. Similarly, since the saṅkīrtana movement was first set in motion five hundred years ago by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's desire that it spread all over the universe, the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, in continuity of that same motion, is now spreading all over the world, and in this way it will gradually spread all over the universe. With the spread of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, everyone will merge in an ocean of love of Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

dvādaśa-twelve; vatsara-years; śeṣa-balance; rahilā-remained; nīlācale-at Jagannātha Purī; prema-avasthā-a state of ecstasy; śikhāilā-instructed everyone; āsvādana-chale-under the plea of tasting it Himself.

TRANSLATION

For the remaining twelve years He stayed in Jagannātha Purī, He taught everyone how to taste the transcendental mellow ecstasy of love of Kṛṣṇa by tasting it Himself.

PURPORT

A person who is advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness always feels separation from Kṛṣṇa because such a feeling of separation excels the feeling of meeting Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, in His last twelve years of existence within this world at Jagannātha Purī, taught the people of the world how, with a feeling of separation, one can develop His dormant love of Kṛṣṇa. Such feelings of separation or meeting with Kṛṣṇa are different stages of love of Godhead. These feelings develop in time when a person seriously engages in devotional service. The highest stage is called prema-bhakti, but this stage is attained by executing sādhana-bhakti. One should not try to elevate himself artificially to the stage of prema-bhakti without seriously following the regulative principles of sādhana-bhakti. prema-bhakti is the stage of relishing, whereas sādhana-bhakti is the stage of improving in devotional service. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu taught this cult of devotional service in full detail by practical application in His own life. It is said, therefore, āpani ācari’ bhakti śikhāimu sabāre. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is Kṛṣṇa Himself, and in the role of a kṛṣṇa-bhakta, a devotee of Kṛṣṇa, He instructed the entire world how one can execute devotional service and thus go back home, back to Godhead, in due course of time.

TEXT 40

SYNONYMS

rātri-divase-day and night; kṛṣṇa-viraha-feelings of separation from Kṛṣṇa; sphuraṇa-awakening; unmādera-of a madman; ceṣṭā-activities; kare-performs; pralāpa-talking inconsistently; vacana-words.

TRANSLATION

Day and night Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu felt separation from Kṛṣṇa. Manifesting symptoms of this separation, He cried and talked very inconsistently, like a madman.

TEXT 41

śrī-rādhāra pralāpa yaiche uddhava-darśane

SYNONYMS

śrī-rādhāra-of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; pralāpa-talking; yaiche-as She did; uddhava-darśane-by meeting Uddhava; sei-mata-exactly like that; unmāda-madness; pralāpa-talking inconsistently; kare-does; rātri-dine-day and night.

TRANSLATION

As Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī talked inconsistently when She met Uddhava, so also Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu relished, both day and night, such ecstatic talk in the mood of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.

PURPORT

In this connection one should refer to Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's soliloquy after meeting Uddhava in Vṛndāvana. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu presented a similar picture of such ecstatic imaginary talking. Full of jealousy and madness symptomizing neglect by Kṛṣṇa, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, criticizing a bumblebee, talked just like a madwoman. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, in the last days of His pastimes, exhibited all the symptoms of such ecstasy. In this connection one should refer to the Fourth Chapter of Ādi-līlā, verses 107 and 108.

TEXT 42

vidyāpati, jayadeva, caṇḍīdāsera gīta āsvādena rāmānanda-svarūpa-sahita vidyāpati-the author of the name Vidyāpati; jayadeva-of the name Jayadeva; caṇḍīdāsera-of the name Caṇḍīdāsa; gīta-their songs; āsvādena-tastes; rāmānanda-of the name Rāmānanda; svarūpa-of the name Svarūpa; sahita-along with.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Lord used to read the books of Vidyāpati, Jayadeva and Caṇḍīdāsa, relishing their songs with His confidential associates like Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya and Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī.

PURPORT

Vidyāpati was a famous composer of songs about the pastimes of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa. He was an inhabitant of Mithilā, born in a brāhmaṇa family. It is calculated that he composed his songs during the reign of King Śivasiṁha and Queen Lachimādevī in the beginning of the fourteenth century of the Śaka Era, almost one hundred years before the appearance of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The twelfth generation of Vidyāpati's descendants is still living. Vidyāpati's songs about the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa express intense feelings of separation from Kṛṣṇa, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu relished all those songs in His ecstasy of separation from Kṛṣṇa.

Jayadeva was born during the reign of Mahārāja Lakṣmaṇa Sena of Bengal in the eleventh or twelfth century of the Śaka Era. His father was Bhojadeva, and his mother was Vāmādevī. For many years he lived in Navadvīpa, then the capital of Bengal. His birthplace was in the Birbhum district in the village Kendubilva. In the opinion of some authorities, however, he was born in Orissa, and still others say that he was born in southern India. He passed the last days of his life in Jagannātha Purī. One of his famous books is Gīta-govinda, which is full of transcendental mellow feelings of separation from Kṛṣṇa. The gopīs felt separation from Kṛṣṇa before the rāsa dance, as mentioned in the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, and the Gīta-govinda expresses such feelings. There are many commentaries on the Gīta-govinda by many Vaiṣṇavas.

Caṇḍīdāsa was born in the village of Nānnura, which is also in the Birbhum district of Bengal. He was born of a brāhmaṇa family, and it is said that he also took birth in the beginning of the fourteenth century, Śakābda Era. It has been suggested that Caṇḍīdāsa and Vidyāpati were great friends because the writings of both express the transcendental feelings of separation profusely. The feelings of ecstasy described by Caṇḍīdāsa and Vidyāpati were actually exhibited by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He relished all those feelings in the role of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, and His appropriate associates for this purpose were Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya and Śrī Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī. These intimate associates of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu helped the Lord very much in the pastimes in which He felt like Rādhārāṇī.

Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments in this connection that such feelings of separation as Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu enjoyed from the books of Vidyāpati, Caṇḍīdāsa and Jayadeva are especially reserved for persons like Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya and Svarūpa Dāmodara, who were paramahaṁsas, men of the topmost perfection, because of their advanced spiritual consciousness. Such topics are not to be discussed by ordinary persons imitating the activities of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. For critical students of mundane poetry and literary men without God consciousness who are after bodily sense gratification, there is no need to read such a high standard of transcendental literature. Persons who are after sense gratification should not try to imitate rāgānuga devotional service. In their songs, Caṇḍīdāsa, Vidyāpati and Jayadeva have described the transcendental activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Mundane reviewers of the songs of Vidyāpati, Jayadeva and Caṇḍīdāsa simply help people in general become debauchees, and this leads only to social scandals and atheism in the world. One should not misunderstand the pastimes of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa to be the activities of a mundane young boy and girl. The mundane sexual activities of young boys and girls are most abominable. Therefore, those who are in bodily consciousness and who desire sense gratification are forbidden to indulge in discussions of the transcendental pastimes of Śrī Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa.

kṛṣṇera viyoge yata prema-ceṣṭita āsvādiyā pūrṇa kaila āpana vāñchita

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; viyoge-in separation; yata-as many; prema-loving affairs; ceṣṭita-activities; āsvādiyā-tasting them; pūrṇa-fulfilled; kaila-made; āpana-own; vāñchita-desires.

TRANSLATION

In separation from Kṛṣṇa, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu relished all these ecstatic activities, and thus He fulfilled His own desires.

PURPORT

In the beginning of Caitanya-caritāmṛta it is said that Lord Caitanya appeared in order to taste the feelings Rādhārāṇī felt upon seeing Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa Himself could not understand the ecstatic feelings of Rādhārāṇī toward Him, and therefore He desired to accept the role of Rādhārāṇī and thereby taste these feelings. Lord Caitanya is Kṛṣṇa with the feelings of Rādhārāṇī; in other words, He is a combination of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. It is therefore said, śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya rādhā-kṛṣṇa nahe anya. By worshiping Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu alone, one can relish the loving affairs of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa together. One should therefore try to understand Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa not directly but through Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and through His devotees. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura therefore says, rūpa-raghunātha-pade haibe ākuti, kabe hāma bujhaba se yugala-pīriti: "When shall I develop a mentality of service toward Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī, Sanātana Gosvāmī, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī and the other devotees of Lord Caitanya and thus become eligible to understand the pastimes of Śrī Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa?"

TRANSLATION

There was also Śrī Upendra Miśra, a resident of the district of Śrīhaṭṭa. He was a great devotee of Lord Viṣṇu, a learned scholar, a rich man and a reservoir of all good qualities.

PURPORT

Upendra Miśra is described in the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 35, as the gopāla named Parjanya. The same personality who was formerly the grandfather of Lord Kṛṣṇa appeared as Upendra Miśra at Śrīhaṭṭa and begot seven sons. He was a resident of Dhākā-dakṣiṇa-grāma in the district of Śrīhaṭṭa. There are still many residents of that part of the country who introduce themselves as belonging to the Miśra family of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

tāṅra patnī 'śacī'-nāma, pativratā satī yāṅra pitā 'nīlāmbara' nāma cakravartī

SYNONYMS

tāṅra patnī-his wife; śacī-of the name Śacī; nāma-named; pati-vratā-devoted to her husband; satī-chaste; yāṅra-whose; pitā-father; nīlāmbara-of the name Nīlāmbara; nāma-named; cakravartī-with the title Cakravartī.

TRANSLATION

His wife, Śrīmatī Śacīdevī, was a chaste woman highly devoted to her husband. Śacīdevī's father's name was Nīlāmbara, and his surname was Cakravartī.

PURPORT

In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 104, it is mentioned that Nīlāmbara Cakravartī was formerly Garga Muni. Some of the family descendants of Nīlāmbara Cakravartī still live in the village of the name Magḍobā in the district of Faridpur in Bangladesh. His nephew was Jagannātha Cakravartī, also known as Māmu Ṭhākura, who became a disciple of Paṇḍita Gosvāmī and stayed at Jagannātha Purī as the priest of Ṭoṭā-gopīnātha. Nīlāmbara Cakravartī lived at Navadvīpa in the neighborhood of Belapukuriyā. This fact is mentioned in the book Prema-vilāsa. Because he lived near the house of the Kazi, the Kazi was also considered one of the maternal uncles of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Kazi used to address Nīlāmbara Cakravartī as kākā, or "uncle." One cannot separate the residence of the Kazi from Vāmanapukura because the tomb of the Kazi is still existing there. Formerly the place was known as Belapukuriyā, and now it is called Vāmanapukura. This has been ascertained by archeological evidence.

rāḍhadeśe janmilā ṭhākura nityānanda gaṅgādāsa paṇḍita, gupta murāri, mukunda

SYNONYMS

rāḍha-deśe-the place where there is no Ganges; janmilā-took birth; ṭhākura nityānanda-Nityānanda Prabhu; gaṅgādāsa paṇḍita-of the name Gaṅgādāsa Paṇḍita; gupta murāri-of the name Murāri Gupta; mukunda-of the name Mukunda.

TRANSLATION

In Rāḍhadeśa, the part of Bengal where the Ganges is not visible, Nityānanda Prabhu, Gaṅgādāsa Paṇḍita, Murāri Gupta and Mukunda took birth.

PURPORT

Here rāḍha-deśe refers to the village of the name Ekacakrā in the district of Birbhum, next to Burdwan. After the Burdwan railway station there is another branch line, which is called the Loop Line of the eastern railway, and there is a railway station of the name Mallārapura. Eight miles east of this railway station Ekacakrā Village is still situated. Ekacakrā Village extends north and south for an area of about eight miles. Other villages, namely Vīracandra-pura and Vīrabhadra-pura, are situated within the area of the village of Ekacakrā. In honor of the holy name of Vīrabhadra Gosvāmī, these places are renowned as Vīracandra-pura and Vīrabhadra-pura.

In the Bengali year 1331 (A.D. 1924) a thunderbolt struck the temple of Ekacakrā-grāma. Therefore the temple is now in a broken state. Before this, there were no such accidents in that quarter. Within the temple there is a Deity of Śrī Kṛṣṇa established by Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. The name of the Deity is Baṅkima Rāya or Bāṅkā Rāya.

On the right side of Baṅkima Rāya is a Deity of Jāhnavā, and on His left side is Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. The priests of the temple describe that Lord Nityānanda Prabhu entered within the body of Baṅkima Rāya and that the Deity of Jāhnavā-mātā was therefore later placed on the right side of Baṅkima Rāya. Afterwards, many other Deities were installed within the temple. On another throne within the temple are Deities of Muralīdhara and Rādhā-Mādhava. On another throne are Deities of Manomohana, Vṛndāvana-candra and Gaura-Nitāi. But Baṅkima Rāya is the Deity originally installed by Nityānanda Prabhu.

On the eastern side of the temple is a ghāṭa known as Kadamba-khaṇḍī on the bank of the Yamunā, and it is said that the Deity of Baṅkima Rāya was floating in the water and Lord Nityānanda Prabhu picked Him up and then installed Him in the temple. Thereafter, in a place known as Bhaḍḍāpura, in the village of Vīracandra-pura, about half a mile west, in a place underneath a nima tree, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī was found. For this reason, the Rādhārāṇī of Baṅkima Rāya was known as Bhaḍḍāpurera Ṭhākurāṇī, the mistress of Bhaḍḍāpura. On another throne, on the right side of Baṅkima Rāya, is a Deity of Yogamāyā.

Now the temple and temple corridor rest on a high plinth, and on a concrete structure in front of the temple is a meeting hall. It is also said that on the northern side of the temple there was a Deity of Lord Śiva named Bhāṇḍīśvara and that the father of Nityānanda Prabhu, Hāḍāi Paṇḍita, used to worship that Deity. At present, however, the Bhāṇḍīśvara Deity is missing, and in his place a Jagannātha Svāmī Deity has been installed. Lord Nityānanda Prabhu did not factually construct any temples. The temple was constructed at the time of Vīrabhadra Prabhu. In the Bengali year 1298 (A.D. 1891), the temple being in a dilapidated condition, a brahmacārī of the name Śivānanda Svāmī repaired it.

In this temple there is an arrangement to offer foodstuffs to the Deity on the basis of seventeen seers of rice and necessary vegetables. The present priestly order of the temple belongs to the family of Gopījana-vallabhānanda, one of the branches of Nityānanda Prabhu. There is a land settlement in the name of the temple, and income from this land finances the expenditures for the temple. There are three parties of priestly gosvāmīs who take charge of the temple management, one after another. A few steps onward from the temple is a place known as Viśrāmatalā, where it is said that Nityānanda Prabhu in His childhood used to enjoy sporting with His boyfriends by enacting the rāsa-līlā and various other pastimes of Vṛndāvana.

Near the temple is a place named Āmalītalā, which is so named because of a big tamarind tree there. According to a party named the Neḍādi-sampradāya, Vīrabhadra Prabhu, with the assistance of twelve hundred Neḍās, dug a great lake of the name Śvetagaṅgā. Outside of the temple are tombs of the Gosvāmīs, and there is a small river known as the Mauḍeśvara, which is called the water of Yamunā. Within half a mile from this small river is the birthplace of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. It appears that there was a big meeting hall in front of the temple, but later it became dilapidated. It is now covered by banyan trees. Later on, a temple was constructed within which Gaura-Nityānanda Deities are existing. The temple was constructed by the late Prasannakumāra Kārapharmā. A tablet was installed in his memory in the Bengali year 1323 (A.D. 1916), in the month of Vaiśākha (April-May).

The place where Nityānanda Prabhu appeared is called Garbhavāsa. There is an allotment of about forty-three bighās (fourteen acres) of land to continue the worship in a temple there. The Mahārāja of Dinājapura donated twenty bighās (6.5 acres) of land in this connection. It is said that near the place known as Garbhavāsa, Hāḍāi Paṇḍita conducted a primary school. The priests of this place, listed in a genealogical table, were as follows: (1) Śrī Rāghavacandra, (2) Jagadānanda dāsa, (3) Kṛṣṇadāsa, (4) Nityānanda dāsa, (5) Rāmadāsa, (6) Vrajamohana dāsa, (7) Kānāi dāsa, (8) Gauradāsa, (9) Śivānanda dāsa and (10) Haridāsa. Kṛṣṇadāsa belonged to the Ciḍiyā-kuñja at Vṛndāvana. The date of his disappearance is Kṛṣṇa-janmāṣṭamī. Ciḍiyā-kuñja is a place now managed by the gosvāmīs of Śiṅgāra-ghāṭa in Vṛndāvana. They are also known as belonging to the Nityānanda family, most probably on the basis of their relationship with Kṛṣṇadāsa.

Near Garbhavāsa is a place called Bakulatalā, where Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu and His boyfriends used to take part in sporting activities known as jhāla-jhapeṭā. There is a bakula tree there that is wonderful because all its branches and subbranches look like the hoods of serpents. It has been suggested that by the desire of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, Anantadeva manifested Himself in that way. The tree is very old. It is said that formerly it had two trunks, but later on, when the playmates of Nityānanda Prabhu felt inconvenience in jumping from the branches of one trunk to those of the nother, Nityānanda Prabhu, by His mercy, merged the two trunksinto one.

Another place nearby is named Hāṅṭugāḍā. It is said that Lord Nityānanda Prabhu brought all the holy places there. Therefore the people in the surrounding villages go there instead of to the Ganges to take bath. It is named Hāṅṭugāḍā because Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu used to perform the dadhi-ciḍā festival of distributing chipped rice with yogurt prasāda there and He took the prasāda kneeling down. A sanctified lake in this place is always full of water throughout the year. A great fair is held there during Goṣṭhāṣṭamī, and there is another big fair on the birthday of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu. In the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā it is described that Halāyudha, Baladeva, Viśvarūpa and Saṅkarṣaṇa appeared as Nityānanda Avadhūta.

asaṅkhya bhaktera karāilā avatāra

SYNONYMS

asaṅkhya-unlimited; bhaktera-of devotees; karāilā-made into being; avatāra-incarnation; śeṣe-at last; avatīrṇa-descended; hailā-became; vrajendra-kumāra-Lord Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja.

TRANSLATION

Lord Kṛṣṇa, Vrajendra-kumāra, first caused countless devotees to appear, and at last He appeared Himself.

TEXT 63

SYNONYMS

prabhura-of the Lord; āvirbhāva-appearance; pūrve-before; yata-all; vaiṣṇava-gaṇa-devotees; advaita-ācāryera-of Advaita Ācārya; sthāne-place; karena-do; gamana-go.

TRANSLATION

Before the appearance of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, all the devotees of Navadvīpa used to gather in the house of Advaita Ācārya.

TEXT 64

gītā-bhhāgavata kahe ācārya-gosāñi jñāna-karma nindi' kare bhaktira baḍāi gītā-Bhagavad-gītā; bhāgavata-Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; kahe-recites; ācārya-gosāñi-Advaita Ācārya; jñāna-the path of philosophical speculation; karma-fruitive activity; nindi'-decrying; kare-establishes; bhaktira-of devotional service; baḍāi-excellence.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In these meetings of the Vaiṣṇavas, Advaita Ācārya used to recite Bhagavad-gītā and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, decrying the paths of philosophical speculation and fruitive activity and establishing the superexcellence of devotional service.

TEXT 65

sarva-śāstre kahe kṛṣṇa-bhaktira vyākhyāna jñāna, yoga, tapo-dharma nāhi māne āna

SYNONYMS

sarva-śāstre-in all revealed scriptures; kahe-says; kṛṣṇa-bhaktira-of devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa; vyākhyāna-explanation; jñāna-philosophical speculation; yoga-mystic haṭha-yoga; tapas-austerities; dharma-religious procedures; nāhi-does not; māne-accept; āna-other.

TRANSLATION

In all the revealed scriptures of Vedic culture, devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa is explained throughout. Therefore devotees of Lord Kṛṣṇa do not recognize the processes of philosophical speculation, mystic yoga, unnecessary austerity and so-called religious rituals. They do not accept any process but devotional service.

PURPORT

Our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement follows this principle. We do not recognize any method for spiritual realization other than Kṛṣṇa consciousness, devotional service. Sometimes we are criticized by groups following jñāna, yoga, tapas or dharma, but fortunately we are unable to make any compromises with them. We simply stand on the platform of devotional service and preach the same principles all over the world.

TEXT 66

tāṅra saṅge ānanda kare vaiṣṇavera gaṇa kṛṣṇa-kathā, kṛṣṇa-pūjā, nāma-saṅkīrtana

SYNONYMS

tāṅra saṅge-with Him (Advaita Ācārya); ānanda-pleasure; kare-takes; vaiṣṇavera-of the devotees; gaṇa-assembly; kṛṣṇa-kathā-topics of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa-pūjā-worship of Kṛṣṇa; nāma-saṅkīrtana-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

TRANSLATION

In the house of Advaita Ācārya, all the Vaiṣṇavas took pleasure in always talking of Kṛṣṇa, always worshiping Kṛṣṇa and always chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

PURPORT

On these principles only does the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement go on. We have no business other than to talk of Kṛṣṇa, worship Kṛṣṇa and chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

TEXT 67

kintu sarva-loka dekhi' kṛṣṇa-bahirmukha viṣaye nimagna loka dekhi' pāya duḥkha

SYNONYMS

kintu-but; sarva-loka-all people; dekhi'-seeing; kṛṣṇa-bahirmukha-without Kṛṣṇa consciousness; viṣaye-material enjoyment; nimagna-merged; loka-all people; dekhi'-seeing; pāya duḥkha-felt pained.

TRANSLATION

But Śrī Advaita Ācārya Prabhu felt pained to see all the people without Kṛṣṇa consciousness simply merging in material sense enjoyment.

PURPORT

A bona fide devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa is always pained to see the fallen condition of the whole world. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura used to say, "There is no scarcity of anything within this world. The only scarcity is of Kṛṣṇa consciousness." That is the vision of all pure devotees. Because of this lack of Kṛṣṇa consciousness in human society, people are suffering terribly, being merged in an ocean of nescience and sense gratification. A devotee onlooker is very much aggrieved to see such a situation in the world.

TEXT 68

lokera nistāra-hetu karena cintana kemate e saba lokera ha-ibe tāraṇa

SYNONYMS

lokera-of all people; nistāra-hetu-for the matter of deliverance; karena-does; cintana-contemplation; kemate-how; e-these; saba-all; lokera-of people in general; ha-ibe-will become; tāraṇa-liberation.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the condition of the world, He began to think seriously of how all these people could be delivered from the clutches of māyā.

TEXT 69

kṛṣṇa avatari' karena bhaktira vistāra

tabe ta' sakala lokera ha-ibe nistāra

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; avatari'-descending; karena-does; bhaktira-of devotional service; vistāra-expansion; tabe-then; ta'-certainly; sakala-all; lokera-of the people; ha-ibe-there will be; nistāra-liberation.

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Advaita Ācārya Prabhu thought, "If Kṛṣṇa Himself appears in order to distribute the cult of devotional service, then only will liberation be possible for all people."

PURPORT

Just as a condemned person can be relieved by a special favor of the chief executive head, the president or king, so the condemned people of this Kali-yuga can be delivered only by the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself or a person especially empowered for this purpose. Śrīla Advaita Ācārya Prabhu desired that the Supreme Personality of Godhead advent Himself to deliver the fallen souls of this age.

TEXT 70

kṛṣṇa avatārite ācārya pratijñā kariyā kṛṣṇa-pūjā kare tulasī-gaṅgājala diyā

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; avatārite-to cause His advent; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; pratijñā-promise; kariyā-making; kṛṣṇa-pūjā-worship of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kare-does; tulasī-tulasī leaves; gaṅgā-jala diyā-with the water of the Ganges.

TRANSLATION

With this consideration, Advaita Ācārya Prabhu, promising to cause Lord Kṛṣṇa to descend, began to worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, with tulasī leaves and water of the Ganges.

PURPORT

Tulasī leaves and Ganges water, with, if possible, a little pulp of sandalwood, is sufficient paraphernalia to worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Lord says in Bhagavad-gītā:

patraṁ puspaṁ phalaṁ toyaṁ yo me bhaktyā prayacchati
tad ahaṁ bhakty-upahṛtam
aśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ

"If one offers Me with love and devotion a leaf, a flower, a fruit or water, I will accept it." (Bg. 9.26) Following this principle, Advaita Prabhu pleased the Supreme personality of Godhead with tulasī leaves and water of the Ganges.

TEXT 71

huṅkāre ākṛṣṭa hailā vrajendra-kumāra

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; āhvāna-invitation; kare-does; saghana-with great gravity; huṅkāra-vibration; huṅkāre-and by such loud cries; ākṛṣṭa-attracted; hailā-became; vrajendra-kumāra-the son of Vrajendra, Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

By loud cries He invited Kṛṣṇa to appear, and this repeated invitation attracted Lord Kṛṣṇa to descend.

TEXT 72

jagannāthamiśra-patnī śacīra udare aṣṭa kanyā krame haila, janmi' janmi' mare jagannātha-miśra-of the name Jagannātha Miśra; patnī-his wife; śacīra-of Śacīmātā; udare-within the womb; aṣṭa-eight; kanyā-daughters; krame-one after another; haila-appeared; janmi'-after taking birth; janmi'-after taking birth; mare-all died.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Before the birth of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, eight daughters took birth one after another from the womb of Śacīmātā, the wife of Jagannātha Miśra. But just after their birth, they all died.

TEXT 73

apatya-virahe miśrera duḥkhī haila mana putra lāgi' ārādhila viṣṇura caraṇa apatya-of children; virahe-in separation; miśrera-of Jagannātha Miśra; duḥkhī-unhappy; haila-became; mana-mind; putra-son; lāgi'-for the matter of; ārādhila-worshiped; viṣṇura-of Lord Viṣṇu; caraṇa-lotus feet.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Jagannātha Miśra was very unhappy at the death of his children one after another. Therefore, desiring a son, he worshiped the lotus feet of Lord Viṣṇu.

TEXT 74

tabe putra janamilā 'viśvarūpa' nāma mahā-guṇavān teṅha–'baladeva'-dhāma

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; putra-son; janamilā-took birth; viśvarūpa-Viśvarūpa; nāma-named; mahā-guṇavān-highly qualified; teṅha-He; baladeva-of Lord Baladeva; dhāma-incarnation.

TRANSLATION

After this, Jagannātha Miśra got a son of the name Viśvarūpa, who was most powerful and highly qualified because He was an incarnation of Baladeva.

PURPORT

Viśvarūpa was the elder brother of Gaurahari, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When arrangements were being made for His marriage, He took sannyāsa and left home. He took the sannyāsa name of Śaṅkarāraṇya. In 1431 Śakābda Era (A.D. 1510), He disappeared in Pāṇḍerapura in the district of Sholapur. As an incarnation of Saṅkarṣaṇa, He is both the ingredient and immediate cause of the creation of this material world. He is nondifferent from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as aṁśa and aṁśī, or the part and the whole, are not different. He belongs to the quadruple manifestation of catur-vyūha as an incarnation of Saṅkarṣaṇa. In the Gaura-candrodaya it is said that Viśvarūpa, after His so-called demise, remained mixed within Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu.

TEXT 75

baladeva-prakāśa–parama-vyome ’saṅkarṣaṇa’ teṅha–viśvera upādāna-nimitta-kāraṇa baladeva-prakāśa-manifestation of Baladeva; parama-vyome-in the spiritual sky; saṅkarṣaṇa-of the name Saṅkarṣaṇa; teṅha-He; viśvera-the cosmic manifestation; upādāna-ingredient; nimitta-kāraṇa-immediate cause.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The expansion of Baladeva known as Saṅkarṣaṇa in the spiritual world is the ingredient and immediate cause of this material cosmic manifestation.

TEXT 76

tāṅhā ba-i viśve kichu nāhi dekhi āra ataeva ’viśvarūpa’ nāma ye tāṅhāra

SYNONYMS

tāṅhā ba-i-except Him; viśve-within this cosmic manifestation; kichu-something; nāhi-there is none; dekhi-I see; āra-further; ataeva-therefore; viśvarūpa-universal form; nāma-name; ye-that; tāṅhāra-His.

TRANSLATION

The gigantic universal form is called the Viśvarūpa incarnation of Mahā-saṅkarṣaṇa. Thus we do not find anything within this cosmic manifestation except the Lord Himself.

TEXT 77

naitac citraṁ bhagavati hy anante jagad-īśvare otaṁ protam idaṁ yasmin tantuṣv aṅga yathā paṭaḥ

SYNONYMS

na-not; etat-this; citram-wonderful; bhagavati-in the Supreme Personality of Godhead; hi-certainly; anante-in the unlimited; jagat-īśvare-the master of the universe; otam-lengthwise; protam-breadthwise; idam-this universe; yasmin-in whom; tantuṣu-in the threads; aṅga-O King; yathā-as much as; paṭaḥ-a cloth.

TRANSLATION

”As the thread in a cloth spreads both lengthwise and breadthwise, so everything we see within this cosmic manifestation is directly and indirectly existing in the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is not very wonderful for Him.”

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.15.35).

TEXT 78

ataeva prabhu tāṅre bale, ’baḍa bhāi’ kṛṣṇa, balarāma dui–caitanya, nitāi ataeva-therefore; prabhu-Lord Caitanya; tāṅre-unto Viśvarūpa; bale-says; baḍa bhāi-elder brother; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; balarāma-and Baladeva; dui-two; caitanya-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nitāi-and Lord Nityānanda Prabhu.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Because Mahā-saṅkarṣaṇa is the ingredient and efficient cause of the cosmic manifestation, He is present in every detail of it. Lord Caitanya therefore called Him His elder brother. The two brothers are known as Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma in the spiritual world, but at the present moment they are Caitanya and Nitāi. Therefore the conclusion is that Nityānanda Prabhu is the original Saṅkarṣaṇa, Baladeva.

TEXT 79

putra pāñā dampati hailā ānandita mana viśeṣe sevana kare govinda-caraṇa putra-son; pāñā-having gotten; dampati-husband and wife; hailā-became; ānandita-pleased; mana-mind; viśeṣe-specifically; sevana-service; kare-render; govinda-caraṇa-the lotus feet of Lord Govinda.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The husband and wife [Jagannātha Miśra and Śacīmātā], having gotten Viśvarūpa as their son, were very pleased within their minds. Because of their pleasure, they specifically began to serve the lotus feet of Govinda.

PURPORT

There is a common saying in India that everyone goes to worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead when he is in distress, but when a person is in an opulent position, he forgets God. In Bhagavad-gītā (7.16) this is also confirmed:

catur-vidhā bhajante māṁ janāḥ sukṛtino 'rjuna ārto jijñāsur arthārthī jñānī ca bharatarṣabha

"If backed by pious activities in the past, four kinds of men-namely, those who are distressed, those in need of money, those searching after knowledge and those who are inquisitive-become interested in devotional service." The husband and wife, Jagannātha Miśra and Śacīmātā, were very unhappy because their eight daughters had passed away. Now, when they got Viśvarūpa as their son, certainly they became extremely happy. They knew that it was by the grace of the Lord that they were endowed with such happiness and opulence. Therefore instead of forgetting the Lord, they became more and more adherent in rendering service to the lotus feet of Govinda. When a common man becomes opulent, he forgets God; but the more opulent a devotee becomes by the grace of the Lord, the more he becomes attached to the service of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

caudda-śata-1400; chaya-6; śake-in the year of the Śaka Era; śeṣa-last; māgha-Māgha; māse-in the month; jagannātha-of Jagannātha Miśra; śacīra-and of Śacīdevī; dehe-in the bodies; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; praveśe-by the entrance.

TRANSLATION

In the month of January in the year 1406 of the Śaka Era (A.D. 1485), Lord Kṛṣṇa entered the bodies of both Jagannātha Miśra and Śacī.

PURPORT

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu took His birth in the year 1407 Śaka Era (A.D. 1486), in the month of Phālguna. But here we see that He entered the bodies of His parents in the year 1406 in the month of Māgha. Therefore, the Lord entered the bodies of His parents thirteen full months before His birth. Generally a common child remains within the womb of his mother for ten lunar months, but here we see that the Lord remained within the body of His mother for thirteen lunar months.

TEXT 81

ghare pāṭhāiyā deya dhana, vastra, dhāna

SYNONYMS

yāhāṅ-wherever; tāhāṅ-anywhere; sarva-loka-all people; karaye-show; sammāna-respect; ghare-at home; pāṭhāiyā-sending; deya-give; dhana-riches; vastra-cloth; dhāna-paddy.

TRANSLATION

"Anywhere and everywhere I go, all people offer me respect. Even without my asking, they voluntarily give me riches, clothing and paddy."

PURPORT

A brāhmaṇa does not become anyone's servant. To render service to someone else is the business of the śūdras. A brāhmaṇa is always independent because he is a teacher, spiritual master and advisor to society. The members of society provide him with all the necessities for life. In the Bhagavad-gītā the Lord has divided society into four divisions-brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya and śūdra. A society cannot run smoothly without this scientific division. A brāhmaṇa should give good advice to all the members of the society, a kṣatriya should look after the administration, maintaining law and order in society, vaiśyas should produce and trade to meet all the needs of society, whereas śūdras should render service to the higher sections of society (the brāhmaṇas, kṣatriyas and vaiśyas).

Jagannātha Miśra was a brāhmaṇa; therefore people would send him all bodily necessities-money, cloth, grain and so on. While Lord Caitanya was in the womb of Śacīmātā, Jagannātha Miśra received all these necessities of life without asking for them. Because of the presence of the Lord in his family, everyone offered him due respect as a brāhmaṇa. In other words, if a brāhmaṇa or Vaiṣṇava sticks to his position as an eternal servant of the Lord and executes the will of the Lord, there is no question of scarcity for his personal maintenance or the needs of his family.

SYNONYMS

śacī kahe-mother Śacīdevī replied; muñi-I; dekhoṅ-see; ākāśa-upare-in outer space; divya-mūrti-brilliant forms; loka-people; saba-all; yena-as if; stuti-prayers; kare-offering.

TRANSLATION

Śacīmatā told her husband, "I also see wonderfully brilliant human beings appearing in outer space, as if offering prayers."

PURPORT

Jagannātha Miśra was honored by everyone on the earth and was supplied with all necessities. Similarly, mother Śacī saw many demigods in outer space offering prayers to her because of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's presence in her womb.

TEXT 84

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-after this conversation; duṅhe-both of them; rahe-remained; haraṣita-jubilant; hañā-becoming; śālagrāma-śālagrāma-nārāyaṇa-śilā; sevā-service; kare-rendered; viśeṣa-with special attention; kariyā-giving it.

TRANSLATION

After this conversation, both husband and wife were very jubilant, and together they rendered service to the household śālagrāma-śilā.

PURPORT

Especially in every brāhmaṇa's house there must be a śālagrāma-śilā to be worshiped by the brāhmaṇa family. This system is still current. People who are brāhmaṇa by caste, who are born in a brāhmaṇa family, must worship the śālagrāma-śilā. Unfortunately, with the progress of Kali-yuga, the so-called brāhmaṇas, although very proud of taking birth in brāhmaṇa families, no longer worship the śālagrāma-śilā. But actually it has been a custom since time immemorial that a person born in a brāhmaṇa family must worship the śālagrāma-śilā in all circumstances. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness society, some of the members are very anxious to introduce the śālagrāma-śilā, but we have purposely refrained from introducing it because most of the members of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement do not originally come from families of the brāhmaṇa caste. After some time, when we find that they are actually situated strictly in the line of brahminical behavior, this śālagrāma-śilā will be introduced.

In this age, the worship of the śālagrāma-śilā is not as important as the chanting of the holy name of the Lord. That is the injunction of the śāstra. Harer nāma harer nāma harer nāmaiva kevalam kalau nāsty eva nāsty eva nāsty eva gatir anyathā. Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī's opinion is that by chanting the holy name offenselessly one becomes completely perfect. Nevertheless, just to purify the situation of the mind, worship of the Deity in the temple is also necessary. Therefore when one is advanced in spiritual consciousness or is perfectly situated on a spiritual platform he may take to the worship of the śālagrāma-śilā.

The transference of the Lord from the heart of Jagannātha Miśra to the heart of Śacīmātā is explained by Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura as follows: "It is to be concluded that Jagannātha Miśra and Śacīmātā are nitya-siddhas, ever purified associates of the Lord. Their hearts are always uncontaminated, and therefore they never forget the Supreme Personality of Godhead. A common man in this material world has a contaminated heart. He must therefore first purify his heart to come to the transcendental position. But Jagannātha Miśra and Śacīmātā were not a common man and woman with contaminated hearts. When the heart is uncontaminated, it is said to be in the existential position of Vasudeva. Vasudeva can beget Vāsudeva, or Kṛṣṇa, who is transcendentally situated."

It is to be understood that Śacīdevī did not become pregnant as an ordinary woman becomes pregnant because of sense indulgence. One should not think the pregnancy of Śacīmātā to be that of an ordinary woman because that is an offense. One can understand the pregnancy of Śacīmātā when one is actually advanced in spiritual consciousness and fully engaged in the devotional service of the Lord.

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.16) it is stated:

bhagavān api viśvātmā bhaktānām abhayaṅ-karaḥ āviveśāṁśa-bhāgena mana ānakadundubheḥ

This is a statement regarding the birth of Lord Kṛṣṇa. The incarnation of the Lord entered the mind of Vasudeva and was then transferred to the mind of Devakī. Śrīla Śrīdhara Svāmī gives the following annotation in this connection: 'mana āviveśa' manasy āvirbabhūva; jīvānām iva na dhātu-sambandha ity arthaḥ. There was no question of the seminal discharge necessary for the birth of an ordinary human being. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī also comments in this connection that Lord Kṛṣṇa first appeared in the mind of Ānakadundubhi, Vasudeva, and was then transferred to the mind of Devakī-devī. Thus the spiritual bliss in the mind of Devakī-devī gradually increased, just as the moon increases every night until it becomes a full moon. At the time of His appearance, Lord Kṛṣṇa came out of the mind of Devakī and appeared within the prison house of Kaṁsa by the side of Devakī's bed. At that time, by the spell of yogamāyā, Devakī thought that her child had now been born. In this connection, even the demigods from the celestial kingdom were also bewildered. As it is stated, muhyanti yat sūrayaḥ (Bhāg. 1.1.1). They came to offer their prayers to Devakī, thinking that the Supreme Lord was within her womb. The demigods came to Mathurā from their celestial kingdom. This indicates that Mathurā is still more important than the celestial kingdom of the upper planetary system.

Lord Kṛṣṇa, as the eternal son of Yaśodāmayī, is always present in Vṛndāvana. The pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa are continuously going on within both this material world and the spiritual world. In such pastimes, the Lord always thinks Himself the eternal son of mother Yaśodā and father Nanda Mahārāja. In the Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Chapter Six, verse 43, it is stated, ”When magnanimous, broad-hearted Nanda Mahārāja came back from a tour, he immediately took his son Kṛṣṇa on his lap and experienced transcendental bliss by smelling His head.” Similarly, in the Tenth Canto, Ninth Chapter, verse 21, it is said, ”This Personality of Godhead, appearing as the son of a cowherd damsel, is easily available and understandable to devotees, whereas those who are under the concept of bodily life, even though they are very advanced in austerity and penance or even though they are great philosophers, are unable to understand Him.”

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura next quotes Śrīpāda Baladeva Vidyābhūṣaṇa, who refers to the prayers offered by the demigods to Lord Kṛṣṇa in the womb of Devakī and summarizes the birth of Kṛṣṇa as follows: ”As the rising moon manifests light in the east, so Devakī, who was always situated on the transcendental platform, having been initiated in the Kṛṣṇa mantra by Vasudeva, the son of Śūrasena, kept Kṛṣṇa within her heart.” From this statement of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.18) it is understood that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, having been transferred from the heart of Ānakadundubhi, or Vasudeva, manifested Himself in the heart of Devakī. According to Śrīla Baladeva Vidyābhūṣaṇa, the ”heart of Devakī” means the womb of Devakī because in the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Tenth Canto, Second Chapter, verse 41, the demigods say, diṣṭyāmba te kukṣi-gataḥ paraḥ pumān: ”Mother Devakī, the Lord is already within your womb.” Therefore, that the Lord was transferred from the heart of Vasudeva to the heart of Devakī means that He was transferred to the womb of Devakī.

Similarly, in regard to the appearance of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu as described in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta, the words viśeṣe sevana kare govinda-caraṇa, ”they specifically began to worship the lotus feet of Govinda,” indicate that exactly as Kṛṣṇa appeared in the heart of Devakī through the heart of Vasudeva, so Lord Caitanya appeared in the heart of Śacīdevī through the heart of Jagannātha Miśra. This is the mystery of the appearance of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Consequently, one should not think of Lord Caitanya’s appearance as that of a common man or living entity. This subject matter is a little difficult to understand, but for devotees of the Lord it will not at all be difficult to realize the statements given by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī.

SYNONYMS

haite haite-thus becoming; haila-it so became; garbha-pregnancy; trayodaśa-thirteenth; māsa-month; tathāpi-still; bhūmiṣṭha-delivery; nahe-there was no sign; miśrera-of Jagannātha Miśra; haila-became; trāsa-apprehension.

TRANSLATION

In this way the pregnancy approached its thirteenth month, but still there was no sign of the delivery of the child. Thus Jagannātha Miśra became greatly apprehensive.

TEXT 88

TRANSLATION

Nīlāmbara Cakravartī [the grandfather of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu] then did an astrological calculation and said that in that month, taking advantage of an auspicious moment, the child would take birth.

TEXT 89

caudda-śata sāta-śake māsa ye phālguna paurṇamāsīra sandhyā-kāle haile śubha-kṣaṇa caudda-śata sāta-śake-in 1407 of the Śaka Era (A.D. 1486); māsa-month; ye-which; phālguna-of the name Phālguna; paurṇamāsira-of the full moon; sandhyā-kāle-in the evening; haile-there was; śubha-kṣaṇa-an auspicious constellation.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thus in the year 1407 of the Śaka Era (A.D. 1486), in the month of Phālguna [March-April], on the evening of the full moon, the desired auspicious moment appeared.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura, in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, has presented the horoscope of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as follows:

śala 140710222845
dinam
7 11 8
15 54 38
40 37 40
13 6 23

The explanation of the horoscope given by Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura is that at the time of the birth of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu the constellations were situated as follows: Śukra (Venus) was in Meṣa-rāśi (Aries), in the constellation of Aśvinī; Ketu (the ninth planet) was in Siṁha-rāśi (Leo), in Uttaraphalgunī; Candra (the moon) was in Siṁha-rāśi, in Pūrvaphalgunī (the eleventh lunar mansion);

Śani (Saturn) was in Vṛścika-rāśi (Scorpio), in Jyeṣṭhā; Bṛhaspati (Jupiter) was in Dhanu-rāśi, in Pūrvāṣāḍhā (Sagittarius); Maṅgala (Mars) was in Makara-rāśi (Capricorn), in Śravaṇā; Ravi (the sun) and Rāhu were in Kumbha-rāśi (Aquarius), in Pūrvabhādrapāda; and Budha (Mercury) was in Mīna-rāśi (Pisces), in Uttarabhādrapāda.. The lagna was Siṁha.

TEXT 90

siṁha-rāśi, siṁha-lagna, ucca graha-gaṇa ṣaḍ-varga, aṣṭa-varga, sarva sulakṣaṇa

SYNONYMS

siṁha-the lion; rāśi-sign of the zodiac; siṁha-the lion; lagna-birth moment; ucca-high; graha-gaṇa-all planets; ṣaṭ-varga-six area; aṣṭa-varga-eight area; sarva-all; su-lakṣaṇa-auspiciousness.

TRANSLATION

According to the Jyotir-veda, or Vedic astronomy, when the figure of the lion appears both in the zodiac and the time of birth [lagna], this indicates a very high conjunction of planets, an area under the influence of ṣaḍ-varga and aṣṭa-varga, which are all-auspicious moments.

PURPORT

The divisions of the ṣaḍ-varga area are technically called kṣetra, horā, drekkāṇa, navāṁśa, dvādaśāṁśa and triṁśāṁśa. According to Jyotir-vedic astrology, when it is calculated who rules the constellation of six areas, the auspicious moment is calculated. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, who was previously also a great astrologer, says that in the book named Bṛhaj-jātaka and other books there are directions for knowing the movements of the stars and planets. One who knows the process of drawing a straight line and thus understands the area of aṣṭa-varga can explain the auspicious constellations. This science is known especially by persons who are called horā-śāstra-vit, or those who know the scripture of the name Horā. On the strength of astrological calculations from the Horā scripture, Nīlāmbara Cakravartī, the grandfather of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, ascertained the auspicious moment in which the Lord would appear.

TEXT 91

a-kalaṅka gauracandra dilā daraśana sa-kalaṅka candre āra kon prayojana

SYNONYMS

a-kalaṅka-without contamination; gauracandra-the moon of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dilā-gave; daraśana-audience; sa-kalaṅka-with contamination; candre-for a moon; āra-also; kon-what; prayojana-necessity.

TRANSLATION

When the spotless moon of Caitanya Mahāprabhu became visible, what would be the need for a moon full of black marks on its body?

TEXT 92

eta jāni' rāhu kaila candrera grahaṇa
'kṛṣṇa' 'kṛṣṇa' 'hari' nāme bhāse tri-bhuvana

SYNONYMS

eta jāni'-knowing all this; rāhu-the zodiac figure Rāhu; kaila-attempted; candrera-of the moon; grahaṇa-eclipse; kṛṣna kṛṣṇa-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; hari-the holy name of Hari; nāme-the names; bhāse-inundated; tri-bhuvana-the three worlds.

TRANSLATION

Considering this, Rāhu, the black planet, covered the full moon, and immediately vibrations of "Kṛṣṇa! Kṛṣṇa! Hari!" inundated the three worlds.

PURPORT

According to the Jyotir-veda, the Rāhu planet comes in front of the full moon, and thus a lunar eclipse takes place. It is customary in India that all the followers of the Vedic scriptures bathe in the Ganges or the sea as soon as there is a lunar or solar eclipse. All strict followers of Vedic religion stand up in the water throughout the whole period of the eclipse and chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. At the time of the birth of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu such a lunar eclipse took place, and naturally all the people standing in the water were chanting Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare.

TEXT 93

jaya jaya dhvani haila sakala bhuvana

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya-all glories; dhvani-vibration; haila-there was; sakala-all; bhuvana-worlds; camatkāra-wonderful; haiyā-becoming; loka-all the people; bhāve-state; mane mana-within their minds.

TRANSLATION

All people thus chanted the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra during the lunar eclipse, and their minds were struck with wonder.

TEXT 94

jagat bhariyā loka bale–'hari' 'hari' sei-kṣaṇe gaurakṛṣṇa bhūme avatari jagat-the whole world; bhariyā-fulfilling; loka-people; bale-said; hari hari-the holy name of the Lord; sei-kṣaṇe-at that time; gaurakṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa in the form of Gaurahari; bhūme-on the earth; avatari-advented.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When the whole world was thus chanting the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa in the form of Gaurahari advented Himself on the earth.

TEXT 95

prasanna ha-ila saba jagatera mana
’hari’ bali’ hinduke hāsya karaye yavana

SYNONYMS

prasanna-joyful; ha-ila-became; saba-all; jagatera-of the whole world; mana-the mind; hari-the holy name of the Lord; bali’-saying; hinduke-unto the Hindus; hāsya-laughing; karaye-do so; yavana-the Muslims.

TRANSLATION

The whole world was pleased. While the Hindus chanted the holy name of the Lord, the non-Hindus, especially the Muslims, jokingly imitated the words.

PURPORT

Although the Muslims, or non-Hindus, have no interest in chanting the holy name of the Lord, the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, while the Hindus in Navadvīpa chanted during the lunar eclipse the Muslims imitated them. Thus the Hindus and Muslims joined together in chanting the holy name of the Lord when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu advented Himself.

TEXT 96

’hari’ bali’ nārīgaṇa dei hulāhuli svarge vādya-nṛtya kare deva kutūhalī

SYNONYMS

hari bali’-by saying the word Hari; nārī-gaṇa-all the ladies; dei-chanting; hulāhuli-the sound of hulāhuli; svarge-in the heavenly planets; vādya-nṛtya-music and dance; kare-do; deva-demigods; kutūhalī-curious.

TRANSLATION

While all the ladies vibrated the holy name of Hari on earth, in the heavenly planets dancing and music were going on, for the demigods were very curious.

TEXT 97

SYNONYMS

prasanna-jubilant; haila-became; daśa-ten; dik-directions; prasanna-satisfied; nadī-jala-the water of the rivers; sthāvara-immovable; jaṅgama-movable; haila-became; ānande-in joy; vihvala-overwhelmed.

TRANSLATION

In this atmosphere, all the ten directions became jubilant, as did the waves of the rivers. Moreover, all beings, moving and nonmoving, were overwhelmed with transcendental bliss.

TEXT 98

nadīyā-udayagiri, pūrṇacandra gaurahari,

SYNONYMS

nadīyā-the place known as Nadīyā; udayagiri-is the appearing place; pūrṇa-candra-the full moon; gaurahari-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛpā-by mercy; kari’-doing so; ha-ila-became; udaya-risen; pāpa-sinful; tamaḥ-darkness; haila-became; nāśa-dissipated; tri-jagatera-of the three worlds; ullāsa-happiness; jaga-bhari’-filling the whole world; hari-dhvani-the transcendental vibration of Hari; haya-resounded.

TRANSLATION

Thus by His causeless mercy the full moon, Gaurahari, rose in the district of Nadia, which is compared to Udayagiri, where the sun first becomes visible. His rising in the sky dissipated the darkness of sinful life, and thus the three worlds became joyful and chanted the holy name of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

sei-kāle-at that time; nija-ālaya-in His own house; uṭhiyā-standing; advaita-Advaita Ācārya; rāya-the rich man; nṛtya-dancing; kare-performs; ānandita-with joyful; mane-mind; haridāse-Ṭhākura Haridāsa; lañā-taking; saṅge-with Him; huṅkāra-loudly; kīrtana-saṅkīrtana; raṅge-performing; kene-why; nāce-dances; keha nāhi-no one; jāne-knows.

TRANSLATION

At that time Śrī Advaita Ācārya Prabhu, in His own house at Śāntipura, was dancing in a pleasing mood. Taking Haridāsa Ṭhākura with Him, He danced and loudly chanted Hare Kṛṣṇa. But why they were dancing, no one could understand.

PURPORT

It is understood that Advaita Prabhu, at that time, was in His own paternal house at Śāntipura. Haridāsa Ṭhākura frequently used to meet Him. Coincidentally, therefore, he was also there, and upon the birth of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu both of them immediately began to dance. But no one in Śāntipura could understand why those two saintly persons were dancing.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the lunar eclipse and laughing, both Advaita Ācārya and Haridāsa Ṭhākura immediately went to the bank of the Ganges and bathed in the Ganges in great jubilation. Taking advantage of the occasion of the lunar eclipse, Advaita Ācārya, by His own mental strength, distributed various types of charity to the brāhmaṇas.

PURPORT

It is the custom of Hindus to give in charity to the poor as much as possible during the time of a lunar or solar eclipse. Advaita Ācārya, therefore, taking advantage of this eclipse, distributed many varieties of charity to the brāhmaṇas. In the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam there is a statement in the Tenth Canto, Third Chapter, verse 11, that when Kṛṣṇa took His birth, immediately Vasudeva, taking advantage of this moment, distributed ten thousand cows to the brāhmaṇas. It is customary among Hindus that at the time a child is born, especially a male child, the parents distribute great charity in jubilation. Advaita Ācārya was actually interested in distributing charity because of Lord Caitanya's birth at the time of the lunar eclipse. People could not understand, however, why Advaita Ācārya was giving such a great variety of things in charity. He did so not because of the lunar eclipse but because of the Lord's taking birth at that moment. He distributed charity exactly as Vasudeva did at the time of Lord Kṛṣṇa's appearance.

SYNONYMS

jagat-the whole world; ānanda-maya-full of pleasure; dekhi'-seeing; mane-within the mind; sa-vismaya-with amazement; ṭhāreṭhore-by direct and indirect indications; kahe-says; haridāsa-Haridāsa Ṭhākura; tomāra-Your; aichana-that kind of; raṅga-performance; mora-my; mana-mind; parasanna-very much pleased; dekhi-I can understand; kichu-something; kārye-in work; āche-there is; bhāsa-indication.

TRANSLATION

When he saw that the whole world was jubilant, Haridāsa Ṭhākura, his mind astonished, directly and indirectly expressed himself to Advaita Ācārya, "Your dancing and distributing charity are very pleasing to me. I can understand that there is some special purpose in these actions."

SYNONYMS

sāvitrī-the wife of Lord Brahmā; gaurī-the wife of Lord Śiva; sarasvatī-the wife of Lord Nṛsiṁhadeva; śacī-the wife of King Indra; rambhā-a dancing girl of heaven; arundhatī-the wife of Vasiṣṭha; āra-and; yata-all; deva-celestial; nārī-gaṇa-women; nānā-varieties; dravye-with gifts; pātra bhari'-filling up the baskets; brāhmaṇīra-in the forms of brāhmaṇa ladies; veśa dhari'-dressing like that; āsi'-coming there; sabe-all; kare-do; daraśana-visit.

TRANSLATION

Dressing themselves as the wives of brāhmaṇas, all the celestial ladies, including the wives of Lord Brahmā, Lord Śiva, Lord Nṛsiṁhadeva, King Indra and Vasiṣṭha Ṛṣi, along with Rambhā, a dancing girl of heaven, came there with varieties of gifts.

PURPORT

When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was a newly born baby, He was visited by the neighboring ladies, most of whom were the wives of respectable brāhmaṇas. In the dress of brāhmaṇas' wives, celestial ladies like the wives of Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva also came to see the newly born child. Ordinary people saw them as respectable brāhmaṇa ladies of the neighborhood, but actually they were all celestial ladies dressed in that way.

SYNONYMS

antarīkṣe-in outer space; deva-gaṇa-the demigods; gandharva-the inhabitants of Gandharvaloka; siddha-the inhabitants of Siddhaloka; cāraṇa-the professional singers of the heavenly planets; stuti-prayers; nṛtya-dancing; kare-do; vādya-music; gīta-song; nartaka-dancers; vādaka-professional drummers; bhāṭa-professional blessers; navadvīpe-in the city of Navadvīpa; yāra-of whom; nāṭa-stage; sabe-all of them; āsi'-coming; nāce-began to dance; pāñā-achieving; prīta-happiness.

TRANSLATION

In outer space all the demigods, including the inhabitants of Gandharvaloka, Siddhaloka and Cāraṇaloka, offered their prayers and danced to the accompaniment of music, songs and the beating of drums. Similarly, in Navadvīpa city all the professional dancers, musicians and blessers gathered together, dancing in great jubilation.

PURPORT

As there are professional singers, dancers and reciters of prayers in the heavenly planets, so in India still there are professional dancers, blessers and singers, all of whom assemble together during householder ceremonies, especially marriages and birth ceremonies. These professional men earn their livelihood by taking charity on such occasions from the homes of the Hindus. Eunuchs also take advantage of such ceremonies to receive charity. That is their means of livelihood. Such men never become servants or engage themselves in agriculture or business occupations; they simply take charity from neighborhood friends to maintain themselves peacefully. The bhāṭas are a class of brāhmaṇas who go to such ceremonies to offer blessings by composing poems with references to the Vedic scriptures.

ācāryaratnera patnī-saṅge sindūra, haridrā, taila, kha-i, kalā, nārikela, diyā pūje nārīgaṇa raṅge

SYNONYMS

śrīvāsera brāhmaṇī-the wife of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; nāma-name; tāṅra-her; mālinī-of the name Mālinī; ācāryaratnera-of Candraśekhara (Ācāryaratna); patnī-wife; saṅge-along with; sindūra-vermilion; haridrā-turmeric; taila-oil; kha-i-fused rice; kalā-banana; nārikela-coconut; diyā-giving; pūje-worship; nārī-gaṇa-ladies; raṅge-in a happy mood.

TRANSLATION

The wife of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, whose name was Mālinī, accompanied by the wife of Candraśekhara [Ācāryaratna] and other ladies, came there in great happiness to worship the baby with paraphernalia such as vermilion, turmeric, oil, fused rice, bananas and coconuts.

PURPORT

Vermilion, kha-i (fused rice), bananas, coconuts and turmeric mixed with oil are all auspicious gifts for such a ceremony. As there is puffed rice, so there is another preparation of rice called kha-i, or fused rice, which, along with bananas, is taken as a very auspicious presentation. Also, turmeric mixed with oil and vermilion makes an auspicious ointment that is smeared over the body of a newly born baby or a person who is going to marry. These are all auspicious activities in family affairs. We see that five hundred years ago at the birth of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu all these ceremonies were performed rigidly, but at present such ritualistic performances hardly ever take place. Generally a pregnant mother is sent to the hospital, and as soon as her child is born he is washed with an antiseptic, and this concludes everything.

SYNONYMS

advaita-ācārya-bhāryā-the wife of Advaita Ācārya; jagat-pūjitā-worshiped by the whole world; āryā-the most advanced cultured lady; nāma-name; tāṅra-her; sītā ṭhākurāṇī-mother Sītā; ācāryera ājñā pāñā-taking the order of Advaita Ācārya; gela-went; upahāra-presentation; lañā-taking; dekhite-to see; bālaka-the child; śiromaṇi-topmost.

TRANSLATION

One day shortly after Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was born, Advaita Ācārya's wife, Sītādevī, who is worshipable by the whole world, took her husband's permission and went to see that topmost child with all kinds of gifts and presentations

PURPORT

It appears that Advaita Ācārya had two different houses, one at Śāntipura and one at Navadvīpa. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was born, Advaita Ācārya was residing not at His Navadvīpa house but at His Śāntipura house. Therefore, as formerly explained (text 99), from Advaita's old paternal house in Śāntipura (nijālaya)Sītā came to Navadvīpa to present gifts to the newly born child, Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

hasta-padera yata ābharaṇa citra-varṇa paṭṭa-sāḍī, buni photo paṭṭapāḍī, svarṇa-raupya-mudrā bahu-dhana

SYNONYMS

vyāghra-nakha-tiger nails; hema-jaḍi-set in gold; kaṭi-paṭṭasūtra-ḍorī-silken thread for the waist; hasta-padera-of the hands and legs; yata-all kinds of; ābharaṇa-ornaments; citra-varṇa-printed with varieties of colors; paṭṭa-sāḍī-silken sārīs; buni-woven; photo-small jackets for children; paṭṭa-pāḍī-with embroidery of silk; svarṇa-gold; raupya-silver; mudrā-coins; bahu-dhana-all kinds of riches.

TRANSLATION

There were also tiger nails set in gold, waist decorations of silk and lace, ornaments for the hands and legs, nicely printed silken sārīs and a child's garment, also made of silk. Many other riches, including gold and silver coins, were also presented to the child.

PURPORT

From the gifts presented by Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī, Advaita Ācārya's wife, it appears that Advaita Ācārya was at that time a very rich man. Although brāhmaṇas are not the rich men of society, Advaita Ācārya, being the leader of the brāhmaṇas in Śāntipura, was considerably well-to-do. Therefore He presented many ornaments to the baby, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. But Kamalākānta Viśvāsa's asking for three hundred rupees from the King of Jagannātha Purī, Mahārāja Pratāparudra, on the plea that Advaita Ācārya was in debt for that amount, indicates that such a rich man, who could present many valuable ornaments, sārīs, etc., thought it difficult to repay three hundred rupees. Therefore the value of a rupee at that time was many thousands of times greater than it is now. At the present, no one feels difficulty over a debt of three hundred rupees, nor can an ordinary man accumulate such valuable ornaments to present to a friend's son. Probably the value of three hundred rupees at that time was equal to the present value of thirty thousand rupees.

SYNONYMS

durvā-fresh grass; dhānya-rice paddy; gorocana-a yellow patch for the head of a cow; haridrā-turmeric; kuṅkuma-a kind of scent produced in Kashmir; candana-sandalwood; maṅgala-dravya-auspicious things; pātra bhariyā-filling up a dish; vastra-gupta-covered by cloth; dolā-palanquin; caḍi'-riding; saṅge-along with; lañā-taking; dāsī-maidservant; ceḍī-female attendants; vastra-alaṅkāra-ornaments and clothes; petāri-basket; bhariyā-filled up.

TRANSLATION

Riding in a palanquin covered with cloth and accompanied by maidservants, Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī came to the house of Jagannātha Miśra, bringing with her many auspicious articles such as fresh grass, paddy, gorocana, turmeric, kuṅkuma and sandalwood. All these presentations filled a large basket.

PURPORT

The words vastra-gupta dolā are very significant in this verse. Even fifty or sixty years ago in Calcutta, all respectable ladies would go to a neighboring place riding on a palanquin carried by four men. The palanquin was covered with soft cotton, and in that way there was no chance to see a respectable lady traveling in public. Ladies, especially those coming from respectable families, could not be seen by ordinary men. This system is still current in remote places. The Sanskrit word asūrya-paśyā indicates that a respectable lady could not be seen even by the sun. In the oriental culture this system was very much prevalent and was strictly observed by respectable ladies, both Hindu and Muslim. We have actual experience in our childhood that our mother would not go next door to her house to observe an invitation by walking; she would go in either a carriage or a palanquin carried by four men. This custom was also strictly followed five hundred years ago, and the wife of Advaita Ācārya, being a very respectable lady, observed the customary rules current in that social environment.

SYNONYMS

bhakṣya-foods; bhojya-fried foods; upahāra-presentation; saṅge-along with her; la-ila-took; bahu bhāra-many packages; śacī-gṛhe-in the house of mother Śacī; haila-was; upanīta-carried; dekhiyā-seeing; bālaka-ṭhāma-the feature of the child; sākṣāt-directly; gokula-kāna-Lord Kṛṣṇa of Gokula; varṇa-mātra-only the color; dekhi-seeing; viparīta-opposite.

TRANSLATION

When Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī came to the house of Śacīdevī, bringing with her many kinds of eatables, dresses and other gifts, she was astonished to see the newly born child, for she appreciated that except for a difference in color, the child was directly Kṛṣṇa of Gokula Himself.

PURPORT

A peṭāri is a kind of big basket that is carried in pairs on the ends of a rod balanced over the shoulders. The man who carries such a load is called a bhārī. This system of carrying luggage and packages is still current in India and other oriental countries, and we have seen that the same system is still current even in Jakarta, Indonesia.

SYNONYMS

sarva aṅga-all different parts of the body; sunirmāṇa-well constructed; suvarṇa-gold; pratimā-form; bhāna-like; sarva-all; aṅga-parts of the body; sulakṣaṇa-maya-full of auspicious signs; bālakera-of the child; divya-transcendental; jyoti-effulgence; dekhi'-seeing; pāila-got; bahu-much; prīti-satisfaction; vātsalyete-by parental affection; dravila-melted; hṛdaya-her heart.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the transcendental bodily effulgence of the child, each of His nicely constructed limbs full of auspicious signs and resembling a form of gold, Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī was very much pleased, and because of her maternal affection, she felt as if her heart were melting.

TRANSLATION

She blessed the newly born child by placing fresh grass and paddy on His head and saying, "May You be blessed with a long duration of life." But being afraid of ghosts and witches, she gave the child the name Nimāi.

PURPORT

Ḍākinī and Śāṅkhinī are two companions of Lord Śiva and his wife who are supposed to be extremely inauspicious, having been born of ghostly life. It is believed that such inauspicious living creatures cannot go near a nima tree. At least medically it is accepted that nima wood is extremely antiseptic, and formerly it was customary to have a nima tree in front of one's house. On very large roads in India, especially in Uttar Pradesh, there are hundreds and thousands of nima trees. Nima wood is so antiseptic that the Āyurvedic science uses it to cure leprosy. Medical scientists have extracted the active principle of the nima tree, which is called margosic acid. Nima is used for many purposes, especially to brush the teeth. In Indian villages ninety percent of the people use nima twigs for this purpose. Because of all the antiseptic effects of the nima tree and because Lord Caitanya was born beneath a nima tree, Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī gave the Lord the name Nimāi. Later in His youth He was celebrated as Nimāi Paṇḍita, and in the neighborhood villages He was called by that name, although His real name was Viśvambhara.

TRANSLATION

On the day the mother and son bathed and left the maternity home, Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī gave them all kinds of ornaments and garments and then also honored Jagannātha Miśra. Then Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī, being honored by mother Śacīdevī and Jagannātha Miśra, was greatly happy within her mind, and thus she returned home.

PURPORT

On the fifth day from the birth of a child, as also on the ninth day, the mother bathes either in the Ganges or in a sacred place. This is called niṣkrāmaṇa, or the ceremony of coming out of the maternity home. Nowadays the maternity home is a hospital, but formerly in every respectable house one room was set aside as a maternity home where children would take birth, and on the ninth day after the birth of a child the mother would come into the regular rooms in the ceremony called niṣkrāmaṇa. Of the ten purificatory processes, niṣkrāmaṇa is one. Formerly, especially in Bengal, the higher castes observed four months after the birth of a child as a quarantine. At the end of the fourth month, the mother first had to see the sun rise. Later the higher castes, namely, the brāhmaṇas, kṣatriyas and vaiśyas, observed only twenty-one days as a quarantine, whereas the śūdras had to observe thirty days. For the sections of society known as kartābhajā and satīmā, the mother of the child was immediately purified after the quarantine by the throwing of hari-nuṭa, small pieces of sweetmeat, in saṅkīrtana. Śacīdevī and Jagannātha Miśra, with the newly born child, were honored by Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī. Similarly, while Sītā Ṭhākurāṇī was returning home, she was also honored by Śacīdevī and Jagannātha Miśra. That was the system in respectable families of Bengal.

SYNONYMS

aiche-in that way; śacī-jagannātha-mother Śacīdevī and Jagannātha Miśra; putra-son; pāñā-having obtained; lakṣmī-nātha-personally the husband of the goddess of fortune; pūrṇa-fulfilled; ha-ila-became; sakala-all; vāñchita-desires; dhana-dhānye-with riches and grains; bhare ghara-the house filled up; loka-mānya kalevara-the body beloved by the people in general; dine dine-day after day; haya-becomes; ānandita-pleased.

TRANSLATION

In this way mother Śacīdevī and Jagannātha Miśra, having obtained a son who was the husband of the goddess of fortune, had all their desires fulfilled. Their house was always filled with riches and grains. As they saw the beloved body of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, day after day their pleasure increased.

PURPORT

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore everyone offered their respects to Him. Even the denizens of heaven used to come in the dress of ordinary men to offer their respect to the Lord. His father and mother, Jagannātha Miśra and Śacīdevī, seeing the honor of their transcendental son, also became very much pleased within their hearts.

SYNONYMS

miśra-Jagannātha Miśra; vaiṣṇava-a great devotee; śānta-peaceful; alampaṭa-very regular; śuddha-purified; dānta-controlled; dhana-bhoge-in the matter of enjoying material happiness; nāhi-there is no; abhimāna-desire; putrera-of their son; prabhāve-by the influence; yata-all; dhana-riches; āsi’-coming; mile-gets; tata-so much so; viṣṇu-prīte-for the satisfaction of Lord Viṣṇu; dvije-to the brāhmaṇas; dena-gives; dāna-charity.

TRANSLATION

Jagannātha Miśra was an ideal Vaiṣṇava. He was peaceful, restrained in sense gratification, pure and controlled. Therefore he had no desire to enjoy material opulence. Whatever money came because of the influence of his transcendental son, he gave it in charity to the brāhmaṇas for the satisfaction of Viṣṇu.

SYNONYMS

lagna gaṇi’-by astrological calculation of the birth moment; harṣa-mati-very pleased; nīlāmbara cakravartī-of the name Nīlāmbara Cakravartī; gupte-in private; kichu-something; kahila-said; miśrere-unto Jagannātha Miśra; mahā-puruṣera cihna-all the symptoms of a great personality; lagne-in the birth moment; aṅge-on the body; bhinna bhinna-different; dekhi-I see; ei-this child; tāribe-shall deliver; saṁsāre-all the three worlds.

TRANSLATION

After calculating the birth moment of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Nīlāmbara Cakravartī privately said to Jagannātha Miśra that he saw all the different symptoms of a great personality in both the body and birth moment of the child. Thus he understood that in the future this child would deliver all the three worlds.

SYNONYMS

aiche-in this way; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śacī-ghare-in the home of Śacīdevī; kṛpāya-by His causeless mercy; kaila-made; avatāre-advent; yei-anyone who; ihā-this; karaye-does; śravaṇa-hear; gaura-prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dayā-maya-being very merciful; tāṅre-upon him; hayena-becomes; sa-daya-merciful; sei-that person; pāya-gets; tāṅhāra-His; caraṇa-lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

In this way Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, out of His causeless mercy, made His advent in the house of Śacīdevī. Lord Caitanya is very merciful to anyone who hears this narration of His birth, and thus such a person attains the lotus feet of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

pāiyā mānuṣa janma-anyone who has gotten the form of a human body; ye-who; nā-does not; śune-hear; gaura-guṇa-the qualities of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; hena janma-such a birth; tāra-his; vyartha haila-becomes useless; pāiyā-getting the opportunity; amṛtadhunī-of the river of nectar; piye-drinks; viṣa-garta-pāni-water in a poison pit of material happiness; janmiyā-taking birth as a human being; se-he; kene-why; nāhi-did not; maila-die.

TRANSLATION

Anyone who attains a human body but does not take to the cult of Śri Caitanya Mahāprabhu is baffled in his opportunity. Amṛtadhunī is a flowing river of the nectar of devotional service. If after getting a human body one drinks the water in a poison pit of material happiness instead of the water of such a river, it would be better for him not to have lived, but to have died long ago.

PURPORT

In this connection Śrīmat Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī has composed the following verses in his Caitanya-candrāmṛta (37, 36, 34):

acaitanyam idaṁ viśvaṁ yadi caitanyam īśvaram na viduḥ sarva-śāstra-jñā hy api bhrāmyanti te janāḥ

”This material world is without Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is Kṛṣṇa consciousness personified. Therefore if a very learned scholar or scientist does not understand Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, certainly he is wandering uselessly in this world.”

prasārita-mahā-prema-pīyūṣa-rasa-sāgare caitanya-candre prakaṭe yo dīno dīna eva saḥ

”A person who does not take advantage of the nectar of devotional service overflowing during the presence of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s cult is certainly the poorest of the poor.”

avatīrṇe gaura-candre vistīrṇe prema-sāgare suprakāśita-ratnaughe yo dīno dīna eva saḥ

”The advent of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is just like an expanding ocean of nectar. One who does not collect the valuable jewels within this ocean is certainly the poorest of the poor.”

Similarly, the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.3.19, 20, 23) states:

śva-viḍ-varāhoṣṭra-kharaiḥ saṁstutaḥ puruṣaḥ paśuḥ na yat-karṇa-pathopeto jātu nāma gadāgrajaḥ bile batorukrama-vikramān ye na śṛṇvataḥ karṇa-puṭe narasya jihvāsatī dārdurikeva sūta na copagāyaty urugāya-gāthāḥ jīvañ chavo bhāgavatāṅghri-reṇuṁ na jātu martyo ’bhilabheta yas tu śrī-viṣṇu-padyā manujas tulasyāḥ śvasañ chavo yas tu na veda gandham

”A person who has no connection with Kṛṣṇa consciousness may be a very great personality in so-called human society, but actually he is no better than a great animal. Such big animals are generally praised by other animals like dogs, hogs camels and asses. A person who does not lend his aural reception to hearing about the Supreme Personality of Godhead must be considered to have earholes like holes in a field. Although that person has a tongue, it is like the tongue of a frog, which unnecessarily creates a disturbance by croaking, inviting the snake of death. Similarly, a person who neither takes advantage of the dust of the lotus feet of great devotees nor smells the tulasī leaves offered to the lotus feet of the Lord must be considered dead even though he is supposedly working.”

Similarly, the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Tenth Canto, Chapter One, verse 4, states:

nivṛtta-tarṣair upagīyamānād bhavauṣadhāc chrotra-mano-’bhirāmāt ka uttamaśloka-guṇānuvādāt pumān virajyeta vinā paśu-ghnāt

”Who but the animal-killer or the killer of the soul will not care to hear glorification of the Supreme Personality of Godhead? Such glorification is enjoyed by persons liberated from the contamination of this material world.”

Similarly, in the Third Canto, Chapter Twenty-three, verse 56, the Bhāgavatam says, na tīrtha-pada-sevāyai jīvann api mṛto hi saḥ: ”Although a person is apparently living, if he does not serve the lotus feet of great devotees he is to be considered a dead body.”

svarūpa-rūpa-raghunāthadāsa iṅhā-sabāra śrī-caraṇa, śire vandi nija-dhana, janma-līlā gāila kṛṣṇadāsa

SYNONYMS

śrī-caitanya-nityānanda-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu; ācārya advaitacandra-Ācārya Śrī Advaitacandra; svarūpa-rūpa-raghunāthadāsa-Svarūpa Dāmodara, Rūpa Gosvāmī and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; iṅhā-sabāra-of all of them; śrī-caraṇa-the lotus feet; śire-on the head; vandi-offering respect; nija-dhana-personal property; janma-līlā-narration of the birth; gāila-sang; kṛṣṇadāsa-Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Taking on my head as my own property the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Nityānanda Prabhu, Ācārya Advaitacandra, Svarūpa Dāmodara, Rūpa Gosvāmī and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, have thus described the advent of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Nityānanda, Advaita Prabhu, Svarūpa Dāmodara, Rūpa Gosvāmī, Raghunātha dāsa and their followers are all accepted by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī. Anyone who follows in the footsteps of Kavirāja Gosvāmī also accepts the lotus feet of the above-mentioned lords as his personal property. For a materialistic person, material wealth and opulence are only illusory. Actually they are not possessions but entanglements because by enjoying the material world a conditioned soul becomes more and more entangled by incurring debts for his present enjoyment. Unfortunately, a conditioned soul considers property for which he is in debt to be his own, and he is very busy acquiring such property. But a devotee considers such property not real property but simply an entanglement in the material world. If Lord Kṛṣṇa is very much pleased with a devotee, He takes away his material property, as stated in the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.88.8), where Lord Kṛṣṇa says, yasyāham anugṛhṇāmi hariṣye tad-dhanaṁ śanaiḥ. "To show special favor to a devotee, I take away all his material property." Similarly, Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says:

dhana mora nityānanda, rādhā-kṛṣṇa-śrīcaraṇa sei mora prāṇadhana

"My real riches are Nityānanda Prabhu and the lotus feet of Śrī Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa." He further prays, "O Lord, kindly give me this opulence. I do not want anything but Your lotus feet as my property." Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has sung in many places that his real property is the lotus feet of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. Unfortunately we are interested in unreal property and are neglecting our real property (adhane yatana kari' dhana teyāginu).

Sometimes smārtas consider Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī a śūdra. But Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī here especially mentions svarūpa-rūpa-raghunāthadāsa. Therefore one who considers the lotus feet of Raghunātha dāsa to be transcendental to all divisions of the caste system enjoys the riches of actual spiritual bliss.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līla, Thirteenth Chapter, describing the advent of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

18.4.14 Chapter 14

Lord Caitanya's Childhood Pastimes

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has given a summary of this chapter in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: "In this Fourteenth Chapter of the Caitanya-caritāmṛta there is a description of how Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu enjoyed His childhood pastimes-crawling, crying, eating dirt and giving intelligence to His mother, favoring a brāhmaṇa guest, riding on the shoulders of two thieves and misleading them to His own house, and, on the plea of being diseased, taking prasāda in the house of Hiraṇya and Jagadīśa on the Ekādaśī day. The chapter further describes how He displayed Himself as a naughty boy, how when His mother fainted He brought a coconut to her on His head, how He joked with girls of the same age on the banks of the Ganges, how He accepted worshipful paraphernalia from Śrīmatī Lakṣmīdevī, how He sat down in a garbage pit wherefrom He instructed transcendental knowledge, how He left the pit on the order of His mother, and how He dealt with His father with full affection."

TEXT 1

kathañcana smṛte yasmin duṣkaraṁ sukaraṁ bhavet vismṛte viparītaṁ syāt śrī-caitanyaṁ namāmi tam

SYNONYMS

kathañcana-somehow or other; smṛte-by remembering; yasmin-whom; duṣkaram-difficult things; sukaram-easy; bhavet-become; vismṛte-by forgetting Him; viparītam-just the opposite; syāt-become; śrī-caitanyam-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; namāmi-I offer my respectful obeisances; tam-unto Him.

TRANSLATION

Things that are very difficult to do become easy to execute if one somehow or other simply remembers Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. But if one does not remember Him, even easy things become very difficult. To this Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu I offer my respectful obeisances.

PURPORT

In his book Caitanya-candrāmṛta Śrīla Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī says: "One who receives a little favor from the Lord becomes so exalted that he does not care even for liberation, which is sought after by many great scholars and philosophers. Similarly, a devotee of Lord Caitanya considers residence in the heavenly planets a will-o'-the-wisp. He surpasses the perfection of mystic yoga power because for him the senses are like snakes with broken fangs." A snake is a very fearful and dangerous animal because of his poison fangs, but if these fangs are broken the appearance of a snake is no cause for fear. The yoga principles are meant to control the senses, but there is no scope for the senses of one engaged in the service of the Lord to be dangerous like snakes. These are the gifts of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

The Hari-bhakti-vilāsa confirms that difficult things become easy to understand if one remembers Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and easy things become very difficult to understand if one forgets Him. We actually see that even those who are very great scientists in the eyes of the general public cannot understand the very simple idea that life comes from life because they do not have the mercy of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. They defend the false understanding that life comes from matter, although they cannot prove that this is a fact. Modern civilization, therefore, progressing on the basis of this false scientific theory, is simply creating problems to be solved by the so-called scientists.

The author of Caitanya-caritāmṛta takes shelter of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu to describe the pastimes of His appearance as a child because one cannot write such transcendental literature by mental speculation. One who writes about the Supreme Personality of Godhead must be especially favored by the Lord. Simply by academic qualifications it is not possible to write such literature.

jaya jaya śrī-caitanya, jaya nityānanda jayādvaitacandra, jaya gaura-bhakta-vṛnda

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya-all glories; śrī-caitanya-to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jaya-all glories; nityānanda-to Nityānanda Prabhu; jaya advaita-candra-all glories to Advaita Ācārya; jaya-all glories; gaura-bhakta-vṛnda-to all the devotees of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Nityānanda Prabhu, Advaita Prabhu and all the devotees of Lord Caitanya!

TEXT 3

prabhura kahila ei janmalīlā-sūtra yaśodā-nandana yaiche haila śacī-putra

SYNONYMS

prabhura-of the Lord; kahila-I have spoken; ei-thus; janma-līlā-pastimes of the birth; sūtra-in summary; yaśodā-nandana-the son of mother Yaśodā; yaiche-as much as; haila-became; śacī-putra-the son of mother Śacī.

TRANSLATION

I have thus described in brief the advent of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who appeared as the son of mother Śacī, exactly as Kṛṣṇa appeared as the son of mother Yaśodā.

PURPORT

Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura confirms this statement that now Lord Kṛṣṇa, the son of mother Yaśodā, has appeared again as Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, becoming the son of mother Śacī:

vrajendra-nandana yei, śacī-suta haila sei, balarāma hailo nitāi

"The son of Śacī is none other than the son of mother Yaśodā and Nanda Mahārāja, and Nityānanda Prabhu is the same Balarāma."

TEXT 4

saṅkṣepe kahila janmalīlā-anukrama ebe kahi bālyalīlā-sūtrera gaṇana saṅkṣepe-in brief; kahila-I have spoken; janma-līlā-the pastimes of birth; anukrama-chronological order; ebe-now; kahi-I shall speak; bālya-līlā-of the pastimes of childhood; sūtrera-of the sūtras; gaṇana-enumeration.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

I have already briefly spoken about the pastimes of His birth in chronological order. Now I shall give a synopsis of His childhood pastimes.

TEXT 5

vande caitanya-kṛṣṇasya bālya-līlāṁ mano-harām laukikīm api tām īśa-ceṣṭayā valitāntarām

SYNONYMS

vande-I worship; caitanya-kṛṣṇasya-of Lord Caitanya, who is Kṛṣṇa Himself; bālya-līlā-pastimes of childhood; manaḥ-harām-which are so beautiful; laukikīm-appearing ordinary; api-although; tām-those; īśa-ceṣṭayā-by manifestation of supreme authority; valita-antarām-quite fit although appearing differently.

TRANSLATION

Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto the childhood pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself. Although such pastimes appear exactly like those of an ordinary child, they should be understood as various pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

PURPORT

In the Bhagavad-gītā (9.11) this statement is confirmed as follows:

avajānanti māṁ mūḍhā mānuṣīṁ tanum āśritam paraṁ bhāvam ajānanto mama bhūta-maheśvaram

"Fools deride Me when I descend in the human form. They do not know My transcendental nature and My supreme dominion over all that be." To execute His pastimes, the Supreme Personality of Godhead appears on this planet or within this universe like an ordinary human being or human child, yet He maintains His superiority as the Supreme Lord. Lord Kṛṣṇa appeared as a human child, but His uncommon activities, even in His childhood-like the killing of the demon Pūtanā or lifting of Govardana Hill-were not the engagements of an ordinary child. Similarly, although the pastimes of Lord Caitanya, as they will be described in this chapter, appear like the activities of a small boy, they are uncommon pastimes impossible for an ordinary human child to execute.

TEXT 6

bālya-līlāya āge prabhura uttāna śayana pitā-mātāya dekhāila cihna caraṇa

SYNONYMS

bālya-līlāya-in His pastimes as a child; āge-first of all; prabhura-of the Lord; uttāna-turning the body; śayana-lying down; pitā-mātāya-unto the parents; dekhāila-showed; cihna-marks; caraṇa-of the lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

In His first childhood pastimes the Lord turned upside down while lying on His bed, and thus He showed His parents the marks of His lotus feet.

PURPORT

The word uttāna is also used to mean "lying down on the bed face upwards" or "lying down flat on the bed." In some readings the word is utthāna, which means "standing up." In His childhood pastimes the Lord tried to catch the wall and stand up, but as an ordinary child falls down, so the Lord also fell down and again took to lying on His bed.

TEXT 7

gṛhe dui jana dekhi laghupada-cihna tāhe śobhe dhvaja, vajra, śaṅkha, cakra, mīna

SYNONYMS

gṛhe-at home; dui jana-the father and mother; dekhi-seeing; laghu-pada-cihna-the marks of the lotus feet, which were very small at that time; tāhe-in those; śobhe-which were beautifully visible; dhvaja-flag; vajra-thunderbolts; śaṅkha-conchshell; cakra-disc; mīna-fish.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord tried to walk, in His small footprints the specific marks of Lord Viṣṇu were visible, namely, the flag, thunderbolt, conchshell, disc and fish.

TEXT 8

dekhiyā doṅhāra citte janmila vismaya kāra pada-cihna ghare, nā pāya niścaya dekhiyā-seeing all these marks; doṅhāra-of the parents, Śacīmātā and Jagannātha Miśra; citte-in their hearts; janmila-there was; vismaya-wonder; kāra-whose; pada-cihna-footprints; ghare-at home; nā-does not; pāya-get; niścaya-certainty.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Seeing all these marks, neither His father nor His mother could understand whose footprints they were. Thus struck with wonder, they could not understand how those marks could be possible in their home.

TEXT 9

miśra kahe,–bālagopāla āche śilā-saṅge teṅho mūrti hañā ghare khele, jāni, raṅge miśra kahe-Jagannātha Miśra said; bāla-gopāla-Lord Kṛṣṇa as a child; āche-there is; śilā-saṅge-along with the śālagrāma-śilā; teṅho-He; mūrti hañā-taking His transcendental form; ghare-within the room; khele-plays; jāni-I understand; raṅge-in curiosity.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Jagannātha Miśra said, "Certainly child Kṛṣṇa is with the śālagrāma-śilā. Taking His childhood form, He is playing within the room."

PURPORT

When the form of the Lord is carved from wood, stone or any other element, it is to be understood that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is there. Even logically we can understand that all material elements are expansions of the energy of the Lord. Since the energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is nondifferent from His personal body, the Lord is always present in His energy, and He manifests Himself on account of the ardent desire of a devotee. Since the Lord is supremely powerful, it is logical that He can manifest Himself in His energy. Deity worship or worship of the śālagrāma-śilā is not idol worship. The Deity of the Lord in the house of a pure devotee can act exactly as He can in His original transcendental personality.

TEXT 10

sei kṣaṇe jāgi' nimāi karaye krandana aṅke lañā śacī tāṅre piyāila stana

SYNONYMS

sei kṣaṇe-immediately; jāgi'-awakening; nimāi-the Lord of the name Nimāi; karaye-does; krandana-crying; aṅke-on the lap; lañā-taking; śacī-mother Śacī; tāṅre-Him; piyāila-caused to suck; stana-breast.

TRANSLATION

While mother Śacī and Jagannātha Miśra were talking, the child Nimāi woke up and began to cry, and mother Śacī took Him on her lap and allowed Him to suck her breast.

TEXT 11

stana piyāite putrera caraṇa dekhila sei cihna pāye dekhi' miśre bolāila stana-her breast; piyāite-while letting Him suck; putrera-of her son; caraṇa-lotus feet; dekhila-observed; sei-those very; cihna-marks; pāye-on the sole; dekhi'-seeing; miśre-Jagannātha Miśra; bolāila-called for.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

While mother Śacī was feeding the child from her breast, she saw on His lotus feet all the marks that were visible on the floor of the room, and she called for Jagannātha Miśra.

TEXT 12

dekhiyā miśrera ha-ila ānandita mati gupte bolāila nīlāmbara cakravartī dekhiyā-by seeing; miśrera-of Jagannātha Miśra; ha-ila-became; ānandita-satisfied; mati-intelligence; gupte-privately; bolāila-called for; nīlāmbara cakravartī-of the name Nīlāmbara Cakravarti.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Jagannātha Miśra saw the wonderful marks on the sole of his son, he became very joyful and privately called for Nīlāmbara Cakravartī.

TEXT 13

cihna dekhi' cakravartī balena hāsiyā lagna gaṇi' pūrve āmi rākhiyāchi likhiyā

SYNONYMS

cihna dekhi'-by seeing the marks; cakravartī-Nīlāmbara Cakravartī; balena-says; hāsiyā-smiling; lagna gaṇi'-by astrological calculation of the birth moment; pūrve-formerly; āmi-I; rākhiyāchi-have kept; likhiyā-after writing all these things.

TRANSLATION

When Nīlāmbara Cakravartī saw those marks, he smilingly said, "Formerly I ascertained all this by astrological calculation and noted it in writing.

TEXT 14

ei śiśu aṅge dekhi se saba lakṣaṇa

SYNONYMS

batriśa-thirty-two; lakṣaṇa-symptoms; mahā-puruṣa-great personality; bhūṣaṇa-ornament; ei śiśu-this child; aṅge-on the body; dekhi-I see; se-those; saba-all; lakṣaṇa-symptoms.

TRANSLATION

"There are thirty-two bodily marks that symptomize a great personality, and I see all those marks on the body of this child.

TEXT 15

sapta-raktaḥ ṣaḍ-unnataḥ
tri-hrasva-pṛthu-gambhīro dvātriṁśal-lakṣaṇo mahān

SYNONYMS

pañca-dīrghaḥ-five large; pañca-sūkṣmaḥ-five fine; sapta-raktaḥ-seven reddish; ṣaṭ-unnataḥ-six raised; tri-hrasva-three small; pṛthu-three broad; gambhīraḥ-three grave; dvā-triṁśat-in this way thirty-two; lakṣaṇaḥ-symptoms; mahān-of a great personality.

TRANSLATION

" 'There are thirty-two bodily symptoms of a great personality: five of his bodily parts are large, five fine, seven reddish, six raised, three small, three broad and three grave.'

PURPORT

The five large parts are the nose, arms, chin, eyes and knees. The five fine parts are the skin, fingertips, teeth, hair on the body and hair on the head. The seven reddish parts are the eyes, soles, palms, palate, nails, and upper and lower lips. The six raised parts are the chest, shoulders, nails, nose, waist and mouth. The three small parts are the neck, thighs and male organ. The three broad parts are the waist, forehead and chest. The three grave parts are the navel, voice and existence. Altogether these are the thirty-two symptoms of a great personality. This is a quotation from the Sāmudrika.

TEXT 16

nārāyaṇera cihna-yukta śrī-hasta caraṇa ei śiśu sarva loke karibe tāraṇa nārāyaṇera-of Lord Nārāyaṇa; cihna-yukta-with positive marks; śrī-hasta caraṇa-the palm and the sole; ei-this; śiśu-baby; sarva loke-all the three worlds; karibe-will; tāraṇa-deliver.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"This baby has all the symptoms of Lord Nārāyaṇa on His palms and soles. He will be able to deliver all the three worlds.

TEXT 17

ei ta' karibe vaiṣṇava-dharmera pracāra ihā haite habe dui kulera nistāra ei ta'-this child; karibe-will do; vaiṣṇava-of Vaiṣṇavism, or devotional service; dharmera-of the religion; pracāra-preaching; ihā haite-from this; habe-there will be; dui-two; kulera-dynasties; nistāra-deliverance.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"This child will preach the Vaiṣṇava cult and deliver both His maternal and paternal families.

PURPORT

Only Nārāyaṇa Himself or His bona fide representative can preach the cult of Vaiṣṇavism, or devotional service. When a Vaiṣṇava is born, he delivers both his maternal and paternal families simultaneously.

TEXT 18

mahotsava kara, saba bolāha brāhmaṇa āji dina bhāla,–kariba nāma-karaṇa

SYNONYMS

mahotsava-a festival; kara-observe; saba-all; bolāha-call; brāhmaṇa-the brāhmaṇas; āji-today; dina-day; bhāla-auspicious; kariba-I shall perform; nāma-karaṇa-the name-giving ceremony.

TRANSLATION

"I propose to perform a name-giving ceremony. We should observe a festival and call for the brāhmaṇas because today is very auspicious.

PURPORT

It is a Vedic principle to observe a festival in connection with Nārāyaṇa and brāhmaṇas. Giving a child a particular name is among the purificatory processes known as daśa-vidha-saṁskāra, and on the day of such a ceremony one should observe a festival by worshiping Nārāyaṇa and distributing prasāda, chiefly among the brāhmaṇas.

When Nīlāmbara Cakravartī, Śacīmātā and Jagannātha Miśra understood from the marks on the Lord's lotus feet that the child Nimāi was not an ordinary child but an incarnation of Nārāyaṇa, they decided that on that very same day, which was very auspicious, they should observe a festival for His name-giving ceremony. In this connection we can particularly see how an incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is ascertained by His bodily symptoms, His activities and the prediction of the śāstras. By factual evidence a person can be accepted as an incarnation of God, not whimsically or by the votes of rascals and fools. There have been many imitation incarnations in Bengal since the appearance of Lord Caitanya, but any impartial devotee or learned man can understand that Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was accepted as an incarnation of Kṛṣṇa not on the basis of popular votes but by evidence from the śāstras and bona fide scholars. It was not ordinary men who accepted Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In the beginning His identity was ascertained by learned scholars like Nīlāmbara Cakravartī, and later all His activities were confirmed by the six Gosvāmīs, especially Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī and Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, and many other learned scholars, with evidence from the śāstra. An incarnation of God is such from the very beginning of His life. It is not that by performing meditation one can become an incarnation of God all of a sudden. Such false incarnations are meant for fools and rascals, not sane men.

TEXT 19

sarva-lokera karibe ihaṅ dhāraṇa, poṣaṇa
'viśvambhara' nāma ihāra,–ei ta' kāraṇa

SYNONYMS

sarva-lokera-of all people; karibe-will do; ihaṅ-this child; dhāraṇa-protection; poṣaṇa-maintenance; viśvambhara-the name Viśvambhara; nāma-name; ihāra-His; ei-this; ta'-certainly; kāraṇa-the reason.

TRANSLATION

"In the future this child will protect and maintain all the world. For this reason He is to be called Viśvambhara."

PURPORT

The Caitanya-bhāgavata also confirms that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, by His birth, has made the whole world peaceful, as in the past Nārāyaṇa protected this earth in His incarnation as Varāha. Because of His protecting and maintaining this world in the present Kali-yuga, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is Viśvambhara, which refers to one who feeds the entire world. The movement inaugurated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu when He was present five hundred years ago is again being propagated all over the world, and factually we are seeing its practical results. People are being saved, protected and maintained by this Hare Kṛṣṇa movement. Thousands of followers, especially Western youths, are taking part in this Hare Kṛṣṇa movement, and how safe and happy they feel can be understood from the expressions of gratitude in their hundreds and thousands of letters. The name Viśvambhara is also mentioned in the Atharva-veda-saṁhitā (3.3.16.5): viśvambhara viśvena mā bharasā pāhi svāhā.

TEXT 20

śuni' śacī-miśrera mane ānanda bāḍila brāhmaṇa-brāhmaṇī āni' mahotsava kaila

SYNONYMS

śuni'-hearing this; śacī-of mother Śacī; miśrera-and of Jagannātha Miśra; mane-within the minds; ānanda-pleasure; bāḍila-increased; brāhmaṇa-the brāhmaṇas; brāhmaṇī-and their wives; āni'-inviting them; mahotsava-a festival; kaila-observed.

TRANSLATION

After hearing Nīlāmbara Cakravartī's prediction, Śacīmātā and Jagannātha Miśra observed the name-giving festival in great joy, inviting all the brāhmaṇas and their wives.

PURPORT

It is the Vedic system to observe all kinds of festivals, including birthday festivals, marriage festivals, name-giving festivals and festivals marking the beginning of education, by especially inviting brāhmaṇas. In every festival the brāhmaṇas are to be fed first, and when the brāhmaṇas are pleased they bless the festival by chanting Vedic mantras or the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

TEXT 21

tabe kata dine prabhura jānu-caṅkramaṇa nānā camatkāra tathā karāila darśana

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; kata-some; dine-days; prabhura-of the Lord; jānu-knees; caṅkramaṇa-the crawling; nānā-various; camatkāra-wonderful; tathā-also; karāila-caused; darśana-the sight.

TRANSLATION

After some days the Lord began to crawl on His knees, and He caused various wonderful things to be seen.

PURPORT

The Caitanya-bhāgavata describes that one day while the Lord was crawling upon His knees, the bells on His waist ringing very sweetly, a snake came out to crawl in the yard of the Lord, who captured the snake like a curious child. Immediately the snake coiled over Him. The Lord as a child then rested on the snake, and after some time the snake went away, leaving aside the Lord.

SYNONYMS

krandanera-of crying; chale-on the pretense of; balāila-caused to speak; hari-nāma-the holy name of the Lord; nārī-ladies; saba-all; 'hari' bale-chant the holy name of the Lord; hāse-laughs; gaura-dhāma-Lord Śrī Caitanya as a child.

TRANSLATION

The Lord caused all the ladies to chant the holy names of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra on the plea of His crying, and while they chanted the Lord would smile.

PURPORT

In the Caitanya-bhāgavata this pastime is described as follows: "The Lord, with His beautiful eyes, would cry, but He would stop immediately upon hearing the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. When the ladies, understanding the fun of the Lord, discovered that He would cry and then stop upon hearing the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, they all took it as a clue to chant Hare Kṛṣṇa as soon as the Lord cried. Thus it became a regular function. The Lord would cry, and the ladies would begin chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, clapping their hands. In this way all the ladies of the neighboring houses would assemble in the home of Śacīmātā to join in the saṅkīrtana movement twenty-four hours a day. As long as the ladies continued to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, the Lord would not cry but very pleasingly smile upon them."

TRANSLATION

”This body is a transformation of dirt, and the eatables are also a transformation of dirt. Please reflect upon this. You are blaming Me without consideration. What can I say?”

PURPORT

This is an explanation of the Māyāvāda philosophy, which takes everything to be one. The necessities of the body, namely, eating, sleeping, mating and defending, are all unnecessary in spiritual life. When one is elevated to the spiritual platform there are no more bodily necessities, and in activities pertaining to the bodily necessities there are no spiritual considerations. In other words, the more we eat, sleep, have sex and try to defend ourselves, the more we engage in material activities. Unfortunately, Māyāvādī philosophers consider devotional activities to be bodily activities. They cannot understand the simple explanation in Bhagavad-gītā (14.26):

māṁ ca yo 'vyabhicāreṇa
bhakti-yogena sevate
sa guṇān samatītyaitān
brahma-bhūyāya kalpate

”Anyone who engages in spiritual devotional service without motivation, rendering such service for the satisfaction of the Lord, is elevated immediately to the spiritual platform, and all his activities are spiritual.” Brahma-bhūyāya refers to Brahman (spiritual) activities. Although Māyāvādī philosophers are very eager to merge into the Brahman effulgence, they have no Brahman activities. To a certain extent they recommend Brahman activities, which for them means engagement in studying the Vedānta and Sāṅkhya philosophies, but their interpretations are but dry speculation. Lacking the varieties of spiritual activity, they cannot stay for long on that platform of simply studying Vedānta or Sāṅkhya philosophy.

Life is meant for varieties of enjoyment. The living entity is by nature full of an enjoying spirit, as stated in the Vedānta-sūtra (1.1.12): ānanda-mayo 'bhyāsāt. In devotional service the activities are variegated and full of enjoyment. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā (9.2), all devotional activities are easy to perform (su-sukhaṁ kartum) and they are eternal and spiritual (avyayam). Since Māyāvādī philosophers cannot understand this, they take it for granted that a devotee's activities (śravaṇaṁ kīrtanaṁ viṣṇoḥ smaraṇaṁ pāda-sevanam, etc.) are all material and are therefore māyā. They also consider Kṛṣṇa's advent in this universe and His activities to be māyā. Therefore, because they consider everything māyā, they are known as Māyāvādīs.

Actually, any activities performed favorably for the satisfaction of the Lord, under the direction of the spiritual master, are spiritual. But for a person to disregard the order of the spiritual master and act by concoction, accepting his nonsensical activities to be spiritual, is māyā. One must achieve the favor of the Supreme Personality of Godhead through the mercy of the spiritual master. Therefore one must first please the spiritual master, and if he is pleased, then we should understand that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is also pleased. But if the spiritual master is displeased by our actions, they are not spiritual. Śrīla Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura confirms this: yasya prasādād bhagavat-prasādo yasyāprasādān na gatiḥ kuto 'pi. Activities that please the spiritual master must be considered spiritual, and they should be accepted as satisfying to the Lord.

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as the supreme spiritual master, instructed His mother about the Māyāvāda philosophy. By saying that the body is dirt and eatables are also dirt, He implied that everything is māyā. This is Māyāvāda philosophy. The philosophy of the Māyāvādīs is defective because it maintains that everything is māyā but the nonsense they speak. While saying that everything is māyā, the Māyāvādī philosopher loses the opportunity of devotional service, and therefore his life is doomed. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore advised, māyāvādi-bhāṣya śunile haya sarva-nāśa (Cc. Madhya 6.169). If one accepts the Māyāvāda philosophy, his advancement is doomed forever.

SYNONYMS

antare-within herself; vismita-surprised; śacī-mother Śacī; balila-replied; tāhāre-unto Him; māṭi-dirt; khāite-to eat; jñāna-yoga-philosophical speculation; ke-who; śikhāla-taught; tore-You.

TRANSLATION

Astonished that the child was speaking Māyāvāda philosophy, mother Śacī replied, ”Who has taught You this philosophical speculation that justifies eating dirt?”

PURPORT

In the philosophical discourse between the mother and the son, when the son said that everything is one, as impersonalists say, the mother replied, ”If everything is one, why do people in general not eat dirt but eat the food grains produced from the dirt?”

TEXT 31

SYNONYMS

māṭira-of the dirt; vikāra-transformation; anna-food grains; khāile-by eating; deha-of the body; puṣṭi-nourishment; haya-becomes; māṭi-the dirt; khāile-by eating; roga-disease; haya-becomes; deha-the body; yāya-goes; kṣaya-to destruction.

TRANSLATION

Replying to the Māyāvāda idea of the child philosopher, mother Śacī said, ”My dear boy, if we eat earth transformed into grains, our body is nourished, and it becomes strong. But if we eat dirt in its crude state, the body becomes diseased instead of nourished, and thus it is destroyed.

TEXT 32

māṭira vikāra ghaṭe pāni bhari’ āni māṭi-piṇḍe dhari yabe, śoṣi’ yāya pāni”

SYNONYMS

māṭira-of the dirt; vikāra-transformation; ghaṭe-in the waterpot; pāni-water; bhari’-filling; āni-I can bring; māṭi-of dirt; piṇḍe-on the lump; dhari-I hold; yabe-when; śoṣi’-soaking; yāya-goes; pāni-the water.

TRANSLATION

”In a waterpot, which is a transformation of dirt, I can bring water very easily. But if I poured water on a lump of dirt, the lump would soak up the water, and my labor would be useless.”

PURPORT

This simple philosophy propounded by Śacīmātā, even though she is a woman, can defeat the Māyāvādī philosophers who speculate on oneness. The defect of Māyāvāda philosophy is that it does not accept the variety that is useful for practical purposes. Śacīmātā gave the example that although both the lump of dirt and the earthen pot are basically one, for practical purposes the waterpot is useful whereas the lump of dirt is useless. Sometimes scientists argue that matter and spirit are one, with no difference between them. Factually, in a higher sense, there is no difference between matter and spirit, but one should have practical knowledge that matter, being an inferior state, is useless for our spiritual, blissful life, whereas spirit, being a finer state of existence, is full of bliss. In this connection the Bhāgavatam gives the example that dirt and fire are practically one and the same. From the earth grow trees, and from their wood come fire and smoke. Nevertheless, for heat we can utilize the fire but not the earth, smoke or wood. Therefore, for the ultimate realization of the goal of life, we are concerned with the fire of the spirit, but not the dull wood or earth of matter.

SYNONYMS

ātma-Himself; lukāite-to hide; prabhu-the Lord; balilā-replied; tāṅhāre-unto Śacīmātā; āge-in the beginning; kena-why; ihā-this; mātā-My dear mother; nā śikhāle-you didn’t teach; more-unto Me.

TRANSLATION

The Lord replied to His mother, ”Why did you conceal self-realization by not teaching Me this practical philosophy in the beginning?

PURPORT

If one is taught from the beginning of life the Vaiṣṇava philosophy of duality or variety, the monistic philosophy will not very much bother him. In reality, everything is an emanation from the supreme source (janmādy asya yataḥ). The original energy is exhibited in varieties, exactly like the sunshine, the original energy emanating from the sun, which acts as light and heat in variety. One cannot say that light is heat and heat is light, yet one cannot separate one from the other. Therefore Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s philosophy is acintya-bhedābheda, inconceivable nonseparation and distinction. Although there is an affinity between the two physical manifestations light and heat, there is a difference between them. Similarly, although the whole cosmic manifestation is the Lord’s energy, the energy is nevertheless exhibited in varieties of manifestations.

SYNONYMS

atithi-guest; viprera-of a brāhmaṇa; anna-food; khāila-ate; tina-bāra-thrice; pāche-afterwards; gupte-in privacy; sei-that; vipre-unto the brāhmaṇa; karila-made; nistāra-deliverance.

TRANSLATION

On one occasion the Lord ate the food of a brāhmaṇa guest three times, and later, in confidence, the Lord delivered that brāhmaṇa from material engagement.

PURPORT

The story of the deliverance of this brāhmaṇa is as follows. One brāhmaṇa who was touring all over the country, traveling from one place of pilgrimage to another, reached Navadvīpa and became a guest in the house of Jagannātha Miśra. Jagannātha Miśra gave him all ingredients for cooking, and the brāhmaṇa prepared his food. When the brāhmaṇa was offering the food to Lord Viṣṇu in meditation, the child Nimāi came before him and began to eat it, and because of this the brāhmaṇa thought the whole offering spoiled. Therefore by the request of Jagannātha Miśra he cooked for a second time, but when he was meditating the child again came before him and began to eat the food, again spoiling the offering. By the request of Jagannātha Miśra the brāhmaṇa cooked for a third time, but for a third time the Lord came before him and began to eat the food, although the child had been locked within a room and everyone was sleeping because it was late at night. Thus, thinking that on that day Lord Viṣṇu was not willing to accept his food and that he was therefore ordained to fast, the brāhmaṇa became greatly agitated and cried aloud, hāya hāya: "What has been done! What has been done!". When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu saw the brāhmaṇa in that agitated state, He told him, "Formerly I was the son of mother Yaśodā. At that time you also became a guest in the house of Nanda Mahārāja, and I disturbed you in this way. I am very much pleased by your devotion. Therefore I am eating the food you have prepared." Understanding the favor offered to him by the Lord, the brāhmaṇa was greatly pleased, and he was overwhelmed with love of Kṛṣṇa. He was thankful to the Lord, for he felt himself greatly fortunate. Then the Lord asked the brāhmaṇa not to disclose the incident to anyone else. This is very elaborately explained in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, Chapter Three.

SYNONYMS

core-two thieves; lañā-taking; gela-went; prabhuke-the Lord; bāhire-outside; pāiyā-finding Him; tāra-their; skandhe-on the shoulders; caḍi'-rising; āilā-came back; tāre-them; bhulāiyā-misleading.

TRANSLATION

In His childhood the Lord was taken away by two thieves outside His home. The Lord, however, got up on the shoulders of the thieves, and while they were thinking they were safely carrying the child to rob His ornaments, the Lord misled them, and thus instead of going to their own home the thieves came back to the home of Jagannātha Miśra.

PURPORT

In His childhood the Lord was profusely decorated with gold ornaments. Once upon a time He was playing outside His house, and two thieves passing on the street saw the opportunity to rob the Lord and therefore took Him on their shoulders, pleasing Him by offering Him some sweetmeats. The thieves thought they would carry the child to the forest and then kill Him and take away the ornaments. The Lord, however, expanded His illusory energy upon the thieves, so much so that instead of carrying Him to the forest they came right back in front of His house. When they came before His house they became afraid because everyone from the house of Jagannātha Miśra and all the inhabitants of that quarter were busy searching for the child. Therefore the thieves, thinking it dangerous to remain, went away and left Him. The child was brought within the house and given to mother Śacī, who was in great anxiety, and she became satisfied. This incident is also very elaborately explained in the Ādi-līlā of Caitanya-bhāgavata, Third Chapter.

viṣṇu-naivedya khāila ekādaśī-dine vyādhi-chale-on the plea of being diseased; jagadīśa-hiraṇya-of the names Jagadīśa and Hiraṇya; sadane-in the house of; viṣṇu-naivedya-food offered to Lord Viṣṇu; khāila-ate; ekādaśī-of Ekādaśī; dine-on the day.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Pretending to be sick, the Lord asked some food from the house of Hiraṇya and Jagadīśa on the Ekādaśī day.

PURPORT

The Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, Chapter Six, fully describes the Lord's accepting viṣṇu-prasāda on the Ekādaśī day at the house of Jagadīśa and Hiraṇya. Regular prasāda is offered to Lord Viṣṇu on Ekādaśī because, while fasting is recommended for devotees on Ekādaśī, it is not recommended for Lord Viṣṇu. Once on Ekādaśī in the house of Jagadīśa and Hiraṇya Paṇḍita there were arrangements for preparing special prasāda for Lord Viṣṇu, and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked His father to go there to ask for the viṣṇu-prasāda because He was feeling sick. The house of Jagadīśa and Hiraṇya Paṇḍita was situated about two miles from the house of Jagannātha Miśra. Therefore when Jagannātha Miśra, on the request of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, came to ask Jagadīśa and Hiraṇya for the prasāda, they were a little astonished. How could the boy understand that special prasāda was being prepared for Lord Viṣṇu? They immediately concluded that the boy Nimāi must have supernatural mystic power. Otherwise how could He understand that they were preparing special prasāda? Therefore they immediately sent the food to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu through His father, Jagannātha Miśra. Nimāi was feeling sick, but immediately after eating the viṣṇu-prasāda He was cured, and He also distributed the prasāda among His playmates.

TRANSLATION

All the children lodged complaints with Śacīmātā about the Lord's fighting with them and stealing from the neighbors' houses. Therefore sometimes she used to chastise or rebuke her son.

TEXT 42

"kene curi kara, kene māraha śiśure kene para-ghare yāha, kibā nāhi ghare"

SYNONYMS

kene curi kara-why do You steal; kene māraha śiśure-why do You beat other children; kene-why; para-ghare-in others' houses; yāha-You go; kibā-what; nāhi-is not there; ghare-in Your own house.

TRANSLATION

Śacīmātā said, "Why do You steal others' things? Why do You beat the other children? And why do You go inside others' houses? What do You not have in Your own house?"

PURPORT

According to the Vedānta-sūtra (janmādy asya yataḥ), since creation, maintenance and annihilation exist in the Supreme Absolute, whatever we find within this material world is already in the spiritual world. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa Himself. How is He stealing, and how is He fighting? It is not as a thief or an enemy but as a friend in a loving condition. He steals as a child not because He is in want but out of a natural instinct. In this material world also, small children, without enmity or bad will, sometimes go to a neighboring house and steal, and sometimes they fight. Kṛṣṇa also, like other children, did all these things in His childhood. Without the existence of the stealing propensity and fighting propensity in the spiritual world, they cannot exist here in this material world. The difference between the material and spiritual worlds is that stealing in the spiritual world is done in friendship and love, whereas fighting and stealing within this material world are executed on the basis of enmity and envy. Therefore we should understand that in the spiritual world all these activities exist, but there is no inebriety, whereas in the material world all activities are full of miserable conditions.

TRANSLATION

Then Śacīmātā would take her son on her lap and pacify Him, and the Lord would be very much ashamed, admitting His own faults.

PURPORT

There is a nice description of the faults of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in His childhood in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, Chapter Three, where it is said that as a child the Lord used to steal all kinds of eatables from the houses of neighboring friends. In some houses He would steal milk and drink it, and in others He would steal and eat prepared rice. Sometimes He would break cooking pots. If there were nothing to eat but there were small babies, the Lord would tease the babies and make them cry. Sometimes a neighbor would complain to Śacīmātā, "My child is very small, but your child puts water in his ears and makes him cry."

TRANSLATION

Sometimes the Lord would go with other children to bathe in the Ganges, and the neighboring girls would also come there to worship various demigods.

PURPORT

According to the Vedic system, when small girls ten or twelve years old would go to the bank of the Ganges to take their bath, they would especially worship Lord Śiva with prayers to get good husbands in the future. They especially wanted to get a husband like Lord Śiva because Lord Śiva is very peaceful and at the same time most powerful. Formerly, therefore, small girls in Hindu families would worship Lord Śiva, especially in the month of Vaiśākha (April-May). To take a bath in the Ganges is a great pleasure for everyone, not only for adults but for children also.

kanyāre kahe-addressing the girls, the Lord would say; āmā pūja-"Worship Me"; āmi-I; diba-shall give; vara-nice husband; gaṅgā-the Ganges; durgā-Goddess Durgā; dāsī-maidservants; mora-My; maheśa-Lord Śiva; kiṅkara-servant.

TRANSLATION

Addressing the girls, the Lord would say, "Worship Me, and I shall give you good husbands or good benedictions. The Ganges and Goddess Durgā are My maidservants. What to speak of other demigods, even Lord Śiva is My servant."

PURPORT

There is a misconception about the Hindu religion among people who profess other religions, such as Christians and Muslims, who say that in the Hindu religion there are many Gods. Actually that is not a fact. God is one, but there are many other powerful living entities who are in charge of different departments of administration. They are called demigods. All the demigods are servants who carry out the orders of the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu disclosed this fact in His childhood. Out of ignorance, sometimes people worship the demigods to receive some particular boon, but actually, one who becomes a devotee and worshiper of the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not need to go to the demigods for any benediction because he obtains everything by the grace of the Supreme Lord. The Bhagavad-gītā (7.20, 28) therefore condemns such demigod worship:

kāmais tais tair hṛta-jñānāḥ prapadyante 'nya-devatāḥ taṁ taṁ niyamam āsthāya prakṛtyā niyatāḥ svayā

"Only persons whose intelligence is lost and who are mad with lusty desires worship the demigods and follow the particular rules and regulations of worship according to their own natures."

yeṣāṁ tv anta-gataṁ pāpaṁ janānāṁ puṇya-karmaṇām
te dvandva-moha-nirmuktā
bhajante māṁ dṛḍha-vratāḥ

"But persons who are freed from all sinful activities and the duality of delusion engage themselves in the worship of the Supreme Personality of Godhead with determination." Only the less intelligent worship the demigods for their various purposes. The most intelligent worship only the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa.

Sometimes we, the members of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, are accused of not approving of the worship of demigods. But how can we approve of this when it is condemned by Lord Caitanya and Lord Kṛṣṇa? How can we allow people to become foolish and hṛta-jñāna, bereft of intelligence? Our propaganda is simply meant to enable intelligent people to understand the distinction between matter and spirit and understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the whole spiritual identity. That is our mission. How could we mislead people into worshiping so-called gods in material bodies within this material world?

Our position of not allowing worship of the many hundreds of demigods is confirmed by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu even in His childhood. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has sung in this connection:

anya devāśraya nāi, tomāre kahinu bhāi, ei bhakti parama karaṇa

"To become a staunch, pure devotee of the Supreme Personality of Godhead without deviation [ananya-bhāk], one should not divert his attention to the worship of the demigods. Such control is a symptom of pure devotional service."

TEXT 51

āpani candana pari' parena phula-mālā naivedya kāḍiyā khā'na–sandeśa, cāla, kalā

SYNONYMS

āpani-Himself; candana-pulp of sandalwood; pari'-smearing over the body; parena-takes; phula-mālā-the flower garlands; naivedya-offering of food; kādiyā-snatching; khā'na-begins to eat; sandeśa-the sweetmeats; cāla-rice; kalā-bananas.

TRANSLATION

Without the permission of the girls, the Lord would take the sandalwood pulp and smear it on His own body, put the flower garlands on His neck, and snatch and eat all the offerings of sweetmeats, rice and bananas.

PURPORT

According to the system of worship, when something is offered to deities outside one's home, it is generally not cooked food but raw rice, bananas and sweetmeats. Out of His causeless mercy, the Lord would snatch the offerings from the girls and eat them, admonishing the girls not to worship the demigods but to worship Him. This worship of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is recommended in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.32):

kṛṣṇa-varṇaṁ tviṣākṛṣnaṁ sāṅgopāṅgāstra-pārṣadam yajñaiḥ saṅkīrtana-prāyair yajanti hi su-medhasaḥ

"One should worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead who appears in this Age of Kali with His associates as the Pañca-tattva: the Lord Himself and His associates Nityānanda Prabhu, Śrī Advaita Prabhu, Śrī Gadādhara Prabhu and Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura. In this age an intelligent person worships the Pañca-tattva by the method of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and, if possible, distributing prasāda." Our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is introducing this bona fide method of worship in the Western world. Its members are going from village to village and town to town with Deities of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, teaching people how to worship the Lord by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, offering prasāda and distributing prasāda to people in general.

TEXT 52

krodhe kanyāgaṇa kahe–śuna, he nimāñi grāma-sambandhe hao tumi āmā sabāra bhāi

SYNONYMS

krodhe-in anger; kanyā-gaṇa-all the girls; kahe-said; śuna-hear; he-O; nimāñi-of the name Nimāi; grāma-village; sambandhe-in relationship; hao-are; tumi-You; āmā-of us; sabāra-everyone; bhāi-the brother.

TRANSLATION

All the girls became very angry at the Lord for this behavior. "Dear Nimāi," they told Him, "You are just like our brother in our village relationship.

TEXT 53

āmā sabākāra pakṣe ihā karite nā yuyāya nā laha devatā sajja, nā kara anyāya

SYNONYMS

āmā sabākāra-of all of us; pakṣe-on the behalf; ihā-this; karite-to do; nā-not; yuyāya-is suitable; nā-don't; laha-take; devatā-demigods; sajja-worshipable paraphernalia; nā-don't; kara-do; anyāya-mischief.

TRANSLATION

"Therefore it does not behoove You to act like this. Don't take our paraphernalia for worship of the demigods. Don't create a disturbance in this way."

TEXT 54

prabhu kahe,–"tomā sabāke dila ei vara tomā sabāra bhartā habe parama sundara

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord replied; tomā-you; sabāke-to all; dila-I give; ei-this; vara-benediction; tomā sabāra-of all of you; bhartā-the husbands; habe-will be; parama-very; sundara-beautiful.

TRANSLATION

The Lord replied, "My dear sisters, I give you the benediction that your husbands will be very handsome.

TEXT 55

paṇḍita, vidagdha, yuvā, dhana-dhānyavān sāta sāta putra habe–cirāyu, matimān"

SYNONYMS

paṇḍita-learned; vidagdha-expert and humorous; yuvā-young man; dhana-dhānyavān-very rich, possessing wealth and rice; sāta sāta-seven each; putra-sons; habe-you will have; cirāyu-born with a long life; matimān-and intelligent.

TRANSLATION

"They will be learned, clever and young and possess abundant wealth and rice. Not only that, but you will each have seven sons, who will all live long lives and be very intelligent."

PURPORT

Generally it is the ambition of a young girl to have a very handsome husband who is learned, clever, young and rich. According to the Vedic culture, one is rich if he possesses a large stock of food grains and a very large number of animals. Dhānyena dhanavān gavayā dhanavān: one is rich if he possesses food grains, cows and bulls. A girl also desires to have many children, especially sons (putra) who are very intelligent and long-lived. Now because society has deteriorated there is propaganda to have one or two children and kill the rest by contraceptive methods. But the natural ambition of a girl is to possess not only more than one child but at least half a dozen.

In exchange for the paraphernalia of worship He usurped for Himself, Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to bless the girls to fulfill all their ambitions and desires. One can easily become happy and obtain the material benefits of a good husband, wealth, food grains and a number of nice children by worshiping Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted sannyāsa at an early age, it is not necessary for His devotees to follow Him by also taking sannyāsa. One can stay a householder, but one must be a devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Then one will be happy, with all the material opulences of a good home, good children, good mate, good wealth and everything he desires. Therefore the śāstras advise, yajñaiḥ saṅkīrtana-prāyair yajanti hi su-medhasaḥ (Bhāg. 11.5.32). Every householder, therefore, who is actually intelligent should introduce the saṅkīrtana movement home to home and live peacefully in this life and go back to Godhead in the next.

vara śuni' kanyā-gaṇera antare santoṣa bāhire bhartsana kare kari' mithyā roṣa

SYNONYMS

vara śuni'-hearing the benediction; kanyā-gaṇera-of the girls; antare-within; santoṣa-very much satisfaction; bāhire-externally; bhartsana-rebuking; kare-they do; kari'-making; mithyā-false; roṣa-anger.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this benediction from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, all the girls were inwardly very happy, but externally, as is natural for girls, they rebuked the Lord under the pretense of anger.

PURPORT

This double-dealing is natural for girls. When they are satisfied within, they externally show dissatisfaction. Such feminine dealings are very palatable to boys who try to make friendships with them.

TEXT 57

kona kanyā palāila naivedya la-iyā tāre ḍāki' kahe prabhu sakrodha ha-iyā

SYNONYMS

kona kanyā-some of the girls; palāila-fled; naivedya-the plate of worshipable things; la-iyā-taking away; tāre-unto them; ḍāki'-calling; kahe-says; prabhu-the Lord; sakrodha-angry; ha-iyā-becoming.

TRANSLATION

When some of the girls fled, the Lord called them in anger and advised them as follows:

TEXT 58

yadi naivedya nā deha ha-iyā kṛpaṇī buḍā bhartā habe, āra cāri cāri satinī

SYNONYMS

yadi-if; naivedya-offering; nā-do not; deha-give Me; ha-iyā-becoming; kṛpaṇī-miser; buḍā-old; bhartā-husband; habe-will have; āra-and; cāri-four; cāri-four; satinī-co-wives.

TRANSLATION

"If you are miserly and do not give Me the offerings, every one of you will have an old husband with at least four co-wives."

PURPORT

In India in those days and even until fifty years ago, polygamy was freely allowed. Any man, especially of the higher castes-the brāhmaṇas, the vaiśyas and particularly the kṣatriyas-could marry more than one wife. In the Mahābhārata, or the old history of India, we see that kṣatriya kings especially used to marry many wives. According to Vedic civilization there was no restriction against this, and even a man more than fifty years old could marry. But to be married to a man who had many wives was not a very pleasing situation because the husband's love would be divided among his many wives. To punish the girls unwilling to offer Him the naivedya, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu apparently wanted to curse them to be married to men who had at least four wives.

The social structure allowing a man to marry more than one wife can be supported in this way. Generally in every society the female population is greater in number than the male population. Therefore if it is a principle in the society that all girls should be married, unless polygamy is allowed it will not be possible. If all the girls are not married there is a good chance of adultery, and a society in which adultery is allowed cannot be very peaceful or pure. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness society we have restricted illicit sex life. The practical difficulty is to find a husband for each and every girl. We are therefore in favor of polygamy, provided, of course, that the husband is able to maintain more than one wife.

ihā śuni' tā-sabāra mane ha-ila bhaya kona kichu jāne, kibā devāviṣṭa haya

SYNONYMS

ihā śuni'-hearing this; tā-sabāra-of all the girls; mane-in the minds; ha-ila-became; bhaya-fear; kona kichu-something uncommon; jāne-He knows; kibā-what if; deva-āviṣṭa-empowered by demigods; haya-He is.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this supposed curse by Lord Caitanya, the girls, considering that He might know something uncommon or be empowered by demigods, were afraid that His curse might be effective.

TEXT 60

āniyā naivedya tārā sammukhe dharila khāiyā naivedya tāre iṣṭa-vara dila

SYNONYMS

āniyā-bringing; naivedya-offering; tārā-all of them; sammukhe-in front; dharila-held; khāiyā-eating; naivedya-offering; tāre-them; iṣṭa-vara-desired benediction; dila-gave.

TRANSLATION

The girls then brought the offerings before the Lord, who ate them all and blessed the girls to their satisfaction.

TEXT 61

ei mata cāpalya saba lokere dekhāya duḥkha kāro mane nahe, sabe sukha pāya ei mata-in this way; cāpalya-cunning behavior; saba lokere-unto the people in general; dekhāya-exhibits; duḥkha-unhappiness; kāro-distress; mane-in the mind; nahe-there is no such thing; sabe-everyone; sukha-happiness; pāya-enjoys.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When this cunning behavior of the Lord with the girls became known to the people in general, it did not create misunderstandings among them. Rather, they enjoyed happiness in these dealings.

TEXT 62

eka-dina vallabhācārya-kanyā 'lakṣmī' nāma devatā pūjite āila kari gaṅgā-snāna

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; vallabhācārya-kanyā-the daughter of Vallabhācārya; lakṣmī-Lakṣmī; nāma-named; devatā-demigods; pūjite-to worship; āila-came; kari-taking; gaṅgā-snāna-bath in the Ganges.

TRANSLATION

One day a girl of the name Lakṣmī, the daughter of Vallabhācārya, came to the bank of the Ganges to take bath in the river and worship the demigods.

PURPORT

According to the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verse 45, Lakṣmī was formerly Jānakī, the wife of Lord Rāmacandra, and Rukmiṇī, the wife of Lord Kṛṣṇa in Dvārakā. The same goddess of fortune descended as Lakṣmī to become the wife of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 63

lakṣmī citte prīta pāila prabhura darśana

SYNONYMS

tāṅre dekhi'-seeing her; prabhura-of the Lord; ha-ila-there was; sa-her; abhilāsa-attachment; mana-mind; lakṣmī-Lakṣmī also; citte-in the heart; prīta-satisfaction; pāila-attained; prabhura-of the Lord; darśana-meeting.

TRANSLATION

Seeing Lakṣmīdevī, the Lord became attached to her, and Lakṣmī, upon seeing the Lord, felt great satisfaction within her mind.

TEXT 64

sāhajika prīti duṅhāra karila udaya bālya-bhāvācchanna tabhu ha-ila niścaya

SYNONYMS

sāhajika-natural; prīti-affection; duṅhāra-both of them; karila-made; udaya-appearance; bālya-childhood; bhāva-ācchanna-covered by emotion; tabhu-still; ha-ila-it so became; niścaya-fixed up.

TRANSLATION

Their natural love for one another awakened, and although it was covered by childhood emotions, it became apparent that they were mutually attracted.

PURPORT

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lakṣmīdevī are eternal husband and wife. Therefore it was quite natural for their dormant love to awaken when they saw each other. Their natural feelings were immediately awakened by their meeting.

TEXT 65

duṅhā dekhi' duṅhāra citte ha-ila ullāsa deva-pūjā chale kaila duṅhe parakāśa

SYNONYMS

duṅhā-both of them; dekhi'-seeing; duṅhāra-of both of them; citte-in the minds; ha-ila-there was; ullāsa-pleasure; deva-pūjā-worshiping the demigods; chale-on the plea of; kaila-there was; duṅhe-both of them; parakāśa-manifestation.

TRANSLATION

They both enjoyed natural pleasure in seeing each nother, and under the pretext of demigod worship they manifested their feelings.

TEXT 66

prabhu kahe, 'āmā' pūja, āmi maheśvara āmāre pūjile pābe abhīpsita vara' prabhu kahe-the Lord said; āmā' pūja-just worship Me; āmi-I am; maheśvara-the Supreme Lord; āmāre-unto Me; pūjile-if you worship; pābe-you will get; abhīpsita-desired; vara-benediction.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Lord told Lakṣmī, "Just worship Me, for I am the Supreme Lord. If you worship Me, certainly you will get the benediction you desire."

PURPORT

This is the same philosophy declared by Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself:

sarva-dharmān parityajya mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja ahaṁ tvāṁ sarva-pāpebhyo mokṣayiṣyāmi mā śucaḥ

"Abandon all varieties of religion and just surrender unto Me. I shall deliver you from all sinful reaction. Do not fear." (Bg. 18.66) People do not understand this. They are accustomed to flatter or worship many demigods, human beings, or even cats and dogs, but when requested to worship the Supreme Lord, they refuse. This is called illusion. Factually, if one worships the Supreme Lord there is no need to worship anyone else. For example, in a village of a limited area one may use different wells for different purposes, but when one goes to a river where there is water constantly flowing in waves, that water can serve all his purposes. When there is a river, one can take drinking water, wash his clothes, bathe and so on, for that water will serve all purposes. Similarly, if one worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, all his goals will be achieved. Kāmais tais tair hṛta-jñānāḥ prapadyante 'nya-devatāḥ: only men who have lost their intelligence worship the various demigods to fulfill their desires (Bg. 7.20).

TEXT 67

lakṣmī tāṅra aṅge dila puṣpa-candana mallikāra mālā diyā karila vandana

SYNONYMS

lakṣmī-Lakṣmīdevī; tāṅra-His; aṅge-on the body; dila-gave; puṣpa-flowers; candana-sandalwood pulp; mallikāra-of the flower of the name mallikā; mālā-garland; diyā-giving; karila-offered; vandana-prayers.

TRANSLATION

On hearing the order of the Supreme Lord, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Lakṣmī immediately worshiped Him, offering sandalwood pulp and flowers for His body, garlanding Him with mallikā flowers, and offering prayers.

TEXT 68

prabhu tāṅra pūjā pāñā hāsite lāgilā śloka paḍi' tāṅra bhāva aṅgīkāra kailā

SYNONYMS

prabhu-the Lord; tāṅra-her; pūjā-worship; pāñā-receiving; hāsite-to smile; lāgilā-began; śloka paḍi'-reciting one verse; tāṅra-her; bhāva-emotion; aṅgīkāra kailā-accepted.

TRANSLATION

Being worshiped by Lakṣmī, the Lord began to smile. He recited a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and thus accepted the emotion she expressed.

PURPORT

The verse quoted in this connection is the twenty-fifth verse of the Twenty-second Chapter, Tenth Canto, of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. The gopīs worshiped the goddess Durgā, or Kātyāyanī, but their inner desire was to get Lord Kṛṣṇa as their husband. Kṛṣṇa, as Paramātmā, could realize the ardent desire of the gopīs, and therefore He enjoyed the pastime of vastra-haraṇa. When the gopīs went to bathe in the river Yamunā, they left their garments on the land and dipped into the water completely naked. Taking this opportunity, Kṛṣṇa stole all their garments and sat down in the top of a tree with them, desiring to see the girls naked just to become their husband. The gopīs desired to have Kṛṣṇa as their husband, and since it is only before her husband that a woman can be naked, to fulfill their desire Lord Kṛṣṇa accepted their prayers by this pastime of stealing their garments. When the gopīs received their garments back from Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa recited this verse.

TEXT 69

saṅkalpo viditaḥ sādhvyo bhavatīnāṁ mad-arcanam mayānumoditaḥ so 'sau satyo bhavitum arhati

SYNONYMS

saṅkalpaḥ-desire; viditaḥ-has been understood; sādhvyaḥ-O all of you chaste ladies; bhavatīnām-of all of you; mat-arcanam-for worshiping Me; mayā-by Me; anumoditaḥ-accepted; saḥ-that; asau-that determination or desire; satyaḥ-successful; bhavitum-to become; arhati-deserves.

TRANSLATION

"My dear gopīs, I accept your desire to have Me as your husband and thus worship Me. I wish your desire to be fulfilled because it deserves to be so."

PURPORT

The gopīs, the girlfriends of Kṛṣṇa, were almost of the same age as He. Within their minds they desired that Kṛṣṇa be their husband, but because of feminine bashfulness they could not express their desire. Therefore later on, after stealing their garments, Kṛṣṇa informed them, "I immediately understood your desire and approved of it. Because I have now stolen your garments, you have presented yourselves before Me completely naked, which means that I have accepted all of you as My wives." Sometimes foolish rascals, not knowing the purpose of the Lord or the purpose of the gopīs, unnecessarily criticize from their own angle of vision, but the real purpose of vastra-haraṇa is expressed by the Lord in this verse.

TEXT 70

ei-mata līlā kari' duṅhe gelā ghare

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; līlā-pastimes; kari'-executing; duṅhe-both of them; gelā-returned; ghare-home; gambhīra-very grave; caitanya-līlā-the pastimes of Lord Caitanya; ke-who; bujhite-to understand; pāre-is able.

TRANSLATION

After thus expressing their feelings to each other, Lord Caitanya and Lakṣmī returned home. Who can understand the grave pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu?

TEXT 71

caitanya-cāpalya dekhi' preme sarva jana śacī-jagannāthe dekhi' dena olāhana

SYNONYMS

caitanya-Lord Caitanya; cāpalya-naughtiness; dekhi'-seeing; preme-out of love; sarva jana-all people; śacī-before Śacīmātā; jagannāthe-and Jagannātha Miśra; dekhi'-seeing them; dena-gave; olāhana-a little rebuke.

TRANSLATION

When the neighboring people saw the naughty behavior of Lord Caitanya, out of love for Him they lodged complaints with Śacīmātā and Jagannātha Miśra.

TEXT 72

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; śacī-devī-mother Śacī; putrere-unto the son; bhartsiyā-rebuking; dharibāre-to catch Him; gelā-went; putra-the son; gelā-went; palāiyā-running away.

TRANSLATION

One day mother Śacī went to catch her son, wanting to rebuke Him, but He fled from the spot.

TEXT 73

ucchiṣṭa-garte tyakta-hāṇḍīra upara basiyāchena sukhe prabhu deva-viśvambhara ucchiṣṭa-garte-in the pit where the remnants of food were thrown; tyakta-rejected; hāṇḍīra-pots; upara-upon; basiyāchena-sat down; sukhe-very pleasingly; prabhu-the Lord; deva-the Supreme God; viśvambhara-the maintainer of the universe.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Although He is the maintainer of the entire universe, once the Lord sat upon some rejected pots in the pit where the remnants of food were thrown, after the pots had been used for cooking.

PURPORT

Formerly it was the custom of brāhmaṇas to worship Lord Viṣṇu daily at home and cook food in new pots. This system is still going on in Jagannātha Purī. The food would be cooked in earthen pots, all fresh and new, and after cooking, the pots would be thrown away. By the side of the house there was generally a big pit where such pots were thrown. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu sat down on the pots very pleasingly, just to give His mother a lesson.

TEXT 74

śacī āsi' kahe,–kene aśuci chuṅilā

SYNONYMS

śacī āsi'-mother Śacī, coming there; kahe-said; kene-why; aśuci-untouchable; chuṅilā-You have touched; gaṅgā-snāna-bathing in the Ganges; kara-do; yāi'-going there; apavitra ha-ilā-You have become impure.

TRANSLATION

When mother Śacī saw her boy sitting on the rejected pots, she protested, "Why have You touched these untouchable pots? You have now become impure. Go and bathe in the Ganges."

TEXT 75

ihā śuni' mātāke kahila brahma-jñāna

SYNONYMS

ihā śuni'-hearing this; mātāke-unto His mother; kahila-explained; brahma-jñāna-absolute knowledge; vismitā-amazed; ha-iyā-becoming; mātā-the mother; karāila-forced; snāna-bathing.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu taught His mother about absolute knowledge. Although amazed by this, His mother forced Him to take a bath.

PURPORT

The absolute knowledge explained by the Lord to His mother is described by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya as follows: "The Lord said, 'Mother, that this is pure and that is impure is surely a worldly sentiment with no basis in fact. You have cooked food for Lord Viṣṇu within these pots and offered the food to Him. How then can these pots be untouchable? Everything in relationship with Viṣṇu is to be considered an expansion of Viṣṇu's energy. Viṣṇu, the Supersoul, is eternal and uncontaminated. How then may these pots be considered pure or impure?' Hearing this discourse on absolute knowledge, His mother was very much astonished and forced Him to take a bath."

TEXT 76

miśra bale-Jagannātha Miśra replied; kichu ha-uk-whatever it may be; cintā kichu nāi-don't be worried; viśvambharera-of Viśvambhara; kuśala-auspiciousness; ha-uk-let there be; ei-this; mātra-only; cāi-I want.

TRANSLATION

Jagannātha Miśra replied, ”Never mind what it is. There is no need to worry. Let there always be good fortune for Viśvambhara. This is all I want.”

TEXT 83

eka-dina miśra putrera cāpalya dekhiyā dharma-śikṣā dila bahu bhartsanā kariyā

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; miśra-Jagannātha Miśra; putrera-of his son; cāpalya-the mischievous behavior; dekhiyā-seeing; dharma-śikṣā-religious teaching; dila-gave; bahu-much; bhartsanā-rebuking; kariyā-doing.

TRANSLATION

On another occasion, Jagannātha Miśra, seeing the mischievous acts of his son, gave Him lessons in morality after rebuking Him greatly.

TEXT 84

rātre svapna dekhe,–eka āsi' brahmaṇa miśrere kahaye kichu sa-roṣa vacana

SYNONYMS

rātre-at night; svapna dekhe-he dreamt; eka-one; āsi'-coming; brāhmana-brāhmaṇa; miśrere-unto Jagannātha Miśra; kahaye-spoke; kichu-something; sa-roṣa-with anger; vacana-words.

TRANSLATION

On that very night, Jagannātha Miśra dreamt that a brāhmaṇa had come before him speaking these words in great anger:

TEXT 85

”miśra, tumi putrera tattva kichui nā jāna bhartsana-tāḍana kara,–putra kari' māna”

SYNONYMS

miśra-my dear Jagannātha Miśra; tumi-you; putrera-of your son; tattva-truth; kichui-something; nā-do not; jāna-know; bhartsana-rebuking; tāḍana-chastisement; kara-you do; putra-son; kari'-making Him; māna-you regard.

TRANSLATION

”My dear Miśra, you do not know anything about your son. You think Him your son, and therefore you rebuke and chastise Him.”

TEXT 86

miśra kahe,–deva, siddha, muni kene naya ye se baḍa ha-uk mātra āmāra tanaya

SYNONYMS

miśra kahe-Jagannātha Miśra replied; deva-demigod; siddha-mystic yogī; muni-great saintly person; kene naya-may be so or not; ye se-whatever; baḍa-great; ha-uk-He may be; mātra-only; āmāra-my; tanaya-son.

TRANSLATION

Jagannātha Miśra replied, ”This boy may be a demigod, a mystic yogī or a great saintly person. It doesn’t matter what He is, for I think He is only my son.

TEXT 87

putrera lālana-śikṣā–pitāra sva-dharma

SYNONYMS

putrera-of the son; lālana-maintenance; śikṣā-education; pitara-of the father; sva-dharma-duty; āmi-if I; nā-do not; śikhāle-give education; kaiche-how; janibe-He will know; dharma-marma-religion and morality.

TRANSLATION

”It is the duty of a father to educate his son in both religion and morality. If I do not give Him this education, how will He know of it?”

TEXT 88

vipra kahe,–putra yadi daiva-siddha haya svataḥ-siddha-jñāna, tabe śikṣā vyartha haya

SYNONYMS

vipra kahe-the brāhmaṇa replied; putra-son; yadi-if; daiva-transcendental; siddha-mystic; haya-were; svataḥ-siddha-jñāna-self-illuminated perfect knowledge; tabe-at that time; śikṣā-education; vyartha-futile; haya-becomes.

TRANSLATION

The brāhmaṇa replied, ”If your son is a transcendental mystic boy with self-effulgent perfect knowledge, what is the use of your education?”

PURPORT

The brāhmaṇa Jagannātha Miśra saw in his dream told him that his son was not an ordinary human being. If He were a transcendental person, He would have self-effulgent knowledge, and thus there would be no need to educate Him.

TEXT 89

miśra kahe,–”putra kene nahe nārāyaṇa tathāpi pitāra dharma–putrera śikṣaṇa”

SYNONYMS

miśra kahe-Jagannātha Miśra replied; putra-my son; kene-may be; nahe-why not; nārāyaṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; tathāpi-still; pitāra-of a father; dharma-the duty; putrera-of the son; śikṣaṇa-instruction.

TRANSLATION

Jagannātha Miśra replied, ”Even if my son is not a common man but Nārāyaṇa, still it is the duty of a father to instruct his son.”

TEXT 90

ei-mate duṅhe karena dharmera vicāra viśuddha-vātsalya miśrera, nāhi jāne āra ei-mate-in this way; duṅhe-both of them; karena-do; dharmera-of religion; vicāra-consideration; viśuddha-unalloyed; vātsalya-parental affection; miśrera-of Jagannātha Miśra; nāhi-there is not; jāne-he knew; āra-anything else.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In this way Jagannātha Miśra and the brāhmaṇa discussed the principles of religion in the dream, yet Jagannātha Miśra was absorbed in unalloyed parental mellow and did not want to know anything else.

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.8.45) it is said: ”Lord Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is worshiped with exalted hymns by all the Vedas and Upaniṣads and by great personalities through sāṅkhya-yoga in the mode of goodness, was considered by mother Yaśodā and Nanda to be their own little son.” Similarly, Jagannātha Miśra also considered Lord Caitanya Mahāprahhu his beloved little boy, although He is worshiped with all veneration by learned brāhmaṇas and saintly persons.

TEXT 91

SYNONYMS

ei-this; mata-like; śiśu-līlā-childhood pastimes; kare-does; gauracandra-Śrī Gaurahari; dine dine-day after day; pitā-mātāra-of His parents; bāḍāya-He increases; ānanda-the pleasure.

TRANSLATION

In this way Gaurahari performed His childhood pastimes and day after day increased the pleasure of His parents.

TEXT 94

kata dine miśra putrera hāte khaḍi dila alpa dine dvādaśa-phalā akṣara śikhila

SYNONYMS

kata dine-after some days; miśra-Jagannātha Miśra; putrera-of his son; hāte-in the hand; khaḍi-chalk; dila-gave; alpa-within a very few; dine-days; dvādaśa-phalā-twelve combinations of letters; akṣara-letters; śikhila-learned.

TRANSLATION

After some days Jagannātha Miśra inaugurated the primary education of his son by performing the hāte khaḍi ceremony. Within a very few days the Lord learned all the letters and combinations of letters.

PURPORT

The twelve phalā, or combinations of letters, are called repha, mūrdhanya (cerebral), ṇa, dāntavya (dental), na, ma, ya, ra, la, va, ṛ, ṝ, ḷ and \ḷ. Hāte khaḍi is the primary educational beginning. At the age of four or five years, on an auspicious day called vidyārambha marking the beginning of primary education, there is a ceremony worshiping Lord Viṣṇu, and after that the teacher gives the child a long chalk pencil. Then, guiding the hand of the student, he instructs him how to write the letters of the alphabet (a, ā, i, etc.) by writing big letters on the floor. When the child is a little advanced in writing, he is given a slate for his primary education, which ends when he learns the two-letter combinations, which are called phalā, as mentioned above.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Fourteenth Chapter, describing Lord Caitanya's childhood pastimes.

18.4.15 Chapter 15

The Lord's Paugaṇḍa-līlā

A synopsis of the Fifteenth Chapter is as follows. The Lord took lessons in grammar from Gaṅgādāsa Paṇḍita and became very expert in commenting upon grammar. He forbade His mother to take grains on the Ekādaśī day. He narrated a story that Viśvarūpa, after accepting the sannyāsa order, invited Him in a dream to accept sannyāsa also, but the Lord refused and was therefore sent back home. When Jagannātha Miśra passed away, the Lord married the daughter of Vallabhācārya, whose name was Lakṣmī. All these events are summarized in this chapter.

TEXT 1

ku-manāḥ su-manastvaṁ hi

SYNONYMS

paugaṇḍa-līlā-the pastimes of the paugaṇḍa age; caitanya-kṛṣṇasya-of Lord Caitanya, who is Kṛṣṇa Himself; ati-suvistṛtā-very much expanded; vidyā-ārambha-the beginning of education; mukhā-chief business; pāṇi-grahaṇa-marriage; antā-at the end; manaḥ-harā-very beautiful.

TRANSLATION

The pastimes of the Lord during His paugaṇḍa age were very extensive. His education was His chief occupation, and after that His very beautiful marriage took place.

TEXT 5

gaṅgādāsa paṇḍita-sthāne paḍena vyākaraṇa śravaṇa-mātre kaṇṭhe kaila sūtra-vṛtti-gaṇa

SYNONYMS

gaṅgādāsa-of the name Gaṅgādāsa; paṇḍita-sthāne-at the place of the teacher; paḍena-studies; vyākaraṇa-grammar; śravaṇa-mātre-simply by hearing; kaṇṭhe-between the neck and the heart; kaila-did; sūtra-vṛtti-gaṇa-the aphorisms and their definitions.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord was studying grammar at the place of Gaṅgādāsa Paṇḍita, He would immediately learn grammatical rules and definitions by heart simply by hearing them once.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says that the Lord was given lessons by a teacher named Viṣṇu and another teacher named Sudarśana. Later on, when He was a little grown up, He was under the care of Gaṅgādāsa Paṇḍita, who taught Him grammar of a higher standard. Anyone serious about studying the Sanskrit language should first learn grammar. It is said that simply to finish studying Sanskrit grammar takes at least twelve years, but once one learns the grammatical rules and regulations very nicely, all other scriptures or subject matters in Sanskrit are extremely easy to understand, for Sanskrit grammar is the gateway to education.

TEXT 6

alpa-kāle hailā pañjī-ṭīkāte pravīṇa cira-kālera paḍuyā jine ha-iyā navīna

SYNONYMS

alpa-kāle-within a very short time; hailā-became; pañjī-ṭīkāte-in the commentary on grammar named Pañjī-ṭīkā; pravīṇa-very expert; cira-kālera-all older; paḍuyā-students; jine-conquers; ha-iyā-being; navīna-their junior.

TRANSLATION

He soon became so expert in commenting on the Pañjī-ṭīkā that He could win victory over all the other students, although He was a neophyte.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says there was a commentary on grammar named Pañjī-ṭīkā that was later explained very lucidly by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 7

adhyayana-līlā prabhura dāsa-vṛndāvana
'caitanya-maṅgale' kaila vistāri varṇana

SYNONYMS

adhyayana-līlā-pastimes of studying; prabhura-of the Lord; dāsa-vṛndāvana-Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; caitanya-maṅgale-in his book Caitanya-maṅgala; kaila-has done; vistāri-elaborately; varṇana-explanation.

TRANSLATION

In his book Caitanya-maṅgala [which later became Caitanya-bhāgavata], Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura very elaborately described the Lord's pastimes of study.

PURPORT

The Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-līlā, chapters Four, Six, Seven, Eight, Nine and Ten, are a good reference for the studious pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 8

eka dina mātāra pade kariyā praṇāma prabhu kahe,–mātā, more deha eka dāna

SYNONYMS

eka dina-one day; mātāra-of the mother; pade-on the feet; kariyā-doing; praṇāma-obeisances; prabhu-the Lord; kahe-said; mātā-My dear mother; more-unto Me; deha-give; eka-one; dāna-gift.

TRANSLATION

One day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu fell down at the feet of His mother and requested her to give Him one thing in charity.

TEXT 9

mātā bale,–tāi diba, yā tumi māgibe prabhu kahe,–ekādaśīte anna nā khāibe mātā bale-His mother said; tāi diba-I shall give that; yā-whatever; tumi-You; māgibe-should ask me; prabhu kahe-the Lord said; ekādaśīte-on the Ekādaśī day; anna-grains; nā-don't; khāibe-eat.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

His mother replied, "My dear son, I will give You whatever You ask." Then the Lord said, "My dear mother, please do not eat grains on the Ekādaśī day."

PURPORT

From the very beginning of His childhood life Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu introduced the system of observing a fast on the Ekādaśī day. In the Bhakti-sandarbha, by Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī, there is a quotation from the Skanda Purāṇa admonishing that a person who eats grains on Ekādaśī becomes a murderer of his mother, father, brother and spiritual master, and even if he is elevated to a Vaikuṇṭha planet, he falls down. On Ekādaśī, everything is cooked for Viṣṇu, including regular grains and dahi, but it is enjoined that a Vaiṣṇava should not even take viṣṇu-prasāda on Ekādaśī. It is said that a Vaiṣṇava does not accept anything eatable that is not offered to Lord Viṣṇu, but on Ekādaśī a Vaiṣṇava should not touch even mahā-prasāda offered to Viṣṇu, although such prasāda may be kept for being eaten the next day. It is strictly forbidden for one to accept any kind of grain on Ekādaśī, even if it is offered to Lord Viṣṇu.

TEXT 10

śacī kahe,–nā khāiba, bhāla-i kahilā sei haite ekādaśī karite lāgilā

SYNONYMS

śacī kahe-mother Śacī said; nā khāiba-I shall not take; bhāla-i kahilā-You have said very nicely; sei haite-from that day; ekādaśī-Ekādaśī day; karite lāgilā-began to observe.

TRANSLATION

Mother Śacī said, "You have spoken very nicely. I shall not eat grains on Ekādaśī." From that day, she began to observe fasting on Ekādaśī.

PURPORT

It is a prejudice amongst smārta-brāhmaṇas that a widow must observe fasting on Ekādaśī but a woman who has her husband should not. It appears that before the request of Lord Caitanya Śacīmātā was not observing Ekādaśī because of her being sa-dhava, which means that her husband was living. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, however, introduced the system that a woman, even if not a widow, must observe the Ekādaśī day and must not touch any kind of grains, even those offered to the Deity of Viṣṇu.

TEXT 11

tabe miśra viśvarūpera dekhiyā yauvana kanyā cāhi' vivāha dite karilena mana tabe-thereafter; miśra-Jagannātha Miśra; viśvarūpera-of Viśvarūpa, his elder son; dekhiyā-seeing; yauvana-youthfulness; kanyā cāhi'-wanting to find a girl; vivāha-marriage; dite-to give; karilena-made up; mana-his mind.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thereafter, seeing that Viśvarūpa was a grown-up youth, Jagannātha Miśra wanted to find a girl and arrange a marriage ceremony for Him.

TEXT 12

viśvarūpa śuni' ghara chāḍi palāilā sannyāsa kariyā tīrtha karibāre gelā

SYNONYMS

viśvarūpa-of the name Viśvarūpa; śuni'-hearing this; ghara-home; chāḍi-giving up; palāilā-went away; sannyāsa-the renounced order; kariyā-accepting; tīrtha-the holy places; karibāre-for touring; gelā-went away.

TRANSLATION

Hearing of this, Viśvarūpa immediately left home and went away to accept sannyāsa and travel from one place of pilgrimage to another.

TEXT 13

śuni, śacī-miśrera duḥkhī haila mana tabe prabhu mātā-pitāra kaila āśvāsana

SYNONYMS

śuni'-hearing this; śacī-of mother Śacī; miśrera-and of Jagannātha Miśra; duḥkhī-very unhappy; haila-became; mana-minds; tabe-at that time; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mātā-pitāra-of the parents; kaila-did; āśvāsana-pacification.

TRANSLATION

When Śacīmātā and Jagannātha Miśra heard of the departure of their elder son, Viśvarūpa, they were very unhappy, but Lord Caitanya tried to console them.

TEXT 14

bhāla haila,–viśvarūpa sannyāsa karila pitṛ-kula, mātṛ-kula,–dui uddhārila

SYNONYMS

bhāla haila-it is very good; viśvarūpa-of the name Viśvarūpa; sannyāsa-the renounced order of life; karila-has accepted; pitṛ-kula-father's family; mātṛ-kula-mother's family; dui-both of them; uddhārila-delivered.

TRANSLATION

"My dear mother and father," the Lord said, "it is very good that Viśvarūpa has accepted the sannyāsa order, for thus He has delivered both His father's family and His mother's family."

PURPORT

It is sometimes said that Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not approve of the acceptance of the sannyāsa order in this Kali-yuga because in the śāstra it is said:

aśvamedhaṁ gavālambhaṁ sannyāsaṁ pala-paitṛkam devareṇa sutotpattiṁ kalau pañca vivarjayet

"In this Kali-yuga the performance of the aśvamedha-yajña or gomedha-yajña, sacrifices in which a horse or cow is offered, should be avoided, as should the acceptance of sannyāsa, the renounced order of life." (Brahma-vaivarta Purāṇa, Kṛṣṇa-janma-khaṇḍa 185.180)

Nevertheless we see that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself accepted sannyāsa and approved of the sannyāsa of His elder brother, Viśvarūpa. It is clearly said here, bhāla haila,–viśvarūpa sannyāsa karila pitṛ-kula, mātṛ-kula,–dui uddhārila. Therefore, should it be thought that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu made statements that are contradictory? No, actually He did not. It is recommended that one accept sannyāsa to dedicate his life for the service of the Lord, and everyone must take that kind of sannyāsa, for by accepting such sannyāsa one renders the best service to both his paternal and maternal families. But one should not accept the sannyāsa order of the Māyāvāda school, which has practically no meaning. We find many Māyāvādī sannyāsīs simply loitering in the street thinking themselves Brahman or Nārāyaṇa and spending all day and night begging so they can fill their hungry bellies. Māyāvādī sannyāsīs have become so degraded that there is a section of them who eat everything, just like hogs and dogs. It is such degraded sannyāsa that is prohibited in this age. Actually, Śrīla Śaṅkarācārya's principles for the acceptance of sannyāsa were very strict, but later the so-called Māyāvādī sannyāsīs became degraded because of their false philosophy, which propounds that by accepting sannyāsa one becomes Nārāyaṇa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu rejected that kind of sannyāsa. But the acceptance of sannyāsa is one of the items of the varṇāśrama-dharma. How then can it be rejected?

TEXT 15

āmi ta' kariba tomā' duṅhara sevana śuniyā santuṣṭa haila pitā-mātāra mana āmi ta'-I; kariba-shall do; tomā-for you; duṅhāra-both; sevana-service; śuniyā-after hearing; santuṣṭa-pleased; haila-became; pitā-mātāra mana-the parents' minds.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu assured His parents that He would serve them, and thus the minds of His father and mother were satisfied.

TEXT 16

eka-dina naivedya-tāmbūla khāiyā bhūmite paḍilā prabhu acetana hañā

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; naivedya-food offered to the Deity; tāmbūla-betel nut; khāiyā-after eating; bhūmite-on the ground; padilā-fell; prabhu-the Lord; acetana-unconscious; hañā-becoming.

TRANSLATION

One day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu ate betel nuts offered to the Deity, but they acted as an intoxicant, and He fell down on the ground unconscious.

PURPORT

Betel nuts are an intoxicant, and therefore the regulative principles prohibit eating them. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastime of fainting after eating betel nuts is a solid instruction to all of us that one should not touch betel nuts, even those offered to Viṣṇu, just as one should not touch grains on the Ekādaśī day. Of course, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's fainting had a particular purpose. As the Supreme Personality of Godhead, He can do whatever He likes and eat whatever He wants, but we should not imitate His pastimes.

TEXT 17

āste-vyaste pitā-mātā mukhe dila pāni sustha hañā kahe prabhu apūrva kāhinī

SYNONYMS

āste-vyaste-with great haste; pitā-mātā-both the parents; mukhe-on the mouth; dila-gave; pāni-water; sustha hañā-being revived; kahe-says; prabhu-the Lord; apūrva-something astonishing; kāhinī-narration.

TRANSLATION

After His father and mother sprinkled water on His mouth with great haste, the Lord revived and said something wonderful they had never heard before.

TEXT 18

ethā haite viśvarūpa more lañā gelā sannyāsa karaha tumi, āmāre kahilā

SYNONYMS

etha-here; haite-from; viśvarūpa-of the name Viśvarūpa; more-Me; lañā-taking with Him; gelā-went; sannyāsa-the renounced order of life; karaha-accept; tumi-You also; amāre-unto Me; kahilā-He said.

TRANSLATION

The Lord said, "Viśvarūpa took Me away from here, and He requested Me to accept the sannyāsa order.

TEXT 19

āmi kahi,–āmāra anātha pitā-mātā āmi bālaka,–sannyāsera kibā jāni kathā

SYNONYMS

āmi kahi-I said; āmāra-My; anātha-helpless; pitā-mātā-father and mother; āmi-I am; bālaka-only a child; sannyāsera-of the renounced order of life; kibā-what; jāni-I know; kathā-words.

TRANSLATION

"I replied to Viśvarūpa, 'I have My helpless father and mother, and also I am but a child. What do I know about the sannyāsa order of life?

TEXT 20

SYNONYMS

ei mata-in this way; nānā-various; līlā-pastimes; kare-does; gaurahari-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ki kāraṇe-what is the reason; līlā-pastimes; ihā-this; bujhite-to understand; nā-not; pāri-I am able.

TRANSLATION

In this way Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu performed various pastimes, but why He did so I cannot understand.

PURPORT

The Supreme Personality of Godhead and His devotees who come to this world are executing a mission, and therefore sometimes they act in a way that is very difficult to understand. It is said, therefore, vaiṣṇavera kriyā-mudrā vijñeha nā bujhaya: even if one is a very learned and intelligent scholar, he cannot understand the activities of a Vaiṣṇava. A Vaiṣṇava accepts anything favorable for executing his mission. But foolish persons, not knowing the purpose of such exalted Vaiṣṇavas, indulge in criticizing them. That is forbidden. Since no one can understand what a Vaiṣṇava does for the purpose of executing his mission, to criticize such a Vaiṣṇava is the offense called sādhu-nindā.

TEXT 23

SYNONYMS

bandhu-friends; bāndhava-relatives; āsi'-coming there; duṅhā-both of them; prabodhila-pacified; pitṛ-kriyā-rituals performed after the death of the father; vidhi-mate-according to the Vedic system; īśvara-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; karila-executed.

TRANSLATION

Friends and relatives came there to pacify both Lord Caitanya and His mother. Then Lord Caitanya, even though He was the Supreme Personality of Godhead, executed the rituals for His dead father according to the Vedic system.

TEXT 25

SYNONYMS

kata dine-after some days; prabhu-the Lord; citte-within His mind; karilā-made; cintana-consideration; gṛhastha ha-ilāma-I remained in householder life; ebe-now; cāhi-I want; gṛha-dharma-activities of family life.

TRANSLATION

After some days the Lord thought, "I did not take sannyāsa, and since I am remaining at home it is My duty to act as a gṛhastha.

TEXT 26

gṛhiṇī vinā gṛha-dharma nā haya śobhana eta cinti' vivāha karite haila mana gṛhiṇī-wife; vinā-without; gṛha-dharma-duties of family life; nā-not; haya-become; śobhana-beautiful; eta cinti'-thinking thus; vivāha-marriage; karite-to execute; haila-became; mana-mind.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Without a wife," Lord Caitanya considered, "there is no meaning to householder life." Thus the Lord decided to marry.

TEXT 27

SYNONYMS

pūrva-siddha-as it is already settled; bhāva-ecstasy; duṅhāra-of both of them; udaya-awakened; karila-was made; daive-also accidentally; vanamālī-of the name Vanamālī; ghaṭaka-the marriage-maker; śacī-sthāne-at the place of Śacīmātā; āila-came.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord and Lakṣmīdevī met, their relationship awakened, having already been settled, and coincidentally the marriage-maker Vanamālī came to see Śacīmātā.

PURPORT

Vanamālī Ghaṭaka, a resident of Navadvīpa and a brāhmaṇa by caste, arranged the marriage of the Lord to Lakṣmīdevī. He was formerly Viśvāmitra, who negotiated the marriage of Lord Rāmacandra, and later he was the brāhmaṇa who negotiated the marriage of Lord Kṛṣṇa with Rukmiṇī. That same brāhmaṇa acted as the marriage-maker of the Lord in caitanya-līlā.

TEXT 30

SYNONYMS

paugaṇḍa vayase-in His early age; līlā-pastimes; bahuta prakāra-of various kinds; vṛndāvana-dāsa-Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; ihā-this; kariyāchena-has done; vistāra-the elaborate explanation.

TRANSLATION

The Lord performed many varieties of pastimes in His early age, and Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has described them elaborately.

TEXT 33

SYNONYMS

ataeva-therefore; diṅ-mātra-only in the matter of indication; ihāṅ-here; dekhāila-I have exhibited; caitanya-maṅgale-in the book of the name Caitanya-maṅgala; sarva-loke-all over the world; khyāta-famous; haila-became.

TRANSLATION

I have given but a single hint of these pastimes, for Vrndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura, in his book Caitanya-maṅgala [now Caitanya-bhāgavata], has described them all vividly.

TEXT 34

SYNONYMS

śrī-rūpa-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; raghunātha-Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; pade-at the lotus feet; yāra-whose; āśa-expectation; caitanya-caritāmṛta-the book named Caitanya-caritāmṛta; kahe-describes; kṛṣṇadāsa-Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līla, Fifteenth Chapter, describing the Lord's paugaṇḍa-līlā.

18.4.16 Chapter 16

The Pastimes of the Lord in His Childhood and Youth

This chapter fully describes Lord Caitanya's kaiśora-līlā, or the activities He performed just before attaining youth. During this time He studied deeply and was victorious over greatly learned scholars. During His kaiśora-līlā the Lord also sported in the water. He went to East Bengal to secure financial assistance, cultivate knowledge and introduce the saṅkīrtana movement, and there He met Tapana Miśra, whom He instructed about spiritual advancement and ordered to go to Vārāṇasī. While Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was touring East Bengal, His wife, Lakṣmīdevī, was bitten by a serpent or by the serpent of separation, and thus she left this world. When the Lord returned home, He saw that His mother was overwhelmed with grief because of Lakṣmīdevī's death. Therefore at her request He later married His second wife, Viṣṇupriyā-devī. This chapter also describes the Lord's argument with Keśava Kāśmīrī, the celebrated scholar, and the Lord's criticism of his prayer glorifying mother Ganges. In this prayer the Lord found five kinds of literary ornaments and five kinds of literary faults, thus defeating the paṇḍita. Later the Kāśmīrī Paṇḍita, who was known to have been victorious all over the country, submitted himself to the goddess of learning, and by her order he met Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu on the morning of the next day and surrendered unto Him.

kṛpā-sudhā-sarid yasya
viśvam āplāvayanty api nīca-gaiva sadā bhāti taṁ caitanya-prabhuṁ bhaje

SYNONYMS

kṛpā-sudhā-of the nectar of the mercy; sarit-river; yasya-whose; viśvam-the whole universe; āplāvayantī-inundating; api-although; nīca-gā eva-more inclined to the poor and fallen; sadā-always; bhāti-is manifest; tam-Him; caitanya-prabhum-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhaje-I worship.

TRANSLATION

I worship Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, whose nectarean mercy flows like a great river, inundating the entire universe. Just as a river flows downstream, Lord Caitanya especially extends Himself to the fallen.

PURPORT

Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has sung, śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu dayā kara more. He prays for Lord Caitanya's mercy because He is the mercy incarnation, having appeared especially to claim the fallen souls. The more fallen one is, the greater one's claim to the favor of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. One must only be very sincere and serious. Despite being contaminated by all the bad qualities of this Kali-yuga, if one surrenders unto the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Lord will surely and certainly deliver him. The best example is Jagāi and Mādhāi. In this Age of Kali practically everyone is like Jagāi and Mādhāi, but the saṅkīrtana movement inaugurated by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is still flowing like a great river, inundating the entire world, and thus the International Society for Krishna Consciousness is successfully claiming all fallen souls to free them from contamination.

TEXT 2

jaya jaya śrī-caitanya jaya nityānanda

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya śrī-caitanya-all glories to Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jaya-all glories; nityānanda-to Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; jaya advaitacandra-all glories to Advaitacandra; jaya-all glories; gaura-bhakta-vṛnda-to all the devotees of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu! All glories to Lord Nityānanda! All glories to Advaitacandra! And all glories to all the devotees of the Lord!

TEXT 3

jīyāt kaiśora-caitanyo

SYNONYMS

jīyāt-long live; kaiśora-situated in the kaiśora age; caitanyaḥ-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mūrti-matyā-having accepted such a body; gṛha-āśramāt-from a householder's life; lakṣmyā-by Lakṣmī; arcitaḥ-being worshiped; atha-then; vāk-devyā-by the goddess of learning; diśām-of all directions; jayi-the conqueror; jaya-chalāt-on the plea of conquering.

TRANSLATION

Long live Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu in His kaiśora age! Both the goddess of fortune and the goddess of learning worship Him. The goddess of learning, Sarasvatī, worshiped Him in His victory over the scholar who had conquered all the world, and the goddess of fortune, Lakṣmīdevī, worshiped Him at home. Since He is therefore the husband or Lord of both goddesses, I offer my obeisances unto Him.

TEXT 4

ei ta' kaiśora-līlāra sūtra-anubandha

SYNONYMS

ei ta'-thus; kaiśora-the age of kaiśora (the age between the eleventh and fifteenth years); līlāra-of the pastimes; sūtra-anubandha-chronological synopsis; śiṣya-gaṇa-students; paḍāite-to teach; karilā-did; ārambha-begin.

TRANSLATION

At the age of eleven Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu began to teach students. This marks the beginning of His kaiśora age.

TEXT 5

śata śata śiṣya saṅge sadā adhyāpana vyākhyā śuni sarva-lokera camakita mana

SYNONYMS

śata śata-very many; śiṣya-disciples; saṅge-along with Him; sadā-always; adhyāpana-studying; vyākhyā-explanation; śuni-hearing; sarva-lokera-of all people; camakita-astonished; mana-minds.

TRANSLATION

As soon as the Lord became a teacher, many, many students came to Him, every one of them astonished to hear His mode of explanation.

TEXT 6

sarva-śāstre sarva paṇḍita pāya parājaya vinaya-bhaṅgīte kāro duḥkha nāhi haya

SYNONYMS

sarva-śāstre-in all scriptures; sarva-all; paṇḍita-learned scholars; pāya-obtain; parājaya-defeat; vinaya-gentle; bhaṅgīte-by behavior; kāro-anyone's; duḥkha-unhappiness; nāhi-does not; haya-become.

TRANSLATION

The Lord defeated all kinds of scholars in discourses about all the scriptures, yet because of His gentle behavior, none of them were unhappy.

TEXT 7

vividha auddhatya kare śiṣya-gaṇa-saṅge jahnavite jala-keli kare nana range

SYNONYMS

vividha-various; auddhatya-impudences; kare-does; śiṣya-gaṇa-His disciples; saṅge-with; jāhnavīte-in the water of the Ganges; jala-keli-sporting in the water; kare-does; nānā-in various; raṅge-jokes.

TRANSLATION

The Lord, as a teacher, performed various kinds of pranks in His sporting pastimes in the water of the Ganges.

TEXT 8

kata dine kaila prabhu baṅgete gamana yāhāṅ yāya, tāhāṅ laoyāya nāma-saṅkīrtana

SYNONYMS

kata dine-after a few days; kaila-did; prabhu-the Lord; baṅgete-in East Bengal; gamana-touring; yāhāṅ yāya-wherever He goes; tāhāṅ-there; laoyāya-induces; nāma-saṅkīrtana-the saṅkīrtana movement.

TRANSLATION

After some days the Lord went to East Bengal, and wherever He went He introduced the saṅkīrtana movement.

PURPORT

Although Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His devotees in disciplic succession can defeat all kinds of learned scholars, scientists and philosophers in arguments, thus establishing the supremacy of the Personality of Godhead, their main business as preachers is to introduce saṅkīrtana everywhere. Simply to defeat scholars and philosophers is not the occupation of a preacher. Preachers must simultaneously introduce the saṅkīrtana movement, for that is the mission of the Caitanya cult.

TEXT 9

SYNONYMS

vidyāra-of His learning; prabhāva-the influence; dekhi-seeing; camatkāra-wonder; cite-within the heart; śata śata-many hundreds; paḍuyā-disciples or students; āsi-coming there; lāgila-began; paḍite-to study.

TRANSLATION

Struck with wonder by the influence of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's intellectual prowess, many hundreds of students came to the Lord and began studying under His direction.

TEXT 10

sei deśe vipra, nāma–miśra tapana niścaya karite nāre sādhya-sādhana sei deśe-in that region of East Bengal; vipra-a brāhmaṇa; nāma-named; miśra tapana-Tapana Miśra; niścaya karite-to ascertain; nāre-not able; sādhya-objective; sādhana-process.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In East Bengal there was a brāhmaṇa named Tapana Miśra who could not ascertain the objective of life or how to attain it.

PURPORT

One must first ascertain the object of life and then understand how to attain it. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is pointing out to everyone that the object of life is to understand Kṛṣṇa, and to attain that goal of life one must practice Kṛṣṇa consciousness, following the methods prescribed by the Gosvāmīs with reference to the authoritative śāstras and Vedas.

TEXT 11

bahu-śāstre bahu-vākye citte bhrama haya sādhya-sādhana śreṣṭha nā haya niścaya

SYNONYMS

bahu-śāstre-by many books or scriptures; bahu-vākye-by many versions of many persons; citte-within the heart; bhrama-doubt; haya-there is; sādhya-sādhana-objective and means; śreṣṭha-about the best; nā-not; haya-there is; niścaya-certainty.

TRANSLATION

If one becomes a bookworm, reading many books and scriptures and hearing many commentaries and the instructions of many men, this will produce doubt within his heart. One cannot in this way ascertain the real goal of life.

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.13.8) it is said, granthān naivābhyased bahūn na vyākhyām upayuñjīta: "One should not read many books, nor should one try to make a profession of reciting many books, especially if one is a devotee." One must give up the ambition to be a learned scholar and in this way earn a worldly reputation and financial facilities. If one diverts his attention to studying many books, he cannot fix his mind in devotional service, nor can he understand many scriptures, for they are full of grave statements and meanings. In this connection Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura gives his opinion that those who are attracted to studying many kinds of literature concerning various subject matters, especially fruitive activities and philosophical speculation, are deprived of unalloyed devotional service because of their splayed attention.

Man has a general tendency toward fruitive activities, religious ritualistic ceremonies and philosophical speculation. A living entity thus bewildered since time immemorial does not understand the real goal of life, and thus his activities in life are wasted. Innocent persons misled in this way are deprived of unalloyed kṛṣṇa-bhakti, devotional service to the Lord. Tapana Miśra is a vivid example of such a person. He was a learned scholar, but he could not ascertain what the goal of life is. Therefore he was given a chance to hear Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu instructing Sanātana Gosvāmī. Lord Caitanya's instruction to Tapana Miśra is especially significant for persons who loiter here and there collecting books and reading none of them, thus becoming bewildered regarding the aim of life.

svapne eka vipra kahe,–śunaha tapana nimāñi-paṇḍita pāśe karaha gamana svapne-in a dream; eka-one; vipra-brāhmaṇa; kahe-says; śunaha-just hear; tapana-Tapana Miśra; nimāñi-paṇḍita-of the name Nimāi Paṇḍita; pāśe-unto Him; karaha gamana-go.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Tapana Miśra, being thus bewildered, was directed by a brāhmaṇa in a dream to go to Nimāi Paṇḍita [Caitanya Mahāprabhu].

TEXT 13

SYNONYMS

teṅho-He; tomāra-your; sādhya-objective of life; sādhana-process; karibe-will do; niścaya-ascertain; sākṣāt-direct; īśvara-the Lord; teṅho-He is; nāhika-there is no; saṁśaya-doubt.

TRANSLATION

"Because He is the Lord [īśvara]," the brāhmaṇa told him, "undoubtedly He can give you proper direction."

TEXT 14

svapnera vṛttānta saba kaila nivedane

SYNONYMS

svapna dekhi'-by seeing the dream; miśra-Tapana Miśra; āsi'-coming; prabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; caraṇe-at the shelter of the lotus feet; svapnera-of the dream; vṛttānta-details; saba-all; kaila-did; nivedane-inform Him.

TRANSLATION

After seeing the dream, Tapana Miśra came to the shelter of Lord Caitanya's lotus feet, and he described all the details of the dream to the Lord.

TEXT 15

prabhu tuṣṭa hañā sādhya-sādhana kahila nāma-saṅkīrtana kara,–upadeśa kaila

SYNONYMS

prabhu-the Lord; tuṣṭa-satisfied; hañā-becoming; sādhya-sādhana-the objective and the process; kahila-described; nāma-saṅkīrtana-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; kara-practice; upadeśa kaila-gave him the instruction.

TRANSLATION

The Lord, being satisfied, instructed him about the object of life and the process to attain it. He instructed him that the basic principle of success is to chant the holy name of the Lord [the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra].

PURPORT

The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is based upon this instruction of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu that one must chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra regularly and according to the prescribed principles. We simply ask our Western students to chant at least sixteen rounds a day, but sometimes we find that they fail to chant even these sixteen rounds, and instead they bring many austere books and a worshiping method that diverts their attention in so many ways. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's cult is based upon the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Lord Caitanya first advised Tapana Miśra to fix his mind in this chanting. We, the members of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, must strictly follow this advice of Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 16

tāṅra icchā,–prabhu-saṅge navadvīpe vasi prabhu ājñā dila,–tumi yāo vārāṇasī

SYNONYMS

tāṅra icchā-his desire; prabhu-saṅge-with the Lord; navadvīpe-in Navadvīpa; vasi-I live there; prabhu ājñā dila-but the Lord advised him; tumi-you; yāo-go; vārāṇasī-to Benares.

TRANSLATION

Tapana Miśra desired to live with the Lord in Navadvīpa, but the Lord asked him to go to Vārāṇasī [Benares].

TEXT 17

tāhāṅ āmā-saṅge tomāra habe daraśana ājñā pāñā miśra kaila kāśīte gamana tāhāṅ-there; āmā-saṅge-with Me; tomāra-your; habe-there will be; daraśana-meeting; ājñā pāñā-receiving this order; miśra-Tapana Miśra; kaila-did; kāśīte-to Benares; gamana-going.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Lord assured Tapana Miśra that they would meet again in Vārāṇasī. Receiving this order, Tapana Miśra went there.

TEXT 18

prabhura atarkya-līlā bujhite nā pāri sva-saṅga chāḍāñā kene pāṭhāya kāśīpurī

SYNONYMS

prabhura-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's; atarkya-līlā-inconceivable pastimes; bujhite-to understand; nā-not; pāri-able; sva-saṅga-personal association; chāḍāñā-avoiding; kene-why; pāṭhāya-sends; kāśī-purī-to Benares.

TRANSLATION

I cannot understand the inconceivable pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, for although Tapana Miśra wanted to live with Him in Navadvīpa, the Lord advised him to go to Vārāṇasī.

PURPORT

When Tapana Miśra met Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Lord Caitanya was living in household life, and there was no indication that in the future He would accept the sannyāsa order. But by asking Tapana Miśra to go to Vārāṇasī He indicated that in the future He would accept sannyāsa and that when He would teach Sanātana Gosvāmī, Tapana Miśra would take advantage of the opportunity to learn the object of life and the real process of attaining it.

TEXT 19

ei mata baṅgera lokera kailā mahā hita
'nāma' diyā bhakta kaila, paḍāñā paṇḍita

SYNONYMS

ei mata-in this way; baṅgera-of East Bengal; lokera-of the people; kailā-contributed; mahā-great; hita-benefit; nāma-the holy name of the Lord; diyā-giving them; bhakta-devotees; kaila-made them; paḍāñā-by educating them; paṇḍita-learned scholars.

TRANSLATION

In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu contributed the greatest benefit to the people of East Bengal by initiating them into hari-nāma, the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, and making them learned scholars by educating them.

PURPORT

Following in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is distributing the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and inducing people all over the world to chant. We are giving people an immense treasury of transcendental literature, translated into all the important languages of the world, and by the grace of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu this literature is selling profusely, and people are chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra with great delight. This is the preaching process of the Caitanya cult. Since the Lord wanted this cult preached all over the world, the International Society for Krishna Consciousness is acting in a humble way so that the vision of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu may be fulfilled all over the world, especially in the Western countries.

TEXT 20

ei mata baṅge prabhu kare nānā līlā ethā navadvīpe lakṣmī virahe duḥkhī hailā

SYNONYMS

ei mata-in this way; baṅge-in East Bengal; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kare-does; nānā-various; līlā-pastimes; ethā-here; navadvīpe-in Navadvīpa; lakṣmī-the wife of Nimāi Paṇḍita; virahe-in separation; duḥkhī-unhappy; hailā-became.

TRANSLATION

Because the Lord was engaged in various ways in preaching work in East Bengal, His wife, Lakṣmīdevī, was very unhappy at home in separation from her husband.

TEXT 21

prabhura viraha-sarpa lakṣmīre daṁśila viraha-sarpa-viṣe tāṅra paraloka haila

SYNONYMS

prabhura-of the Lord; viraha-sarpa-the separation snake; lakṣmīre-Lakṣmīdevī; daṁśila-bit; viraha-sarpa-of the separation snake; viṣe-by the poison; tāṅra-her; para-loka-next world; haila-it so happened.

TRANSLATION

The snake of separation bit Lakṣmīdevī, and its poison caused her death. Thus she passed to the next world. She went back home, back to Godhead.

PURPORT

As stated in the Bhagavad-gītā (8.6), yaṁ yaṁ vāpi smaran bhāvaṁ tyajaty ante kalevaram: one's practice in thinking throughout his entire life determines the quality of his thoughts at death, and thus at death one obtains a suitable body. According to this principle, Lakṣmīdevī, the goddess of fortune from Vaikuṇṭha, who was absorbed in thought of the Lord in separation from Him, certainly went back home to Vaikuṇṭhaloka after death.

TEXT 22

antare jānilā prabhu, yāte antaryāmī deśere āilā prabhu śacī-duḥkha jāni'

SYNONYMS

antare-within Himself; jānilā-knew; prabhu-the Lord; yāte-because; antaryāmī-He is the Supersoul; deśere-to the country; āilā-returned; prabhu-the Lord; śacī-of mother Śacīdevī; duḥkha-the unhappiness; jāni'-knowing.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya knew about the disappearance of Lakṣmīdevī because He is the Supersoul Himself. Thus He returned home to solace His mother, Śacīdevī, who was greatly unhappy about the death of her daughter-in-law.

TEXT 23

ghare āilā prabhu bahu lañā dhana-jana tattva-jñāne kailā śacīra duḥkha vimocana

SYNONYMS

ghare-home; āilā-returned; prabhu-the Lord; bahu-much; lañā-bringing; dhana-riches; jana-followers; tattva-jñāne-by transcendental knowledge; kailā-did; śacīra-of Śacīmātā; duḥkha-the unhappiness; vimocana-relieving.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord returned home, bringing with Him great wealth and many followers, He spoke to Śacīdevī about transcendental knowledge to relieve her of the grief she was suffering.

PURPORT

It is stated in the Bhagavad-gītā (2.13):

dehino 'smin yathā dehe
kaumāraṁ yauvanaṁ jarā
tathā dehāntara-prāptir
dhīras tatra na muhyati

"As the embodied soul continuously passes, in this body, from boyhood to youth to old age, the soul similarly passes into another body at death. The self-realized soul is not bewildered by such a change." Such verses from the Bhagavad-gītā or any other Vedic literature give valuable instructions on the occasion of someone's passing away. By discussing such instructions from the Bhagavad-gītā or Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, a sober man can certainly understand that the soul never dies but rather passes from one body to another. This is called transmigration of the soul. A soul comes into this material world and creates bodily relationships with a father, a mother, sisters, brothers, a wife and children, but all these relationships pertain to the body, not the soul. Therefore, as described in the Bhagavad-gītā, dhīras tatra na muhyati: one who is sober is not disturbed by such phenomenal changes within this material world. Such instructions are called tattva-kathā, or real truth.

TEXT 24

śiṣya-gaṇa lañā punaḥ vidyāra vilāsa vidyā-bale sabā jini' auddhatya prakāśa

SYNONYMS

śiṣya-gaṇa-disciples; lañā-taking; punaḥ-again; vidyāra-of education; vilāsa-pastime; vidyā-bale-by the strength of education; saba-everyone; jini'-conquering; auddhatya-of pride; prakāśa-manifestation.

TRANSLATION

After coming back from East Bengal, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu again began educating others. By the strength of His education He conquered everyone, and thus He was greatly proud.

TEXT 25

tabe viṣṇupriyā-ṭhākurāṇīra pariṇaya tabe ta' karila prabhu digvijayī jaya

SYNONYMS

tabe-after this; viṣṇupriyā-of the name Viṣṇupriyā; ṭhākurāṇīra-of the goddess of fortune; pariṇaya-marriage; tabe ta'-thereafter; karila-did; prabhu-the Lord; dig-vijayī-the champion; jaya-conquer.

TRANSLATION

Then Lord Caitanya married Viṣṇupriyā, the goddess of fortune, and thereafter He conquered a champion of learning named Keśava Kāśmīrī.

PURPORT

As in the modern day there are many champions in sports, so in bygone days there were many learned scholars in India who were champions in learning. One such person was Keśava Kāśmīrī, who came from the state of Kashmir. He traveled all over India and at last came to Navadvīpa to challenge the learned scholars there. Unfortunately he could not conquer the learned scholars in Navadvīpa, for he was defeated by the boy scholar Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Later he understood that Caitanya Mahāprabhu is none other than the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Thus he surrendered unto Him and later became a pure Vaiṣṇava in the sampradāya of Nimbārka. He wrote Kaustubha-prabhā, a commentary on the Vedānta commentary of the Nimbārka-sampradāya, which is known as the Pārijāta-bhāṣya.

The Bhakti-ratnākara mentions Keśava Kāśmīrī and lists his predecessors in the disciplic succession of the Nimbārka-sampradāya: (1) Śrīnivāsa Ācārya, (2) Viśva Ācārya, (3) Puruṣottama, (4) Vilāsa, (5) Svarūpa, (6) Mādhava, (7) Balabhadra, (8) Padma, (9) Śyāma, (10) Gopāla, (11) Kṛpā, (1 2) Deva Ācārya, (13) Sundara Bhaṭṭa, (14) Padmanābha, (15) Upendra, (16) Rāmacandra, (17) Vāmana, (18) Kṛṣṇa, (19) Padmākara, (20) Śravaṇa, (21) Bhūri, (22) Mādhava, (23) Śyāma, (24) Gopāla, (25) Balabhadra, (26) Gopīnātha, (27) Keśava, (28) Gokula and (29) Keśava Kāśmīrī. It is stated in the Bhakti-ratnākara that Keśava Kāśmīrī was a favorite devotee of mother Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning. By her grace he was an extremely influential scholar, and he was the greatest champion among all the scholars in the four corners of the country. Therefore he got the title dig-vijayī, which means "one who has conquered everyone in all directions." He belonged to a very respectable brāhmaṇa family of Kashmir. Later, by the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he gave up the profession of winning championships and became a great devotee. He joined the Nimbārka-sampradāya, one of the Vaiṣṇava communities of the Vedic culture.

SYNONYMS

sei-that; aṁśa-portion; kahi-I mention; tāṅre-unto Śrī Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; kari'-making; namaskāra-obeisances; yā'-of which; śuni-hearing; dig-vijayī-the conquering paṇḍita; kaila-did; āpanā-his own; dhik-kāra-condemnation.

TRANSLATION

Offering my obeisances to Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura, I shall try to describe that portion of the Lord's analysis which, when he heard it, made the Digvijayī feel himself condemned.

TEXT 28

jyotsnāvatī rātri, prabhu śiṣya-gaṇa saṅge vasiyāchena gaṅgātīre vidyāra prasaṅge

SYNONYMS

jyotsnāvatī-full moon; rātri-night; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śiṣya-gaṇa-disciples; saṅge-along with; vasiyāchena-was sitting; gaṅgā-tīre-on the bank of the Ganges; vidyāra-educational; prasaṅge-in discussion.

TRANSLATION

On one full moon night the Lord was sitting on the bank of the Ganges with His many disciples and discussing literary topics.

TEXT 29

hena-kāle digvijayī tāhāṅi āilā

SYNONYMS

hena-kāle-at this time; dig-vijayī-Keśava Kāśmīrī; tāhāṅi-there; āilā-reached; gaṅgāre-to mother Ganges; vandana-prayers; kari'-offering; prabhure-the Lord; mililā-met.

TRANSLATION

Coincidentally Keśava Kāśmīrī Paṇḍita also came there. While offering his prayers to mother Ganges, he met Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 30

SYNONYMS

vasāilā-made seated; tāre-him; prabhu-the Lord; ādara-adoration; kariyā-offering him; dig-vijayī-Keśava Kāśmīrī; kahe-says; mane-within his mind; avajñā-disregard; kariyā-doing.

TRANSLATION

The Lord received him with adoration, but because Keśava Kāśmīrī was very proud, he talked to the Lord very inconsiderately.

TEXT 31

vyākaraṇa paḍāha, nimāñi paṇḍita tomāra nāma bālya-śāstre loke tomāra kahe guṇa-grāma vyākaraṇa-grammar; paḍāha-You teach; nimāñi paṇḍita-Nimāi Paṇḍita; tomāra-Your; nāma-name; bālya-śāstre-in grammar, which is considered a study for boys; loke-the people in general; tomāra-of You; kahe-declare; guṇa-grāma-very qualified.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"I understand that You are a teacher of grammar," he said, "and that Your name is Nimāi Paṇḍita. People speak very highly of Your teaching of beginners' grammar.

PURPORT

Formerly Sanskrit schools first taught grammar very thoroughly, and this system continues even now. A student was supposed to study grammar carefully for twelve years in the beginning of his life, because if one is expert in the grammar of the Sanskrit language, all the śāstras are open to him. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was famous for teaching grammar to students, and therefore Keśava Kāśmīrī first referred to His position as a teacher of grammar. He was very proud of his literary career; he was far above the first lessons of grammar, and so he thought the position of Nimāi Paṇḍita not at all comparable to his own.

TEXT 32

vyākaraṇa-madhye, jāni, paḍāha kalāpa śuniluṅ phāṅkite tomāra śiṣyera saṁlāpa vyākaraṇa-madhye-among grammars; jāni-I understand; paḍāha-You teach; kalāpa-the Kalāpa-vyākaraṇa; śuniluṅ-I have heard; phāṅkite-in deceitful word jugglery; tomāra-Your; śiṣyera-of the disciples; saṁlāpa-the specific knowledge.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"I understand that You teach Kalāpa-vyākaraṇa. I have heard that Your students are very expert in the word jugglery of this grammar."

PURPORT

There are many schools of grammar in the Sanskrit language, the most famous of which are the systems of Pāṇini and the Kalāpa and Kaumudī grammars. There were different branches of grammatical knowledge, and a student of grammar was supposed to study them all in twelve years. Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who was famous as Nimāi Paṇḍita, taught grammar to His students, who became expert in dealing with the word jugglery of complicated grammar. Almost anyone expert in studying grammar interprets the śāstras in many ways by changing the root meanings of their words. A student of grammar can sometimes completely change the meaning of a sentence by juggling grammatical rules. Keśava Kāśmīrī indirectly taunted Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu by implying that although He was a great teacher of grammar, such grammatical jugglery of root meanings did not require great expertise. This was a challenge to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Because it was prearranged that Keśava Kāśmīrī would have to discuss the śāstras with Nimāi Paṇḍita, from the very beginning he wanted to bluff the Lord. Thus the Lord replied as follows.

TEXT 33

prabhu kahe, vyākaraṇa paḍāi–abhimāna kari śiṣyete nā bujhe, āmi bujhāite nāri prabhu kahe-the Lord replied; vyākaraṇa paḍāi-yes, I teach grammar; abhimāna kari-I am supposed to do so; śiṣyete-amongst My disciples; nā-do not; bujhe-understand; āmi-I also; bujhāite-to make them understand; nāri-am not able.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Lord said, ”Yes, I am known as a teacher of grammar, but factually I cannot impress My students with grammatical knowledge, nor can they understand Me very well.

PURPORT

Since Keśava Kāśmīrī was a little puffed up, the Lord increased his artificial pride by presenting Himself as subordinate to him. Thus He flattered him as follows.

TEXT 34

kāhāṅ tumi sarva-śāstre kavitve pravīṇa kāhāṅ āmi sabe śiśu–paḍuyā navīna

SYNONYMS

kāhāṅ-whereas; tumi-your good self; sarva-śāstre-in all scriptures; kavitve-in a literary career; pravīṇa-very experienced; kāhāṅ-whereas; āmi-I; sabe-just; śiśu-a boy; paḍuyā-student; navīna-new.

TRANSLATION

”My dear sir, whereas you are a very learned scholar in all sorts of scriptures and are very experienced in composing poetry, I am only a boy-a new student and nothing more.

TEXT 35

SYNONYMS

tomāra-your; kavitva-poetic integrity; kichu-something; śunite-to hear; haya-becomes; mana-mind; kṛpā-mercy; kari’-showing Me; kara-you do; yadi-if; gaṅgāra-of mother Ganges; varṇana-description.

TRANSLATION

”Therefore I desire to hear your skill in composing poetry. We could hear this if you would mercifully describe the glory of mother Ganges.”

TEXT 36

ghaṭī eke śata śloka gaṅgāra varṇilā

SYNONYMS

śuniyā-hearing this; brāhmaṇa-the paṇḍita, Keśava Kāśmīrī; garve-in pride; varṇite-to describe; lāgilā-began; ghaṭī-hour; eke-one; śata-hundred; śloka-verses; gaṅgāra-of the Ganges; varṇilā-described.

TRANSLATION

When the brāhmaṇa, Keśava Kāśmīrī, heard this, he became still more puffed up, and within one hour he composed one hundred verses describing mother Ganges.

TEXT 37

śuniyā karila prabhu bahuta satkāra

SYNONYMS

śuniyā-hearing this; karila-did; prabhu-the Lord; bahuta-very much; satkāra-high praise; tomā-you; sama-like; pṛthivīte-in the world; kavi-poet; nāhi-there is not; āra-anyone else.

TRANSLATION

The Lord praised him, saying, ”Sir, there is no greater poet than you in the entire world.

TEXT 38

tomāra kavitā śloka bujhite kāra śakti

SYNONYMS

tomāra-your; kavita-poetry; śloka-verses; bujhite-to understand; kāra-whose; śakti-power; tumi-you; bhāla-well; jāna-know; artha-meaning; kiṁvā-or; sarasvatī-the goddess of learning.

TRANSLATION

”Your poetry is so difficult that no one can understand it but you and mother Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning.

PURPORT

Replying to Keśava Kāśmīrī sarcastically, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu indirectly minimized the value of his poetry by saying, ”Yes, your compositions are so nice that no one but you and your worshipable mother, the goddess of learning, can understand them.” Keśava Kāśmīrī was a favorite devotee of mother Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning, but Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as the master of the goddess of learning, has the right to speak sarcastically of her devotees. In other words, although Keśava Kāśmīrī was proud of being favored by the goddess of learning, he did not know that she is controlled by Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself because He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TEXT 39

SYNONYMS

eka-one; ślokera-of a verse; artha-the meaning; yadi-if; kara-you do; nija-mukhe-by your own mouth; śuni'-hearing; saba-all; loka-persons; tabe-thereafter; pāiba-we shall get; baḍa-sukhe-with great happiness.

TRANSLATION

”But if you explain the meaning of one verse, we can all hear it from your own mouth and thus be very happy.”

TEXT 40

TRANSLATION

The Digvijayī, Keśava Kāśmīrī, inquired which verse He wanted explained. The Lord then recited one of the one hundred verses Keśava Kāśmīrī had composed.

TEXT 41

SYNONYMS

mahattvam-greatness; gaṅgāyāḥ-of mother Ganges; satatam-always; idam-this; ābhāti-shines; nitarām-without comparison; yat-because; eṣā-she; śrī-viṣṇoḥ-of Lord Viṣṇu; caraṇa-feet; kamala-lotus flower; utpatti-generation; subhagā-fortunate; dvitīya-second; śrī-beautiful; lakṣmīḥ-goddess of fortune; iva-like; sura-naraiḥ-by demigods and human beings; arcya-worshipable; caraṇā-feet; bhavānī-of goddess Durgā; bhartuḥ-of the husband; yā-she; śirasi-on the head; vibhavati-flourishes; adbhuta-wonderful; guṇā-qualities.

TRANSLATION

” 'The greatness of mother Ganges always brilliantly exists. She is the most fortunate because she emanated from the lotus feet of Śrī Viṣṇu, the Personality of Godhead. She is the second goddess of fortune, and therefore she is always worshiped both by demigods and by humanity. Endowed with all wonderful qualities, she flourishes on the head of Lord Śiva.' ”

TEXT 42

'ei ślokera artha kara'–prabhu yadi baila

SYNONYMS

ei-this; ślokera-of the verse; artha-explanation; kara-kindly do; prabhu-Lord Caitanya; yadi-when; baila-said; vismita-struck with wonder; hañā-being; dig-vijayī-the champion; prabhure-unto the Lord; puchila-inquired.

TRANSLATION

When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked him to explain the meaning of this verse, the champion, very much astonished, inquired from Him as follows.

TEXT 43

jhañjhāvāta-prāya āmi śloka paḍila tāra madhye śloka tumi kaiche kaṇṭhe kaila jhañjhā-vāta-the strong wind of a storm; prāya-like; āmi-I; śloka-verses; paḍila-recited; tāra-of them; madhye-in the midst; śloka-one verse; tumi-You; kaiche-how; kaṇṭhe-within the heart; kaila-have taken.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”I recited all the verses like the blowing wind. How could You completely learn by heart even one among those verses?”

TEXT 44

prabhu kahe, devera vare tumi–'kavi-vara' aiche devera vare keho haya 'śrutidhara'

SYNONYMS

prabhu-the Lord; kahe-replied; devera-of a superior power; vare-by benediction; tumi-you; kavi-vara-the most elevated poet; aiche-similarly; devera-of the Lord; vare-by the benediction; keho-someone; haya-becomes; śruti-dhara-one who can immediately remember.

TRANSLATION

The Lord replied, ”By the grace of the Lord someone may become a great poet, and similarly by His grace someone else may become a great śruti-dhara who can memorize anything immediately.”

PURPORT

In this connection, śruti-dhara is a very important word. Śruti means ”hearing” and dhara means ”one who can capture.” Formerly, before the beginning of Kali-yuga, almost everyone, especially among the intelligent men, the brahmaṇas, was a śruti-dhara. As soon as a student heard any of the Vedic wisdom from his master, he would remember it forever. There was no need to refer to books, and therefore there were no written books in those days. The spiritual master delivered the Vedic hymns and their explanations to the student, who would then remember them forever, without consulting books.

To become a śruti-dhara, one who can remember simply by hearing, is a great achievement for a student. In the Bhagavad-gītā (10.41) the Lord says:

yad yad vibhūtimat sattvaṁ śrīmad ūrjitam eva vā tat tad evāvagaccha tvaṁ mama tejo-'ṁśa-sambhavam

”Know that all opulent, beautiful and glorious creations spring from but a spark of My splendor.” (Bg. 10.41)

As soon as we find anything extraordinary, we should understand that such an extraordinary manifestation is the special grace of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied to the champion, Keśava Kāśmīrī, that just as he was greatly proud of being a favorite devotee of mother Sarasvatī, so someone else, like He Himself, being favored by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, could become a śruti-dhara and thus memorize anything immediately simply by hearing it.

TEXT 45

ślokera artha kaila vipra pāiyā santoṣa prabhu kahe–kaha ślokera kibā guṇa-doṣa

SYNONYMS

ślokera-of the verse; artha-explanation; kaila-made; vipra-the brāhmaṇa; pāiyā-obtaining; santoṣa-satisfaction; prabhu-the Lord; kahe-said; kaha-kindly speak; ślokera-of the verse; kibā-what are; guṇa-qualities; doṣa-faults.

TRANSLATION

Satisfied by the statement of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the brāhmaṇa [Keśava Kāśmīrī] explained the quoted verse. Then the Lord said, ”Now kindly explain the special qualities and faults in the verse.”

PURPORT

Not only did Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu pick out this one among the one hundred verses and remember it although the brāhmaṇa had recited them like the blowing wind, but He also analyzed its qualities and faults. Not only did He hear the verse, but He immediately made a critical study of it.

TEXT 46

vipra kahe śloke nāhi doṣera ābhāsa upamālaṅkāra guṇa, kichu anuprāsa

SYNONYMS

vipra kahe-the brāhmaṇa replied; śloke-in that verse; nāhi-there is not; doṣera-of fault; ābhāsa-even a tinge; upamā-alaṅkāra-simile or metaphor; guṇa-quality; kichu-something; anuprāsa-alliteration.

TRANSLATION

The brāhmaṇa replied, ”There is not a tinge of fault in that verse. Rather, it has the good qualities of similes and alliteration.”

PURPORT

In the last line of the verse quoted by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the letter bha is repeated many times, as in the words bhavānī, bhartur, vibhavati and adbhuta. Such repetition is called anuprāsa, or alliteration. The words lakṣmīr iva and viṣṇoś caraṇa-kamalotpatti are instances of upamā-alaṅkāra, for they exhibit metaphorical beauty. The Ganges is water, and Lakṣmī is the goddess of fortune. Since water and a person are not actually similar, the comparison is metaphorical.

TEXT 47

prabhu kahena,–kahi, yadi na karaha roṣa kaha tomāra ei śloke kibā āche doṣa

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahena-the Lord replied; kahi-let Me say; yadi-if; nā-do not; karaha-you become; roṣa-angry; kaha-please tell Me; tomāra-your; ei śloke-in this verse; kiba-what; āche-there is; doṣa-fault.

TRANSLATION

The Lord said, ”My dear sir, I may say something to you if you will not become angry. Can you explain the faults in this verse?

TEXT 48

pratibhāra kāvya tomāra devatā santoṣe bhāla-mate vicārile jāni guṇa-doṣe pratibhāra-of ingenuity; kāvya-poetry; tomāra-your; devatā-the Lord; santoṣe-satisfies; bhāla-mate-scrutinizingly; vicārile-on analyzing; jāni-I know; guṇa-doṣe-there are faults and good qualities also.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”There is no doubt that your poetry is full of ingenuity, and certainly it has satisfied the Supreme Lord. Yet if we scrutinizingly consider it we can find both good qualities and faults.”

TEXT 49

tāte bhāla kari' śloka karaha vicāra kavi kahe,–ye kahile sei veda-sāra

SYNONYMS

tāte-therefore; bhāla-very carefully; kari'-doing it; śloka-the verse; karaha-do; vicāra-judgment; kavi kahe-the poet said; ye kahile-what You have said; sei-that is; veda-sāra-exactly right.

TRANSLATION

The Lord concluded, "Now, therefore, let us carefully scrutinize this verse." The poet replied, "Yes, the verse You have recited is perfectly correct.

TEXT 50

vyākaraṇiyā tumi nāhi paḍa alaṅkāra tumi ki jānibe ei kavitvera sāra vyākaraṇiyā-a student of grammar; tumi-You are; nāhi-do not; paḍa-study; alaṅkāra-poetic ornaments; tumi-You; ki-what; jānibe-will know; ei-this; kavitvera-of poetic quality; sāra-review.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"You are an ordinary student of grammar. What do You know about literary embellishments? You cannot review this poetry because You do not know anything about it."

PURPORT

Keśava Kāśmīrī first wanted to bluff Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by saying that since He was not an advanced student in literary style, He could not review a verse full of metaphors and literary ornaments. This argument has some basis in fact. Unless one is a medical man one cannot criticize a medical man, and unless one is a lawyer he cannot criticize a lawyer. Therefore Keśava Kāśmīrī first depreciated the Lord's position. Because Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was to the champion a student of grammar, how could He dare criticize a great poet like him? Lord Caitanya, therefore, criticized the poet in a different way. He said that although He was certainly not advanced in a literary career, He had heard from others how to criticize such poetry, and as a śruti-dhara, possessing a complete memory, He could understand the process for such a review.

TEXT 51

prabhu kahena–ataeva puchiye tomāre

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahena-the Lord said; ataeva-therefore; puchiye-I am asking; tomāre-you; vicāriyā-completely reviewing; guṇa-qualities; doṣa-faults; bujhāha-teach; āmāre-Me.

TRANSLATION

Taking a humble position, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "Because I am not of your level, I have asked you to teach Me by explaining the faults and good qualities in your poetry.

TEXT 52

nāhi paḍi alaṅkāra, kariyāchi śravaṇa tāte ei śloke dekhi bahu doṣa-guna

SYNONYMS

nāhi paḍi-I do not study; alaṅkāra-the art of literary embellishment; kariyāchi-I have done; śravaṇa-hearing; tāte-by that; ei śloke-in this verse; dekhi-I see; bahu-many; doṣa-faults; guṇa-good qualities.

TRANSLATION

"Certainly I have not studied the art of literary embellishments. But I have heard about it from higher circles, and thus I can review this verse and find in it many faults and many good qualities."

PURPORT

The statement kariyāchi śravaṇa ("I have heard it") is very important in the sense that hearing is more important than directly studying or perceiving. If one is expert in hearing and hears from the right source, his knowledge is immediately perfect. This process is called śrauta-panthā, or the acquisition of knowledge by hearing from authorities. All Vedic knowledge is based on the principle that one must approach a bona fide spiritual master and hear from the authoritative statements of the Vedas. It is not necessary for one to be a highly polished literary man to receive knowledge; to receive perfect knowledge from a perfect person, one must be expert in hearing. This is called the descending process of deductive knowledge, or avaroha-panthā.

TEXT 53

kavi kahe,–kaha dekhi, kon guṇa-doṣa prabhu kahena,–kahi, śuna, nā kariha roṣa kavi kahe-the poet said; kaha dekhi-you say "I see"; kon-what; guṇa-qualities; doṣa-faults; prabhu kahena-the Lord replied; kahi-let Me say; śuna-please hear; nā-do not; kariha-become; roṣa-angry.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The poet said, "All right, let me see what qualities and faults You have found." The Lord replied, "Let Me speak, and please hear Me without becoming angry.

TEXT 54

pañca doṣa ei śloke pañca alaṅkāra krame āmi kahi, śuna, karaha vicāra

SYNONYMS

pañca-five; doṣa-faults; ei śloke-in this verse; pañca-five; alaṅkāra-literary embellishments; krame-one after another; āmi-I; kahi-say; śuna-kindly hear; karaha-give; vicāra-judgment.

TRANSLATION

”My dear sir, in this verse there are five faults and five literary ornaments. I shall state them one after another. Kindly hear Me and then give your judgment.

PURPORT

In the verse beginning with mahattvaṁ gaṅgāyāḥ there are five literary ornaments and five examples of faulty composition. There are two examples of the fault called avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa and one example each of the faults viruddha-mati, punar-ukti and bhagna-krama.

Vimṛṣṭa means ”clean,” and vidheyāṁśa means ”predicate.” It is a general rule of composition to establish a subject first and then give its predicate. For example, according to Sanskrit grammar if one says, ”This man is learned,” his composition is in order. But if one says, ”Learned is this man,” the composition is not in order. Such a flaw is called avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa-doṣa, or the fault of unclean composition. The subject matter to be known of the verse is the glorification of the Ganges, and therefore the word idam (”this”), or what is known, should have been placed before instead of after the glorification. The subject matter already known should be placed before the unknown so that its meaning will not be misconstrued.

The second instance of avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa-doṣa occurs in the words dvitīya-śrī-lakṣmir iva. In this composition the word dvitīya (”second”) is vidheya, or unknown. Placing the unknown first to make the compound word dvitīya-śrī-lakṣmīr is another fault. The words dvitīya-śrīlakṣmir iva were intended to compare the Ganges to the goddess of fortune, but because of this fault the meaning of the compound word was bewildering.

The third fault is that of viruddha-mati, or contradictory conception, in the words bhavānī-bhartuḥ. The word bhavānī refers to the wife of Bhava, Lord Śiva. But since Bhavānī is already known as the wife of Lord Śiva, to add the word bhartā, ”husband,” thus forming a compound meaning ”the husband of the wife of Lord Śiva,” is contradictory, for thus it appears as if the wife of Lord Śiva had another husband.

The fourth fault is punar-ukti, or redundancy, which occurs when the verb vibhavati (”flourishes”), which should have ended the composition, is further qualified by the unnecessary adjective adbhuta-guṇā (”endowed with wonderful qualities”). The fifth fault is bhagna-krama, which means ”broken order.” In the first, third and fourth lines there is anuprāsa, or alliteration, created by the sounds ta, ra and bha, but in the second line there is no such anuprāsa, and therefore the order is broken.

TEXT 55

’avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa’–dui ṭhāñi cihna
’viruddha-mati’, ’bhagna-krama’, ’punar-ātta’,–doṣa tina avimṛsta-vidheyāṁśa-unclean composition; dui ṭhāñi-in two places; cihna-symptoms; viruddha-mati-a contradictory conception; bhagna-krama-broken order; punar-ātta-redundancy (also called punar-ukti); doṣa-faults; tina-three.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”In this verse the fault of avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa occurs twice, and the faults of viruddha-mati, bhagna-krama and punar-ātta occur once each.

TEXT 56

’gaṅgāra mahattva’–śloke mūla ’vidheya’ idaṁ śabde ’anuvāda’–pāche avidheya

SYNONYMS

gaṅgāra mahattva-glorification of mother Ganges; śloke-in the verse; mūla-chief; vidheya-unknown; idam-this; śabde-by the word; anuvāda-the known; pāche-at the end; avidheya-improper.

TRANSLATION

”The glorification of the Ganges [mahattvaṁ gaṅgāyāḥ] is the principal unknown subject matter in this verse, and the known subject matter is indicated by the word ’idam,’ which has been placed after the unknown.

TEXT 57

’vidheya’ āge kahi’ pāche kahile ’anuvāda’ ei lāgi’ ślokera artha kariyāche bādha vidheya-what is unknown; āge-first; kahi’-after speaking; pāche-at the end; kahile-if one speaks; anuvāda-known things; ei lāgi’-for this reason; ślokera-of the verse; artha-meaning; kariyāche-has been made; bādha-objectionable.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Because you have placed the known subject at the end and that which is unknown at the beginning, the composition is faulty, and the meaning of the words has become doubtful.

TEXT 58

anuvādam anuktvaiva na vidheyam udīrayet na hy alabdhāspadaṁ kiñcit kutracit pratitiṣṭhati

SYNONYMS

anuvādam-things already known; anuktvā-without mentioning; eva-certainly; na-not; vidheyam-unknown subject matters; udīrayet-one should mention; na-not; hi-certainly; alabdha-āspadam-without having achieved a proper place; kiñcit-something; kutracit-anywhere; pratitiṣṭhati-has a position.

TRANSLATION

” ’Without first mentioning what is known, one should not introduce the unknown, for that which has no solid basis can never be established anywhere.’

PURPORT

This is a verse from the Ekādaśī-tattva.

TEXT 59

'dvitīya śrī-lakṣmī'–ihāṅ 'dvitīyatva' vidheya samāse gauṇa haila, śabdārtha gela kṣaya

SYNONYMS

dvitīya śrī-lakṣmī-the word dvitīya-śrī-lakṣmī ("all-opulent goddess of fortune"); ihāṅ-this; dvitīyatva-the quality of being a second; vidheya-the unknown, which is to be explained; samāse-in the compound word; gauṇa-secondary; haila-became; śabda-artha-the word's intended meaning; gela-became; kṣaya-lost.

TRANSLATION

"In the word 'dvitīya-śrīlakṣmī' ['the second all-opulent goddess of fortune'], the quality of being a second Lakṣmī is the unknown. In making this compound word, the meaning became secondary and the originally intended meaning was lost.

TEXT 60

'dvitīya' śabda–vidheya tāhā paḍila samāse
'lakṣmīra samatā' artha karila vināśe

SYNONYMS

dvitīya śabda-the word dvitīya ("second"); vidheya-the unknown; tāhā-that; paḍila-joined; samāse-in the compound word; lakṣmīra-with Lakṣmī; samatā-equality; artha-meaning; karila-became; vināśe-lost.

TRANSLATION

"Because the word 'dvitīya' ['second'] is the unknown, in its combination in this compound word the intended meaning of equality with Lakṣmī is lost.

TEXT 61

'avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa'–ei doṣera nāma
āra eka doṣa āche, śuna sāvadhāna

SYNONYMS

avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa-avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa; ei-this; doṣera-of the fault; nāma-the name; āra-another; eka-one; doṣa-fault; āche-there is; śuna-hear; sāvadhāna-carefully.

TRANSLATION

"Not only is there the fault avimṛṣṭa-vidheyāṁśa, but there is also another fault, which I shall point out to you. Kindly hear Me with great attention.

TEXT 62

'bhavānī-bhartṛ'-śabda dile pāiyā santoṣa
'viruddha-mati-kṛt' nāma ei mahā doṣa

SYNONYMS

bhavānī-bhartṛ śabda-the word bhavānī-bhartṛ ("the husband of Bhavānī"); dile-you have placed; pāiyā-getting; santoṣa-very much satisfaction; viruddha-mati-kṛt-a statement of opposing elements; nāma-named; ei-this; mahā-great; doṣa-fault.

TRANSLATION

"Here is another great fault. You have arranged the word 'bhavānī-bhartṛ' to your great satisfaction, but this betrays the fault of contradiction.

TEXT 63

bhavānī-śabde kahe mahādevera gṛhiṇī tāṅra bhartā kahile dvitīya bhartā jāni bhavānī śabde-by the word bhavānī ("the wife of Lord Śiva"); kahe-is mentioned; mahādevera-of Lord Śiva; gṛhiṇī-the wife; tāṅra-her; bhartā-husband; kahile-if we say; dvitīya-second; bhartā-husband; jāni-we understand.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"The word 'bhavānī' means 'the wife of Lord Śiva.' But when we mention her husband, one might conclude that she has another husband.

TEXT 64

'śiva-patnīra bhartā' ihā śunite viruddha
'viruddha-mati-kṛt' śabda śāstre nahe śuddha

SYNONYMS

śiva-patnīra-of the wife of Lord Śiva; bhartā-husband; iha-this; śunite-to hear; viruddha-contradiction; viruddha-mati-kṛt-that which creates a contradiction; śabda-such a word; śāstre-in the scriptures; nahe-is not; śuddha-pure.

TRANSLATION

"It is contradictory to hear that Lord Śiva's wife has another husband. The use of such words in literature creates the fault called viruddha-mati-kṛt.

TEXT 65

'brāhmaṇa-patnīra bhartāra haste deha dāna' śabda śunitei haya dvitīya-bhartā jñāna brāhmaṇa-patnīra-of the wife of a brāhmaṇa; bhartāra-of the husband; haste-in the hand; deha-give; dāna-charity; śabda-these words; śunitei-hearing; haya-there is; dvitīya-bhartā-another husband; jñāna-knowledge.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”If someone says, ’Place this charity in the hand of the husband of the wife of the brāhmaṇa,’ when we hear these contradictory words we immediately understand that the brāhmaṇa’s wife has another husband.

TEXT 66

’vibhavati’ kriyāya vākya–sāṅga, punaḥ viśeṣaṇa
’adbhuta-guṇā’–ei punar-ātta dūṣaṇa

SYNONYMS

vibhavati kriyāya-by the verb vibhavati (”flourishes”); vākya-statement; sāṅga-complete; punaḥ-again; viśeṣaṇa adbhuta-guṇa-the adjective adbhuta-guṇa (”wonderful qualities”); ei-this; punar-ātta-repetition of the same word; dūṣaṇa-fault.

TRANSLATION

”The statement by the word ’vibhavati’ [’flourishes’] is complete. Qualifying it with the adjective ’adbhuta-guṇā’ [’wonderful qualities’] creates the fault of redundancy.

TEXT 67

tina pāde anuprāsa dekhi anupama eka pāde nāhi, ei doṣa ’bhagna-krama’

SYNONYMS

tina pāde-in three lines; anuprāsa-alliteration; dekhi-I see; anupama-extraordinary; eka pāde-in one line; nāhi-there is not (alliteration); ei doṣa-this fault; bhagna-krama-deviation.

TRANSLATION

”There is extraordinary alliteration in three lines of the verse, but in one line there is no such alliteration. This is the fault of deviation.

TEXT 68

yadyapi ei śloke āche pañca alaṅkāra ei pañca-doṣe śloka kaila chārakhāra yadyapi-although; ei śloke-in this verse; āche-there are; pañca-five; alaṅkāra-literary embellishments; ei pañca-doṣe-by the above-mentioned five faults; śloka-the verse; kaila-has been made; chārakhāra-spoiled.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Although there are five literary ornaments decorating this verse, the entire verse has been spoiled by these five most faulty presentations.

TEXT 69

daśa alaṅkāre yadi eka śloka haya eka doṣe saba alaṅkāra haya kṣaya

SYNONYMS

daśa alaṅkāre-with ten instances of literary ornamentation; yadi-if; eka-one; śloka-verse; haya-there is; eka doṣe-by one fault; saba-all; alaṅkāra-ornaments; haya kṣaya-become null and void.

TRANSLATION

”If there are ten literary ornaments in a verse but even one faulty expression, the entire verse is nullified.

TEXT 70

sundara śarīra yaiche bhūṣaṇe bhūṣita eka śveta-kuṣṭhe yaiche karaye vigīta

SYNONYMS

sundara-beautiful; śarīra-body; yaiche-as; bhūṣaṇe-with ornaments; bhūṣita-decorated; eka-one; śveta-kuṣṭhe-with a white spot of leprosy; yaiche-as; karaye-is made; vigīta-abominable.

TRANSLATION

”One’s beautiful body may be decorated with jewels, but one spot of white leprosy makes the entire body abominable.

PURPORT

The great sage Bharata Muni, an authority on poetic metaphor, has given his opinion in this connection as follows.

TEXT 71

rasālaṅkāra-vat kāvyaṁ doṣa-yuk ced vibhūṣitam syād vapuḥ sundaram api śvitreṇaikena durbhagam

SYNONYMS

rasa-with humors; alaṅkāra-vat-with ornaments (metaphors, similes, etc.); kāvyam-poetry; doṣa-yuk-faulty; cet-if; vibhūṣitam-very nicely decorated; syāt-it becomes so; vapuḥ-the body; sundaram-beautiful; api-even though; śvitreṇa-by a white spot of leprosy; ekena-one; durbhagam-unfortunate.

TRANSLATION

” ’As one’s body, although well-decorated with ornaments, is made unfortunate by even one spot of white leprosy, so an entire poem is made useless by a fault, despite alliteration, similes and metaphors.’

TEXT 72

pañca alaṅkārera ebe śunaha vicāra dui śabdālaṅkāra, tina artha-alaṅkāra

SYNONYMS

pañca-five; alaṅkārera-of the literary embellishments; ebe-now; śunaha-just hear; vicāra-description; dui-two; śabda-alaṅkāra-ornaments of sound or ornaments of words; tina-three; artha-alaṅkāra-ornaments of meaning.

TRANSLATION

”Now hear the description of the five literary embellishments. There are two ornaments of sound and three ornaments of meaning.

TEXT 73

śabdālaṅkāra–tina-pāde āche anuprāsa
’śrī-lakṣmī’ śabde ’punar-uktavad-ābhāsa’

SYNONYMS

śabda-alaṅkāra-ornamentation of sound; tina-pāde-in three lines; āche-there is; anuprāsa-alliteration; śrī-lakṣmī-śabde-in the words śrī-lakṣmī; punar-ukta-vat-of repetition of the same word; ābhāsa-there is a tinge.

TRANSLATION

”There is a sound ornament of alliteration in three lines. And in the combination of the words ’śrī’ and ’lakṣmī’ there is the ornament of a tinge of redundancy.

TEXT 74

prathama-caraṇe pañca ’ta’-kārera pāṅti tṛtīya-caraṇe haya pañca ’repha’-sthiti

SYNONYMS

prathama-caraṇe-in the first line; pañca-five; ta-karera-of the letter ta; pāṅti-very nice composition; tṛtīya-caraṇe-in the third line; haya-there is; pañca-five; repha-of the letter ra; sthiti-composition.

TRANSLATION

”In the arrangement of the first line the letter ’ta’ occurs five times, and the arrangement of the third line repeats the letter ’ra’ five times.

TEXT 75

caturtha-caraṇe cāri ’bha’-kāra-prakāśa ataeva śabdālaṅkāra anuprāsa

SYNONYMS

caturtha-caraṇe-in the fourth line; cāri-four; bha-kāra-of the letter bha; prakāśa-manifestations; ataeva-therefore; śabda-alaṅkāra-ornamental use of different sounds; anuprāsa-alliteration.

TRANSLATION

”In the fourth line the letter ’bha’ occurs four times. This arrangement of alliteration is a pleasing ornamental use of sounds.

TEXT 76

’śrī’-śabde, ’lakṣmī’-śabde–eka vastu ukta punar-ukta-prāya bhāse, nahe punar-ukta śrī-śabde-by the word śrī; lakṣmī-śabde-by the word lakṣmī; eka vastu-one thing; ukta-is indicated; punar-ukta-prāya-almost repetition; bhāse-appears; nahe-but actually it is not; punar-ukta-repetition.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Although the words ’śrī’ and ’lakṣmī’ convey the same meaning and are therefore almost redundant, they are nevertheless not redundant.

TEXT 77

’śrī-yukta lakṣmī’ arthe arthera vibheda punar-uktavad-ābhāsa, śabdālaṅkāra-bheda

SYNONYMS

śrī-yukta lakṣmī-Lakṣmī, possessed of opulence; arthe-in the sense; arthera-of the meaning; vibheda-difference; punar-ukta-vad-ābhāsa-tinge of punar-ukta-vat; śabda-alaṅkāra-ornamental use of words; bheda-different.

TRANSLATION

”Describing Lakṣmī as possessed of śrī [opulence] offers a difference in meaning with a tinge of repetition. This is the second ornamental use of words.

TEXT 78

’lakṣmīr iva’ arthālaṅkāra–upamā-prakāśa āra arthālaṅkāra āche, nāma–’virodhābhāsa’

SYNONYMS

lakṣmīr iva-the words lakṣmīr iva (like Lakṣmī); artha-alaṅkāra-ornamental use of the meaning; upamā-analogy; prakāśa-manifestation; āra-also; artha-alaṅkāra-ornamental use of meaning; āche-there is; nāma-which is named; virodha-ābhāsa-possibility of contradiction.

TRANSLATION

”The use of the words ’lakṣmīr iva’ [’like Lakṣmī’] manifests the ornament of meaning called upamā [analogy]. There is also the further ornament of meaning called virodhābhāsa, or a contradictory indication.

TEXT 79

’gaṅgāte kamala janme’–sabāra subodha
’kamale gaṅgara janma’–atyanta virodha

SYNONYMS

gaṅgāte-in the river Ganges; kamala-lotus flower; janme-grows; sabāra-of everyone; subodha-understanding; kamale-in the lotus flower; gaṅgāra-of the Ganges; janma-birth; atyanta-very much; virodha-contradiction.

TRANSLATION

"Everyone knows that lotus flowers grow in the water of the Ganges. But to say that the Ganges takes birth from a lotus flower seems extremely contradictory.

TEXT 80

'ihāṅ viṣṇu-pāda-padme gaṅgāra utpatti' virodhālaṅkāra ihā mahā-camatkṛti

SYNONYMS

ihāṅ-in this connection; viṣṇu-pāda-padme-in the lotus feet of Lord Viṣṇu; gaṅgāra-of mother Ganges; utpatti-beginning; virodha-contradiction; alaṅkāra-literary decoration; iha-it; mahā-very great; camatkṛti-wonder.

TRANSLATION

"The existence of mother Ganges begins from the lotus feet of the Lord. Although this statement that water comes from a lotus flower is a contradiction, in connection with Lord Viṣṇu it is a great wonder.

TEXT 81

īśvara-acintya-śaktye gaṅgāra prakāśa ihāte virodha nāhi, virodha-ābhāsa

SYNONYMS

īśvara-acintya-śaktye-by the inconceivable potency of the Supreme Lord; gaṅgāra-of the Ganges; prakāśa-emanation; ihāte-in this; virodha nāhi-there is no contradiction; virodha-ābhāsa-appears to be a contradiction.

TRANSLATION

"In this birth of the Ganges by the inconceivable potency of the Lord, there is no contradiction although it appears contradictory.

PURPORT

The central point of all Vaiṣṇava philosophy is to accept the inconceivable potency of Lord Viṣṇu. What sometimes appears contradictory from a material viewpoint is understandable in connection with the Supreme Personality of Godhead because He can perform contradictory activities by dint of His inconceivable potencies. Modern scientists are puzzled. They cannot even explain how such a large quantity of chemicals has formed the atmosphere. Scientists explain that water is a combination of hydrogen and oxygen, but when asked where such a large quantity of hydrogen and oxygen came from and how they combined to manufacture the great oceans and seas, they cannot answer because they are atheists who will not accept that everything comes from life. Their thesis is that life comes from matter.

Where do all these chemicals come from? The answer is that they are produced by the inconceivable energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Living entities are part of the Supreme Godhead, and from their bodies come many chemicals. For example, the lemon tree is a living entity that produces many lemons, and within each lemon is a great deal of citric acid. Therefore, if even an insignificant living entity who is but a part of the Supreme Lord can produce so much of a chemical, how much potency there must be in the body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Scientists cannot perfectly explain where the chemicals of the world are manufactured, but one can explain this perfectly by accepting the inconceivable energy of the Supreme Lord. There is no reason for denying this argument. Since there are potencies in the living entities who are samples of the Personality of Godhead, how much potency there must be in the Supreme Godhead Himself. As described in the Vedas, nityo nityānāṁ cetanaś cetanānām: "He is the chief eternal of all eternals and the chief living entity among all living entities." (Kaṭha Upaniṣad 2.2.13)

Unfortunately, atheistic science will not accept that matter comes from life. Scientists insist upon their most illogical and foolish theory that life comes from matter, although this is quite impossible. They cannot prove in their laboratories that matter can produce life, yet there are thousands and thousands of examples illustrating that matter comes from life. Therefore in Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī says that as soon as one accepts the inconceivable potency of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, no great philosopher or scientist can put forward any thesis to contradict the Lord's power. This is expressed in the following Sanskrit verse.

TEXT 82

ambujam ambuni jātaṁ kvacid api na jātam ambujād ambu mura-bhidi tad-viparītaṁ pādāmbhojān mahā-nadī jātā

SYNONYMS

ambujam-lotus flower; ambuni-in the water; jātam-is grown; kvacit-at any time; api-certainly; na-not; jātam-grown; ambujāt-from a lotus flower; ambu-water; mura-bhidi-in Kṛṣṇa, the killer of Murāsura; tat-viparītam-just the opposite of that; pāda-ambhojāt-from the lotus flower of His feet; mahā-nadī-the great river; jātā-has grown.

TRANSLATION

" 'Everyone knows that lotus flowers grow in the water but water never grows from a lotus. All such contradictions, however, are wonderfully possible in Kṛṣṇa: the great river Ganges has grown from His lotus feet.'

TEXT 83

gaṅgāra mahattva–sādhya, sādhana tāhāra viṣṇu-pādotpatti–'anumāna' alaṅkāra

SYNONYMS

gaṅgāra-of the Ganges; mahattva-opulences; sādhya-subject matter; sādhana-means; tāhāra-of that; viṣṇu-pāda-utpatti-her origin from the lotus feet of the Lord; anumāna-called anumāna (hypothesis); alaṅkāra-an ornament.

TRANSLATION

"The real glory of mother Ganges is that she has grown from the lotus feet of Lord Viṣṇu. Such a hypothesis is another ornament, called anumāna.

TEXT 84

sthūla ei pañca doṣa, pañca alaṅkāra sūkṣma vicāriye yadi āchaye apāra

SYNONYMS

sthūla-gross; ei-these; pañca-five; doṣa-faults; pañca-five; alaṅkāra-literary ornaments; sūkṣma-in detail; vicāriye-we consider; yadi-if; āchaye-there are; apāra-unlimited.

TRANSLATION

"I have simply discussed the five gross faults and five literary embellishments of this verse, but if we consider it in fine detail we will find unlimited faults.

TEXT 85

pratibhā, kavitva tomāra devatā-prasāde avicāra kāvye avaśya paḍe doṣa-bādhe

SYNONYMS

pratibhā-ingenuity; kavitva-poetic imagination; tomāra-your; devatā-of a demigod; prasāde-by the grace; avicāra-without good judgment; kāvye-in the poetry; avaśya-certainly; paḍe-there is; doṣa-fault; bādhe-obstruction.

TRANSLATION

"You have achieved poetic imagination and ingenuity by the grace of your worshipable demigod. But poetry not well reviewed is certainly subject to criticism.

TEXT 86

vicāri' kavitva kaile haya sunirmala sālaṅkāra haile artha kare jhalamala

SYNONYMS

vicāri'-with proper consideration; kavitva-poetic explanation; kaile-if done; haya-it becomes; sunirmala-very pure; sa-alaṅkāra-with metaphorical use of words; haile-if it is; artha-meaning; kare-does; jhalamala-dazzle.

TRANSLATION

"Poetic skill used with due consideration is very pure, and with metaphors and analogies it is dazzling."

TEXT 87

śuniyā prabhura vyākhyā digvijayī vismita mukhe nā niḥsare vākya, pratibhā stambhita

SYNONYMS

śuniyā-hearing; prabhura-of the Lord; vyākhyā-explanation; dig-vijayī-the champion; vismita-struck with wonder; mukhe-in the mouth; nā-did not; niḥsare-come out; vākya-words; pratibhā-ingenuity; stambhita-choked up.

TRANSLATION

After hearing the explanation of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the champion poet was struck with wonder. His cleverness stunned, he could not say anything.

TEXT 88

kahite cāhaye kichu, nā āise uttara tabe vicāraye mane ha-iyā phāṅphara

SYNONYMS

kahite-to speak; cāhaye-wants; kichu-something; nā-not; āise-comes; uttara-any reply; tabe-thereafter; vicāraye-considers; mane-within the mind; ha-iyā-becoming; phāṅphara-puzzled.

TRANSLATION

He wanted to say something, but no reply could come from his mouth. He then began to consider this puzzle within his mind.

TEXT 89

paḍuyā bālaka kaila mora buddhi lopa jāni–sarasvatī more kariyāchena kopa

SYNONYMS

paḍuyā-student; bālaka-a boy; kaila-made; mora-my; buddhi-intelligence; lopa-lost; jāni-I can understand; sarasvatī-mother Sarasvatī; more-with me; kariyāchena-must have been; kopa-angry.

TRANSLATION

"This mere boy has blocked my intelligence. I can therefore understand that mother Sarasvatī has become angry with me.

PURPORT

In the Bhagavad-gītā it is clearly said that all intelligence comes from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is situated in everyone's heart as Paramātmā. The Paramātmā gave the paṇḍita the intelligence to understand that because he was proud of his learning and wanted to defeat even the Supreme Lord, by the will of the Lord and through the agency of mother Sarasvatī he had been defeated. One should not, therefore, be too proud of one's position. Even if one is a greatly learned scholar, if he commits an offense to the lotus feet of the Lord he will not be able to speak properly, in spite of his learning. In every respect, we are controlled. Our only duty, therefore, is to surrender always to the lotus feet of the Lord and not be falsely proud. Mother Sarasvatī created this situation to favor the champion paṇḍita so that he might surrender unto Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 90

ye vyākhyā karila, se manuṣyera nahe śakti nimāñi-mukhe rahi' bale āpane sarasvatī

SYNONYMS

ye vyākhyā-which explanation; karila-He has made; se-that; manuṣyera-of any human being; nahe-there is not; śakti-power; nimāñi-mukhe-in the mouth of this boy Nimāi; rahi'-remaining; bale-speaks; āpane-personally; sarasvatī-mother Sarasvatī.

TRANSLATION

”The wonderful explanation the boy has given could not have been possible for a human being. Therefore mother Sarasvatī must have spoken personally through His mouth.”

TEXT 91

eta bhāvi’ kahe–śuna, nimāñi paṇḍita tava vyākhyā śuni’ āmi ha-ilāṅ vismita eta bhāvi-thinking like this; kahe-the paṇḍita says; śuna-hear; nimāñi paṇḍita-O Nimāi Paṇḍita; tava-Your; vyākhyā-explanations; śuni’-hearing; āmi-I; ha-ilāṅ-have become; vismita-struck with wonder.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thinking thus, the paṇḍita said, ”My dear Nimāi Paṇḍita, please hear me. Hearing Your explanation, I am simply struck with wonder.

TEXT 92

alaṅkāra nāhi paḍa, nāhi śāstrābhyāsa kemane e saba artha karile prakāśa alaṅkāra-the literary use of words; nāhi pada-You never read; nāhi-nor is there; śāstra-abhyāsa-long practice in the discussion of the śāstras; kemane-by which method; e saba-all these; artha-explanations; karile-You have made; prakāśa-manifestation.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”I am surprised. You are not a literary student and do not have long experience in studying the śāstras. How have You been able to explain all these critical points?”

TEXT 93

ihā śuni’ mahāprabhu ati baḍa raṅgī

SYNONYMS

ihā śuni’-hearing this; mahāprabhu-Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ati-very; baḍa-much; raṅgī-funny; tāṅhāra-his; hṛdaya-heart; jāni’-understanding; kahe-says; kari’-doing; bhaṅgī-indication.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this and understanding the paṇḍita’s heart, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied in a humorous way.

TEXT 94

śāstrera vicāra bhāla-manda nāhi jāni sarasvatī ye balāya, sei bali vāṇī

SYNONYMS

śāstrera vicāra-discussion of śāstra; bhāla-manda-good or bad; nāhi jāni-do not know; sarasvatī-mother Sarasvatī; ye balāya-whatever she speaks; sei-those; bali-I say; vāṇī-words.

TRANSLATION

”My dear sir, I do not know what is good composition and what is bad. But whatever I have spoken must be understood to have been spoken by mother Sarasvatī.”

TEXT 95

ihā śuni’ digvijayī karila niścaya śiśu-dvāre devī more kaila parājaya

SYNONYMS

ihā śuni’-hearing this; dig-vijayī-the champion; karila-admitted; niścaya-decision; śiśu-dvāre-through this boy; devī-mother Sarasvatī; more-unto me; kaila-has done; parājaya-defeat.

TRANSLATION

When he heard this judgment from Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the paṇḍita sorrowfully wondered why mother Sarasvatī wanted to defeat him through a small boy.

TEXT 96

āji tāṅre nivediba, kari’ japa-dhyāna śiśu-dvāre kaila more eta apamāna

SYNONYMS

āji-today; tāṅre-unto her; nivediba-I shall offer my prayers; kari’-performing; japa-chanting; dhyāna-meditation; śiśu-dvāre-through a boy; kaila-has done; more-unto me; eta-so much; apamāna-insult.

TRANSLATION

”I shall offer prayers and meditation to the goddess of learning,” the champion concluded, ”and ask her why she has insulted me so greatly through this boy.”

TEXT 97

vastutaḥ sarasvatī aśuddha śloka karāila vicāra-samaya tāṅra buddhi ācchādila

SYNONYMS

vastutaḥ-in fact; sarasvatī-mother Sarasvatī; aśuddha-impure; śloka-verse; karāila-caused him to compose; vicāra-samaya-at the time of reviewing; tāṅra-his; buddhi-intelligence; ācchādila-covered.

TRANSLATION

Sarasvatī had in fact induced the champion to compose his verse in an impure way. Furthermore, when it was discussed she covered his intelligence, and thus the Lord's intelligence was triumphant.

TEXT 98

tabe śiṣya-gaṇa saba hāsite lāgila tā'-sabā niṣedhi' prabhu kavire kahila

SYNONYMS

tabe-at that time; śiṣya-gaṇa-the disciples; saba-all; hāsite-to laugh; lāgila-began; tā'-sabā-all of them; niṣedhi'-forbidding; prabhu-the Lord; kavire-unto the poet; kahila-addressed.

TRANSLATION

When the poetic champion was thus defeated, all the Lord's disciples sitting there began to laugh loudly. But Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked them not to do so, and He addressed the poet as follows.

TEXT 99

tumi baḍa paṇḍita, mahākavi-śiromaṇi yāṅra mukhe bāhirāya aiche kavya-vāṇī

SYNONYMS

tumi-you; baḍa paṇḍita-greatly learned scholar; mahā-kavi-of all great poets; śiromaṇi-the topmost; yāṅra-of whom; mukhe-in the mouth; bāhirāya-emanates; aiche-such; kāvya-vāṇī-poetic language.

TRANSLATION

"You are the most learned scholar and the topmost of all great poets, for otherwise how could such fine poetry come from your mouth?

TEXT 100

TRANSLATION

"Such mistakes should be considered negligible. One should see only how such poets have displayed their poetic power.

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.5.11) it is said:

tad-vāg-visargo janatāgha-viplavo yasmin prati-ślokam abaddhavaty api nāmany anantasya yaśo 'ṅkitāni yat śṛṇvanti gāyanti gṛṇanti sādhavaḥ

"In explaining the glories of the Lord, inexperienced men may compose poetry with many faults, but because it contains glorification of the Lord, great personalities read it, hear it and chant it." Despite its minute literary discrepancies, one must study poetry on the merit of its subject matter. According to Vaiṣṇava philosophy, any literature that glorifies the Lord, whether properly written or not, is first class. There need be no other considerations. The poetic compositions of Bhavabhūti, or Śrīkaṇṭha, include Mālatī-mādhava, Uttara-carita, Vīra-carita and many other similar Sanskrit dramas. This great poet was born during the time of Bhojarāja as the son of Nīlakaṇṭha, a brāhmaṇa. Kālidāsa flourished during the time of Mahārāja Vikramāditya, and he became the state poet. He composed some thirty or forty Sanskrit dramas, including Kumāra-sambhava, Abhijñāna-śakuntala and Megha-dūta. His drama Raghu-vaṁśa is especially famous. We have already described Jayadeva in Chapter Thirteen of this Ādi-līlā.

TEXT 103

śiṣyera samāna muñi nā haṅ tomāra

SYNONYMS

śaiśava-childish; cāpalya-impudence; kichu-anything; nā-do not; labe-please take; āmāra-My; śiṣyera-of disciples; samāna-the equal; muñi-I; na-not; haṅ-am; tomāra-your.

TRANSLATION

”I am not even fit to be your disciple. Therefore kindly do not take seriously whatever childish impudence I have shown.

TEXT 104

āji vāsā’ yāha, kāli miliba ābāra śuniba tomāra mukhe śāstrera vicāra

SYNONYMS

āji-today; vāsā’-resting place; yāha-go back; kāli-tomorrow; miliba-we will meet; ābāra-again; śuniba-I shall hear; tomāra mukhe-from your mouth; śāstrera-on the śāstras; vicāra-discussion.

TRANSLATION

”Please go back home, and tomorrow we may meet again so that I may hear discourses on the śāstras from your mouth.”

TEXT 105

ei-mate nija ghare gelā dui jana kavi rātre kaila sarasvatī-ārādhana

SYNONYMS

ei-mate-in this way; nija ghare-to their respective homes; gelā-went back; dui jana-both of them; kavi-poet; rātre-at night; kaila-performed; sarasvatī-of mother Sarasvatī; ārādhana-worship.

TRANSLATION

In this way both the poet and Caitanya Mahāprabhu went back to their homes, and at night the poet worshiped mother Sarasvatī.

TEXT 106

sarasvatī svapne tāṅre upadeśa kaila sākṣāt īśvara kari’ prabhuke jānila

SYNONYMS

sarasvatī-mother Sarasvatī; svapne-in a dream; tāṅre-unto him; upadeśa-advice; kaila-gave; sākṣāt-directly; īśvara-the Supreme Person; kari’-accepting; prabhuke-the Lord; jānila-he understood.

TRANSLATION

In a dream the goddess informed him of the Lord’s position, and the poetic champion could understand that Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself.

TEXT 107

prāte āsi’ prabhu-pade la-ila śaraṇa prabhu kṛpā kaila, tāṅra khaṇḍila bandhana

SYNONYMS

prāte-in the morning; āsi’-coming back; prabhu-pade-at the lotus feet of the Lord; la-ila-took; śaraṇa-shelter; prabhu-the Lord; kṛpā-mercy; kaila-showed; tāṅra-his; khaṇḍila-cut off; bandhana-all bondage.

TRANSLATION

The next morning the poet came to Lord Caitanya and surrendered unto His lotus feet. The Lord bestowed His mercy upon him and cut off all his bondage to material attachment.

PURPORT

The same process advocated by Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa in His teachings of theBhagavad-gītā as it is-”Surrender unto Me in all instances”-was advocated by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The champion surrendered unto the Lord, and the Lord favored him. One who is favored by the Lord is freed from material bondage, as stated in the Bhagavad-gītā (4.9): tyaktvā dehaṁ punar janma naiti mām eti so ’rjuna.

TEXT 108

bhāgyavanta digvijayī saphala-jīvana vidyā-bale pāila mahāprabhura caraṇa bhāgyavanta-very fortunate; dig-vijayī-the poetic champion; sa-phala-successful; jīvana-life; vidyā-bale-by the strength of learning; pāila-got; mahā-prabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; caraṇa-lotus feet.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The poetic champion was certainly most fortunate. His life was successful by dint of his vast learning and erudite scholarship, and thus he attained the shelter of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

Śrī Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has sung that the best qualification for taking shelter of the lotus feet of Lord Caitanya is to be the most fallen because the Lord came specifically to deliver the fallen souls. In this age there are very few scholars. Almost everyone is a fallen meat-eater, drunkard, woman-hunter or gambler. Such persons are never considered learned scholars, even if they pose as such. Because these so-called scholars superficially see that Caitanya Mahāprabhu associates with the fallen souls, they think that He is meant for a lower class of men but that they do not need Him. Thus such scholars do not take to the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. To be puffed up with false learning, therefore, is a disqualification for accepting the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. But here is a special example, for although the poetic champion was a greatly learned scholar, the Lord also favored him because of his humble submission.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Sixteenth Chapter, describing the pastimes of the Lord in His childhood and youth.

18.4.17 Chapter 17

The Pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu in His Youth

This Seventeenth Chapter, as summarized by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, describes Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes from His sixteenth year until the time He accepted the renounced order of life. Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has already vividly described these pastimes in the Caitanya-bhāgavata. Therefore Kṛṣṇa dāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī describes them only briefly. Vivid descriptions of some portions of His pastimes are seen in this chapter, however, because Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has not elaborately described them.

In this chapter we shall find descriptions of the mango distribution festival and Lord Caitanya's discourses with Chand Kazi. Finally, the chapter shows that the same son of mother Yaśodā, Lord Kṛṣṇa, tasted four transcendental mellows of devotional service in His form of Śacīnandana, the son of mother Śacī. To understand Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's ecstatic love for Him, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa assumed the form of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The attitude of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī is considered the superexcellent devotional mentality. As Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Kṛṣṇa Himself assumed the position of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī to taste Her ecstatic situation. No one else could do this.

When Śrī Kṛṣṇa assumed the form of the four-armed Nārāyaṇa, the gopīs showed their respect, but they were not very much interested in Him. In the ecstatic love of the gopīs, all worshipable forms but Kṛṣṇa are rejected. Among all the gopīs, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī has the highest ecstatic love. When Kṛṣṇa in His form of Nārāyaṇa saw Rādhārāṇī, He could not keep His position as Nārāyaṇa, and again He assumed the form of Kṛṣṇa.

The King of Vrajabhūmi is Nanda Mahārāja, and the same person in Navadvīpa is Jagannātha Miśra, the father of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Similarly, mother Yaśodā is the Queen of Vrajabhūmi, and in the pastimes of Lord Caitanya she is Śacīmātā. Therefore the son of Śacī is the son of Yaśodā. Śrī Nityānanda occupies an ecstatic position of parental love in servitude and fraternal attraction. Śrī Advaita Prabhu exhibits the ecstasy of both fraternity and servitude. All the Lord's other associates, situated in their original love, engage in the service of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

The same Absolute Truth who enjoys as Kṛṣṇa, Śyāmasundara, who plays His flute and dances with the gopīs, sometimes takes birth in a brāhmaṇa family and plays the part of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, accepting the renounced order of life. It appears contradictory that the same Kṛṣṇa accepted the ecstasy of the gopīs, and of course this is very difficult for an ordinary person to understand. But if we accept the inconceivable energy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, we can understand that everything is possible. There is no need of mundane arguments in this connection because mundane arguments are meaningless in regard to inconceivable potency.

In the end of this Seventeenth Chapter Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, following in the footsteps of Śrīla Vyāsadeva, has analyzed all the Ādi-līlā pastimes separately.

TEXT 1

vande svairādbhutehaṁ taṁ caitanyaṁ yat-prasādataḥ yavanāḥ sumanāyante kṛṣṇa-nāma-prajalpakāḥ

SYNONYMS

vande-let me offer my obeisances; svaira-completely independent; adbhuta-and uncommon; īham-whose activities; tam-unto Him; caitanyam-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yat-of whom; prasādataḥ-by the mercy; yavanāḥ-even the unclean; sumanāyante-are transformed into gentlemen; kṛṣṇa-nāma-of the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; prajalpakāḥ-taking to the chanting.

TRANSLATION

Let me offer my respectful obeisances to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, by whose mercy even unclean yavanas become perfectly well-bred gentlemen by chanting the holy name of the Lord. Such is the power of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

There is a persistent misunderstanding between caste brāhmaṇas and advanced Vaiṣṇavas, or gosvāmīs, because caste brāhmaṇas, or smārtas, are of the opinion that one cannot become a brāhmaṇa unless he changes his body. As we have discussed several times, it is to be understood that by the supremely powerful potency of the Lord, as described by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, everything is possible. Caitanya Mahāprabhu is as fully independent as Kṛṣṇa. Therefore no one can interfere with His activities. If He wants, by His mercy He can convert even a yavana, an unclean follower of non-Vedic principles, into a perfectly well-behaved gentleman. This is actually happening in our propagation of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. The members of the present Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement were not born in India, nor do they belong to the Vedic culture, but within the short time of four or five years they have become such wonderful devotees, simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, that even in India they are well received as perfectly well-behaved Vaiṣṇavas wherever they go.

Although less intelligent men cannot understand it, this is the special power of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Actually, the body of a Kṛṣṇa conscious person changes in many ways. Even in the United States, when our devotees chant on the street, American ladies and gentlemen inquire from them whether they are actually Americans because no one could expect Americans to become such nice devotees all of a sudden. Even Christian priests are greatly surprised that all these boys from Jewish and Christian families have joined this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement; before joining, they never regarded any principles of religion seriously, but now they have become sincere devotees of the Lord. Everywhere people express this astonishment, and we take great pride in the transcendental behavior of our students. Such wonders are possible, however, only by the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. They are not ordinary or mundane.

TEXT 2

SYNONYMS

vidyāra auddhatye-because of pride in education; kāhoṅ-anyone; nā-does not; kare-do; gaṇana-care; sakala-all; paṇḍita-learned scholars; jini'-conquering; kare-does; adhyāpana-studies.

TRANSLATION

By dint of pride in His education, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, not caring for anyone else, defeated all kinds of learned scholars while executing His studies.

TEXT 7

vāyu-vyādhi-cchale kaila prema parakāśa bhakta-gaṇa lañā kaila vividha vilāsa

SYNONYMS

vāyu-vyādhi-disease caused by disturbance of the air in the body; chale-on the plea of; kaila-made; prema-love of Godhead; parakāśa-manifestation; bhakta-gaṇa-the devotees; lañā-taking with Him; kaila-did; vividha-varieties of; vilāsa-pastimes.

TRANSLATION

In His youth, the Lord exhibited His ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa on the plea of disturbances of the bodily airs. Accompanied by His confidential devotees, He enjoyed various pastimes in this way.

PURPORT

According to Āyur-vedic treatment, the entire physiological system is conducted by three elements, namely, vāyu, pitta and kapha (air, bile and mucus). Secretions within the body transform into other secretions like blood, urine and stool, but if there are disturbances in the metabolism, the secretions turn into kapha (mucus) by the influence of the air within the body. According to the Ayur-vedic system, when the secretion of bile and formation of mucus disturb the air circulating within the body, fifty-nine varieties of disease may occur. One of such diseases is craziness.

On the plea of disturbance of the bodily air and metabolism, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu acted as if crazy. Thus in His school He began to explain the grammar of verbs through Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Explaining everything in grammar in relationship to Kṛṣṇa, the Lord induced His students to refrain from worldly education, for it is better to become Kṛṣṇa conscious and in this way attain the highest perfectional platform of education. On these grounds, Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī later compiled the grammar entitled Hari-nāmāmṛta-vyākaraṇa. People in general consider such explanations crazy. Therefore the Lord's purpose in His attitude of craziness was to explain that there is nothing within our experience but Kṛṣṇa consciousness, for everything may be dovetailed with Kṛṣṇa consciousness. These pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu have been very vividly described in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-khaṇḍa, Chapter One.

TEXT 8

tabeta karilā prabhu gayāte gamana īśvara-purīra saṅge tathāi milana tabeta-thereafter; karilā-did; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; gayāte-to Gayā; gamana-travel; īśvara-purīra saṅge-with Īśvara Purī; tathāi-there; milana-meeting.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thereafter the Lord went to Gayā. There He met Śrīla Īśvara Purī.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to Gayā to offer respectful oblations to His forefathers. This process is called piṇḍa-dāna. In Vedic society, after the death of a relative, especially one's father or mother, one must go to Gayā and there offer oblations to the lotus feet of Lord Viṣṇu. Therefore hundreds and thousands of men gather in Gayā daily to offer such oblations, or śrāddha. Following this principle, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu also went there to offer piṇḍa to His dead father. Fortunately He met Īśvara Purī there.

TEXT 9

dīkṣā-anantare haila, premera prakāśa deśe āgamana punaḥ premera vilāsa

SYNONYMS

dīkṣā-initiation; anantare-immediately after; haila-became; premera-of love of Godhead; prakāśa-exhibition; deśe-in His home country; āgamana-coming back; punaḥ-again; premera-of love of God; vilāsa-enjoyment.

TRANSLATION

In Gayā, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was initiated by Īśvara Purī, and immediately afterwards He exhibited signs of love of Godhead. He again displayed such symptoms after returning home.

PURPORT

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to Gayā, accompanied by many of His disciples, He became sick on the way. He had such a high fever that He asked His students to bring water that had washed the feet of brāhmaṇas, and when they brought it the Lord drank it and was cured. Therefore everyone should respect the position of a brāhmaṇa, as indicated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Neither the Lord nor His followers displayed any disrespect to brāhmaṇas.

The followers of the Lord must be prepared to offer brāhmaṇas all due respect. But preachers of Lord Caitanya's cult object if someone presents himself as a brāhmaṇa without having the necessary qualifications. The followers of Lord Caitanya cannot blindly accept that everyone born in a brāhmaṇa family is a brāhmaṇa. Therefore one should not indiscriminately follow the Lord's example of showing respect to brāhmaṇas by drinking water that has washed their feet. Gradually the brāhmaṇa families have become degraded because of the contamination of Kali-yuga. Thus they misguide people by exploiting their sentiments.

śacīke prema-dāna, tabe advaita-milana advaita pāila viśvarūpa-daraśana śacīke-unto mother Śacīdevī; prema-dāna-giving love of Godhead; tabe-thereafter; advaita-with Advaita Ācārya; milana-meeting; advaita-Advaita Ācārya; pāila-received; viśva-rūpa-of the universal form of the Lord; daraśana-vision.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thereafter the Lord delivered love of Kṛṣṇa to His mother, Śacīdevī, nullifying her offense at the feet of Advaita Ācārya. Thus there was a meeting with Advaita Ācārya, who later had a vision of the Lord's universal form.

PURPORT

One day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was sitting on the throne of Viṣṇu in the house of Śrīvāsa Prabhu, and in a mood of His own He said, "My mother has offended the lotus feet of Advaita Ācārya. Unless she nullifies this offense at the lotus feet of a Vaiṣṇava, it will not be possible for her to achieve love of Kṛṣṇa." Hearing this, all the devotees went to bring Advaita Ācārya there. While coming to see the Lord, Advaita Ācārya was glorifying the characteristics of mother Śacīdevī, and thus upon arriving He fell down on the ground in ecstasy. Then, under the instruction of Lord Caitanya, Śacīdevī took advantage of this situation to touch Advaita Ācārya's lotus feet. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very much pleased by His mother's action, and He said, "Now My mother's offense at the lotus feet of Advaita Ācārya has been rectified, and she may have love of Kṛṣṇa without difficulty." By this example Lord Caitanya taught everyone that although one may be very much advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, if one offends the lotus feet of a Vaiṣṇava his advancement will not bear fruit. We should therefore be very much conscious not to offend a Vaiṣṇava. Caitanya-caritāmṛta has described such an offense as follows:

yadi vaiṣṇava-aparādha uṭhe hātī mātā upāḍe vā chiṇḍe, tāra śukhi' yāya pātā
(Cc. Madhya 19.156)

As a mad elephant may trample all the plants in a garden, so by committing one offense at the lotus feet of a Vaiṣṇava one may spoil all the devotional service he has accumulated in his life.

After this incident, one day Advaita Ācārya Prabhu requested Caitanya Mahāprabhu to display the universal form He had very kindly shown Arjuna. Lord Caitanya agreed to this proposal, and Advaita Prabhu was fortunate enough to see the universal form of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

prabhura-of the Lord; abhiṣeka-worship; tabe-after that; karila-did; śrīvāsa-of the name Śrīvāsa; khāṭe-on the cot; vasi'-sitting; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kailā-did; aiśvarya-opulence; prakāśa-manifestation.

TRANSLATION

Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura then worshiped Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu by the process of abhiṣeka. Sitting on a cot, the Lord exhibited transcendental opulence.

PURPORT

Abhiṣeka is a special function for the installation of the Deity. In this ceremony the Deity is bathed with milk and water and then worshiped and given a change of dress. This abhiṣeka function was especially observed at the house of Śrīvāsa. All the devotees, according to their means, worshiped the Lord with all kinds of paraphernalia, and the Lord gave benedictions to each devotee according to his desire.

tabe nityānanda-svarūpera āgamana prabhuke miliyā pāila ṣaḍ-bhuja-darśana

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; nityānanda-svarūpera-of the Personality of Godhead Nityānanda; āgamana-appearance; prabhuke-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; miliyā-meeting; pāila-obtained; ṣaṭ-bhuja-darśana-a vision of the six-armed Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

After this function at the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, Nityānanda Prabhu appeared, and when He met with Lord Caitanya He got the opportunity to see Him in His six-armed form.

PURPORT

The form of Ṣaḍ-bhuja, the six-armed Lord Gaurasundara, is a representation of three incarnations. The form of Śrī Rāmacandra is symbolized by a bow and arrow, the form of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa is symbolized by a stick and flute like those generally held by a cowherd boy, and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is symbolized by a sannyāsa-daṇḍa and kamaṇḍalu, or waterpot.

Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu was born in the village of Ekacakra in the district of Birbhum as the son of Padmāvatī and Hāḍāi Paṇḍita. In His childhood He played like Balarāma. When He was growing up, a sannyāsī came to the house of Hāḍāi Paṇḍita, begging to have the paṇḍita's son as his brahmacārī assistant. Hāḍāi Paṇḍita immediately agreed and delivered his son to him, although the separation was greatly shocking, so much so that Hāḍāi lost his life after the separation. Nityānanda Prabhu traveled on many pilgrimages with the sannyāsī. It is said that for many days He lived at Mathurā with him, and at that time He heard about Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes in Navadvīpa. Therefore He came down to Bengal to see the Lord. When Lord Nityānanda came to Navadvīpa, He was a guest at the house of Nandana Ācārya. Understanding that Nityānanda Prabhu had arrived, Lord Caitanya sent His devotees to Him, and thus there was a meeting between Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu.

TRANSLATION

Finally the Lord showed Nityānanda Prabhu His two-armed form of Kṛṣṇa, the son of Mahārāja Nanda, simply playing on His flute, His bluish body dressed in yellow garments.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya-maṅgala vividly elaborates upon this description.

TEXT 16

tabe nityānanda-gosāñira vyāsa-pūjana nityānandāveśe kaila muṣala dhāraṇa

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; nityānanda-of the name Nityānanda; gosāñira-of the Lord; vyāsa-pūjana-worshiping Vyāsadeva or the spiritual master; nityānanda-āveśe-in the ecstasy of becoming Nityānanda; kaila-did; muṣala dhāraṇa-carrying a plowlike weapon called a muṣala.

TRANSLATION

Nityānanda Prabhu then arranged to offer Vyāsa-pūjā, or worship of the spiritual master, to Lord Śrī Gaurasundara. But Lord Caitanya carried the plowlike weapon called muṣala in the ecstasy of being Nityānanda Prabhu.

PURPORT

By the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Nityānanda Prabhu arranged for Vyāsa-pūjā of the Lord on the night of the full moon. He arranged for the Vyāsa-pūjā, or guru-pūjā, through the agency of Vyāsadeva. Since Vyāsadeva is the original guru (spiritual master) of all who follow the Vedic principles, worship of the spiritual master is called Vyāsa-pūjā. Nityānanda Prabhu arranged for the Vyāsa-pūjā, and saṅkīrtana was going on, but when He tried to put a garland on the shoulder of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, He saw Himself in Lord Caitanya. There is no difference between the spiritual positions of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu, or Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma. All of Them are but different manifestations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. During this special ceremony, all the devotees of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu could understand that there is no difference between Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda Prabhu.

TEXT 17

tabe nistārila prabhu jagāi-mādhāi

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; śacī-mother Śacīdevī; dekhila-saw; rāma-kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa and Lord Balarāma; dui bhāi-two brothers; tabe-thereafter; nistārila-delivered; prabhu-the Lord; jagāi-mādhāi-the two brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi.

TRANSLATION

Thereafter mother Śacīdevī saw the brothers Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma in Their manifestation of Lord Caitanya and Nityānanda. Then the Lord delivered the two brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi.

PURPORT

One night Śacīdevī dreamt that the Deities in her house, Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, had taken the forms of Caitanya and Nityānanda and were fighting one another, as children do, to eat the naivedya, or offering to the Deities. On the next day, by the will of Lord Caitanya, Śacīdevī invited Nityānanda to take prasāda at her house. Thus Viśvambhara (Lord Caitanya) and Nityānanda were eating together, and Śacīdevī realized that They were none other than Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma. Seeing this, she fainted.

Jagāi and Mādhāi were two brothers born in Navadvīpa in a respectable brāhmaṇa family who later became addicted to all kinds of sinful activities. By the order of Lord Caitanya, both Nityānanda Prabhu and Haridāsa Ṭhākura used to preach the cult of Kṛṣṇa consciousness door to door. In the course of such preaching they found Jagāi and Mādhāi, two maddened drunken brothers, who, upon seeing them, began to chase them. On the next day, Mādhāi struck Nityānanda Prabhu on the head with a piece of earthen pot, thus drawing blood. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard of this, He immediately came to the spot, ready to punish both brothers, but when the all-merciful Lord Gaurāṅga saw Jagāi's repentant behavior, He immediately embraced him. By seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead face to face and embracing Him, both the sinful brothers were at once cleansed. Thus they received initiation into the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra from the Lord and were delivered.

TEXT 18

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; sapta-prahara-twenty-one hours; chilā-remained; prabhu-the Lord; bhāva-āveśe-in ecstasy; yathā-anywhere; tathā-everywhere; bhakta-gaṇa-the devotees; dekhila-saw; viśeṣe-specifically.

TRANSLATION

After this incident, the Lord remained in an ecstatic position for twenty-one hours, and all the devotees saw His specific pastimes.

PURPORT

In the Deity's room there must be a bed for the Deity behind the Deity's throne. (This system should immediately be introduced in all our centers. It does not matter whether the bed is big or small; it should be of a size the Deity room can conveniently accommodate, but there must be at least a small bed.) One day in the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu sat down on the bed of Viṣṇu, and all the devotees worshiped Him with the Vedic mantras of the Puruṣa-sūkta, beginning with sahasra-śīrṣā puruṣaḥ sahasrākṣaḥ sahasra-pāt. This veda-stuti should also be introduced, if possible, for installations of Deities. While bathing the Deity, all the priests and devotees must chant this Puruṣa-sūkta and offer the appropriate paraphernalia for worshiping the Deity, such as flowers, fruits, incense, ārati paraphernalia, naivedya, vastra and ornaments. All the devotees worshiped Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu in this way, and the Lord remained in ecstasy for seven praharas, or twenty-one hours. He took this opportunity to show the devotees that He is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, who is the source of all other incarnations, as confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (10.8): ahaṁ sarvasya prabhavo mattaḥ sarvaṁ pravartate. All the different forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, or viṣṇu-tattva, emanate from the body of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu exposed all the private desires of the devotees, and thus all of them became fully confident that Lord Caitanya is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Some devotees call this exhibition of ecstasy by the Lord sāta-prahariyā bhāva, or "the ecstasy of twenty-one hours," and others call it mahābhāva-prakāśa or mahā-prakāśa. There are other descriptions of this sāta-prahariyā bhāva in the Caitanya-bhāvagata, Chapter Nine, which mentions that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu blessed a maidservant named Duḥkhī with the name Sukhī. He called for Kholāvecā Śrīdhara, and showed him His mahā-prakāśa. Then He called for Murāri Gupta and showed him His feature as Lord Rāmacandra. He offered His blessings to Haridāsa Ṭhākura, and at this time He also asked Advaita Prabhu to explain the Bhagavad-gītā as it is (gītāra satya-pāṭha) and showed special favor to Mukunda.

SYNONYMS

varāha-āveśa-the ecstasy of becoming Varāhadeva; hailā-became; murāri-bhavane-in the house of Murāri Gupta; tāṅra skandhe-on the shoulders of Murāri Gupta; caḍi'-riding; prabhu-the Lord; nācilā-danced; aṅgane-in the yard.

TRANSLATION

One day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu felt the ecstasy of the boar incarnation and got up on the shoulders of Murāri Gupta. Thus they both danced in Murāri Gupta's courtyard.

PURPORT

One day Caitanya Mahāprabhu began to cry out, "Śūkara! Śūkara!" Thus crying out for the boar incarnation of the Lord, He assumed His form as the boar incarnation and got up on the shoulders of Murāri Gupta. He carried a small gāḍu, a small waterpot with a nozzle, and thus He symbolically picked up the earth from the depths of the ocean, for this is the pastime of Lord Varāha.

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; śuklāmbarera-of Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī; kaila-did; taṇḍula-raw rice; bhakṣaṇa-eating; harer nāma ślokera-of the verse celebrated as such; kaila-did; artha-of the meaning; vivaraṇa-explanation.

TRANSLATION

After this incident the Lord ate raw rice given by Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī and explained very elaborately the import of the "harer nāma" śloka mentioned in the Bṛhan-nāradīya Purāṇa.

PURPORT

Śuklāmbara Brahmacārī resided in Navadvīpa on the bank of the Ganges. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was dancing in ecstasy, he approached the Lord with a begging bag containing rice. The Lord was so pleased with His devotee that immediately He snatched the bag and began to eat the raw rice. No one forbade Him, and thus He finished the entire supply of rice.

TEXT 21

SYNONYMS

kali-kāle-in this Age of Kali; nāma-rūpe-in the form of the holy name; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; avatāra-incarnation; nāma-holy name; haite-from; haya-becomes; sarva-all; jagat-of the world; nistāra-deliverance.

TRANSLATION

"In this Age of Kali, the holy name of the Lord, the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, is the incarnation of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Simply by chanting the holy name, one associates with the Lord directly. Anyone who does this is certainly delivered.

TEXT 23

dārḍhya lāgi' 'harer nāma'-ukti tina-vāra jaḍa loka bujhāite punaḥ 'eva'-kāra dārḍhya lāgi'-in the matter of emphasizing; harer nāma-of the holy name of Lord Hari; ukti-there is utterance; tina-vāra-three times; jaḍa loka-ordinary common people; bujhāite-just to make them understand; punaḥ-again; eva-kāra-the word eva, or "certainly."

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"This verse repeats the word 'eva' ['certainly'] three times for emphasis, and it also three times repeats 'harer nāma' ['the holy name of the Lord'], just to make common people understand.

PURPORT

To emphasize something to an ordinary person, one may repeat it three times, just as one might say, "You must do this! You must do this! You must do this!" Thus the Bṛhan-nāradīya Purāṇa repeatedly emphasizes the chanting of the holy name so that people may take it seriously and thus free themselves from the clutches of māyā. It is our practical experience in the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement all over the world that many millions of people are factually coming to the spiritual stage of life simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra regularly, according to the prescribed principles. Therefore our request to all our students is that they daily chant at least sixteen rounds of this harer nāma mahā-mantra offenselessly, following the regulative principles. Thus their success will be assured without a doubt.

TEXT 24

'kevala'-śabde punarapi niścaya-karaṇa jñāna-yoga-tapa-karma-ādi nivāraṇa

SYNONYMS

'kevala'-śabde-by the word kevala, or "only"; punarapi-again; niścaya-karaṇa-final decision; jñāna-cultivation of knowledge; yoga-practice of the mystic yoga system; tapa-austerity; karma-fruitive activities; ādi-and so on; nivāraṇa-prohibition.

TRANSLATION

"The use of the word 'kevala' ['only'] prohibits all other processes, such as cultivation of knowledge, practice of mystic yoga, and performance of austerities and fruitive activities.

PURPORT

Our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement stresses the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra only, whereas those who do not know the secret of success for this Age of Kali unnecessarily indulge in the cultivation of knowledge, the practice of mystic yoga or the performance of fruitive activities or useless austerities. They are simply wasting their time and misleading their followers. When we point this out very plainly to an audience, members of opposing groups become angry at us. But according to the injunctions of the śāstras, we cannot make compromises with these so-called jñānīs, yogīs, karmīs and tapasvīs. When they say they are as good as we are, we must say that only we are good and that they are not good. This is not our obstinacy; it is the injunction of the śāstras. We must not deviate from the injunctions of the śāstras. This is confirmed in the next verse of Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

TEXT 25

anyathā ye māne, tāra nāhika nistāra nāhi, nāhi, nāhi–e tina 'eva'-kāra anyathā-otherwise; ye-anyone who; māne-accepts; tāra-of him; nāhika-there is no; nistāra-deliverance; nāhi nāhi nāhi-there is nothing else, nothing else, nothing else; e-in this; tina-three; eva-kāra-bearing the meaning of emphasis.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"This verse clearly states that anyone who accepts any other path cannot be delivered. This is the reason for the triple repetition 'nothing else, nothing else, nothing else,' which emphasizes the real process of self-realization.

TEXT 26

tṛṇa haite nīca hañā sadā labe nāma āpani nirabhimānī, anye dibe māna

SYNONYMS

tṛṇa-grass; haite-than; nīca-lower; hañā-becoming; sadā-always; labe-chant; nāma-the holy name; āpani-personally; nirabhimānī-without honor; anye-unto others; dibe-you should give; māna-all respect.

TRANSLATION

"To chant the holy name always, one should be humbler than the grass in the street and devoid of all desire for personal honor, but one should offer others all respectful obeisances.

TEXT 27

taru-sama sahiṣṇutā vaiṣṇava karibe bhartsana-tāḍane kāke kichu nā balibe taru-sama-like a tree; sahiṣṇutā-forbearance; vaiṣṇava-devotee; karibe-should practice; bhartsana-rebuking; tāḍane-chastising; kāke-unto anyone; kichu-something; nā-not; balibe-will utter.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"A devotee engaged in chanting the holy name of the Lord should practice forbearance like that of a tree. Even if rebuked or chastised, he should not say anything to others to retaliate.

TEXT 28

kāṭileha taru yena kichu nā bolaya śukāiyā mare, tabu jala nā māgaya kāṭileha-even being cut; taru-the tree; yena-as; kichu-something; nā-not; bolaya-says; śukāiyā-drying up; mare-dies; tabu-still; jala-water; nā-does not; māgaya-ask for.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"For even if one cuts a tree, it never protests, and even if it is drying up and dying it does not ask anyone for water.

PURPORT

This practice of forbearance (tṛṇād api sunīcena) is very difficult, but when one actually engages in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, the quality of forbearance automatically develops. A person advanced in spiritual consciousness through the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra need not practice to develop it separately, for a devotee develops all good qualities simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra regularly.

TEXT 29

ei-mata vaiṣṇava kāre kichu nā māgiba ayācita-vṛtti, kiṁvā śāka-phala khāiba ei-mata-in this way; vaiṣṇava-a devotee; kāre-from anyone; kichu-anything; nā-not; māgiba-shall ask for; ayācita-vṛtti-the profession of not asking for anything; kiṁvā-or; śāka-vegetables; phala-fruits; khāiba-shall eat.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Thus a Vaiṣṇava should not ask anything from anyone else. If someone gives him something without being asked, he should accept it, but if nothing comes, a Vaiṣṇava should be satisfied to eat whatever vegetables and fruits are easily available.

TEXT 30

sadā nāma la-iba, yathā-lābhete santoṣa

SYNONYMS

sadā-always; nāma-the holy name; la-iba-one should chant; yathā-inasmuch as; lābhete-gains; santoṣa-satisfaction; eita-this; ācāra-behavior; kare-does; bhakti-dharma-of devotional service; poṣa-maintenance.

TRANSLATION

"One should strictly follow the principle of always chanting the holy name, and one should be satisfied with whatever he gets easily. Such devotional behavior solidly maintains one's devotional service.

TEXT 31

tṛṇād api su-nīcena
taror iva sahiṣṇunā
amāninā māna-dena
kīrtanīyaḥ sadā hariḥ

SYNONYMS

tṛṇāt api-than downtrodden grass; su-nīcena-being lower; taroḥ-than a tree; iva-like; sahiṣṇunā-with tolerance; amāninā-without being puffed up by false pride; māna-dena-giving respect to all; kīrtanīyaḥ-to be chanted; sadā-always; hariḥ-the holy name of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

"One who thinks himself lower than the grass, who is more tolerant than a tree, and who does not expect personal honor yet is always prepared to give all respect to others can very easily always chant the holy name of the Lord."

PURPORT

The grass is specifically mentioned in this verse because everyone tramples upon it yet the grass never protests. This example indicates that a spiritual master or leader should not be proud of his position; being always humbler than an ordinary common man, he should go on preaching the cult of Caitanya Mahāprabhu by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra.

TEXT 32

ūrdhva-bāhu kari' kahoṅ, śuna, sarva-loka nāma-sūtre gāṅthi' para kaṇṭhe ei śloka ūrdhva-bāhu-raising my hands; kari'-doing so; kahoṅ-I declare; śuna-please hear; sarva-loka-all persons; nāma-of the holy name; sūtre-on the thread; gāṅthi-stringing; para-get it; kaṇṭhe-on the neck; ei-this; śloka-verse.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Raising my hands, I declare, "Everyone please hear me! String this verse on the thread of the holy name and wear it on your neck for continuous remembrance."

PURPORT

When chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, in the beginning one may commit many offenses, which are called nāmābhāsa and nāma-aparādha. In this stage there is no possibility of achieving perfect love of Kṛṣṇa by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Therefore one must chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra according to the principles of the above verse, tṛṇād api su-nīcena taror iva sahiṣṇunā. One should note in this connection that chanting involves the activities of the upper and lower lips as well as the tongue. All three must be engaged in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. The words "Hare Kṛṣṇa" should be very distinctly pronounced and heard. Sometimes one mechanically produces a hissing sound instead of chanting with the proper pronunciation with the help of the lips and tongue. Chanting is very simple, but one must practice it seriously. Therefore the author of Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, advises everyone to keep this verse always strung about his neck.

TEXT 33

TRANSLATION

One must strictly follow the principles given by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu in this verse. If one simply follows in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya and the Gosvāmīs, certainly he will achieve the ultimate goal of life, the lotus feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

rātre saṅkīrtana kaila eka saṁvatsara tabe-thereafter; prabhu-the Lord, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śrīvāsera-of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; gṛhe-in the home; nirantara-always; rātre-at night; saṅkīrtana-congregational chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra; kaila-performed; eka saṁvatsara-one full year.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu regularly led congregational chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra in the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura every night for one full year.

TEXT 35

kapāṭa diyā kīrtana kare parama āveśe pāṣaṇḍī hāsite āise, nā pāya praveśe

SYNONYMS

kapāṭa-door; diyā-closing; kīrtana-chanting; kare-performed; parama-very high; āveśe-in an ecstatic condition; pāṣaṇḍī-nonbelievers; hāsite-to laugh; āise-come; nā-does not; pāya-get; praveśe-entrance.

TRANSLATION

This ecstatic chanting was performed with the doors closed so that nonbelievers who came to make fun could not gain entrance.

PURPORT

Chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is open to everyone, but sometimes nonbelievers come to disturb the ceremony of chanting. It is indicated herein that under such circumstances the temple doors should be closed. Only bona fide chanters should be admitted; others should not. But when there is large-scale congregational chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, we keep our temples for everyone to join, and by the grace of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu this policy has given good results.

TEXT 36

kīrtana śuni' bāhire tārā jvali' puḍi' mare śrīvāsere duḥkha dite nānā yukti kare kīrtana śuni'-after hearing the chanting; bāhire-outside; tārā-the nonbelievers; jvali'-burned; puḍi'-to ashes; mare-die; śrīvāsere-unto Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; duḥkha-troubles; dite-to give; nānā-various; yukti-plans; kare-do.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thus the nonbelievers almost burned to ashes and died in envy. To retaliate, they planned various ways to give trouble to Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura.

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; vipra-one brāhmaṇa; nāma-named; gopāla cāpāla-of the name Gopāla Cāpāla; pāṣaṇḍī-pradhāna-the chief of the nonbelievers; sei-he; durmukha-ferocious, using strong words; vācāla-talkative; bhavānī-pūjāra-for worshiping the goddess

Bhavānī; saba-all; sāmagrī-ingredients, paraphernalia; lañā-taking; rātre-at night; śrīvāsera-of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; dvāre-on the door; sthāna-the place; lepāñā-smearing.

TRANSLATION

One night while kīrtana was going on inside Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's house, a brāhmaṇa named Gopāla Cāpāla, the chief of the non-believers, who was talkative and very rough in his speech, placed all the paraphernalia for worshiping the goddess Durgā outside Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's door.

PURPORT

This brāhmaṇa, Gopāla Cāpāla, wanted to defame Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura by proving that he was actually a śākta, or a worshiper of Bhavānī, the goddess Durgā, but was externally posing as a Vaiṣṇava. In Bengal there is perpetual competition between the devotees of Goddess Kālī and the devotees of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Generally Bengalis, especially those who are meat-eaters and drunkards, are very much attached to worshiping the goddesses Durgā, Kālī, Śītalā and Caṇḍī. Such devotees, who are known as śāktas, or worshipers of the śakti-tattva, are always envious of Vaiṣṇavas. Since Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura was a well-known and respected Vaiṣṇava in Navadvīpa, Gopāla Cāpāla wanted to reduce his prestige by bringing him down to the platform of the śāktas. Therefore outside Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's door he placed various paraphernalia for worshiping Bhavānī, the wife of Lord Śiva, such as a red flower, a plantain leaf, a pot of wine, and reddish sandalwood paste. In the morning, when Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura saw all this paraphernalia in front of his door, he called for the respectable gentlemen of the neighborhood and showed them that at night he was worshiping Bhavānī. Very much sorry, these gentlemen called for a sweeper to cleanse the place and purify it by sprinkling water and cow dung there. This incident concerning Gopāla Cāpāla is not mentioned in the Caitanya-bhāgavata.

TEXT 39

SYNONYMS

kalāra pāta-a banana leaf; upare-upon it; thuila-placed; oḍa-phula-a particular type of flower; haridrā-turmeric; sindūra-vermilion; āra-and; rakta-candana-red sandalwood; taṇḍula-rice.

TRANSLATION

On the upper portion of a plantain leaf he placed such paraphernalia for worship as oḍa-phula, turmeric, vermilion, red sandalwood and rice.

TEXT 40

SYNONYMS

madya-bhāṇḍa-a pot of wine; pāśe-by the side of; dhari'-placing; nija-ghare-to his own home; gela-went; prātaḥ-kāle-in the morning; śrīvāsa-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; tāhā-all those things; ta'-certainly; dekhila-saw.

TRANSLATION

He placed a pot of wine beside all this, and in the morning when Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura opened his door he saw this paraphernalia.

TEXT 41

SYNONYMS

baḍa baḍa-respectable; loka-persons; saba-all; ānila-brought them; bolāiyā-causing to be called; sabāre-to everyone; kahe-addresses; śrīvāsa-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; hāsiyā hāsiyā-while smiling.

TRANSLATION

Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura called for all the respectable gentlemen of the neighborhood and smilingly addressed them as follows.

TEXT 42

nitya rātre kari āmi bhavānī-pūjana āmāra mahimā dekha, brāhmaṇa-sajjana

SYNONYMS

nitya rātre-every night; kari-I do; āmi-I; bhavānī-pūjana-worship of Bhavānī, the wife of Lord Śiva; āmāra-my; mahimā-glories; dekha-you see; brāhmaṇa-sat-jana-all respectable brāhmaṇas.

TRANSLATION

"Gentlemen, every night I worship the goddess Bhavānī. Since the paraphernalia for the worship is present here, now all you respectable brāhmaṇas and members of the higher castes can understand my position."

PURPORT

According to the Vedic system there are four castes-the brāhmaṇas, kṣatriyas, vaiśyas and śūdras-and below them are the pañcamas, who are lower than the śūdras. The higher castes-the brāhmaṇas, the kṣatriyas and even the vaiśyas-were known as brāhmaṇa-saj-jana. The brāhmaṇas especially were known as sajjana, or respectable gentlemen who guided the entire society. If there were disputes in the village, people would approach these respectable brāhmaṇas to settle them. Now it is very difficult to find such brāhmaṇas and saj-janas, and thus every village and town is so disrupted that there is no peace and happiness anywhere. To revive a fully cultured civilization, the scientific division of society into brāhmaṇas, kṣatriyas, vaiśyas and śūdras must be introduced all over the world. Unless some people are trained as brāhmaṇas, there cannot be peace in human society.

TEXT 43

TRANSLATION

Then all the assembled gentlemen exclaimed, "What is this? What is this? Who has performed such mischievous activities? Who is that sinful man?"

TEXT 44

SYNONYMS

hāḍike-a sweeper; āniyā-calling; saba-all; dūra karāila-caused to be thrown far; jala-water; gomaya-cow dung; diyā-mixing; sei-that; sthāna-place; lepāila-caused to be smeared over.

TRANSLATION

They called for a sweeper [hāḍi], who threw all the items of worship far away and cleansed the place by mopping it with a mixture of water and cow dung.

PURPORT

The men in Vedic society who engage in public sanitary activities like picking up stool and sweeping the street are called hāḍis. Sometimes they are untouchable, especially when engaged in their profession, yet such hāḍis also have the right to become devotees. This is established by Śrī Bhagavad-gītā (9.32), where the Lord declares:

māṁ hi pārtha vyapāśritya
ye 'pi syuḥ pāpa-yonayaḥ
striyo vaiśyās tathā śūdrās
te 'pi yānti parāṁ gatim

"O son of Pṛthā, those who take shelter in Me, though they be of lower birth-women, vaiśyas [merchants], as well as śūdras [workers]-can approach the supreme destination."

There are many untouchables of the lower caste in India, but according to Vaiṣṇava principles everyone is welcome to accept this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement on the spiritual platform of life and thus be freed from trouble. Equality or fraternity on the material platform is impossible.

When Lord Caitanya declares, tṛṇād api su-nīcena taror iva sahiṣṇunā, He indicates that one must be above the material conception of life. When one thoroughly understands that he is not the material body but a spiritual soul, he is even humbler than a man of the lower castes, for he is spiritually elevated. Such humility, in which one thinks himself lower than the grass, is called su-nīcatva, and being more tolerant than a tree is called sahiṣṇutva, forbearance. Being situated in devotional service, not caring for the material conception of life, is called amānitva, indifference to material respect; yet a devotee thus situated is called māna-da, for he is prepared to give honor to others without hesitation.

Mahatma Gandhi started the hari-jana movement to purify the untouchables, but he was a failure because he thought that one could become a hari-jana, a personal associate of the Lord, through some kind of material adjustment. That is not possible. Unless one fully realizes that he is not the body but a spiritual soul, there is no question of his becoming a hari-jana. Those who do not follow in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His disciplic succession cannot distinguish between matter and spirit, and therefore all their ideas are but a mixed-up hodgepodge of problems. They are virtually lost in the bewildering network of Māyādevī.

TEXT 45

SYNONYMS

tina dina-three days; rahi'-remaining in that way; sei-that; gopāla-cāpāla-of the name Gopāla Cāpāla; sarva-aṅge-all over the body; ha-ila-became visible; kuṣṭha-leprosy; vahe-discharging; rakta-dhāra-a flow of blood.

TRANSLATION

After three days, leprosy attacked Gopāla Cāpāla, and blood oozed from sores all over his body.

TEXT 46

sarvāṅga beḍila kīṭe, kāṭe nirantara

SYNONYMS

sarva-aṅga-all over the body; beḍila-became covered; kīṭe-by insects; kāṭe-biting; nirantara-always; asahya-unbearable; vedanā-pain; duḥkhe-in unhappiness; jvalaye-burns; antara-without cessation.

TRANSLATION

Incessantly covered with germs and insects biting him all over his body, Gopāla Cāpāla felt unbearable pain. His entire body burned in distress.

TEXT 47

SYNONYMS

gaṅgā-ghāṭe-on the bank of the Ganges; vṛkṣa-tale-underneath a tree; rahe-remains; ta'-certainly; vasiyā-sitting; eka dina-one day; bale-says; kichu-something; prabhuke-the Lord; dekhiyā-seeing.

TRANSLATION

Since leprosy is an infectious disease, Gopāla Cāpāla left the village to sit down on the bank of the Ganges underneath a tree. One day, however, he saw Caitanya Mahāprabhu passing by and spoke to Him as follows.

TEXT 48

SYNONYMS

grāma-sambandhe-in a village relationship; āmi-I (am); tomāra-Your; mātula-maternal uncle; bhāgina-nephew; mui-I; kuṣṭha-vyādhite-by the disease of leprosy; hañāchi-have become; vyākula-too much afflicted.

TRANSLATION

"My dear nephew, I am Your maternal uncle in our village relationship. Please see how greatly this attack of leprosy has afflicted me.

TEXT 49

loka saba uddhārite tomāra avatāra muñi baḍa dukhī, more karaha uddhāra

SYNONYMS

loka-people; saba-all; uddhārite-to deliver; tomāra-Your; avatāra-incarnation; muñi-I (am); baḍa-very; dukhī-unhappy; more-unto me; karaha-please do; uddhāra-deliverance.

TRANSLATION

"As an incarnation of God, You are delivering so many fallen souls. I am also a greatly unhappy fallen soul. Kindly deliver me by Your mercy."

PURPORT

It appears that although Gopāla Cāpāla was sinful, talkative and insulting, he nevertheless had the qualification of simplicity. Thus he believed Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be the incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead who had come to deliver all fallen souls, and he appealed for his own deliverance, seeking the mercy of the Lord. He did not know, however, that the deliverance of the fallen does not consist of curing their bodily diseases, although it is also a fact that when a man is delivered from the material clutches his material bodily diseases are automatically cured. Gopāla Cāpāla simply wanted to be delivered from the bodily sufferings of leprosy, but Śrī Caitanya, although accepting his sincere appeal, wanted to inform him of the real cause of suffering.

TEXT 50

SYNONYMS

eta-thus; śuni'-hearing; mahāprabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ha-ila-there was; kruddha-angry; mana-mind; krodha-āveśe-out of intense anger; bale-says; tāre-unto him; tarjana-chastising; vacana-words.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this, Caitanya Mahāprabhu appeared greatly angry, and in that angry mood He spoke some words chastising him.

TEXT 51

āre pāpi, bhakta-dveṣi, tore na uddhārimu

SYNONYMS

āre-O; pāpi-you sinful person; bhakta-dveṣi-envious of devotees; tore-you; nā uddhārimu-I shall not deliver; koṭi-janma-for ten million births; ei mate-in this way; kīḍāya-by the germs; khāoyāimu-I shall cause you to be bitten.

TRANSLATION

"O sinful person, envious of pure devotees, I shall not deliver you! Rather, I shall have you bitten by these germs for many millions of years.

PURPORT

We should note herein that all our sufferings in this material world, especially from disease, are due to our past sinful activities. And of all sinful activities, actions directed against a pure devotee out of sheer envy are considered extremely severe. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted Gopāla Cāpāla to understand the cause of his suffering. Any person who disturbs a pure devotee engaged in broadcasting the holy name of the Lord is certainly punished like Gopāla Cāpāla. This is the instruction of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. As we shall see, one who offends a pure devotee can never satisfy Caitanya Mahāprabhu unless and until he sincerely regrets his offense and thus rectifies it.

TEXT 52

śrīvāse karāili tui bhavānī-pūjana koṭi janma habe tora raurave patana

SYNONYMS

śrīvāse-unto Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; karāili-you have caused to do; tui-you; bhavānī-pūjana-worshiping the goddess Bhavānī; koṭi janma-for ten million births; habe-there will be; tora-your; raurave-in hell; patana-fall down.

TRANSLATION

"You have made Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura appear to have been worshiping the goddess Bhavānī. Simply for this offense, you will have to fall down into hellish life for ten million births.

PURPORT

There are many tantric followers who practice the black art of worshiping the goddess Bhavānī in a crematorium, wishing to eat meat and drink wine. Such fools also consider this bhavānī-pūjā as good as worship of Lord Kṛṣṇa in devotional service. Such abominable tantric activities performed by so-called svāmīs and yogīs are herein condemned, however, by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He declares that such bhavānī-pūjā for drinking wine and eating meat quickly plunges one into hellish life. The method of worship itself is already hellish, and its results must also be hellish and nothing more.

Many rascals say that whatever way one accepts, one will ultimately reach Brahman. Yet we can see from this verse how such persons reach Brahman. Brahman spreads everywhere, but appreciation of Brahman in different objects leads to different results. In the Bhagavad-gītā (4.11) the Lord says, ye yathā māṁ prapadyante tāṁs tathaiva bhajāmy aham: "I reward everyone according to his surrender unto Me." Māyāvādīs certainly realize Brahman in certain aspects, but realization of Brahman in the aspects of wine, women and meat is not the same realization of Brahman that devotees achieve by chanting, dancing and eating prasāda. Māyāvādī philosophers, being educated in paltry knowledge, think all sorts of Brahman realization one and the same and do not consider varieties. But although Kṛṣṇa is everywhere, by His inconceivable potency He is simultaneously not everywhere. Thus the Brahman realization of the tantric cult is not the same Brahman realization as that of pure devotees. Unless one reaches the highest point of Brahman realization, Kṛṣṇa consciousness, he is punishable. All people except Kṛṣṇa conscious devotees are to some proportion pāṣaṇḍīs, or demons, and thus they are punishable by the Supreme Lord, the Personality of Godhead, as stated below.

pāṣaṇḍī saṁhārite mora ei avatāra pāṣaṇḍī saṁhāri' bhakti karimu pracāra

SYNONYMS

pāṣaṇḍī-demons, atheists; saṁhārite-to kill; mora-My; ei-this; avatāra-incarnation; pāṣaṇḍī-atheist; saṁhāri'-killing; bhakti-devotional service; karimu-I shall do; pracāra-preaching.

TRANSLATION

"I have appeared in this incarnation to kill the demons [pāṣaṇḍīs] and, after killing them, to preach the cult of devotional service."

PURPORT

Lord Caitanya's mission is the same as that of Lord Kṛṣṇa, as He states in the Bhagavad-gītā (4.7-8):

yadā yadā hi dharmasya
glānir bhavati bhārata
abhyutthānam adharmasya
tadātmānaṁ sṛjāmy aham paritrāṇāya sādhūnāṁ vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām dharma-saṁsthāpanārthāya sambhavāmi yuge yuge

"Whenever and wherever there is a decline in religious practice, O descendant of Bharata, and a predominant rise of irreligion-at that time I descend Myself. In order to deliver the pious and to annihilate the miscreants, as well as to reestablish the principles of religion, I advent Myself millennium after millennium"

As explained here, the real purpose of an incarnation of Godhead is to kill the atheists and maintain the devotees. He does not say, like so many rascal incarnations, that both atheists and devotees are on the same platform. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, or Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the real Personality of Godhead, does not advocate such an idea.

Atheists are punishable, whereas devotees are to be protected. To maintain this principle is the mission of all avatāras, or incarnations. One must therefore identify an incarnation by His activities, not by popular votes or mental concoctions. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu gave protection to devotees and killed many demons in the course of His preaching work. He specifically mentioned that the Māyāvādī philosophers are the greatest demons. Therefore He warned all others not to hear the Māyāvāda philosophy. Māyāvādi-bhāṣya śunile haya sarva-nāśa. Simply by hearing the Māyāvāda interpretation of the śāstras, one is doomed (Cc. Madhya 6.169).

TEXT 54

eta bali' gelā prabhu karite gaṅgā-snāna eta bali'-saying this; gelā-went away; prabhu-the Lord; karite-to take; gaṅgā-snāna-a bath in the Ganges; sei-that; pāpī-sinful man; duḥkha-pains; bhoge-suffers; nā-not; yāya-go away; parāṇa-the life.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After saying this, the Lord left to take His bath in the Ganges, and that sinful man did not give up his life but continued to suffer.

PURPORT

It appears that an offender to a Vaiṣṇava continues to suffer and does not give up his life. We have actually seen that a great vaiṣṇava-aparādhī is continuously suffering so much that it is difficult for him to move, and yet he does not die.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya, after accepting the renounced order of life, went to Jagannātha Purī and then came back to the village of Kuliyā, upon His return that sinful man took shelter at the Lord's lotus feet. The Lord, being merciful to him, gave him instructions for his benefit.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, in his Anubhāṣya, has given the following note in connection with the village Kuliyā. The village originally known as Kuliyā has developed into what is now the city of Navadvīpa. In various authorized books like Bhakti-ratnākara, Caitanya-carita-mahākāvya, Caitanya-candrodaya-nāṭaka and Caitanya-bhāgavata it is mentioned that the village Kuliyā is on the western side of the Ganges. Even now, within the area known as Koladvīpa, there is a place known as kuliāra gañja and a place called kuliāra daha, both within the jurisdiction of the present municipality of Navadvīpa. In the time of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu there were two villages, named Kuliyā and Pāhāḍapura, on the western side of the Ganges, both belonging to the jurisdiction of Bāhiradvīpa. At that time the place on the eastern side of the Ganges now known as Antardvīpa was known as Navadvīpa. At Śrī Māyāpur that place is still known as Dvīpera Māṭha. There is another place of the name Kuliyā near Kāṅcaḍāpāḍā, but it is not the same Kuliyā mentioned here. It cannot be accepted as aparādha-bhañjanera pāṭa, or the place where the offense was excused, for that occurred in the above-mentioned Kuliyā on the western side of the Ganges. For business reasons many envious persons oppose excavation of the real place, and sometimes they advertise unauthorized places as the authorized one.

SYNONYMS

śrīvāsa paṇḍitera-of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; sthāne-at the lotus feet; āche-there is; aparādha-offense; tathā-there; yāha-go; teṅho-he; yadi-if; karena-does; prasāda-blessings; tabe-then; tora-your; habe-there will be; ei-this; pāpa-vimocana-immunity from sinful reaction; yadi-if; punaḥ-again; aiche-such; nāhi kara-you do not commit; ācaraṇa-behavior.

TRANSLATION

”You have committed an offense at the lotus feet of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura,” the Lord said. ”First you must go there and beg for his mercy, and then if he gives you his blessings and you do not commit such sins again, you will be freed from these reactions.”

TEXT 59

tabe vipra la-ila āsi śrīvāsa śaraṇa

SYNONYMS

tabe-after that; vipra-the brāhmaṇa (Gopāla Cāpāla); la-ila-took shelter; āsi-coming; śrīvāsa-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; śaraṇa-shelter of his lotus feet; tāṅhāra kṛpāya-by his mercy; haila-became; pāpa-vimocana-free from all sinful reaction.

TRANSLATION

Then the brāhmaṇa, Gopāla Cāpāla, went to Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura and took shelter of his lotus feet, and by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura’s mercy he was freed from all sinful reactions.

TEXT 60

āra eka vipra āila kīrtana dekhite

SYNONYMS

āra-another; eka-one; vipra-brāhmaṇa; āila-came; kīrtana-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; dekhite-to see; dvāre-in the gateway; kapāṭa-the door (being closed); nā pāila-did not get; bhitare-inside; yāite-to go.

TRANSLATION

Another brāhmaṇa also came to see the kīrtana performance, but the door was closed, and he could not enter the hall.

TEXT 61

SYNONYMS

phiri’ gela-went back; vipra-the brāhmaṇa; ghare-to his home; mane-within his mind; duḥkha-unhappiness; pāñā-getting; āra dina-the next day; prabhuke-unto the Lord; kahe-says; gaṅgāya-on the bank of the Ganges; lāga-touch; pāñā-getting.

TRANSLATION

He returned home with an unhappy mind, but on the next day he met Lord Caitanya on the bank of the Ganges and spoke to Him.

TEXT 62

śāpiba tomāre muñi, pāñāchi mano-duḥkha paitā chiṇḍiyā śāpe pracaṇḍa durmukha

SYNONYMS

śapiba-I shall curse; tomāre-You; muñi-I; pāñāchi-I have; manaḥ-duḥkha-mentally very much aggrieved; paitā-sacred thread; chiṇḍiyā-breaking; śāpe-cursing; pracaṇḍa-fiercely; durmukha-one who speaks harshly.

TRANSLATION

That brāhmaṇa was expert in talking harshly and cursing others. Thus he broke his sacred thread and declared, ”I shall now curse You, for Your behavior has greatly aggrieved me.”

TEXT 63

saṁsāra-sukha tomāra ha-uka vināśa

SYNONYMS

saṁsāra-sukha-material happiness; tomāra-Your; ha-uka-may it become; vināśa-all vanquished; śāpa śuni’-hearing this curse; prabhura-of the Lord; citte-within His mind; ha-ila-there was; ullāsa-jubilation.

TRANSLATION

The brāhmaṇa cursed the Lord, "You shall be bereft of all material happiness!" When the Lord heard this, He felt great jubilation within Himself.

TEXT 64

prabhura śāpa-vārtā yei śune śraddhāvān brahma-śāpa haite tāra haya paritrāṇa

SYNONYMS

prabhura-of the Lord; śāpa-vārtā-the incident of the curse; yei-anyone who; śune-hears; śraddhāvān-with affection; brahma-śāpa-cursing by a brāhmaṇa; haite-from; tāra-his; haya-becomes; paritrāṇa-deliverance.

TRANSLATION

Any faithful person who hears of this brāhmaṇa's cursing Lord Caitanya is delivered from all brahminical curses.

PURPORT

One should know with firm conviction that the Lord, being transcendental, is never subject to any curse or benediction. Only ordinary living entities are subjected to curses and the punishments of Yamarāja. As the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is beyond such punishments and benedictions. When one understands this fact with faith and love, he personally becomes free from all curses uttered by brāhmaṇas or anyone else. This incident is not mentioned in the Caitanya-bhāgavata.

mukunda-dattere kaila daṇḍa-parasāda khaṇḍila tāhāra cittera saba avasāda

SYNONYMS

mukunda-dattere-unto Mukunda Datta; kaila-did; daṇḍa-punishment; parasāda-benediction; khaṇḍila-vanquished; tāhāra-his; cittera-of the mind; saba-all kinds of; avasāda-depressions.

TRANSLATION

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu blessed Mukunda Datta with punishment and in that way vanquished all his mental depression.

PURPORT

Mukunda Datta was once forbidden to enter the association of Śri Caitanya Mahāprabhu because of his mixing with the Māyāvādī impersonalists. When Lord Caitanya manifested His mahā-prakāśa, He called all the devotees one after another and blessed them, while Mukunda Datta stood outside the door. The devotees informed the Lord that Mukunda Datta was waiting outside, but the Lord replied, "I shall not soon be pleased with Mukunda Datta, for he explains devotional service among devotees, but then he goes to Māyāvādīs to hear from them the Yoga-vāśiṣṭha-rāmāyaṇa, which is full of Māyāvāda philosophy. For this I am greatly displeased with him." Hearing the Lord speak in that way, Mukunda Datta, standing outside, was exceedingly glad that the Lord would at some time be pleased with him, although He was not pleased at that moment. But when the Lord understood that Mukunda Datta was going to give up the association of the Māyāvādīs for good, He was pleased, and He at once called to see Mukunda. Thus He delivered him from the association of the Māyāvādīs and gave him the association of pure devotees.

SYNONYMS

ācārya-gosāñire-unto Advaita Ācārya; prabhu-the Lord; kare-does; guru-bhakti-offering respects like a spiritual master; tāhāte-in that way; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; baḍa-very; haya-becomes; duḥkha-mati-aggrieved.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya respected Advaita Ācārya as His spiritual master, but Advaita Ācārya Prabhu was greatly aggrieved by such behavior.

bhaṅgī kari' jñāna-mārga karila vyākhyāna krodhāveśe prabhu tāre kaila avajñāna

SYNONYMS

bhaṅgī kari'-doing it in fun; jñāna-mārga-the path of philosophical speculation; karila-did; vyākhyāna-explanation; krodha-āveśe-in the mood of anger; prabhu-the Lord; tāre-to Him; kaila-did; avajñāna-disrespect.

TRANSLATION

Thus He whimsically began to explain the path of philosophical speculation, and the Lord, in His anger, seemingly disrespected Him.

TEXT 68

tabe ācārya-gosāñira ānanda ha-ila lajjita ha-iyā prabhu prasāda karila

SYNONYMS

tabe-at that time; ācārya-gosāñira-of Advaita Ācārya; ānanda-pleasure; ha-ila-aroused; lajjita-ashamed; ha-iyā-becoming; prabhu-the Lord; prasāda-benediction; karila-offered.

TRANSLATION

At that time Advaita Ācārya was greatly pleased. The Lord understood this, and He was somewhat ashamed, but He offered Advaita Ācārya His benediction.

PURPORT

Advaita Ācārya was a disciple of Mādhavendra Purī, Īśvara Purī's spiritual master. Therefore Īśvara Purī, the spiritual master of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, was Advaita Ācārya's Godbrother. As such, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu treated Advaita Ācārya as His spiritual master, but Śrī Advaita Ācārya did not like this behavior of Lord Caitanya, for He wanted to be treated as His eternal servant. Advaita Prabhu's aspiration was to be a servant of the Lord, not His spiritual master. He therefore devised a plan to antagonize the Lord. He began to explain the path of philosophical speculation in the midst of some unfortunate Māyāvādīs, and when Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard about this, He immediately went there and in a very angry mood began to beat Advaita Ācārya. At that time, Advaita Ācārya, greatly pleased, began to dance, saying, "Just see how My desire has now been fulfilled! Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to treat Me honorably for so long, but now He is treating Me neglectfully. This is My reward. His affection for Me is so great that He wanted to save Me from the hands of the Māyāvādīs." Hearing this statement, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was somewhat ashamed, but He was very much pleased with Advaita Ācārya.

SYNONYMS

śrīdharera-of Śrīdhara; lauha-pātre-from the iron pot; kaila-did; jala-pāna-drinking of water; samasta-all; bhaktere-to the devotees; dila-gave; iṣṭa-desired; vara-dāna-benediction.

TRANSLATION

Once Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to the house of Śrīdhara after kīrtana and drank water from his damaged iron pot. Then He bestowed His benediction upon all the devotees according to their desires.

PURPORT

After the mass nagara-saṅkīrtana in protest against the magistrate Chand Kazi, the Kazi was converted to a devotee. Then Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu returned with His saṅkīrtana party to the house of Śrīdhara, and Chand Kazi followed Him. All the devotees rested there for some time and drank water from Śrīdhara's damaged iron pot. The Lord accepted the water because the pot belonged to a devotee. Chand Kazi then returned home. The place where they rested is still situated on the northeastern side of Māyāpur, and it is known as kīrtana-viśrāma-sthāna, "the resting place of the kīrtana party."

SYNONYMS

haridāsa ṭhākurere-unto Haridāsa Ṭhākura; karila-did; prasāda-benediction; ācārya-sthāne-in the home of Advaita Ācārya; mātāra-of Śacīmātā; khaṇḍāila-vanquished; aparādha-the offense.

TRANSLATION

After this incident the Lord blessed Haridāsa Ṭhākura and vanquished the offense of His mother at the home of Advaita Ācārya.

PURPORT

On the mahā-prakāśa day, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu embraced Haridāsa Ṭhākura and informed him that he was none other than an incarnation of Prahlāda Mahārāja. When Viśvarūpa took sannyāsa, Śacīmātā thought that Advaita Ācārya had persuaded Him to do so. Therefore she accused Him of this, which was an offense at Advaita Ācārya's lotus feet. Later Lord Caitanya induced His mother to take the dust of Advaita Ācārya's lotus feet, and thus her vaiṣṇava-aparādha was nullified.

SYNONYMS

nāme-in the holy name of the Lord; stuti-vāda-exaggeration; śuni'-hearing; prabhura-of the Lord; haila-became; duḥkha-aggrieved; sabāre-unto everyone; niṣedhila-warned; ihāra-of him; nā-do not; dekhiha-see; mukha-face.

TRANSLATION

When a student interpreted the glories of the holy name as a prayer of exaggeration, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, greatly unhappy, immediately warned everyone not to see the student's face henceforward.

PURPORT

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu explained the glories of the transcendental potency of the Lord's holy name, the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, one unfortunate student said that such glorification of the holy name was an exaggeration in the śāstras to induce people to take to it. In this way the student interpreted the glories of the holy name. This is called artha-vāda, and it is one of the ten offenses at the lotus feet of the holy name of the Lord. There are many kinds of offenses, but the offense known as nāma-aparādha, an offense at the lotus feet of the holy name, is extremely dangerous. The Lord therefore warned everyone not to see the face of the offender. He immediately took a bath in the Ganges with all His clothes to teach everyone to avoid such a nāma-aparādha. The holy name is identical with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. There is no difference between the person God and His holy name. This is the absolute position of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore one who distinguishes between the Lord and His name is called a pāṣaṇḍī, or nonbeliever, an atheistic demon. Glorification of the holy name is glorification of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One should never attempt to distinguish between the Lord and His name or interpret the glories of the holy name as mere exaggerations.

SYNONYMS

na-never; sādhayati-causes to remain satisfied; mām-Me; yogaḥ-the process of control; na-nor; sāṅkhyam-the process of gaining philosophical knowledge about the Absolute Truth; dharmaḥ-such an occupation; uddhava-My dear Uddhava; na-nor; svādhyāyaḥ-study of the Vedas; tapaḥ-austerities; tyāgaḥ-renunciation, acceptance of sannyāsa, or charity; yathā-as much as; bhaktiḥ-devotional service; mama-unto Me; ūrjitā-developed.

TRANSLATION

"[The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, said:] 'My dear Uddhava, neither through aṣṭāṅga-yoga [the mystic yoga system to control the senses], nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyāsa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me.' "

PURPORT

Karmīs, jñānīs, yogīs, tapasvīs and students of Vedic literature who do not have Kṛṣṇa consciousness simply beat around the bush and do not get any final profit because they have no clear knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Nor do they have faith in approaching Him by discharging devotional service, although everywhere such service is repeatedly emphasized, as it is in this verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.14.20). The Bhagavad-gītā (Bg. 18.55) also declares, bhaktyā mām abhijānāti yāvān yaś cāsmi tattvataḥ: "One can understand the Supreme Personality as He is only by devotional service." If one wants to understand the Supreme Personality factually, he must take to the path of devotional service and not waste time in profitless philosophical speculation, fruitive activity, mystic yogic practice or severe austerity and penance. Elsewhere in the Bhagavad-gītā (12.5) the Lord confirms, kleśo 'dhikataras teṣām avyaktāsakta-cetasām: "For those whose minds are attached to the unmanifested, impersonal feature of the Supreme, advancement is very troublesome." People who are attached to the impersonal feature of the Lord are obliged to take great trouble, yet nevertheless they cannot understand the Absolute Truth. As explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.11), brahmeti paramātmeti bhagavān iti śabdyate. Unless one understands the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the original source of both Brahman and Paramātmā, one is still in darkness about the Absolute Truth.

SYNONYMS

kva-whereas; aham-I (am); daridraḥ-very poor; pāpīyān-sinful; kva-whereas; kṛṣṇaḥ-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; śrī-niketanaḥ-the shelter of the goddess of fortune; brahma-bandhuḥ-a caste brāhmaṇa without brahminical qualifications; iti-thus; sma-certainly; aham-I (am); bāhubhyām-by the arms; parirambhitaḥ-embraced.

TRANSLATION

” ’Since I am but a poor, sinful brahma-bandhu, not brahminically qualified although born in a brāhmaṇa family, and You, Lord Kṛṣṇa, are the shelter of the goddess of fortune, it is simply wonderful, my dear Lord Kṛṣṇa, that You have embraced me with Your arms.’ ”

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.81.16) spoken by Sudāmā Vipra in the presence of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa. This and the previous verse quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam clearly indicate that although Kṛṣṇa is so great that it is not possible for anyone to satisfy Him, He exhibits His greatness by being personally satisfied even with one who is disqualified from so many angles of vision. Sudāmā Vipra was born in a family of brahmaṇas, and he was a learned scholar and a class friend of Kṛṣṇa’s, yet he considered himself unfit to be strictly called a brāhmaṇa. He called himself a brahma-bandhu, meaning ”one born in a brāhmaṇa family but not brahminically qualified.” Because of His great respect for brāhmaṇas, however, Kṛṣṇa embraced Sudāmā Vipra, although he was not a regular brāhmaṇa but a brahma-bandhu, or friend of a brāhmaṇa family. Murāri Gupta could not be called even a brahma-bandhu because he was born of a vaidya family and according to the social structure was therefore considered a śūdra. But Kṛṣṇa bestowed special mercy upon Murāri Gupta because he was a beloved devotee of the Lord, as stated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The purport of Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura’s elaborate discussion of this subject is that no qualification in this material world can satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, yet everything becomes successful simply through development of devotional service to the Lord.

The members of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness cannot even call themselves brahma-bandhus. Therefore our only means for satisfying Kṛṣṇa is to pursue the injunctions of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who says:

yāre dekha, tāre kaha ’kṛṣṇa’-upadeśa
āmāra ājñāya guru hañā tāra’ ei deśa

”Whomever you meet, instruct him on the teachings of Kṛṣṇa. In this way, on My order, become a spiritual master and deliver the people of this country.” (Cc. Madhya 7.128) Simply trying to follow the orders of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, we speak to the people of the world about Bhagavad-gītā As It Is. This will make us qualified to satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

eka-one; āmra-bīja-seed of a mango; prabhu-the Lord; aṅgane-in the yard; ropila-sowed; tat-kṣaṇe-immediately; janmila-fructified; vṛkṣa-a tree; bāḍite-to grow; lāgila-began.

TRANSLATION

The Lord then sowed a mango seed in the yard, and immediately the seed fructified into a tree and began to grow.

TEXT 81

dekhite dekhite vṛkṣa ha-ila phalita pākila aneka phala, sabei vismita

SYNONYMS

dekhite dekhite-as people were seeing; vṛkṣa-the tree; ha-ila-became; phalita-fully grown with fruits; pākila-ripened; aneka-many; phala-fruits; sabei-every one of them; vismita-struck with wonder.

TRANSLATION

As people looked on, the tree became fully grown, with fruits that fully ripened. Thus everyone was struck with wonder.

TEXT 82

SYNONYMS

śata-hundred; dui-two; phala-fruits; prabhu-the Lord; śīghra-very soon; pāḍāila-caused to be picked up; prakṣālana-washing; kari'-doing; kṛṣṇe-to Lord Kṛṣṇa; bhoga-offering; lāgāila-made it so.

TRANSLATION

The Lord immediately picked about two hundred fruits, and after washing them He offered them to Kṛṣṇa to eat.

TEXT 83

rakta-pīta-varṇa,–nāhi aṣṭhi-valkala eka janera peṭa bhare khāile eka phala

SYNONYMS

rakta-pīta-varṇa-the mangoes were red and yellow in color; nāhi-there was none; aṣṭhi-seed; valkala-or skin; eka-one; janera-man's; peṭa-belly; bhare-filled up; khāile-if he would eat; eka-one; phala-fruit.

TRANSLATION

The fruits were all red and yellow, with no seed inside and no skin outside, and eating one fruit would immediately fill a man's belly.

PURPORT

In India a mango is considered best when it is red and yellow, its seed is very small, its skin is very thin, and it is so palatable that if a person eats one fruit he will be satisfied. The mango is considered the king of all fruits.

TEXT 84

SYNONYMS

dekhiyā-seeing this; santuṣṭa-satisfied; hailā-became; śacīra-of mother Śacī; nandana-son; sabāke-everyone; khāoyāla-made to eat; āge-in the beginning; kariyā-doing; bhakṣaṇa-eating Himself.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the quality of the mangoes, the Lord was greatly satisfied, and thus after eating first, He fed all the other devotees.

TEXT 85

aṣṭhi-valkala nāhi,–amṛta-rasamaya eka phala khāile rase udara pūraya

SYNONYMS

aṣṭhi-seed; valkala-skin; nāhi-there is none; amṛta-nectar; rasa-maya-full of juice; eka-one; phala-fruit; khāile-if one eats; rase-with the juice; udara-belly; pūraya-fulfilled.

TRANSLATION

The fruits had no seeds or skins. They were full of nectarean juice and were so sweet that a man would be fully satisfied by eating only one.

TEXT 86

vaiṣṇava khāyena phala,–prabhura ullāsa

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; prati-dina-every day; phale-fruit grew; bāra-twelve; māsa-months; vaiṣṇava-the Vaiṣṇavas; khāyena-eat; phala-the fruits; prabhura-the Lord's; ullāsa-satisfaction.

TRANSLATION

In this way, fruits grew on the tree every day throughout the twelve months of the year, and the Vaiṣṇavas used to eat them, to the Lord's great satisfaction.

TEXT 87

ei saba līlā kare śacīra nandana

SYNONYMS

ei saba-all these; līlā-pastimes; kare-performed; śacīra-of mother Śacī; nandana-son; anya loka-other people; nāhi-do not; jāne-know; vinā-except; bhakta-gaṇa-the devotees.

TRANSLATION

These are confidential pastimes of the son of Śacī. Other than devotees, no one knows of this incident.

PURPORT

Nondevotees cannot believe this incident, yet the place where the tree grew still exists in Māyāpur. It is called Āmra-ghaṭṭa or Āma-ghāṭā.

TEXT 88

ei mata bāra-māsa kīrtana-avasāne

SYNONYMS

ei mata-in this way; bāra-māsa-for twelve months; kīrtana-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; avasāne-at the end; āmra-mahā-utsava-festival of eating mangoes; prabhu-the Lord; kare-performs; dine dine-every day.

TRANSLATION

In this way the Lord Performed saṅkīrtana every day, and at the end of saṅkīrtana there was a mango-eating festival every day for twelve months.

PURPORT

On principle, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu would distribute prasāda at the end of kīrtana performances. Similarly, the members of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement must distribute some prasāda to the audience after performing kīrtana.

TEXT 89

kīrtana karite prabhu āila megha-gaṇa āpana-icchāya kaila megha nivāraṇa kīrtana-saṅkīrtana; karite-performing; prabhu-the Lord; āila-there was; megha-gaṇa-bunches of clouds; āpana-icchāya-by self-will; kaila-made; megha-of the clouds; nivāraṇa-stopping.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Once while Caitanya Mahāprabhu was performing kīrtana, clouds assembled in the sky, and the Lord, by His own will, immediately stopped them from pouring rain.

PURPORT

In this connection Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says that once when Lord Caitanya was performing saṅkīrtana a short way from the village, some clouds appeared overhead. By the supreme will of the Lord, the clouds were asked to disperse, and they did. Because of this incident, that place is still known as Meghera-cara. Since the course of the Ganges has now changed, the village of the name Belapukhuriyā, which was formerly situated in a different place, called Tāraṇavāsa, has now become known as the Meghera-cara. The Madhya-khaṇḍa of the Caitanya-maṅgala also relates that once at the end of the day, when evening clouds assembled overhead and thundered threateningly, all the Vaiṣṇavas were very much afraid. But the Lord took His karatālas in His hands and personally began chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, looking up towards the sky as if to direct the demigods in the higher planets. Thus all the assembled clouds dispersed, and as the sky became clear, with the moon rising, the Lord began dancing very happily with His jubilant and satisfied devotees.

SYNONYMS

paḍite-while reading; āilā-came; stave-in the prayer; nṛsiṁhera-of Lord Nṛsiṁha; nāma-the holy name; śuniyā-hearing; āviṣṭa-absorbed; hailā-became; prabhu-Lord; gaura-dhāma-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

As he read the thousand names of the Lord, in due course the holy name of Lord Nṛsiṁha appeared. When Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard the holy name of Lord Nṛsiṁha, He became fully absorbed in thought.

PURPORT

The Caitanya-maṅgala, Madhya-khaṇḍa, describes this incident as follows: Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita was performing the śrāddha ceremony of his father, and as is customary, he was hearing the thousand names of Lord Viṣṇu. At that time Gaurahari (Lord Caitanya) appeared on the scene, and He also began to hear the thousand names of Viṣṇu with full satisfaction. When He thus heard the holy name of Lord Nṛsiṁha, Lord Caitanya became absorbed in thought, and He became angry like Nṛsiṁha Prabhu in His angry mood. His eyes became red, His hairs stood on end, all the parts of His body trembled, and He made a thundering sound. All of a sudden He took up a club, and people became greatly afraid, thinking, "We do not know what kind of offense we have now committed!" But then Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu adjusted His thoughts and sat down on His seat.

SYNONYMS

loka-bhaya-the fearful people; dekhi'-seeing this; prabhura-of the Lord; bāhya-external sense; ha-ila-appeared; śrīvāsa-gṛhete-in the house of Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita; giyā-going there; gadā-the club; phelāila-threw away.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the people so afraid, the Lord came to His external senses and thus returned to the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura and threw away the club.

TEXT 95

śrīvāse kahena prabhu kariyā viṣāda loka bhaya pāya,–mora haya aparādha śrīvāse-unto Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; kahena-says; prabhu-the Lord; kariyā-becoming; viṣāda-morose; loka-people; bhaya pāya-become afraid; mora-My; haya-there is; aparādha-offense.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Lord became morose and said to Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, "When I adopted the mood of Lord Nṛsiṁhadeva, people were greatly afraid. Therefore I stopped, since causing fear among people is an offense."

TEXT 96

śrīvāsa balena,–ye tomāra nāma laya tāra koṭi aparādha saba haya kṣaya

SYNONYMS

śrīvāsa balena-Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita said; ye-anyone who; tomara-Your; nāma-holy name; laya-takes; tāra-his; koṭi-ten million; aparādha-offenses; saba-all; haya-become; kṣaya-vanquished.

TRANSLATION

Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura replied, "Anyone who takes Your holy name vanquishes ten million of his offenses immediately.

TEXT 97

aparādha nāhi, kaile lokera nistāra ye tomā' dekhila, tāra chuṭila saṁsāra

SYNONYMS

aparādha-offense; nāhi-did not; kaile-committed; lokera-of the people; nistāra-liberation; ye-anyone who; tomā'-You; dekhila-saw; tāra-his; chuṭila-became free; saṁsāra-material bondage.

TRANSLATION

"There was no offense in Your appearing as Nṛsiṁhadeva. Rather, any man who saw You in that mood was immediately liberated from the bondage of material existence."

TEXT 98

eta bali' śrīvāsa karila sevana tuṣṭa hañā prabhu āilā āpana-bhavana eta bali'-saying this; śrīvāsa-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; karila-did; sevana-worship; tuṣṭa-satisfied; hañā-becoming; prabhu-the Lord; āilā-came back; āpana-bhavana-to His own home.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After saying this, Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura worshiped the Lord, who was then greatly satisfied and returned to His own home.

TEXT 99

āra dina śiva-bhakta śiva-guṇa gāya prabhura aṅgane nāce, ḍamaru bājāya āra dina-another day; śiva-bhakta-a devotee of Lord Śiva; śiva-guṇa-the qualities of Lord Śiva; gāya-chants; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya; aṅgane-in the courtyard; nāce-dances; ḍamaru-a kind of musical instrument; bājāyā-plays on it.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

On another day a great devotee of Lord Śiva, chanting of Lord Śiva's qualities, came to Lord Caitanya's house, where he began dancing in the courtyard and playing his ḍamaru [a musical instrument].

TEXT 100

maheśa-āveśa hailā śacīra nandana tāra skandhe caḍi nṛtya kaila bahu-kṣaṇa maheśa-aveśa-in the mood of Lord Śiva; hailā-became; śacīra-of mother Śacī; nandana-son; tāra skandhe-on his shoulder; caḍi-getting on; nṛtya-dance; kaila-did; bahu-kṣaṇa-for a long time.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Then Lord Caitanya, adopting the mood of Lord Śiva, got on the man's shoulders, and thus they danced together for a long time.

PURPORT

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu adopted the mood of Lord Śiva, for He is Śiva also. According to the philosophy of acintya-bhedābheda-tattva, Lord Śiva is not different from Lord Viṣṇu, but still Lord Śiva is not Lord Viṣṇu, just as yogurt is nothing but milk and yet is not milk nevertheless. One cannot get the benefit of milk by drinking yogurt. Similarly, one cannot get salvation by worshiping Lord Śiva. If one wants salvation, one must worship Lord Viṣṇu. This is confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (9.4): mat-sthāni sarva-bhūtāni na cāhaṁ teṣv avasthitaḥ. Everything is resting on the Lord, for everything is His potential energy, yet He is not everywhere. Lord Caitanya's adopting the mood of Lord Śiva is not extraordinary, but one should not therefore think that by worshiping Lord Śiva one is worshiping Lord Caitanya. That would be a mistake.

TEXT 101

āra dina eka bhikṣuka āilā māgite prabhura nṛtya dekhi nṛtya lāgila karite

SYNONYMS

āra-another; dina-day; eka-one; bhikṣuka-beggar; āilā-came; māgite-to beg; prabhura-of the Lord; nṛtya-dancing; dekhi-seeing; nṛtya-dancing; lāgila-began; karite-to perform.

TRANSLATION

On another day a mendicant came to beg alms from the Lord's house, but when he saw the Lord dancing, he also began to dance.

TEXT 102

prabhu-saṅge nṛtya kare parama ullāse prabhu tāre prema dila, prema-rase bhāse

SYNONYMS

prabhu-saṅge-along with the Lord; nṛtya kare-was dancing; parama-very; ullāse-in satisfaction; prabhu-the Lord; tāre-him; prema-love of Godhead; dila-delivered; prema-rase-in the mellows of love of God; bhāse-began to float.

TRANSLATION

He danced with the Lord because he was favored by love of Kṛṣṇa. Thus he flowed in the mellows of love of Godhead.

TEXT 103

āra dine jyotiṣa sarva-jña eka āila tāhāre sammāna kari' prabhu praśna kaila

SYNONYMS

āra dine-some other day; jyotiṣa-an astrologer; sarva-jña-who knows everything; eka-one; āila-came there; tāhāre-unto him; sammāna kari'-giving all honor; prabhu-the Lord; praśna-question; kaila-put.

TRANSLATION

On another day an astrologer came who was supposed to know everything-past, present and future. Thus Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu received him with all honor and put this question before him.

PURPORT

Brāhmaṇas generally used to become astrologers, Āyur-vedic physicians, teachers and priests. Although highly learned and respectable, such brāhmaṇas went from door to door to distribute their knowledge. A brāhmaṇa would first go to a householder's home to give information about the functions to be performed on a particular tithi, or date, but if there were sickness in the family, the family members would consult the brāhmaṇa as a physician, and the brāhmaṇa would give instruction and some medicine. Often, since the brāhmaṇas were expert in astrology, people would also be greatly inquisitive about their past, present and future.

Although the brāhmaṇa appeared at Lord Caitanya's house as a beggar, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu received him with great respect because he was a qualified brāhmaṇa who knew the astrological science perfectly. Although brāhmaṇas would go door to door just like beggars, they were honored as very respectable guests. This was the system in Hindu society five hundred years ago, during the time of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This system was current even one hundred years ago; even fifty or sixty years ago, when we were children, such brāhmaṇas would visit householders like humble beggars, and people would derive great benefit from the mercy of such brāhmaṇas. The greatest benefit was that a householder could save a great deal of money from being spent on doctor bills because the brāhmaṇas, aside from explaining the past, present and future, could ordinarily cure all kinds of diseases simply by giving instructions and some medicine. Thus no one was bereft of the benefit of a first-class physician, astrologer and priest. The important members of ISKCON should give careful attention to our Dallas school, where children are being taught Sanskrit and English to become perfect brāhmaṇas. If they are actually trained as perfect brāhmaṇas, they can save society from rogues and ruffians; indeed, people can live happily under the protection of qualified brāhmaṇas. Therefore the Bhagavad-gītā (4.13) gives special stress to the division of society (cātur-varṇyaṁ mayā sṛṣṭaṁ guṇa-karma-vibhāgaśaḥ). Unfortunately some people are now claiming to be brāhmaṇas simply by birthright, with no qualifications. Therefore the entire society is in chaos.

ke āchiluṅ āmi pūrva janme kaha gaṇi' gaṇite lāgilā sarva-jña prabhu-vākya śuni'

SYNONYMS

ke āchiluṅ āmi-who I was; pūrva janme-in My previous birth; kaha-please say; gaṇi'-by your astrological calculation; gaṇite-to calculate; lāgilā-began; sarva-jña-a man who knows past, present and future; prabhu-vākya-the words of Lord Caitanya; śuni'-hearing.

TRANSLATION

"Please tell Me who I was in My previous birth," the Lord said. "Please tell Me by your astrological computations." Hearing the words of the Lord, the astrologer immediately began to calculate.

PURPORT

Through astrology one can know past, present and future. Modern Western astrologers have no knowledge of the past or future, nor can they perfectly say anything about the present. Herein we find, however, that after hearing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's order, the astrologer immediately began his calculations. This was not a facade; he actually knew how to ascertain one's past life through astrology. A still-existing treatise called the Bhṛgu-saṁhitā describes a system by which anyone can immediately get information about what he was in the past and what he is going to be in the future. The brāhmaṇas who went door to door as if beggars had perfect command of such vast knowledge. Thus the highest knowledge was easily available even to the poorest man in society. The poorest man could inquire from an astrologer about his past, present and future, with no need for business agreements or exorbitant payments. The brāhmaṇa would give him all the benefit of his knowledge without asking remuneration, and the poor man, in return, would offer a handful of rice, or anything he had in his possession, to satisfy the brāhmaṇa. In a perfect human society, perfect knowledge in any science-medical, astrological, ecclesiastical and so on-is available even to the poorest man, with no anxiety over payment. In the present day, however, no one can get justice, medical treatment, astrological help or ecclesiastical enlightenment without money, and since people are generally poor, they are bereft of the benefits of all these great sciences.

TEXT 105

gaṇi' dhyāne dekhe sarva-jña,–mahā-jyotirmaya ananta vaikuṇṭha-brahmāṇḍa–sabāra āśraya

SYNONYMS

gaṇi'-by calculation; dhyāne-by meditation; dekhe-sees; sarva-jña-knower of everything; mahā-jyotir-maya-highly effulgent body; ananta-unlimited; vaikuṇṭha-spiritual world; brahmāṇḍa-planets; sabāra-of all of them; āśraya-shelter.

TRANSLATION

Through calculation and meditation, the all-knowing astrologer saw the greatly effulgent body of the Lord, which is the resting place of all the unlimited Vaikuṇṭha planets.

PURPORT

Here we get some information of the Vaikuṇṭha world, or spiritual world. Vaikuṇṭha means "without anxiety." In the material world, everyone is full of anxiety, but another world, where there is no anxiety, is described in the Bhagavad-gītā (8.20):

paras tasmāt tu bhāvo 'nyo
'vyakto 'vyaktāt sanātanaḥ yaḥ sa sarveṣu bhūteṣu naśyatsu na vinaśyati

"Yet there is another unmanifest nature, which is eternal and is transcendental to this manifested and unmanifested matter. It is supreme and is never annihilated. When all in this world is annihilated, that part remains as it is."

As there are many planets within the material world, there are many millions of planets, called Vaikuṇṭhalokas, in the spiritual world. All these Vaikuṇṭhalokas, or superior planets, rest on the effulgence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As stated in the Brahma-saṁhitā (yasya prabhā prabhavato jagad-aṇḍa-koṭi-), the Brahman effulgence emanating from the body of the Supreme Lord creates innumerable planets in both the spiritual and material worlds; thus these planets are creations of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The astrologer saw Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be the very same Personality of Godhead. We can just imagine how learned he was, yet he was traveling door to door, just like an ordinary beggar, for the highest benefit of human society.

TEXT 106

parama-tattva, para-brahma, parama-īśvara dekhi' prabhura mūrti sarva-jña ha-ila phāṅphara parama-tattva-the Supreme Truth; para-brahma-the Supreme Brahman; parama-īśvara-the Supreme Lord; dekhi'-seeing; prabhura-of the Lord; mūrti-form; sarva-jña-the all-knowing astrologer; ha-ila-became; phāṅphara-confused.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Seeing Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be the same Absolute Truth, the Supreme Brahman, the Personality of Godhead, the astrologer was confused.

PURPORT

Herein it is clearly indicated that the Absolute Truth, the Supreme Brahman, is, in the ultimate issue, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore a person is the beginning of all things. As confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (10.8), mattaḥ sarvaṁ pravartate: everything begins from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Supreme Lord is the supreme living entity. Therefore whatever exists, whether matter or spirit, is all but an emanation from the Supreme Person, or supreme life. The modern scientists' theory that life begins from matter is nonsense. Both matter and life begin from life. Unfortunately the scientists do not know this scientific fact; they are drifting in the darkness of their so-called knowledge.

TEXT 107

balite nā pāre kichu, mauna ha-ila prabhu punaḥ praśna kaila, kahite lāgila

SYNONYMS

balite-to say; nā pāre-is not able; kichu-anything; mauna-silent; ha-ila-became; prabhu-the Lord; punaḥ-again; praśna-question; kaila-put; kahite-to speak; lāgila-began.

Struck with wonder, the astrologer remained silent, unable to speak. But when the Lord again put the question before him, he replied as follows.

TEXT 108

pūrva janme chilā tumi jagat-āśraya paripūrṇa bhagavān–sarvaiśvaryamaya

SYNONYMS

pūrva janme-in the previous birth; chilā-were; tumi-You; jagat-universe; āśraya-shelter; paripūrṇa-with full potencies; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sarva-aiśvarya-maya-full of all opulences.

TRANSLATION

"My dear sir, in Your previous birth You were the shelter of all creation, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, full of all opulences.

TEXT 109

pūrve yaiche chilā tumi ebeha se-rūpa durvijñeya nityānanda–tomāra svarūpa

SYNONYMS

pūrve-in the past; yaiche-as much as; chilā-You were; tumi-You; ebeha-now also; se-rūpa-the same thing; durvijñeya-inconceivable; nityānanda-eternal happiness; tomāra-Your; svarūpa-identity.

TRANSLATION

”You are now the same Personality of Godhead that You were in Your previous birth. Your identity is inconceivable eternal happiness.”

PURPORT

By the power of astrological science one can even ascertain the position of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Everything is to be identified by its symptoms. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is identified by the symptoms mentioned in the śāstras. It is not that anyone and everyone can become God without proof from śāstras.

TEXT 110

prabhu hāsi' kailā,–tumi kichu nā jānilā pūrve āmi āchilāṅ jātite goyālā

SYNONYMS

prabhu-the Lord; hāsi'-smiling; kailā-said; tumi-you; kichu-anything; nā-not; jānilā-know; pūrve-in the past; āmi-I; āchilāṅ-was; jātite-by caste; goyālā-cowherd.

TRANSLATION

When the astrologer was speaking so highly of Him, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu stopped him and began to smile. ”My dear sir,” He said, ”I think you do not know very clearly what I was, for I know that in My previous birth I was a cowherd boy.

TEXT 111

gopa-gṛhe janma chila, gābhīra rākhāla sei puṇye hailāṅ ebe brāhmaṇa-chāoyāla

SYNONYMS

gopa-gṛhe-in the house of a cowherd; janma-birth; chila-there was; gābhīra-of the cows; rākhāla-protector; sei puṇye-by those pious activities; hailāṅ-became; ebe-now; brāhmaṇa-of a brāhmaṇa; chāoyāla-son.

TRANSLATION

”In My last birth I was born in the family of cowherd men, and I gave protection to the calves and cows. Because of such pious activities, I have now become the son of a brāhmaṇa.”

PURPORT

The words of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the greatest authority, herein clearly indicate that one becomes pious simply by keeping cows and protecting them. Unfortunately, people have become such rascals that they do not even care about the words of an authority. People generally consider cowherd men lowly members of society, but herein Caitanya Mahāprabhu confirms that they are so pious that in their next lives they are going to be brāhmaṇas. The caste system has a specific purpose. If this scientific system is followed, human society will get the greatest benefit. Heeding this instruction by the Lord, people should serve cows and calves and in return get ample quantities of milk. There is no loss in serving the cows and calves, but modern human society has become so degraded that instead of giving protection to the cows and serving them, people are killing them. How can they expect peace and prosperity in human society while committing such sinful activities? It is impossible.

TEXT 112

sarva-jña kahe āmi tāhā dhyāne dekhilāṅ tāhāte aiśvarya dekhi' phāṅphara ha-ilāṅ

SYNONYMS

sarva-jña-the all-knowing astrologer; kahe-says; āmi-I; tāhā-that; dhyāne-in meditation; dekhilāṅ-saw; tāhāte-there; aiśvarya-opulence; dekhi'-by seeing; phāṅphara-confused; ha-ilāṅ-became.

TRANSLATION

The astrologer said, ”What I saw in meditation was full of opulence, and therefore I was confused.

PURPORT

It appears that the astrologer not only was a knower of past, present and future through astrological calculation, but was a great meditator as well. Therefore he was a great devotee and could see Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be the same personality as Kṛṣṇa. He was puzzled, however, about whether Kṛṣṇa and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu were actually the same person.

TEXT 113

sei-rūpe ei-rūpe dekhi ekākāra kabhu bheda dekhi, ei māyāya tomāra

SYNONYMS

sei-rūpe-in that form; ei-rūpe-in this form; dekhi-I see; eka-ākāra-one form; kabhu-sometimes; bheda-difference; dekhi-I see; ei-this; māyāya tomāra-Your māyā.

TRANSLATION

”I am certain that Your form and the form I saw in my meditation are one and the same. If I see any difference, this is an act of Your illusory energy.”

PURPORT

Śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya rādhā-kṛṣṇa nahe anya: in the vision of a perfect devotee, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is a combination of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. One who sees Lord Caitanya to be different from Kṛṣṇa is under the illusory energy of the Lord. It appears that the astrologer was already an advanced devotee, and when he came into the presence of the Supreme Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he became perfectly self-realized and could see that the Supreme Personality of Godhead Kṛṣṇa and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are one and the same Supreme Person.

TEXT 114

ye hao, se hao tumi, tomāke namaskāra prabhu tāre prema diyā kaila puraskāra

SYNONYMS

ye hao-whatever You are; se hao tumi-whatever You may be; tomāke-unto You; namaskāra-my obeisances; prabhu-the Lord; tāre-unto him; prema-love of Godhead; diyā-delivered; kaila-did; puraskāra-honor.

TRANSLATION

The all-knowing astrologer concluded, "Whatever You may be or whoever You may be, I offer my respectful obeisances unto You!" By His causeless mercy, the Lord then gave him love of Godhead, thus rewarding him for his service.

PURPORT

The incident of Lord Caitanya's meeting the all-knowing astrologer is not mentioned in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, but we cannot therefore say that it did not take place. On the contrary, we must accept the statement of Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī that whatever the Caitanya-bhāgavata did not mention he has especially mentioned in Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

TEXT 115

SYNONYMS

eka dina-one day; prabhu-the Lord; viṣṇu-maṇḍape-in the corridor of a Viṣṇu temple; vasiyā-sitting; madhu āna-bring honey; madhu āna-bring honey; balena-says; ḍākiyā-calling loudly.

TRANSLATION

One day the Lord sat down in the corridor of a Viṣṇu temple and began calling very loudly, "Bring some honey! Bring some honey!"

TEXT 116

SYNONYMS

nityānanda-gosāñi-Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; prabhura-of the Lord; āveśa-ecstasy; jānila-could understand; gaṅgā-jala-Ganges water; pātra-pot; āni'-bringing; sammukhe-in front; dharila-placed it.

TRANSLATION

Nityānanda Prabhu Gosāñi, understanding the ecstatic mood of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, brought a pot of Ganges water as a token and put it before Him.

TEXT 117

jala pāna kariyā nāce hañā vihvala yamunākarṣaṇa-līlā dekhaye sakala

SYNONYMS

jala-water; pāna kariyā-after drinking; nāce-dances; hañā-becoming; vihvala-ecstatic; yamunā-ākarṣaṇa-attracting the river Yamunā; līlā-pastimes; dekhaye-sees; sakala-everyone.

TRANSLATION

After drinking the water, Lord Caitanya became so ecstatic that He began to dance. Thus everyone saw the pastime of attracting the river Yamunā.

PURPORT

Yamunākarṣaṇa-līlā is the pastime of attracting Yamunā. One day, Śrī Baladeva wanted the Yamunā River to come before Him, and when the river Yamunā refused, He took His plow, wanting to dig a canal so that Yamunā would be obliged to come there. Since Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the original form of Baladeva, in His ecstasy He asked everyone to bring honey. In this way, all the devotees standing there saw the yamunākarṣaṇa-līlā. In this līlā, Baladeva was accompanied by His girlfriends. After drinking a honey beverage called Vāruṇī, He wanted to jump into the Yamunā and swim with the girls. It is stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.65.25-30, 33) that Lord Baladeva asked Yamunā to come near, and when the river disobeyed the, order of the Lord, He became angry and thus wanted to snatch her near to Him with His plow. Yamunā, however, very much afraid of Lord Balarāma's anger, immediately came and surrendered unto Him, praying to the Lord, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and admitting her fault. She was then excused. This is the sum and substance of the yamunākarṣaṇa-līlā. The incident is also described in the prayer of Jayadeva Gosvāmī concerning the ten incarnations:

vahasi vapuṣi viśade vasanaṁ jaladābhaṁ

SYNONYMS

mada-matta-being intoxicated by drinking Vāruṇī; gati-movement; baladeva-Lord Baladeva; anukāra-imitating; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; śekhara-at the head; tāṅre-Him; dekhe-sees; rāma-ākāra-in the form of Balarāma.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord, in His ecstasy of Baladeva, was moving as if intoxicated by the beverage, Advaita Ācārya, the chief of the ācāryas [ācārya śekhara], saw Him in the form of Balarāma.

TEXT 119

SYNONYMS

nagariyā-citizens; loke-all the people; prabhu-the Lord; yabe-when; ājñā-order; dilā-gave; ghare ghare-in each and every home; saṅkīrtana-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; karite-to perform; lāgilā-began.

TRANSLATION

The Lord ordered all the citizens of Navadvīpa to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, and in each and every home they began performing saṅkīrtana regularly.

TEXT 122

'haraye namaḥ, kṛṣṇa yādavāya namaḥ

SYNONYMS

haraye namaḥ-I offer my respectful obeisances to Lord Hari; kṛṣṇa-O Kṛṣṇa; yādavāya-unto the descendant of the Yadu dynasty; namaḥ-all obeisances; gopāla-of the name Gopāla; govinda-of the name Govinda; rāma-of the name Rāma; śrī-madhusūdana-of the name Śrī Madhusūdana.

TRANSLATION

[All the devotees sang this popular song along with the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.] "Haraye namaḥ, kṛṣṇa yādavāya namaḥ gopāla govinda rāma śrī-madhusūdana."

TEXT 123

mṛdaṅga-karatāla saṅkīrtana-mahādhvani
'hari' 'hari'–dhvani vinā anya nāhi śuni

SYNONYMS

mṛdaṅga-drum; karatāla-hand bells; saṅkīrtana-chanting of the holy name of the Lord; mahā-dhvani-great vibration; hari-the Lord; hari-the Lord; dhvani-sound; vinā-except; anya-another; nāhi-not; śuni-one can hear.

TRANSLATION

When the saṅkīrtana movement thus started, no one in Navadvīpa could hear any sound other than the words "Hari! Hari!" and the beating of the mrdaṅga and clashing of hand bells.

PURPORT

The International Society for Krishna Consciousness now has its world center in Navadvīpa, Māyāpur. The managers of this center should see that twenty-four hours a day there is chanting of the holy names of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, with the addition of haraye namaḥ, kṛṣṇa yādavāya namaḥ, for this song was a favorite of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's. But all such saṅkīrtana must be preceded by the chanting of the holy names of the five tattvas-śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda. We are already accustomed to chant these two mantras-śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu-nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda and Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare. Now, after these, the other two lines-namely, haraye namaḥ, kṛṣṇa yādavāya namaḥ gopāla govinda rāma śrī-madhusūdana-should be added, especially in Māyāpur. Chanting of these six lines should go on so perfectly well that no one there hears any vibration other than the chanting of the holy names of the Lord. That will make the center spiritually all-perfect.

kājī-pāśe āsi' sabe kaila nivedana śuniyā-by hearing; ye-that; kruddha-angry; haila-became; sakala-all; yavana-Muslims; kājī-pāśe-in the court of the Kazi, or magistrate; āsi'-coming; sabe-all; kaila-made; nivedana-petition.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Hearing the resounding vibration of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, the local Muslims, greatly angry, submitted a complaint to the Kazi.

PURPORT

The phaujadarā, or city magistrate, was called the kājī (Kazi). The jamidāras (Zamindars), or landholders (maṇḍalerās), levied taxes on the land, but keeping law and order and punishing criminals was the duty entrusted to the Kazi. Both the Kazi and the landholders were under the control of the governor of Bengal, which at that time was known as Subā-bāṅgālā. The districts of Nadia, Islāmpura and Bāgoyāna were all under the Zamindar named Hari Hoḍa or his descendant known as Kṛṣṇadāsa Hoḍa. It is said that Chand Kazi was the spiritual master of Nawab Hussain Shah. According to one opinion his name was Maulānā Sirājuddina, and according to another his name was Habibara Rahamāna. Descendants of Chand Kazi are still living in the vicinity of Māyāpur. People still go see the tomb of Chand Kazi, which is underneath a campaka tree and is known as Chand Kazi's samādhi.

SYNONYMS

krodhe-in anger; sandhyā-kāle-in the evening; kājī-the Chand Kazi; eka ghare-in one home; āila-came; mṛdaṅga-drum; bhāṅgiyā-breaking; loke-unto the people; kahite-to speak; lāgila-began.

TRANSLATION

Chand Kazi angrily came to one home in the evening, and when he saw kīrtana going on, he broke a mṛdaṅga and spoke as follows.

TEXT 126

eta-kāla keha nāhi kaila hinduyāni ebe ye udyama cālāo kāra bala jāni' eta-kāla-so long; keha-anyone; nāhi-not; kaila-performed; hinduyāni-regulative principles of the Hindus; ebe-now; ye-that; udyama-endeavor; cālāo-you propagate; kāra-whose; bala-strength; jāni'-I want to know.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"For so long you did not follow the regulative principles of the Hindu religion, but now you are following them with great enthusiasm. May I know by whose strength you are doing so?

PURPORT

It appears that from the aggression of Baktiyār Khiliji in Bengal until the time of Chand Kazi, Hindus, or the followers of the Vedic principles, were greatly suppressed. Like the Hindus in present-day Pakistan, practically no one could execute the Hindu religious principles freely. Chand Kazi referred to this condition of Hindu society. Formerly the Hindus had not been straightforward in executing their Hindu principles, but now they were freely chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Therefore it must have been by the strength of someone else that they were so daring.

Actually, that was the fact. Although the members of the so-called Hindu society had followed the social customs and formulas, they had practically forgotten to execute their religious principles strictly. But with the presence of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu they actually began following the regulative principles according to His order. That order is still existing, and anywhere and everywhere, in all parts of the world, one can execute it. That order is to become a spiritual master under the direction of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by following the regulative principles, chanting daily at least sixteen rounds of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, and preaching the cult of Kṛṣṇa consciousness all over the world. If we adhere to the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, we shall get spiritual strength without a doubt, and we shall be free to preach this cult of the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement and not be hampered by anyone.

keha kīrtana nā kariha sakala nagare āji āmi kṣamā kari' yāitechoṅ ghare keha-anyone; kīrtana-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra; nā-do not; kariha-perform; sakala nagare-in the whole town; āji-today; āmi-I; kṣamā kari'-excusing; yāitechoṅ-am returning; ghare-home.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"No one should perform saṅkīrtana on the streets of the city. Today I am excusing the offense and returning home.

PURPORT

Such orders stopping saṅkīrtana in the streets of the world's great cities have been imposed upon members of the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement. We have hundreds of centers all over the world, and we have been specifically persecuted in Australia. In most cities of the Western world we have been arrested many times by the police, but we are nevertheless executing the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by chanting on the streets of all the important cities, like New York, London, Chicago, Sydney, Melbourne, Paris and Hamburg. We must remember that such incidents took place in the past, five hundred years ago, and the fact that they are still going on indicates that our saṅkīrtana movement is really authorized, for if saṅkīrtana were an insignificant material affair, demons would not object to it. The demons of the time tried to obstruct the saṅkīrtana movement started by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Similar demons are trying to obstruct the saṅkīrtana movement we are executing all over the world, and this proves that our saṅkīrtana movement is still pure and genuine, following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

sarvasva daṇḍiyā tāra jāti ye la-imu āra-again; yadi-if; kīrtana-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra; karite-to do; lāga-contact; pāimu-I shall take; sarva-sva-all possessions; daṇḍiyā-chastising; tāra-his; jāti-caste; ye-that; la-imu-I shall take.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”The next time I see someone performing such saṅkīrtana, I shall certainly chastise him by not only confiscating all his property but also converting him into a Muslim.”

PURPORT

To convert a Hindu into a Muslim was an easy affair in those days. If a Muslim simply sprinkled water on the body of a Hindu, it was supposed that the Hindu had already become a Muslim. During the transition of the British in Bangladesh during the last Hindu-Muslim riots, many Hindus were converted into Muslims by having cows' flesh forcibly pushed into their mouths. Hindu society was so rigid at the time of Lord Caitanya that if a Hindu were converted into a Muslim, there was no chance of his being reformed. In this way the Muslim population in India increased. None of the Muslims came from outside; social customs somehow or other forced Hindus to become Muslims, with no chance of returning to Hindu society. Emperor Aurangzeb also inaugurated a tax that Hindus had to pay because of their being Hindus. Thus all the poor Hindus of the lower class voluntarily became Muslims to avoid the tax. In this way the Muslim population in India increased. Chand Kazi threatened to convert the people into Muslims by the simple process of sprinkling water on their bodies.

SYNONYMS

prabhu-the Lord; ājñā dila-ordered; yāha-go; karaha-and perform; kīrtana-saṅkīrtana, chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra; muñi-I; saṁhārimu-shall kill; āji-today; sakala-all; yavana-the Muslims.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya ordered, ”Go peform saṅkīrtana! Today I shall kill all the Muslims!”

PURPORT

Gandhi is known for having started the movement of nonviolent civil disobedience in India, but about five hundred years before him, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu started His movement of nonviolent civil disobedience to the order of Chand Kazi. It is not necessary to commit violence to stop the opposition from hindering a movement, for one can kill their demoniac behavior with reason and argument. Following in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, whenever there are obstacles the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement should kill the opposition with reason and argument and thus stop their demoniac behavior. If we became violent in every case, it would be difficult for us to manage our affairs. We should therefore follow in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who disobeyed the order of Chand Kazi but subdued him with reason and argument.

TRANSLATION

”In the evening I shall perform saṅkīrtana in each and every town. Therefore you should all decorate the city in the evening.

PURPORT

At that time, Navadvīpa was composed of nine small cities, so the words nagare nagare are significant. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to perform kīrtana in each of these neighboring towns. He ordered the city decorated for the function.

TRANSLATION

In the evening Lord Gaurasundara went out and formed three parties to perform kīrtana.

PURPORT

This is a scheme for performing kīrtana in a procession. During Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s time, one party was composed of twenty-one men: four people playing mṛdaṅgas, one leading the chanting, and sixteen others striking karatālas, responding to the leading chanter. If many men join the saṅkīrtana movement, they may follow in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and form different parties according to the time and the number of men available.

TRANSLATION

Murmuring in anger and making a roaring sound, the people, under the protection of Lord Caitanya, became mad through such indulgence.

PURPORT

The Kazi had issued an order not to perform kīrtana, congregational chanting of the holy name of the Lord. But when this was brought up to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, He ordered civil disobedience to the Kazi's order. Lord Caitanya and all His devotees, naturally enthusiastic although agitated, must have made a great noise with their loud cries.

TEXT 141

kīrtanera dhvanite kājī lukāila ghare tarjana garjana śuni' nā haya bāhire kīrtanera-of the saṅkīrtana movement; dhvanite-by the sound; kājī-the Chand Kazi; lukāila-hid himself; ghare-in the room; tarjana-murmuring; garjana-protesting; śuni'-hearing; nā-does not; haya-come out; bāhire-outside.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The loud sound of the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra certainly made the Kazi very much afraid, and he hid himself within his room. Hearing the people thus protesting, murmuring in great anger, the Kazi would not come out of his home.

PURPORT

The Kazi's order not to perform saṅkīrtana could stand only as long as there was no civil disobedience. Under the leadership of the Supreme Lord, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the chanters, increasing in number, disobeyed the order of the Kazi. Thousands assembled together and formed parties, chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and making a tumultuous sound of protest. Thus the Kazi was very much afraid, as naturally one should be under such circumstances.

In the present day also, people all over the world may join together in the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and protest against the present degraded governments of the world's godless societies, which are based on all kinds of sinful activities. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam states that in the Age of Kali, thieves, rogues and fourth-class people who have neither education nor culture capture the seats of governments to exploit the citizens. This is a symptom of Kali-yuga that has already appeared. People cannot feel secure about their lives and property, yet the so-called governments continue, and government ministers get fat salaries, although they are unable to do anything good for society. The only remedy for such conditions is to enhance the sankīrtana movement under the banner of Kṛṣṇa consciousness and protest against the sinful activities of all the world's governments.

The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is not a sentimental religious movement; it is a movement for the reformation of all the anomalies of human society. If people take to it seriously, discharging this duty scientifically, as ordered by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the world will see peace and prosperity instead of being confused and hopeless under useless governments. There are always rogues and thieves in human society, and as soon as a weak government is unable to execute its duties, these rogues and thieves come out to do their business. Thus the entire society becomes a hell unfit for gentlemen to live in. There is an immediate need for a good government-a government by the people, with Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Unless the masses of people become Kṛṣṇa conscious, they cannot be good men. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu started by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra still has its potency. Therefore people should understand it seriously and scientifically and spread it all over the world.

The saṅkīrtana movement started by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is described in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Madhya-khaṇḍa, Twenty-third Chapter, beginning with verse 241, which states, "My dear Lord, let my mind be fixed at Your lotus feet." Following Lord Caitanya's chanting, all the devotees reproduced the same sound He chanted. In this way the Lord proceeded, leading the entire party on the strand roads by the bank of the Ganges. When the Lord came to His own ghāṭa, or bathing place, He danced more and more. Then He proceeded to Mādhāi's ghāṭa. In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Supreme Lord, who was known as Viśvambhara, danced all over the banks of the Ganges. Then He proceeded to Bārakoṇā-ghāṭa, the Nāgariyā-ghāṭa, and, traveling through Gaṅgānagara, reached Simuliyā, a quarter at one end of the town. All these places surround Śrī Māyāpur. After reaching Simuliyā, the Lord proceeded towards the Kazi's house, and in this way He reached the door of Chand Kazi.

SYNONYMS

dūra ha-ite-from a distant place; āilā-came; kājī-the Kazi; māthā-head; noyāiyā-bowed down; kājīre-unto the Kazi; vasāilā-gave a seat; prabhu-the Lord; sammāna-respect; kariyā-offering.

TRANSLATION

When the Kazi came, his head bowed down, the Lord gave him proper respect and a seat.

PURPORT

Some of the men in Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's civil disobedience movement were agitated because they could not control their minds. But the Lord was thoroughly peaceful, sober and unagitated. Therefore when the Kazi came down to see Him, the Lord offered him proper respect and a seat because he was a respectable government officer. Thus the Lord taught us by His personal behavior. In pushing on our saṅkīrtana movement of Kṛṣṇa consciousness, we might have to face difficult days, but we should always follow in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and do the needful according to the time and circumstances.

TRANSLATION

"In our village relationship, Nīlāmbara Cakravartī Ṭhākura was my uncle. Such a relationship is stronger than a bodily relationship.

PURPORT

In India, even in the interior villages, all the Hindu and Muslim communities used to live very peacefully by establishing a relationship between them. The young men called the elderly members of the village by the name cācā or kākā, "uncle," and men of the same age called each other dādā, "brother." The relationship was very friendly. There were even invitations from Muslim houses to Hindu houses and from Hindu houses to Muslim houses. Both the Hindus and the Muslims accepted the invitations to go to one another's houses to attend ceremonial functions. Even until fifty or sixty years ago, the relationship between Hindus and Muslims was very friendly, and there were no disturbances. We do not find any Hindu-Muslim riots in the history of India, even during the days of the Muslims' rule over the country. Conflict between Hindus and Muslims was created by polluted politicians, especially foreign rulers, and thus the situation gradually became so degraded that India was divided into Hindustan and Pakistan. Fortunately, the remedy to unite not only the Hindus and Muslims but all communities and all nations can still be implemented by the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement on the strong basic platform of love of Godhead.

SYNONYMS

pitā-mātā-father and mother; māri'-killing; khāo-you eat; ebā-this; kon-what kind of; dharma-religion; kon bale-on what strength; kara-do; tumi-you; e-mata-such; vikarma-sinful activities.

TRANSLATION

"Since the bull and cow are your father and mother, how can you kill and eat them? What kind of religious principle is this? On what strength are you so daring that you commit such sinful activities?"

PURPORT

Everyone can understand that we drink the milk of cows and take the help of bulls in producing agricultural products. Therefore, since our real father gives us food grains and our mother gives us milk with which to live, the cow and bull are considered our father and mother. According to Vedic civilization, there are seven mothers, of which the cow is one. Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu challenged the Muslim Kazi, "What kind of religious principle do you follow by killing your father and mother to eat them?" In any civilized human society, no one would dare kill his father and mother for the purpose of eating them. Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu challenged the system of Muslim religion as patricide and matricide. In the Christian religion also, a principal commandment is "Thou shalt not kill." Nevertheless, Christians violate this rule; they are very expert in killing and in opening slaughterhouses. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, our first provision is that no one should be allowed to eat any kind of flesh. It does not matter whether it is cows' flesh or goats' flesh, but we especially stress the prohibition against cows' flesh because according to śāstra the cow is our mother. Thus the Muslims' cow-killing was challenged by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 155

kājī kahe,–tomāra yaiche veda-purāṇa taiche āmāra śāstra–ketāva 'korāṇa' kājī kahe-the Kazi replied; tomāra-Your; yaiche-as much as; veda-purāṇa-the Vedas and Purāṇas; taiche-similarly; āmāra-our; śāstra-scripture; ketāva-the holy book; korāṇa-the Koran.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Kazi replied, "As You have Your scriptures called the Vedas and Purāṇas, we have our scripture, known as the holy Koran.

PURPORT

Chand Kazi agreed to talk with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu on the strength of the scriptures. According to the Vedic scripture, if one can support his position by quoting from the Vedas, his argument is perfect. Similarly, when the Muslims support their position with quotations from the Koran, their arguments are also authorized. When Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu raised the question of the Muslims' cow-killing and bull-killing, Chand Kazi came to the standard of understanding from his scriptures.

SYNONYMS

sei śāstre-in the scripture (the Koran); kahe-it is ordered; pravṛtti-of attachment; nivṛtti-of detachment; mārga-ways; bheda-difference; nivṛtti-of detachment; mārge-on the path; jīva-mātra-of any living entity; vadhera-of killing; niṣedha-prohibition.

TRANSLATION

"According to the Koran, there are two ways of advancement-through increasing the propensity to enjoy and decreasing the propensity to enjoy. On the path of decreasing attachment [nivṛtti-mārga], the killing of animals is prohibited.

TEXT 157

pravṛtti-mārge go-vadha karite vidhi haya śāstra-ājñāya vadha kaile nāhi pāpa-bhaya

SYNONYMS

pravṛtti-mārge-on the path of attachment; go-vadha-the killing of cows; karite-to execute; vidhi-regulative principles; haya-there are; śāstra-ājñāya-on the order of the scripture; vadha-killing; kaile-if one commits; nāhi-there is no; pāpa-bhaya-fear of sinful activities.

TRANSLATION

"On the path of material activities, there is regulation for killing cows. If such killing is done under the guidance of scripture, there is no sin."

PURPORT

The word śāstra is derived from the dhātu, or verbal root, śas. Śas-dhātu pertains to controlling or ruling. A government's ruling through force or weapons is called śastra. Thus whenever there is ruling, either by weapons or by injunctions, the śas-dhatu is the basic principle. Between śastra (ruling through weapons) and śāstra (ruling through the injunctions of the scriptures), the better is śāstra. Our Vedic scriptures are not ordinary lawbooks of human common sense; they are the statements of factually liberated persons unaffected by the imperfectness of the senses.

Śāstra must be correct always, not sometimes correct and sometimes incorrect. In the Vedic scriptures, the cow is described as a mother. Therefore she is a mother for all time; it is not, as some rascals say, that in the Vedic age she was a mother but she is not in this age. If śāstra is an authority, the cow is a mother always; she was a mother in the Vedic age, and she is a mother in this age also.

If one acts according to the injunctions of śāstra, he is freed from the reactions of sinful activity. For example, the propensities for eating flesh, drinking wine and enjoying sex life are all natural to the conditioned soul.The path of such enjoyment is called pravṛtti-marga. The śāstra says, pravṛttir eṣāṁ bhūtānāṁ nivṛttis tu mahā-phalā: one should not be carried away by the propensities of defective conditioned life; one should be guided by the principles of the śāstras. A child's propensity is to play all day long, but it is the injunction of the śāstras that the parents should take care to educate him. The śāstras are there just to guide the activities of human society. But because people do not refer to the instructions of śāstras, which are free from defects and imperfections, they are therefore misguided by so-called educated teachers and leaders who are full of the deficiencies of conditioned life.

TEXT 158

tomāra vedete āche go-vadhera vāṇī ataeva go-vadha kare baḍa baḍa muni

SYNONYMS

tomāra vedete-in Your Vedic literature; āche-there is; go-vadhera-for cow-killing; vāṇī-injunction; ataeva-therefore; go-vadha-cow-killing; kare-does; baḍa baḍa-very, very great; muni-sages.

TRANSLATION

As a learned scholar, the Kazi challenged Caitanya Mahāprabhu, "In Your Vedic scriptures there is an injunction for killing a cow. On the strength of this injunction, great sages peformed sacrifices involving cow-killing."

TEXT 159

prabhu kahe,–vede kahe go-vadha niṣedha ataeva hindu-mātra nā kare go-vadha prabhu kahe-the Lord replied; vede-in the Vedas; kahe-is enjoined; go-vadha-cow-killing; niṣedha-prohibition; ataeva-therefore; hindu-Hindu; mātra-any; nā-does not; kare-execute; go-vadha-cow-killing.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Refuting the Kazi's statement, the Lord immediately replied, "The Vedas clearly enjoin that cows should not be killed. Therefore every Hindu, whoever he may be, avoids indulging in cow-killing.

PURPORT

In the Vedic scriptures there are concessions for meat-eaters. It is said that if one wants to eat meat, he should kill a goat before the goddess Kālī and then eat its meat. Meat-eaters are not allowed to purchase meat or flesh from a market or slaughterhouse. There are no sanctions for maintaining regular slaughterhouses to satisfy the tongues of meat-eaters. As far as cow-killing is concerned, it is completely forbidden. Since the cow is considered a mother, how could the Vedas allow cow-killing? Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu pointed out that the Kazi's statement was faulty. In the Bhagavad-gītā (18.44) there is a clear injunction that cows should be protected: kṛṣi-gorakṣya-vāṇijyaṁ vaiśya-karma svabhāva-jam. "The duty of vaiśyas is to produce agricultural products, trade and give protection to cows." Therefore it is a false statement that the Vedic scriptures contain injunctions permitting cow-killing.

SYNONYMS

aśva-medham-a sacrifice offering a horse; gava-ālambham-a sacrifice of cows; sannyāsam-the renounced order of life; pala-paitṛkam-an offering of oblations of flesh to the forefathers; devareṇa-by a husband's brother; suta-utpattim-begetting children; kalau-in the Age of Kali; pañca-five; vivarjayet-one must give up.

TRANSLATION

" 'In this Age of Kali, five acts are forbidden: the offering of a horse in sacrifice, the offering of a cow in sacrifice, the acceptance of the order of sannyāsa, the offering of oblations of flesh to the forefathers, and a man's begetting children in his brother's wife.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Brahma-vaivarta Purāṇa (Kṛṣṇa-janma-khaṇḍa 185.180).

TEXT 165

TRANSLATION

After hearing these statements by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Kazi, his arguments stunned, could not put forward any more words. Thus, after due consideration, the Kazi accepted defeat and spoke as follows.

PURPORT

In our practical preaching work we meet many Christians who talk about statements of the Bible. When we question whether God is limited or unlimited, Christian priests say that God is unlimited. But when we question why the unlimited God should have only one son and not unlimited sons, they are unable to answer. Similarly, from a scientific point of view, the answers of the Old Testament, New Testament and Koran to many questions have changed. But a śāstra cannot change at a person's whim. All śāstras must be free from the four defects of human nature. The statements of śāstras must be correct for all time.

TEXT 169

tumi ye kahile, paṇḍita, sei satya haya ādhunika āmāra śāstra, vicāra-saha naya

SYNONYMS

tumi-You; ye-whatever; kahile-have said; paṇḍita-O Nimāi Paṇḍita; sei-that; satya-truth; haya-is certainly; ādhunika-of modern days; āmāra-our; śāstra-scripture; vicāra-logic; saha-with; naya-they are not.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Nimāi Paṇḍita, what You have said is all true. Our scriptures have developed only recently, and they are certainly not logical and philosophical.

PURPORT

The śāstras of the yavanas, or meat-eaters, are not eternal scriptures. They have been fashioned recently, and sometimes they contradict one another. The scriptures of the yavanas are three: the Old Testament, the New Testament and the Koran. Their compilation has a history; they are not eternal like the Vedic knowledge. Therefore although they have their arguments and reasonings, they are not very sound and transcendental. As such, modern people advanced in science and philosophy deem these scriptures unacceptable.

Sometimes Christian priests come to us inquiring, "Why are our followers neglecting our scriptures and accepting yours?" But when we ask them, "Your Bible says, 'Do not kill.' Why then are you killing so many animals daily?" they cannot answer. Some of them imperfectly answer that the animals have no souls. But then we ask them, "How do you know that animals have no souls? Animals and children are of the same nature. Does this mean that the children of human society also have no souls?" According to the Vedic scriptures, within the body is the owner of the body, the soul. In the Bhagavad-gītā (2.13) it is said:

dehino 'smin yathā dehe
kaumāraṁ yauvanaṁ jarā
tathā dehāntara-prāptir
dhīras tatra na muhyati

Because the soul is within the body, the body changes through so many forms. There is a soul within the body of every living entity, whether animal, tree, bird or human being, and the soul is transmigrating from one type of body to another. When the scriptures of the yavanas-namely, the Old Testament, New Testament and Koran-cannot properly answer inquisitive followers, naturally those advanced in scientific knowledge and philosophy lose faith in such scriptures. The Kazi admitted this while talking with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Kazi was a very intelligent person. He had full knowledge of his position, as stated in the following verse.

pātasāha śunile tomāra karibeka phala

SYNONYMS

hari hari kari’-saying ”Hari, Hari”; hindu-the Hindus; kare-make; kolāhala-tumultuous sound; pātasāha-the king; śunile-if hearing; tomāra-your; karibeka-will do; phala-punishment.

TRANSLATION

” ’Vibrating ”Hari, Hari,” the Hindus make a tumultuous sound. If the king [pātasāha] hears it, certainly he will punish you.’

PURPORT

Pātasāha refers to the king. Nawab Hussain Shah, whose full name was Ālā Uddīn Saiyad Husen Sā, was at that time (A.D. 1498-1521) the independent King of Bengal. Formerly he was the servant of the cruel Nawab of the Hābsī dynasty named Mujaḥphara Khān, but somehow or other he assassinated his master and became the King. After gaining the throne of Bengal (technically called Masnada), he declared himself Saiyad Husen Ālā Uddīn Seriph Mukkā. There is a book called Riyāja Us-salātina, whose author, Golām Husen, says that Nawab Hussain Shah belonged to the family of Mukkā Seriph. To keep his family’s glory, he took the name Seriph Mukkā. Generally, however, he is known as Nawab Hussain Shah. After his death, his eldest son, Nasaratsā, became King of Bengal (A.D. 1521-1533). This King also was very cruel. He committed many atrocities against the Vaiṣṇavas. As a result of his sinful activities, one of his servants from the Khojā group killed him while he was praying in the mosque.

SYNONYMS

sei haite-from that time; jihvā-tongue; mora-my; bale-says; hari hari-the vibration "Hari, Hari"; icchā-desire; nāhi-there is none; tabu-still; bale-says; ki-what; upāya-means; kari-I may do.

TRANSLATION

" 'Since that time, my tongue also always vibrates the sound "Hari, Hari." I have no desire to say it, but still my tongue says it. I do not know what to do.'

PURPORT

Sometimes demoniac nonbelievers, not understanding the potency of the holy name, make fun of the Vaiṣṇavas when the Vaiṣṇavas chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. This joking is also beneficial for such persons. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Sixth Canto, Second Chapter, verse 14, indicates that the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, even in joking, in the course of ordinary discussion, in indicating something extraneous, or in negligence, is called nāmābhāsa, which is chanting that is almost on the transcendental stage. This nāmābhāsa stage is better than nāmāparādha. Nāmābhāsa awakens the supreme remembrance of Lord Viṣṇu. When one remembers Lord Viṣṇu, he becomes free from material enjoyment. Thus he gradually comes forward toward the transcendental service of the Lord and becomes eligible to chant the holy name of the Lord in the transcendental position.

SYNONYMS

eta śuni'-after hearing all this; tā'-sabhāre-all of them; ghare-back home; pāṭhāila-sent; hena-kāle-at that time; pāṣaṇḍī-nonbeliever; hindu-Hindus; pāṅca-sāta-five or seven; āila-came.

TRANSLATION

"After hearing all this, I sent all the mlecchas back to their homes. Five or seven nonbelieving Hindus then approached me.

PURPORT

The word pāṣaṇḍī refers to nonbelievers engaged in fruitive activities and to idolatrous worshipers of many demigods. Pāṣaṇḍīs do not believe in one God, the Supreme Personality, Lord Viṣṇu; they think that all the demigods have the same potency as Him. The definition of a pāṣaṇḍī is given in the tantra-śāstra:

yas tu nārāyaṇaṁ devaṁ brahma-rudrādi-daivataiḥ samatvenaiva vīkṣeta sa pāṣaṇḍī bhaved dhruvam

"A pāṣaṇḍī is one who considers the great demigods such as Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva equal to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Nārāyaṇa." (Hari-bhakti-vilāsa 1.17)

The Supreme Personality of Godhead is asamaurdhva; in other words, no one can be equal to or greater than Him. But pāṣaṇḍīs do not believe this. They worship any kind of demigod, thinking it all right to accept whomever they please as the Supreme Lord. The pāṣaṇḍīs were against the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and now we see practically that they also do not like our humble attempts to spread Kṛṣṇa consciousness all over the world. On the contrary, these pāṣaṇḍīs say that we are spoiling the Hindu religion because people all over the world are accepting Lord Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Personality of Godhead according to the version of Bhagavad-gītā As It Is. The pāṣaṇḍīs condemn this movement, and sometimes they accuse Vaiṣṇavas from foreign countries of being not bona fide. Even so-called Vaiṣṇavas-pseudo followers of the Vaiṣṇava cult-do not agree with our activities in making Vaiṣṇavas in the Western countries. Such pāṣaṇḍīs existed even during the time of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and they still continue to exist. Despite all the activities of these pāṣaṇḍīs, however, the prediction of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu will triumph: pṛthivīte āche yata nagarādi grāma sarvatra pracāra haibe mora nāma. "In every town and village, the chanting of My name will be heard." No one can check the spread of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement because upon this movement is the benediction of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

SYNONYMS

hindu-śāstre-in the scriptures of the Hindus; īśvara-God; nāma-the holy name; mahā-mantra-topmost hymn; jāni-we know; sarva-loka-everyone; śunile-if they hear; mantrera-of the mantra; vīrya-potency; haya-becomes; hāni-finished.

TRANSLATION

" 'According to Hindu scripture, God's name is the most powerful hymn. If everyone hears the chanting of the name, the potency of the hymn will be lost.

PURPORT

In the list of offenses in the chanting of the holy name of the Lord, it is said, dharma-vrata-tyāga-hutādi-sarva-śubha-kriyā-sāmyam api pramādaḥ: to consider the chanting of the holy name of the Lord equal to the execution of some auspicious religious ceremony is an offense. According to the materialistic point of view, observing a religious ceremony invokes an auspicious atmosphere for the material benefit of the entire world. Materialists therefore manufacture religious principles to live comfortably and without disturbance in executing their material activities. Since they do not believe in the existence of God, they have manufactured the idea that God is impersonal and that to have some conception of God one may imagine any form. Thus they respect the many forms of the demigods as different representations or manifestations of the Lord. They are called bahv-īśvara-vādīs, or followers of thousands and thousands of gods. They consider the chanting of the names of the demigods an auspicious activity. Great so-called svāmīs have written books saying that one may chant any name-Durgā, Kālī, Śiva, Kṛṣṇa, Rāma, and so on-because any name is all right for invoking an auspicious atmosphere in society. Thus they are called pāṣaṇḍīs-unbelievers or faithless demons.

Such pāṣaṇḍīs do not know the actual value of the chanting of the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Foolishly proud of their material birth as brāhmaṇas and their consequently higher position in the social order, they think of the other classes-namely, the kṣatriyas, vaiśyas and śūdras-as lower classes. According to them, no one but the brāhmaṇas can chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa, for if others chanted the holy name, its potency would be reduced. They are unaware of the potency of Lord Kṛṣṇa's name. The Bṛhan-nāradīya Purāṇa recommends:

harer nāma harer nāma
harer nāmaiva kevalam kalau nāsty eva nāsty eva
nāsty eva gatir anyathā

"For spiritual progress in this age of Kali, there is no alternative, no alternative, no alternative to the holy name, the holy name, the holy name of the Lord." The pāṣaṇḍīs do not accept that the potency of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa is so great that one can be delivered simply by chanting the holy name, although this is confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (12.3.51): kīrtanād eva kṛṣṇasya mukta-saṅgaḥ paraṁ vrajet. Any man from any part of the world who practices chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa can be liberated and after death go back home, back to Godhead. The rascal pāṣaṇḍīs think that if anyone but a brāhmaṇa chants the holy name, the potency of the holy name is vanquished. According to their judgment, instead of delivering the fallen souls, the potency of the holy name is reduced. Believing in the existence of many gods and considering the chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa no better than other hymns, these pāṣaṇḍīs do not believe in the words of the śāstra (harer nāma harer nāma harer nāmaiva kevalam). But Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu confirms in His Śikṣāṣṭaka, kīrtanīyaḥ sadā hariḥ: one must chant the holy name of the Lord always, twenty-four hours a day. The pāṣaṇḍīs, however, are so fallen and falsely proud of having taken birth in brāhmaṇa families that they think that instead of delivering all the fallen souls, the holy name becomes impotent when constantly chanted by lower-class men.

Significant in verse 211 are the words kṛṣṇera kīrtana kare nīca bāḍa bāḍa, indicating that anyone can join in the saṅkīrtana movement. This is confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.4.18): kirāta-hūṇāndhra-pulinda-pulkaśā ābhīra-śumbhā yavanāḥ khasādayaḥ. This is a list of the names of caṇḍālas. The pāṣaṇḍīs say that when these lower-class men are allowed to chant, their influence is enhanced. They do not like the idea that others should also develop spiritual qualities, because this would curb their false pride in having taken birth in families of the elevated brāhmaṇa caste, with a monopoly on spiritual activities. But despite all protests from so-called Hindus and members of the brāhmaṇa caste, we are propagating the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement all over the world, according to the injunctions of the śāstras and the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Thus we are sure that we are delivering many fallen souls, making them bona fide candidates for going back home, back to Godhead.

grāmera ṭhākura tumi, saba tomāra jana nimāi bolāiyā tāre karaha varjana

SYNONYMS

grāmera-of this town; ṭhākura-the ruler; tumi-you; saba-all; tomāra-your; jana-people; nimāi-Nimāi Paṇḍita; bolāiyā-calling; tāre-unto Him; karaha-do; varjana-the punishment of making Him leave the town.

TRANSLATION

" 'Sir, you are the ruler of this town. Whether Hindu or Muslim, everyone is under your protection. Therefore please call Nimāi Paṇḍita and make Him leave the town.'

PURPORT

The word ṭhākura has two meanings. One meaning is "God" or "a godly person," and another meaning is "kṣatriya." Here the pāṣaṇḍī brāhmaṇas address the Kazi as ṭhākura, considering him the ruler of the town. There are different names by which to address the members of different castes. The brāhmaṇas are addressed as mahārāja, the kṣatriyas as ṭhākura, the vaiśyas as śetha or mahājana, and the śūdras as caudhurī. This etiquette is still followed in northern India, where the kṣatriyas are addressed as Ṭhākura Sāhab. The pāsaṇḍīs went so far as to request the magistrate, or Kazi, to have Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu expelled from the town because of His introducing hari-nāma-saṅkīrtana. Fortunately our Hare Kṛṣṇa movement all over the world, especially in the civilized world of Europe and America, has become very popular. Generally no one complains against us to have us removed from a city. Although such an attempt was indeed made in Melbourne, Australia, the attempt failed. Thus we are now introducing this Hare Kṛṣṇa movement in great cities of the world like New York, London, Paris, Tokyo, Sydney, Melbourne and Auckland, and by the grace of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu everything is going on nicely. People are happy to accept the principle of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, and the result is most satisfactory.

TRANSLATION

After hearing the Kazi speak so nicely, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu touched him and smilingly spoke as follows.

TEXT 217

tomāra mukhe kṛṣṇa-nāma,–e baḍa vicitra pāpa-kṣaya gela, hailā parama pavitra

SYNONYMS

tomāra mukhe-in your mouth; kṛṣṇa-nāma-chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; e-this; baḍa-very; vicitra-wonderful; pāpa-kṣaya-nullifying of sinful activities; gela-has become a fact; hailā-have become; parama-topmost; pavitra-purified.

TRANSLATION

"The chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa from your mouth has performed a wonder-it has nullified the reactions of all your sinful activities. Now you have become supremely pure.

PURPORT

Confirming the potency of the saṅkīrtana movement, these words from the very mouth of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu express how people can be purified simply by chanting the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa. The Kazi was a Muslim mleccha, or meat-eater, but because he several times uttered the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa, automatically the reactions of his sinful life were vanquished and he was fully purified of all material contamination. We do not know why the pāṣaṇḍīs of the present day protest that we are deteriorating the Hindu religion by spreading Kṛṣṇa consciousness all over the world and claiming all classes of men to the highest standard of Vaiṣṇavism. But these rascals disagree with us so vehemently that some of them do not allow European and American Vaiṣṇavas to enter into the temples of Viṣṇu. Thinking religion to be meant for material benefit, these so-called Hindus have actually become vicious by worshiping the numerous forms of the demigods. In the next verse Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu confirms the Kazi's purification.

TEXT 218

'hari' 'kṛṣṇa' 'nārāyaṇa'–laile tina nāma baḍa bhāgyavān tumi, baḍa puṇyavān

SYNONYMS

hari kṛṣṇa nārāyaṇa-the holy names of Lord Hari, Lord Kṛṣṇa and Lord Nārāyaṇa; laile-you have taken; tina-three; nāma-holy names; baḍa-very; bhāgyavān-fortunate; tumi-you are; baḍa-very; puṇyavān-pious.

TRANSLATION

"Because you have chanted three holy names of the Lord-Hari, Kṛṣṇa and Nārāyaṇa-you are undoubtedly the most fortunate and pious."

PURPORT

Here the Supreme Lord, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, confirms that anyone who chants the holy names Hari, Kṛṣṇa and Nārāyaṇa without offense is certainly extremely fortunate, and whether Indian or non-Indian, Hindu or non-Hindu, he immediately comes to the level of the most pious personality. We therefore do not care about the statements of pāṣaṇḍīs who protest against our movement's making the members of other cities or countries into Vaiṣṇavas. We have to follow in the footsteps of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, executing our mission peacefully, or, if necessary, kicking the heads of such protesters.

SYNONYMS

eta-this; śuni'-hearing; kājīra-of the Kazi; dui-two; cakṣe-in the eyes; paḍe-flow down; pāni-tears; prabhura-of the Lord; caraṇa-lotus feet; chuṅi'-touching; bale-says; priya-vāṇī-pleasing words.

TRANSLATION

After the Kazi heard this, tears flowed down from his eyes. He immediately touched the lotus feet of the Lord and spoke the following sweet words.

TEXT 220

tomāra prasāde mora ghucila kumati ei kṛpā kara,–yena tomāte rahu bhakti

SYNONYMS

tomāra prasāde-by Your mercy; mora-my; ghucila-have gone away; kumati-bad intentions; ei-this; kṛpā-mercy; kara-please do unto me; yena-so that; tomāte-in You; rahu-may stay; bhakti-devotion.

TRANSLATION

"Only by Your mercy have my bad intentions vanished. Kindly favor me so that my devotion may always be fixed upon You."

TEXT 221

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord said; eka-one; dāna-charity; māgiye-I beg; tomāya-from you; saṅkīrtana-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; vāda-opposition; yaiche-as it may be; nahe-not be; nadīyāya-in the district of Nadia.

TRANSLATION

The Lord said, "I wish to beg you for one favor in charity. You must pledge that this saṅkīrtana movement will not be checked, at least in the district of Nadia."

TEXT 222

kājī kahe,–mora vaṁśe yata upajibe tāhāke 'tālāka' diba,–kīrtana nā bādhibe

SYNONYMS

kājī kahe-the Kazi said; mora-my; vaṁśe-in the dynasty; yata-all (descendants); upajibe-who will take birth; tāhāke-unto them; tālāka-grave admonition; diba-I shall give; kīrtana-the saṅkīrtana movement; nā-never; bādhibe-they will oppose.

TRANSLATION

The Kazi said, "To as many descendants as take birth in my dynasty in the future, I give this grave admonition: No one should check the saṅkīrtana movement."

PURPORT

As a result of this grave injunction by the Kazi, even at present the descendants of the Kazi's family do not oppose the saṅkīrtana movement under any circumstances. Even during the great Hindu-Muslim riots in neighboring places, the descendants of the Kazi honestly preserved the assurance given by their forefather.

TEXT 223

SYNONYMS

śrīvāsa-of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; putrera-of the son; tāhāṅ-there; haila-took place; paraloka-death; tabu-still; śrīvāsera-of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; citte-in the mind; nā-not; janmila-there was; śoka-lamentation.

TRANSLATION

At that time a calamity took place-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's son died. Yet Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura was not at all sorry.

TEXT 229

mṛta-putra-mukhe kaila jñānera kathana āpane dui bhāi hailā śrīvāsa-nandana

SYNONYMS

mṛta-putra-of the dead son; mukhe-in the mouth; kaila-did; jñānera-of knowledge; kathana-conversation; āpane-personally; dui-the two; bhāi-brothers; hailā-became; śrīvāsa-nandana-sons of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu caused the dead son to speak about knowledge, and then the two brothers personally became the sons of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura.

PURPORT

This incident is described as follows by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. One night while Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was dancing with His devotees at the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, one of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's sons, who was suffering from some disease, died. Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura was so patient, however, that he did not allow anyone to express sorrow by crying, for he did not want the kīrtana going on at his house to be disturbed. Thus kīrtana continued without a sound of lamentation. But when the kīrtana was over, Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who could understand the incident, declared, "There must have been some calamity in this house." When He was then informed about the death of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's son, He expressed His regret, saying, "Why was this news not given to Me before?" He went to the place where the son was lying dead and asked him, "My dear boy, why are you leaving the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura?" The dead son immediately replied, "I was living in this house as long as I was destined to live here. Now that the time is over, I am going elsewhere, according to Your direction. I am Your eternal servant, a dependent living being. I must act only according to Your desire. Beyond Your desire, I cannot do anything. I have no such power." Hearing these words of the dead son, all the members of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura's family received transcendental knowledge. Thus there was no cause for lamentation. This transcendental knowledge is described in the Bhagavad-gītā (2.13): tathā dehāntara-prāptir dhīras tatra na muhyati. When someone dies, he accepts another body; therefore sober persons do not lament. After the discourse between the dead boy and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, funeral ceremonies were performed, and Lord Caitanya assured Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, "You have lost one son, but Nityānanda Prabhu and I are your eternal sons. We shall never be able to give up your company." This is an instance of a transcendental relationship with Kṛṣṇa. We have eternal transcendental relationships with Kṛṣṇa as His servants, friends, fathers, sons or conjugal lovers. When the same relationships are pervertedly reflected in this material world, we have relationships as the sons, fathers, friends, lovers, masters or servants of others, but all these relationships are subject to termination within a definite period. If we revive our relationship with Kṛṣṇa, however, by the grace of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu our eternal relationship will never break to cause our lamentation.

TEXT 230

tabe ta' karilā saba bhakte vara dāna ucchiṣṭa diyā nārāyaṇīra karila sammāna

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; ta'-certainly; karilā-did; saba bhakte-unto all devotees; vara-benediction; dāna-charity; ucchiṣṭa-food remnants; diyā-giving; nārāyaṇīra-of Nārāyaṇī; karila-did; sammāna-respect.

TRANSLATION

Thereafter the Lord charitably bestowed His benediction upon all His devotees. He gave the remnants of His food to Nārāyaṇī, showing her special respect.

PURPORT

Nārāyaṇī was a niece of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, and later she became the mother of Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura. In this connection the sahajiyās cite a malicious story that after eating the remnants of Lord Caitanya's food Nārāyaṇī became pregnant and gave birth to Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura. The rascal sahajiyās may manufacture such false statements, but no one should believe them because they are motivated by enmity against the Vaiṣṇavas.

TEXT 231

śrīvāsera vastra siṅye darajī yavana prabhu tāre nija-rūpa karāila darśana

SYNONYMS

śrīvāsera-of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; vastra-cloth; siṅye-sewing; darajī-tailor; yavana-meat-eater; prabhu-the Lord; tāre-unto him; nija-rūpa-His own form; karāila-caused; darśana-vision.

TRANSLATION

There was a tailor who was a meat-eater but was sewing garments for Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura. The Lord, being merciful to him, showed him His own form.

TEXT 232

'dekhinu' 'dekhinu' bali' ha-ila pāgala preme nṛtya kare, haila vaiṣṇava āgala

SYNONYMS

dekhinu-I have seen; dekhinu-I have seen; bali'-saying; ha-ila-became; pāgala-mad; preme-in the ecstasy of love; nṛtya-dancing; kare-does; haila-became; vaiṣṇava-devotee; āgala-first class.

TRANSLATION

Saying "I have seen! I have seen!" and dancing in ecstatic love as though mad, he became a first-class Vaiṣṇava.

PURPORT

There was a Muslim tailor near the house of Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura who used to sew the garments of the family. One day he was very much pleased with the dancing of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; indeed, he was enchanted. The Lord, understanding his attitude, showed him His original form as Kṛṣṇa. The tailor then began to dance, saying, "I have seen! I have seen!" He became absorbed in ecstatic love and began to dance with Lord Caitanya. Thus he became one of the foremost Vaiṣṇava adherents of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 233

SYNONYMS

āveśete-in ecstasy; śrīvāse-unto Śrīvāsa; prabhu-the Lord; vaṁśī-a flute; ta'-certainly; māgila-asked; śrīvāsa-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; kahe-replied; vaṁśī-flute; tomāra-Your; gopī-the gopīs; hari-stealing; nila-took away.

TRANSLATION

In ecstasy the Lord asked Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura to deliver His flute, but Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura replied, "Your flute has been stolen away by the gopīs."

TEXT 234

śuni' prabhu 'bala' 'bala' balena āveśe

SYNONYMS

śuni'-hearing; prabhu-the Lord; bala bala-go on speaking, go on speaking; balena-He says; āveśe-in ecstasy; śrīvāsa-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; varṇena-describes; vṛndāvana-of Vṛndāvana; līlā-rase-the transcendental mellow of the pastimes.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this reply, the Lord said in ecstasy, "Go on talking! Go on talking!" Thus Śrīvāsa described the transcendental mellow pastimes of Śrī Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 235

prathamete vṛndāvana-mādhurya varṇila śuniyā prabhura citte ānanda bāḍila prathamete-in the beginning; vṛndāvana-mādhurya-sweet pastimes of Vṛndāvana; varṇila-described; śuniyā-hearing; prabhura-of the Lord; citte-in the heart; ānanda-jubilation; bāḍila-increased.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In the beginning Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura described the transcendental sweetness of Vṛndāvana's pastimes. Hearing this, the Lord felt great and increasing jubilation in His heart.

TEXT 236

tabe 'bala' 'bala' prabhu bale vāra-vāra punaḥ punaḥ kahe śrīvāsa kariyā vistāra

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; bala bala-go on speaking, go on speaking; prabhu-the Lord; bale-says; vāra-vāra-again, again; punaḥ punaḥ-again, again; kahe-speaks; śrīvāsa-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; kariyā-making; vistāra-expansion.

TRANSLATION

Thereafter the Lord again and again asked him, "Speak on! Speak on!" Thus Śrīvāsa again and again described the pastimes of Vṛndāvana, vividly expanding them.

TEXT 237

SYNONYMS

vaṁśī-vādye-on hearing the sound of the flute; gopī-gaṇera-of all the gopīs; vane-in the forest; ākarṣaṇa-the attraction; tāṅ-sabāra-of all of them; saṅge-in the company; yaiche-in what way; vana-in the forest; viharaṇa-wandering.

TRANSLATION

Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura extensively explained how the gopīs were attracted to the forests of Vṛndāvana by the vibration of Kṛṣṇa's flute and how they wandered together in the forest.

TEXT 238

tāhi madhye chaya-ṛtu līlāra varṇana madhu-pāna, rāsotsava, jala-keli kathana

SYNONYMS

tāhi madhye-during that; chaya-ṛtu-the six seasons; līlāra-of the pastimes; varṇana-description; madhu-pāna-drinking of the honey; rāsa-utsava-dancing the rāsa-līlā; jala-keli-swimming in the Yamunā; kathana-narrations.

TRANSLATION

Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita narrated all the pastimes enacted during the six changing seasons. He described the drinking of honey, the celebration of the rāsa dance, the swimming in the Yamunā, and other such incidents.

TEXT 239

'bala' 'bala' bale prabhu śunite ullāsa

SYNONYMS

kahite-speaking; śunite-hearing; aiche-in that way; prātaḥ-kāla-morning; haila-appeared; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śrīvāsere-unto Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; toṣi'-satisfying; āliṅgana-embracing; kaila-did.

TRANSLATION

As the Lord thus requested and Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura spoke, the morning appeared, and the Lord embraced Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura and satisfied him.

TEXT 241

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; ācāryera-of Advaita Ācārya; ghare-in the house; kaila-performed; kṛṣṇa-līlā-pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa; rukmiṇī-of Rukmiṇī; svarūpa-form; prabhu-the Lord; āpane-personally; ha-ilā-became.

TRANSLATION

Thereafter a dramatization of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes was performed in the house of Advaita Ācārya. The Lord personally took the part of Rukmiṇī, the foremost of Kṛṣṇa's queens.

TEXT 242

kabhu durgā, lakṣmī haya, kabhu vā cic-chakti

SYNONYMS

kabhu-sometimes; durgā-the part of Goddess Durgā; lakṣmī-the goddess of fortune; haya-is; kabhu-sometimes; vā-or; cit-śakti-the spiritual potency; khāṭe-on a cot; vasi'-sitting; bhakta-gaṇe-unto the devotees; dilā-gave; prema-bhakti-love of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

The Lord sometimes took the part of Goddess Durgā, Lakṣmī [the goddess of fortune] or the chief potency, Yogamāyā. Sitting on a cot, He delivered love of Godhead to all the devotees present.

TEXT 243

eka-dina mahāprabhura nṛtya-avasāne
eka brāhmaṇī āsi' dharila caraṇe eka-dina-one day; mahāprabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nṛtya-avasāne-at the end of the dancing; eka-one; brāhmaṇī-wife of a brāhmaṇa; āsi'-coming; dharila-caught hold; caraṇe-of His lotus feet.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

One day when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had finished His dancing, a woman, the wife of a brāhmaṇa, came there and caught hold of His lotus feet.

TEXT 244

caraṇera dhūli sei laya vāra vāra dekhiyā prabhura duḥkha ha-ila apāra

SYNONYMS

caraṇera-of His lotus feet; dhūli-the dust; sei-that woman; laya-takes; vāra vāra-again and again; dekhiyā-seeing this; prabhura-of the Lord; duḥkha-unhappiness; ha-ila-there was; apāra-unlimited.

TRANSLATION

As she took the dust of His lotus feet again and again, the Lord became unlimitedly unhappy.

PURPORT

This holding of a great personality's lotus feet is certainly very good for the person who takes the dust, but this example of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's unhappiness indicates that a Vaiṣṇava should not allow anyone to take dust from his feet.

One who takes the dust of a great personality's lotus feet transfers his sinful activities to that great personality. Unless the person whose dust is taken is very strong, he must suffer the sinful activities of the person who takes the dust. Therefore ordinarily it should not be allowed. Sometimes in big meetings people come to take the same advantage by touching our feet. On account of this, sometimes we have to suffer from some disease. As far as possible, no outsider should be allowed to touch one's feet to take dust from them. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally showed this by His example, as explained in the next verse.

TEXT 245

sei-kṣaṇe dhāñā prabhu gaṅgāte paḍila nityānanda-haridāsa dhari' uṭhāila sei-kṣaṇe-immediately; dhāñā-running; prabhu-the Lord; gaṅgāte-in the water of the Ganges; paḍila-plunged; nityānanda-Lord Nityānanda; haridāsa-Haridāsa Ṭhākura; dhari'-catching Him; uṭhāila-raised Him.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Immediately He ran to the river Ganges and jumped in to counteract the sinful activities of that woman. Lord Nityānanda and Haridāsa Ṭhākura caught Him and raised Him from the river.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is God Himself, but He was playing the part of a preacher. Every preacher should know that being allowed to touch a Vaiṣṇava's feet and take dust may be good for the person who takes it, but it is not good for the person who allows it to be taken. As far as possible, this practice should ordinarily be avoided. Only initiated disciples should be allowed to take this advantage, not others. Those who are full of sinful activities should generally be avoided.

TEXT 246

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; gopī-bhāve-in the ecstasy of the gopīs; gṛhete-at home; vasiyā-sitting; gopī gopī-"Gopī, Gopī"; nāma-the name; laya-chants; viṣaṇṇa-morose; hañā-becoming.

TRANSLATION

One day the Lord, in the ecstasy of the gopīs, was sitting in His house. Very morose in separation, He was calling, "Gopī! Gopī!"

TEXT 248

eka paḍuyā āila prabhuke dekhite
'gopī' 'gopī' nāma śuni' lāgila balite

SYNONYMS

eka paḍuyā-one student; āila-came there; prabhuke-the Lord; dekhite-to see; gopī gopī-"Gopī, Gopī"; nāma-the name; śuni'-hearing; lāgila-began; balite-to say.

TRANSLATION

A student who came to see the Lord was astonished that the Lord was chanting ”Gopī! Gopī!” Thus he spoke as follows.

TEXT 249

kṛṣṇa-nāma nā lao kene, kṛṣṇa-nāma–dhanya
’gopī’ ’gopī’ balile vā kibā haya puṇya

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; nā-not; lao-You take; kene-why; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; dhanya-glorious; gopī gopī-the names ”Gopī, Gopī”; balile-on saying; vā-or; kibā-what; haya-there is; puṇya-piety.

TRANSLATION

”Why are You chanting the names ’Gopī, Gopī’ instead of the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa, which is so glorious? What pious result will You achieve by such chanting?”

PURPORT

It is said, vaiṣṇavera kriyā-mudrā vijñeha nā bujhaya: no one can understand the activities of a pure devotee. A student or neophyte devotee could not possibly understand why Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was chanting the name of the gopīs, nor should the student have asked the Lord about the potency of chanting ”Gopī, Gopī.” The neophyte student was certainlv convinced of the piety in the chanting of Kṛṣṇa’s holy name, but this sort of attitude is also offensive. Dharma-vrata-tyāga-hutādi-sarva-śubha-kriyā-sāmyam api pramādaḥ: to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa in exchange for the achievement of piety is an offense. This, of course, was unknown to the student. Thus he innocently asked, ”What piety is there in the chanting of the name Gopī?” He did not know that there is no question of piety or impiety. The chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa or the holy name Gopī is on the transcendental platform of loving affairs. Since he was not expert in understanding such transcendental activities, his question was merely impudent. Thus Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, apparently greatly angry at him, reacted as follows.

TEXT 250

śuni’ prabhu krodhe kaila kṛṣṇe doṣodgāra ṭheṅgā lañā uṭhilā prabhu paḍuyā māribāra

SYNONYMS

śuni’-hearing; prabhu-the Lord; krodhe-in anger; kaila-did; kṛṣṇe-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; doṣa-udgāra-many accusations; ṭheṅgā-stick; lañā-taking; uṭhilā-got up; prabhu-the Lord; paḍuyā-the student; māribāra-to strike.

TRANSLATION

Hearing the foolish student, the Lord became greatly angry and rebuked Lord Kṛṣṇa in various ways. Taking up a stick, He rose to strike the student.

PURPORT

It is mentioned in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam that when Uddhava came from Lord Kṛṣṇa with a message for the gopīs, all the gopīs, especially Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, denounced Kṛṣṇa in various ways. Such denunciations, however, reflect an exuberant loving attitude that an ordinary man cannot understand. When the foolish student questioned Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Lord Caitanya similarly rebuked Lord Kṛṣṇa in loving exuberance. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was in the mood of the gopīs and the student advocated the cause of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Lord Caitanya was greatly angry. Seeing His anger, the foolish student, who was an ordinary atheistic smārta-brāhmaṇa, foolishly misjudged Him. Thus he and a party of students were ready to strike the Lord in retaliation. After this incident, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu decided to take sannyāsa so that people would not commit offenses against Him, considering Him an ordinary householder, for in India even now a sannyāsī is naturally offered respect.

TEXT 251

bhaye palāya paḍuyā, prabhu pāche pāche dhāya āste vyaste bhakta-gaṇa prabhure rahāya

SYNONYMS

bhaye-out of fear; palāya-runs away; paḍuyā-the student; prabhu-the Lord; pāche pāche-after him; dhāya-runs; āste vyaste-somehow or other; bhakta-gaṇa-all the devotees; prabhure-the Lord; rahāya-checked.

TRANSLATION

The student ran away in fear, and the Lord followed him. But somehow or other the devotees checked the Lord.

TEXT 252

prabhure śānta kari’ ānila nija ghare paḍuyā palāyā gela paḍuyā-sabhāre

SYNONYMS

prabhure-the Lord; śānta kari’-pacifying; ānila-brought; nija-His own; ghare-to the house; paḍuyā-the student; palāyā-running away; gela-went; paḍuyā-of students; sabhāre-to the assembly.

TRANSLATION

The devotees pacified the Lord and brought Him home, and the student ran away to an assembly of other students.

TEXT 253

paḍuyā sahasra yāhāṅ paḍe eka-ṭhāñi prabhura vṛttānta dvija kahe tāhāṅ yāi

SYNONYMS

paḍuyā-students; sahasra-a thousand; yāhāṅ-where; paḍe-they study; eka-thāñi-in one place; prabhura-of the Lord; vṛttānta-incident; dvija-the brāhmaṇa; kahe-says; tāhāṅ-there; yāi-he goes.

TRANSLATION

The brāhmaṇa student ran to a place where a thousand students were studying together. There he described the incident to them.

PURPORT

In this verse we find the word dvija, indicating that the student was a brāhmaṇa. Actually, in those days, only members of the brāhmaṇa class became students of Vedic literature. Schooling is meant especially for brāhmaṇas; previously there was no question of schooling for kṣatriyas, vaiśyas or śūdras. Kṣatriyas used to learn the technology of warfare, and vaiśyas learned business from their fathers or other businessmen; they were not meant to study the Vedas. At present, however, everyone goes to school, and everyone is given the same type of education, although no one knows what the result will be. The result, however, is most unsatisfactory, as we have seen in the Western countries especially. The United States has vast educational institutions where everyone is allowed to receive an education, but the result is that most students become like hippies.

Higher education is not meant for everyone. Only selected individuals trained in brahminical culture should be allowed to pursue a higher education. Educational institutions should not aim to teach technology, for a technologist cannot properly be called educated. A technologist is a śūdra; only one who studies the Vedas may properly be called a learned man (paṇḍita). The duty of a brāhmaṇa is to become learned in the Vedic literature and teach the Vedic knowledge to other brāhmaṇas. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement we are simply teaching our students to become fit brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas. In our school at Dallas, the students are learning English and Sanskrit, and through these two languages they are studying all our books, such as Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Bhagavad-gītā As It Is and The Nectar of Devotion. It is a mistake to educate every student as a technologist. There must be a group of students who become brāhmaṇas. Without brāhmaṇas who study the Vedic literature, human society will be entirely chaotic.

TEXT 254

SYNONYMS

śuni'-hearing; krodha-angry; kaila-became; saba-all; paḍuyāra-of students; gaṇa-the groups; sabe-all; meli'-joining to gether; kare-do; tabe-then; prabhura-of the Lord; nindana-accusation.

TRANSLATION

Hearing of the incident, all the students became greatly angry and joined together in criticizing the Lord.

TEXT 255

saba deśa bhraṣṭa kaila ekalā nimāñi brāhmaṇa mārite cāhe, dharma-bhaya nāi

SYNONYMS

saba-all; deśa-countries; bhraṣṭa-spoiled; kaila-has; ekalā-alone; nimāñi-Nimāi Paṇḍita; brāhmaṇa-a caste brāhmaṇa; mārite-to strike; cāhe-He wants; dharma-of religious principles; bhaya-fear; nāi-there is not.

TRANSLATION

"Nimāi Paṇḍita alone has spoiled the entire country," they accused. "He wants to strike a caste brāhmaṇa. He has no fear of religious principles.

PURPORT

In those days also, the caste brāhmaṇas were very proud. They were not prepared to accept chastisement even from a teacher or spiritual master.

TEXT 256

SYNONYMS

punaḥ-again; yadi-if; aiche-like that; kare-He does; māriba-we shall strike; tāhare-Him; kon-who; vā-or; mānuṣa-the man; haya-is; ki-what; karite-to do; pāre-He is able.

TRANSLATION

"If He again performs such an atrocious act, certainly we shall retaliate and strike Him in turn. What kind of important person is He, that He can check us in this way?"

TEXT 257

prabhura nindāya sabāra buddhi haila nāśa supaṭhita vidyā kārao nā haya prakāśa

SYNONYMS

prabhura-of the Lord; nindāya-in accusation; sabāra-of everyone; buddhi-the intelligence; haila-became; nāśa-spoiled; su-paṭhita-well-studied; vidyā-knowledge; kārao-everyone's; nā-does not; haya-become; prakāśa-manifest.

TRANSLATION

When all the students thus resolved, criticizing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, their intelligence was spoiled. Thus although they were learned scholars, because of this offense the essence of knowledge was not manifest in them.

PURPORT

In the Bhagavad-gītā it is said, māyayāpahṛta-jñānā āsuraṁ bhāvam āśritāḥ: when one becomes inimical to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, adopting an atheistic attitude (āsuraṁ bhāvam), even if one is a learned scholar the essence of knowledge does not become manifest in him; in other words, the essence of his knowledge is stolen by the illusory energy of the Lord. In this connection Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura quotes a mantra from the Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad (6.23):

yasya deve parā bhaktir
yathā deve tathā gurau
tasyaite kathitā hy arthāḥ
prakāśante mahātmanaḥ

The purport of this verse is that one who is unflinchingly devoted to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Viṣṇu, and similarly devoted to the spiritual master, with no ulterior motive, becomes a master of all knowledge. In the heart of such a devotee, the real essence of the Vedic knowledge becomes manifest. This essence is nothing but surrender unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead (vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ). Only unto one who fully surrenders to the spiritual master and the Supreme Lord does the essence of Vedic knowledge become manifest, not to anyone else. This same principle is emphasized by Śrī Prahlāda Mahārāja in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.5.24):

iti puṁsārpitā viṣṇau bhaktiś cen nava-lakṣaṇā kriyeta bhagavaty addhā tan manye 'dhītam uttamam

"A person who directly applies these nine principles [hearing, chanting, remembering, etc.] in the service of the Lord is to be understood as a greatly learned man who has assimilated the Vedic literature very well, for the goal of studying the Vedic literature is to understand the supremacy of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa." Śrīdhara Svāmī confirms in his commentary that first one must surrender to the spiritual master; then the process of devotional service will develop. It is not a fact that only one who diligently pursues an academic career can become a devotee. Even with no academic career, if one has full faith in the spiritual master and the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he develops in spiritual life and real knowledge of the Vedas. The example of Mahārāja Khaṭvāṅga confirms this. One who surrenders is understood to have learned the subject matter of the Vedas very nicely. One who adopts this Vedic process of surrender learns devotional service and is certainly successful. One who is very much proud, however, is unable to surrender either to the spiritual master or to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Thus he cannot understand the essence of any Vedic literature. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (Bhāg. 11.11.18) declares:

śabda-brahmaṇi niṣṇāto na niṣṇāyāt pare yadi śramas tasya śrama-phalo
hy adhenum iva rakṣataḥ

"If one is learned in Vedic literature but is not a devotee of Lord Viṣṇu, his work is a useless waste of labor, just like the keeping of a cow that does not give milk."

Anyone who does not follow the surrendering process but is simply interested in an academic career cannot make any advancement. His profit is only his labor for nothing. If one is expert in the study of the Vedas but does not surrender to a spiritual master or Viṣṇu, all his cultivation of knowledge is but a waste of time and labor.

SYNONYMS

tathāpi-still; dāmbhika-proud; paḍuyā-students; namra-submissive; nāhi-not; haya-become; yāhāṅ-any where; tāhāṅ-everywhere; prabhura-of the Lord; nindā-accusation; hāsi'-laughing; se-they; karaya-do.

TRANSLATION

But the proud student community did not become submissive. On the contrary, the students spoke of the incident anywhere and everywhere. In a laughing manner they criticized the Lord.

TEXT 259

sarva-jña gosāñi jāni' sabāra durgati

SYNONYMS

sarva-jña-all-knowing; gosāñi-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jāni'-knowing; sabāra-of all of them; durgati-degradation; ghare-at home; vasi'-sitting; cinte-contemplates; tā'-of them; sabāra-of all; avyāhati-the rescue.

TRANSLATION

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, being omniscient, could understand the degradation of these students. Thus He sat at home, contemplating how to rescue them.

TEXT 260

yata adhyāpaka, āra tāṅra śiṣya-gaṇa dharmī, karmī, tapo-niṣṭha, nindaka, durjana

SYNONYMS

yata-all; adhyāpaka-professors; āra-and; tāṅra-their; śiṣya-gaṇa-students; dharmī-followers of religious ritualistic ceremonies; karmī-performers of fruitive activities; tapaḥ-niṣṭha-performers of austerities; nindaka-blasphemers; durjana-rogues.

TRANSLATION

"All the so-called professors and scientists and their students generally follow the regulative principles of religion, fruitive activities and austerities," the Lord thought, "yet at the same time they are blasphemers and rogues.

PURPORT

Here is a depiction of materialists who have no knowledge of devotional service. They may be very religious and may work very systematically or perform austerities and penances, but if they blaspheme the Supreme Personality of Godhead they are nothing but rogues. This is confirmed in the Hari-bhakti-sudhodaya (3.11):

bhagavad-bhakti-hīnasya jātiḥ śāstraṁ japas tapaḥ aprāṇasyaiva dehasya maṇḍanaṁ loka-rañjanam

If they are without knowledge of devotional service to the Lord, then great nationalism, fruitive, political or social work, science or philosophy are all simply like costly garments decorating a dead body. The only offense of persons adhering to these principles is that they are not devotees; they are always blasphemous toward the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His devotees.

SYNONYMS

ei saba-all of them; mora-of Me; nindā-blasphemy; aparādha-offense; haite-from; āmi-I; nā-not; laoyāile-if causing them to take; bhakti-devotional service; nā-not; pāre-able; la-ite-to take.

TRANSLATION

"If I do not induce them to take to devotional service, because of committing the offense of blasphemy none of these people will be able to take to it.

TEXT 262

SYNONYMS

āmāke-unto Me; praṇati-obeisances; kare-they offer; haya-becomes; pāpa-kṣaya-destruction of sinful reactions; tabe-then; se-they; ihāre-unto them; bhakti-devotional service; laoyāile-if causing to take; laya-will take.

TRANSLATION

"If these rogues offer Me obeisances, the reactions of their sinful activities will be nullified. Then, if I induce them, they will take to devotional service.

TEXT 264

SYNONYMS

more-Me; nindā kare-blasphemes; ye-anyone who; nā-does not; kare-offer; namaskāra-obeisances; e-saba-all these; jīvere-living entities; avaśya-certainly; kariba-I shall do; uddhāra-deliverance.

TRANSLATION

"I must certainly deliver all these fallen souls who blaspheme Me and do not offer Me obeisances.

TEXT 265

SYNONYMS

ataeva-therefore; avaśya-certainly; āmi-I; sannyāsa-the renounced order of life; kariba-shall accept; sannyāsi-buddhye-by thinking of Me as a sannyāsī; more-unto Me; praṇata-bow down; ha-iba-they shall do.

TRANSLATION

"I shall accept the sannyāsa order of life, for thus people will offer Me their obeisances, thinking of Me as a member of the renounced order.

PURPORT

Among the members of the varṇāśrama institution's social orders (brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya and śūdra), the brāhmaṇa is considered the foremost, for he is the teacher and spiritual master of all the other varṇas. Similarly, among the spiritual orders (brahmacarya, gṛhastha, vānaprastha and sannyāsa), the sannyāsa order is the most elevated. Therefore a sannyāsī is the spiritual master of all the varṇas and āśramas, and a brāhmaṇa is also expected to offer obeisances to a sannyāsī. Unfortunately, however, caste brāhmaṇas do not offer obeisances to a Vaiṣṇava sannyāsī. They are so proud that they do not offer obeisances even to Indian sannyāsīs, what to speak of European and American sannyāsīs. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, however, expected that even the caste brāhmaṇas would offer respectful obeisances to a sannyāsī because five hundred years ago the social custom was to offer obeisances immediately to any sannyāsī, known or unknown.

The sannyāsīs of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement are bona fide. All the students of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement have undergone the regular process of initiation. As enjoined in the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa by Sanātana Gosvāmī, tathā dīkṣā-vidhānena dvijatvaṁ jāyate nṛṇām: by the regular process of initiation, any man can become a brāhmaṇa. Thus in the beginning the students of our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement agree to live with devotees, and gradually, having given up four prohibited activities-illicit sex, gambling, meat-eating and intoxication-they become advanced in the activities of spiritual life. When one is found to be regularly following these principles, he is given the first initiation (hari-nāma), and he regularly chants at least sixteen rounds a day. Then, after six months or a year, he is initiated for the second time and given the sacred thread with the regular sacrifice and rituals. After some time, when he advances still further and is willing to give up this material world, he is given the sannyāsa order. At that time he receives the title svāmī or gosvāmī, both of which mean "master of the senses." Unfortunately, debauched so-called brāhmaṇas in India neither offer them respect nor accept them as bona fide sannyāsīs. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu expected the so-called brāhmaṇas to offer respect to such Vaiṣṇava sannyāsīs. Nevertheless, it does not matter whether they offer respect or whether they accept these sannyāsīs as bona fide, for the śāstra describes punishment for such disobedient so-called brāhmaṇas. The śāstric injuction declares:

devatā-pratimāṁ dṛṣṭvā yatiṁ caiva tridaṇḍinam namaskāraṁ na kuryād yaḥ prāyaścittīyate naraḥ

"One who does not offer respect to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, to His Deity in the temple or to a tridaṇḍī sannyāsī must undergo prāyaścitta [atonement]." If one does not offer obeisances to such a sannyāsī, the prescribed prāyaścitta is to fast for one day.

TEXT 266

praṇatite habe ihāra aparādha kṣaya nirmala hṛdaye bhakti karāiba udaya praṇatite-by offering obeisances; habe-there will be; ihāra-of such offenders; aparādha-the offenses; kṣaya-destruction; nirmala-pure; hṛdaye-in the heart; bhakti-devotional service; karāiba-I shall cause; udaya-the rising.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Offering obeisances will relieve them of all the reactions to their offenses. Then, by My grace, devotional service [bhakti] will awaken in their pure hearts.

PURPORT

According to Vedic injunctions, only a brāhmaṇa may be offered sannyāsa. The Śaṅkara-sampradāya (ekadaṇḍa-sannyāsa-sampradāya) awards the sannyāsa order only to caste brāhmaṇas, or born brāhmaṇas, but in the Vaiṣṇava system even one not born in a brāhmaṇa family may be made a brāhmaṇa according to the direction of the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa (tathā dīkṣā-vidhānena dvijatvaṁ jāyate nṛṇām). Any person from any part of the world may be made a brāhmaṇa by the regular process of initiation, and when he follows brahminical behavior, observing the principle of abstaining from intoxication, illicit sex, meat-eating and gambling, he may be offered sannyāsa. All the sannyāsīs in the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, who are preaching all over the world, are regular brāhmaṇa-sannyāsīs. Thus the so-called caste brāhmaṇas should not object to offering them respectful obeisances. By offering such obeisances, as recommended by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, they will diminish their offenses and automatically awaken to their natural position of devotional service. As it is said, nitya-siddha kṛṣṇa-prema sādhya kabhu naya: kṛṣṇa-prema can be awakened in a purified heart. The more we offer obeisances to sannyāsīs, especially Vaiṣṇava sannyāsīs, the more we diminish our offenses and purify our hearts. Only in a purified heart can kṛṣṇa-prema awaken. This is the process of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's cult, the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement.

TEXT 267

SYNONYMS

e-saba-all these; pāṣaṇḍīra-of the demons; tabe-then; ha-ibe-there will be; nistāra-deliverance; āra-alternative; kona-some; upāya-means; nāhi-there is not; ei-this; yukti-of the argument; sāra-essence.

TRANSLATION

"All the unfaithful rogues of this world can be delivered by this process. There is no alternative. This is the essence of the argument."

TEXT 268

SYNONYMS

ei-this; dṛḍha-firm; yukti-consideration; kari'-making; prabhu-the Lord; āche-was; ghare-in His home; keśava bhāratī-of the name Keśava Bhāratī; āilā-came; nadīyā-nagare-to the town of Nadia.

TRANSLATION

After coming to this firm conclusion, the Lord continued to stay at home. In the meantime Keśava Bhāratī came to the town of Nadia.

TEXT 269

prabhu tāṅre namaskari' kaila nimantraṇa bhikṣā karāiyā tāṅre kaila nivedana

SYNONYMS

prabhu-the Lord; tāṅre-to him; namaskari'-offering obeisances; kaila-did; nimantraṇa-invitation; bhikṣā-alms; karāiyā-giving; tāṅre-to him; kaila-submitted; nivedana-His prayer.

TRANSLATION

The Lord offered him respectful obeisances and invited him to His house. After feeding him sumptuously, He submitted to him His petition.

PURPORT

According to the system of Vedic society, whenever an unknown sannyāsī comes to a village or town, someone must invite him to take prasāda in his home. Sannyāsīs generally take prasāda in the house of a brāhmaṇa because the brāhmaṇa worships the Lord Nārāyaṇa śilā, or śālagrāma-śilā, and therefore there is prasāda that the sannyāsī may take. Keśava Bhāratī accepted the invitation of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Thus the Lord had a good opportunity to explain His desire to take sannyāsa from him.

TEXT 270

SYNONYMS

tumi-you; ta'-certainly; īśvara-the Lord; baṭa-are; sākṣāt-directly; nārāyaṇa-the Supreme Lord, Nārāyaṇa; kṛpā kari'-showing mercy; kara-please do; mora-My; saṁsāra-material life; mocana-deliverance.

TRANSLATION

"Sir, you are directly Nārāyaṇa. Therefore please be merciful unto Me. Deliver Me from this material bondage."

TEXT 271

SYNONYMS

bhāratī kahena-Keśava Bhāratī replied; tumi-You; īśvara-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; antaryāmī-You know everything from within; ye-whatever; karāha-You cause to do; se-that; kariba-I must do; svatantra-independent; nahi-not; āmi-I.

TRANSLATION

Keśava Bhāratī replied to the Lord, "You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Supersoul. I must do whatever You cause me to do. I am not independent of You."

TEXT 272

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-saying this; bhāratī-Keśava Bhāratī; gosāñi-the spiritual master; kāṭoyāte-to Katwa; gelā-went; mahāprabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tahā-there; yai'-going; sannyāsa-the renounced order of life; karilā-accepted.

TRANSLATION

After saying this, Keśava Bhāratī, the spiritual master, went back to his village, Katwa. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu went there and accepted the renounced order of life [sannyāsa].

PURPORT

At the end of His twenty-fourth year, at the end of the fortnight of the waxing moon, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu left Navadvīpa and crossed the river Ganges at a place known as Nidayāra-ghāṭa. Then He reached Kaṇṭaka-nagara, or Kāṭoyā (Katwa), where He accepted ekadaṇḍa-sannyāsa according to the Śaṅkarite system. Since Keśava Bhāratī belonged to the Śaṅkarite sect, he could not initiate Caitanya Mahāprabhu into the Vaiṣṇava sannyāsa order, whose members carry the tridaṇḍa.

Candraśekhara Ācārya assisted in the routine ceremonial work of the Lord's acceptance of sannyāsa. By the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, kīrtana was performed for the entire day, and at the end of the day the Lord shaved off His hair. On the next day He became a regular sannyāsī, with one rod (ekadaṇḍa). From that day on His name was Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya. Before that, He was known as Nimāi Paṇḍita. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, in the sannyāsa order, traveled all over Rāḍha-deśa, the region where the Ganges River cannot be seen. Keśava Bhāratī accompanied Him for some distance.

TEXT 273

SYNONYMS

saṅge-in His company; nityānanda-Nityānanda Prabhu; candraśekhara ācārya-Candraśekhara Ācārya; mukunda-datta-Mukunda Datta; ei tina-these three; kaila-performed; sarva-all; kārya-necessary activities.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted sannyāsa, three personalities were with Him to perform all the necessary activities. They were Nityānanda Prabhu, Candraśekhara Ācārya and Mukunda Datta.

TEXT 274

SYNONYMS

ei-this; ādi-līlara-of the ādi-līlā (the first portion of Lord Caitanya's pastimes); kaila-made; sūtra-synopsis; gaṇana-enumeration; vistāri-elaborately; varṇilā-described; ihā-this; dāsa vṛndāvana-Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura.

TRANSLATION

Thus I have summarized the incidents of the ādi-līlā. Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has described them elaborately [in his Caitanya-bhāgavata].

TEXT 275

yaśodā-nandana hailā śacīra nandana catur-vidha bhakta-bhāva kare āsvādana

SYNONYMS

yaśodā-nandana-the son of mother Yaśodā; hailā-became; śacīra-of mother Śacī; nandana-the son; catuḥ-vidha-four kinds of; bhakta-bhāva-devotional humors; kare-does; āsvādana-tasting.

TRANSLATION

The same Supreme Personality of Godhead who appeared as the son of mother Yaśodā has now appeared as the son of mother Śacī, relishing four kinds of devotional activities.

PURPORT

Servitude, friendship, parental affection and conjugal love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead are the basis of the four kinds of devotional activities. In śānta, the marginal stage of devotional service, there is no activity. But above the śānta humor are servitude, friendship, parental affection and conjugal love, which represent the gradual growth of devotional service to higher and higher platforms.

TEXT 276

sva-mādhurya rādhā-prema-rasa āsvādite rādhā-bhāva aṅgī kariyāche bhāla-mate

SYNONYMS

sva-mādhurya-His own conjugal love; rādhā-prema-rasa-the mellow of the loving affairs between Rādhārāṇī and Kṛṣṇa; āsvādite-to taste; rādhā-bhāva-the mood of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; aṅgī kariyāche-He accepted; bhāla-mate-very well.

TRANSLATION

To taste the mellows of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's loving affairs in Her relationship with Kṛṣṇa, and to understand the reservoir of pleasure in Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Himself, as Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, accepted the mood of Rādhārāṇī.

PURPORT

In this connection Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura writes in his Anubhāṣya, "Śrī Gaurasundara is Kṛṣṇa Himself with the attitude of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu never gave up the attitude of the gopīs. He remained everlastingly predominated by Kṛṣṇa and never accepted the part of the predominator by imitating conjugal love with an ordinary woman, as sahajiyās generally do. He never placed Himself in the position of a debauchee. Lusty materialists like the members of the sahajiyā-sampradāya hanker after women, even others' wives. But when they try to ascribe the responsibility for their lusty activities to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, they become offenders to Svarūpa Dāmodara and Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura. In Śrī Caitanya-bhāgavata, Ādi-khaṇḍa, Chapter Fifteen, it is said:

sabe para-strīra prati nāhi parihāsa strī dekhi' dūre prabhu hayena eka-pāśa

'Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu never even joked with others' wives. As soon as He saw a woman coming, He would immediately give her ample room to pass without talking.' He was extremely strict regarding the association of women. The sahajiyās, however, pose as followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu although they indulge in lusty affairs with women. In His youth Lord Caitanya was very humorous with everyone, but He never joked with any woman, nor in this incarnation did He talk about women. The gaurāṅga-nāgarī party is not approved by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu or Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura. Even though one may offer all kinds of prayers to Caitanya Mahāprabhu, one should strictly avoid worshiping Him as the Gaurāṅga Nāgara. The personal behavior of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and the verses written by Śrī Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura have completely repudiated the lusty desires of the gaurāṅga-nāgarīs."

TEXT 277

SYNONYMS

gopī-bhāva-the mood of the gopīs; yāte-in which; prabhu-the Lord; dhariyāche-accepted; ekānta-positively; vrajendra-nandane-Lord Kṛṣṇa; māne-they accept; āpanāra-own; kānta-lover.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the mood of the gopīs, who accept Vrajendranandana, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, as their lover.

TEXT 278

SYNONYMS

gopikā-bhāvera-of the ecstasy of the gopīs; ei-this; sudṛḍha-firm; niścaya-confirmation; vrajendra-nandana-Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa; vinā-without; anyatra-anyone else; nā-not; haya-is possible.

TRANSLATION

It is firmly ascertained that the ecstatic mood of the gopīs is possible only before Kṛṣṇa, and no one else.

TEXT 279

SYNONYMS

śyāma-sundara-Lord Kṛṣṇa, who has a bluish color; śikhi-piccha-with a peacock feather on the head; guñjā-a garland of guñjā (small berries or conchshells); vibhūṣaṇa-decorations; gopa-veśa-with the dress of a cowherd boy; tri-bhaṅgima-curved in three places; muralī-vadana-holding a flute to His mouth.

TRANSLATION

He has a bluish complexion, a peacock feather on His head, a guñjā garland and the decorations of a cowherd boy. His body is curved in three places, and He holds a flute to His mouth.

TEXT 280

SYNONYMS

ihā-this; chāḍi'-giving up; kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa; yadi-if; haya-takes; anya-ākāra-another form; gopikāra-of the gopīs; bhāva-the ecstasy; nāhi-does not; yāya-arise; nikaṭa-near; tāhāra-that (form).

TRANSLATION

If Lord Kṛṣṇa gives up this original form and assumes another Viṣṇu form, nearness to Him cannot invoke the ecstatic mood of the gopīs.

TRANSLATION

"Once Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa playfully manifested Himself as Nārāyaṇa, with four victorious hands and a very beautiful form. When the gopīs saw this exalted form, however, their ecstatic feelings were crippledī. A learned scholar, therefore, cannot understand the gopīs' ecstatic feelings, which are firmly fixed upon the original form of Lord Kṛṣṇa as the son of Nanda Mahārāja. The wonderful feelings of the gopīs in ecstatic parama-rasa with Kṛṣṇa constitute the greatest mystery in spiritual life.""

dūra haite-from a distance; kṛṣṇe-unto Kṛṣṇa; dekhi'-seeing; bale-said; gopī-gaṇa-all the gopīs; ei dekha-just see here; kuñjera-the bush; bhitara-within; vrajendra-nandana-the son of Nanda Mahārāja.

TRANSLATION

"Just see!" the gopīs said, seeing Kṛṣṇa from a distant place. "Here within a bush is Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja."

TEXT 285

gopī-gaṇa dekhi' kṛṣṇera ha-ila sādhvasa lukāite nārila, bhaye hailā vibaśa

SYNONYMS

gopī-gaṇa-all the gopīs combined together; dekhi'-seeing; kṛṣṇera-of Kṛṣṇa; ha-ila-there were; sādhvasa-some emotional feelings; lukāite-to hide; nārila-was unable; bhaye-out of fear; hailā-became; vibaśa-motionless.

TRANSLATION

As soon as Kṛṣṇa saw all the gopīs, He was struck with emotion. Thus He could not hide Himself, and out of fear He became motionless.

TEXT 286

catur-bhuja mūrti dhari' āchena vasiyā kṛṣṇa dekhi' gopī kahe nikaṭe āsiyā

SYNONYMS

catur-bhuja-four-armed; mūrti-form; dhari'-accepting; āchena-was; vasiyā-sitting; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; dekhi'-seeing; gopī-the gopīs; kahe-say; nikaṭe-nearby; āsiyā-coming there.

TRANSLATION

Kṛṣṇa assumed His four-armed Nārāyaṇa form and sat there. When all the gopīs came, they looked at Him and spoke as follows.

TEXT 287

'ihoṅ kṛṣṇa nahe, ihoṅ nārāyaṇa mūrti' eta bali' tāṅre sabhe kare nati-stuti

SYNONYMS

ihoṅ-this; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; nahe-is not; ihoṅ-this is; nārāyaṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; mūrti-the form; eta bali'-saying this; tāṅre-unto Him; sabhe-all the gopīs; kare-make; nati-stuti-obeisances and prayers.

TRANSLATION

"He is not Kṛṣṇa! He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Nārāyaṇa." After saying this, they offered obeisances and the following respectful prayers.

TEXT 288

"namo nārāyaṇa, deva karaha prasāda kṛṣṇa-saṅga deha' mora ghucāha viṣāda"

SYNONYMS

namaḥ nārāyaṇa-all respects to Nārāyaṇa; deva-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; karaha-kindly give; prasāda-Your mercy; kṛṣṇa-saṅga-association with Kṛṣṇa; deha'-giving; mora-our; ghucāha-please diminish; viṣāda-lamentation.

TRANSLATION

"O Lord Nārāyaṇa, we offer our respectful obeisances unto You. Kindly be merciful to us. Give us the association of Kṛṣṇa and thus vanquish our lamentation."

PURPORT

The gopīs were not made happy even by seeing the four-armed form of Nārāyaṇa. Yet they offered their respects to the Supreme Personality of Godhead and begged from Him the benediction of achieving the association of Kṛṣṇa. Such is the ecstatic feeling of the gopīs.

TEXT 289

eta bali namaskari' gelā gopī-gaṇa hena-kāle rādhā āsi' dilā daraśana eta bali-saying this; namaskari'-offering obeisances; gelā-went away; gopī-gaṇa-all the gopīs; hena-kāle-at this time; rādhā-Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; āsi'-coming there; dilā-gave; daraśana-audience.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After saying this and offering obeisances, all the gopīs dispersed. Then Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī came and appeared before Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 290

rādhā dekhi' kṛṣṇa tāṅre hāsya karite sei catur-bhuja mūrti cāhena rākhite rādhā-Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; dekhi'-seeing; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; tāṅre-unto Her; hāsya-joking; karite-to do; sei-that; catur-bhuja-four-armed; mūrti-form; cāhena-wanted; rākhite-to keep.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Lord Kṛṣṇa saw Rādhārāṇī, He wanted to maintain the four-armed form to joke with Her.

TEXT 291

lukāilā dui bhuja rādhāra agrete bahu yatna kailā kṛṣṇa, nārila rākhite lukāilā-He hid; dui-two; bhuja-arms; rādhāra-of Srīmatī Rādhārāṇī; agrete-in front; bahu-much; yatna-endeavor; kailā-did; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; nārila-was unable; rākhite-to keep.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In front of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, Śrī Kṛṣṇa had to hide the two extra arms. He tried His best to keep four arms before Her, but He was completely unable to do so.

TEXT 292

rādhāra viśuddha-bhāvera acintya prabhāva ye kṛṣṇere karāilā dvi-bhuja-svabhāva

SYNONYMS

rādhāra-of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; viśuddha-purified; bhāvera-of the ecstasy; acintya-inconceivable; prabhāva-influence; ye-which; kṛṣṇere-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; karāilā-forced; dvi-bhuja-two-armed; svabhāva-original form.

TRANSLATION

The influence of Rādhārāṇī's pure ecstasy is so inconceivably great that it forced Kṛṣṇa to come to His original two-armed form.

TEXT 293

rāsārambha-vidhau nilīya vasatā kuñje mṛgākṣī-gaṇair rādhāyāḥ praṇayasya hanta mahimā yasya śriyā rakṣituṁ sā śakyā prabhaviṣṇunāpi hariṇā nāsīc catur-bāhutā

SYNONYMS

rāsa-ārambha-vidhau-in the matter of beginning the rāsa dance; nilīya-having hidden; vasatā-sitting; kuñje-in a grove; mṛga-akṣī-gaṇaiḥ-by the gopīs, who had eyes resembling those of deer; dṛṣṭam-being seen; gopayitum-to hide; svam-Himself; uddhura-dhiyā-by first-class intelligence; yā-which; suṣṭhu-perfectly; sandarśitā-exhibited; rādhāyāḥ-of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; praṇayasya-of the love; hanta-just see; mahimā-the glory; yasya-of which; śriyā-the opulence; rakṣitum-to protect that; sā-that; śakyā-able; prabhaviṣṇunā-by Kṛṣṇa; api-even; hariṇā-by the Supreme Personality of Godhead; na-not; āsīt-was; catuḥ-bāhutā-four-armed form.

TRANSLATION

"Prior to the rāsa dance, Lord Kṛṣṇa hid Himself in a grove just to have fun. When the gopīs came, their eyes resembling those of deer, by His sharp intelligence He exhibited His beautiful four-armed form to hide Himself. But when Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī came there, Kṛṣṇa could not maintain His four arms in Her presence. This is the wonderful glory of Her love."

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi, by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TEXT 294

sei vrajeśvara–ihaṅ jagannātha pitā sei vrajeśvarī–ihaṅ śacīdevī mātā

SYNONYMS

sei-that; vrajeśvara-the King of Vraja; ihaṅ-now; jagannātha-Jagannātha Miśra; pitā-the father of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sei-that; vrajeśvarī-Queen of Vraja; ihaṅ-now; śacīdevī-Śacīdevī; mātā-the mother of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Father Nanda, the King of Vrajabhūmi, is now Jagannātha Miśra, the father of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. And mother Yaśodā, the Queen of Vrajabhūmi, is now Śacīdevī, Lord Caitanya's mother.

TEXT 295

sei nanda-suta–ihaṅ caitanya-gosāñi sei baladeva–ihaṅ nityānanda bhāi

SYNONYMS

sei nanda-suta-the same son of Nanda Mahārāja; ihaṅ-now; caitanya-gosāñi-Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sei baladeva-the selfsame Baladeva; ihaṅ-now; nityānanda bhāi-Nityānanda Prabhu, the brother of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

The former son of Nanda Mahārāja is now Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and the former Baladeva, Kṛṣṇa's brother, is now Nityānanda Prabhu, the brother of Lord Caitanya.

TEXT 296

vātsalya, dāsya, sakhya–tina bhāvamaya sei nityānanda–kṛṣṇa-caitanya-sahāya vātsalya-paternity; dāsya-servitude; sakhya-fraternity; tina-three; bhāva-maya-emotional ecstasies; sei-that; nityānanda-Nityānanda Prabhu; kṛṣṇa-caitanya-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sahāya-the assistant.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu always feels the ecstatic emotions of paternity, servitude and friendship. He always assists Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in that way.

TEXT 297

prema-bhakti diyā teṅho bhāsā'la jagate tāṅra caritra loke nā pāre bujhite

SYNONYMS

prema-bhakti-devotional service; diyā-giving; teṅho-Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; bhāsā'la-overflooded; jagate-in the world; tāṅra-His; caritra-character; loke-people; nā-not; pāre-able; bujhite-to understand.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu overflooded the entire world by distributing transcendental loving service. No one can understand His character and activities.

TEXT 298

advaita-ācārya-gosāñi bhakta-avatāra kṛṣṇa avatāriyā kailā bhaktira pracāra advaita-ācārya-Śrī Advaita Prabhu; gosāñi-spiritual master; bhakta-avatāra-the incarnation of a devotee; kṛṣṇa-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; avatāriyā-descending; kailā-did; bhaktira-of devotional service; pracāra-propagation.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Advaita Ācārya Prabhu appeared as an incarnation of a devotee. He is in the category of Kṛṣṇa, but He descended to this earth to propagate devotional service.

TEXT 299

sakhya, dāsya,–dui bhāva sahaja tāṅhāra kabhu prabhu karena tāṅre guru-vyavahāra sakhya-fraternity; dāsya-servitude; dui-two; bhāva-ecstasies; sahaja-natural; tāṅhāra-His; kabhu-sometimes; prabhu-Lord Caitanya; karena-does; tāṅre-to Him; guru-of spiritual master; vyavahāra-treatment.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

His natural emotions were always on the platform of fraternity and servitude, but the Lord sometimes treated Him as His spiritual master.

TEXT 300

śrīvāsādi yata mahāprabhura bhakta-gaṇa nija nija bhāve karena caitanya-sevana

SYNONYMS

śrīvāsa-ādi-headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; yata-all; mahāprabhura-of Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhakta-gaṇa-devotees; nija nija-in their own respective; bhāve-emotions; karena-do; caitanya-sevana-service to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

All the devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, have their own emotional humors in which they render service unto Him.

TEXT 301

paṇḍita-gosāñi ādi yāṅra yei rasa sei sei rase prabhu hana tāṅra vaśa

SYNONYMS

paṇḍita-gosāñi-Gadādhara Paṇḍita; ādi-headed by; yāṅra-whose; yei-whatever; rasa-transcendental mellow; sei sei-that respective; rase-by the mellow; prabhu-the Lord; hana-is; tāṅra-his; vaśa-under control.

TRANSLATION

Personal associates like Gadādhara, Svarūpa Dāmodara, Rāmānanda Rāya, and the six Gosvāmīs (headed by Rūpa Gosvāmī) are all situated in their respective transcendental humors. Thus the Lord submits to various positions in various transcendental mellows.

PURPORT

In verses 296 through 301 the emotional devoted service of Śrī Nityānanda, Śrī Advaita Prabhu and others has been fully described. Describing such individual service, the Gaura-gaṇoddeśa-dīpikā, verses 11 through 16, declares that although Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu appeared as a devotee, He is none other than the son of Nanda Mahārāja. Similarly, although Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu appeared as Lord Caitanya's assistant, He is none other than Baladeva, the carrier of the plow. Advaita Ācārya is the incarnation of Sadāśiva from the spiritual world. All the devotees headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura are His marginal energy, whereas the devotees headed by Gadādhara Paṇḍita are manifestations of His internal potency.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Advaita Prabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu all belong to the viṣṇu-tattva category. Because Lord Caitanya is an ocean of mercy, He is addressed as mahāprabhu, whereas Nityānanda and Advaita, being two great personalities who assist Lord Caitanya, are addressed as prabhu. Thus there are two prabhus and one mahāprabhu. Gadādhara Gosvāmī is a representative of a perfect brāhmaṇa spiritual master. Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura represents a perfect brāhmaṇa devotee. These five are known as the Pañca-tattva.

tihaṅ śyāma,–vaṁśī-mukha, gopa-vilāsī ihaṅ gaura–kabhu dvija, kabhu ta' sannyāsī

SYNONYMS

tihaṅ-in kṛṣṇa-līlā; śyāma-blackish color; vaṁśī-mukha-a flute in the mouth; gopa-vilāsī-an enjoyer as a cowherd boy; ihaṅ-now; gaura-fair complexion; kabhu-sometimes; dvija-brāhmaṇa; kabhu-sometimes; ta'-certainly; sannyāsī-in the renounced order of life.

TRANSLATION

In kṛṣṇa-lilā the Lord's complexion is blackish. Holding a flute to His mouth, He enjoys as a cowherd boy. Now the selfsame person has appeared with a fair complexion, sometimes acting as a brāhmaṇa and sometimes accepting the renounced order of life.

TEXT 303

ataeva āpane prabhu gopī-bhāva dhari' vrajendra-nandane kahe 'prāṇa-nātha' kari' ataeva-therefore; āpane-personally; prabhu-the Lord; gopī-bhāva-the ecstasy of the gopīs; dhari'-accepting; vrajendra-nandane-the son of Nanda Mahārāja; kahe-addresses; prāṇa-nātha-O Lord of My life (husband); kari'-accepting.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Therefore the Lord Himself, accepting the emotional ecstasy of the gopīs, now addresses the son of Nanda Mahārāja, "O master of My life! O My dear husband!"

TEXT 304

sei kṛṣṇa, sei gopī,–parama virodha acintya caritra prabhura ati sudurbodha sei kṛṣṇa-that Kṛṣṇa; sei gopī-that gopī; parama virodha-very much contradictory; acintya-inconceivable; caritra-character; prabhura-of the Lord; ati-very much; sudurbodha-difficult to understand.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

He is Kṛṣṇa, yet He has accepted the mood of the gopīs. How is it so? It is the inconceivable character of the Lord, which is very difficult to understand.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇa's accepting the part of the gopīs is certainly contradictory according to any mundane calculations, but the Lord, by His inconceivable character, may act like the gopīs and feel separation from Kṛṣṇa, although He is Kṛṣṇa Himself. Such a contradiction can be reconciled only in the Supreme Personality of Godhead because He has energy that is inconceivable (acintya), which can make possible that which is impossible to do (aghaṭa-ghaṭana-paṭīyasī). Such contradictions are very difficult to understand unless a devotee strictly follows the Vaiṣṇava philosophy under the direction of the Gosvāmīs. Therefore Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī ends every chapter with this verse:

śrī-rūpa-raghunātha-pade yāra āśa
caitanya-caritāmṛta kahe kṛṣṇadāsa

"Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps."

In a song by Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura it is stated:

rūpa-raghunātha-pade ha-ibe ākuti
kabe hāma bujhaba se yugala-pīriti

The conjugal love between Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa, which is called yugala-pīriti, is not understandable by mundane scholars, artists or poets. It is simply to be understood by devotees who strictly follow in the footsteps of the six Gosvāmīs. Sometimes so-called artists and poets try to understand the love affairs of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa, and they publish cheap books of poetry and pictures on the subject. Unfortunately, however, they do not understand the transcendental affairs of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa even to the smallest degree. They are simply meddling in a matter in which they are not fit even to enter.

TEXT 305

ithe tarka kari' keha nā kara saṁśaya kṛṣṇera acintya-śakti ei mata haya

SYNONYMS

ithe-in this matter; tarka kari'-making arguments; keha-someone; nā-do not; kara-make; saṁśaya-doubts; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; acintya-śakti-inconceivable potency; ei-this; mata-the verdict; haya-is.

TRANSLATION

One cannot understand the contradictions in Lord Caitanya's character by putting forward mundane logic and arguments. Consequently one should not maintain doubts in this connection. One should simply try to understand the inconceivable energy of Kṛṣṇa; otherwise one cannot understand how such contradictions are possible.

TEXT 306

acintya, adbhuta kṛṣṇa-caitanya-vihāra citra bhāva, citra guṇa, citra vyavahāra

SYNONYMS

acintya-inconceivable; adbhuta-wonderful; kṛṣṇa-caitanya-of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu; vihāra-pastimes; citra-wonderful; bhāva-ecstasy; citra-wonderful; guṇa-qualities; citra-wonderful; vyavahāra-behavior.

TRANSLATION

The pastimes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu are inconceivable and wonderful. His ecstasy is wonderful, His qualities are wonderful, and His behavior is wonderful.

TEXT 307

tarke ihā nāhi māne yei durācāra kumbhīpāke pace, tāra nāhika nistāra

SYNONYMS

tarke-by arguments; ihā-this; nāhi-not; māne-accepts; yei-anyone who; durācāra-debauchee; kumbhī-pāke-in the boiling oil of hell; pace-boils; tāra-his; nāhika-there is not; nistāra-deliverance.

TRANSLATION

If one simply adheres to mundane arguments and therefore does not accept this, he will boil in the hell of Kumbhīpāka. For him there is no deliverance.

PURPORT

Kumbhīpāka, a type of hellish condition, is described in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.26.13), wherein it is said that a person who cooks living birds and beasts to satisfy his tongue is brought before Yamarāja after death and punished in the Kumbhīpāka hell. There he is put into boiling oil called kumbhī-pāka, from which there is no deliverance. Kumbhīpāka is meant for persons who are unnecessarily envious. Those who are envious of the activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are punished in that hellish condition.

TEXT 308

acintyāḥ khalu ye bhāvā na tāṁs tarkeṇa yojayet prakṛtibhyaḥ paraṁ yac ca tad acintyasya lakṣaṇam

SYNONYMS

acintyāḥ-inconceivable; khalu-certainly; ye-those; bhāvaḥ-subject matters; na-not; tān-them; tarkeṇa-by argument; yojayet-one may understand; prakṛtibhyaḥ-to material nature; param-transcendental; yat-that which; ca-and; tat-that; acintyasya-of the inconceivable; lakṣaṇam-a symptom.

TRANSLATION

"Anything transcendental to material nature is called inconceivable, whereas arguments are all mundane. Since mundane arguments cannot touch transcendental subject matters, one should not try to understand transcendental subjects through mundane arguments."

This is a quote from the Mahābhārata (Bhīṣma parva 5.22) and is also quoted in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.5.93), by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TEXT 309

adbhuta caitanya-līlāya yāhāra viśvāsa sei jana yāya caitanyera pada pāśa adbhuta-wonderful; caitanya-līlāya-in the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yāhāra-anyone whose; viśvāsa-faith; sei-that; jana-person; yāya-makes progress; caitanyera-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; pada-the lotus feet; pāśa-near.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Only a person who has firm faith in the wonderful pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu can approach His lotus feet.

TEXT 310

prasaṅge kahila ei siddhāntera sāra ihā yei śune, śuddha-bhakti haya tāra

SYNONYMS

prasaṅge-in the course of discussion; kahila-it was said; ei-this; siddhāntera-of the conclusion; sāra-the essence; ihā-this; yei-anyone who; śune-hears; śuddha-bhakti-unalloyed devotional service; haya-becomes; tāra-his.

TRANSLATION

In this discourse I have explained the essence of the devotional conclusion. Anyone who hears this develops unalloyed devotional service to the Lord.

TEXT 311

likhita granthera yadi kari anuvāda tabe se granthera artha pāiye āsvāda

SYNONYMS

likhita-written; granthera-of the scripture; yadi-if; kari-I do; anuvāda-repetition; tabe-then; se granthera-of that scripture; artha-the meaning; pāiye-I can get; āsvāda-taste.

TRANSLATION

If I repeat what is already written, I may thus relish the purpose of this scripture.

TEXT 312

dekhi granthe bhāgavate vyāsera ācāra kathā kahi' anuvāda kare vāra vāra

SYNONYMS

dekhi-I see; granthe-in the scripture; bhāgavate-in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; vyāsera-of Śrīla Vyāsadeva; ācāra-behavior; kathā-narration; kahi'-describing; anuvāda-repetition; kare-he does; vāra vāra-again and again.

TRANSLATION

We can see in the scripture Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam the conduct of its author, Śrī Vyāsadeva. After speaking the narration, he repeats it again and again.

PURPORT

At the end of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, in the Twelfth Canto, the Twelfth Chapter contains forty-three verses in which Śrī Kṛṣṇa-dvaipāyana Vedavyāsa recapitulates Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam's entire subject matter. Śrī Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī wants to follow in the footsteps of Śrī Vyāsadeva by recapitulating the seventeen chapters of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta's Ādi-līlā.

TEXT 313

tāte ādi-līlāra kari pariccheda gaṇana prathama paricchede kailuṅ 'maṅgalācaraṇa'

SYNONYMS

tāte-therefore; ādi-līlāra-of the First Canto, known as Ādi-līlā; kari-I do; pariccheda-chapter; gaṇana-enumeration; prathama paricchede-in the First Chapter; kailuṅ-I have done; maṅgala-ācaraṇa-invocation of auspiciousness.

TRANSLATION

Therefore I shall enumerate the chapters of the Ādi-līlā. In the First Chapter I offer obeisances to the spiritual master, for this is the beginning of auspicious writing.

TEXT 314

dvitīya paricchede 'caitanya-tattva-nirūpaṇa' svayaṁ bhagavān yei vrajendra-nandana

SYNONYMS

dvitīya paricchede-in the Second Chapter; caitanya-tattva-nirūpaṇa-description of the truth of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; svayam-personally; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; yei-who; vrajendra-nandana-the son of Nanda Mahārāja.

TRANSLATION

The Second Chapter explains the truth of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Kṛṣṇa, the son of Mahārāja Nanda.

TEXT 315

teṅho ta' caitanya-kṛṣṇa–śacīra nandana

SYNONYMS

teṅho-He; ta'-certainly; caitanya-kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa with the name of Śrī Caitanya; śacīra nandana-the son of Śacīmātā; tṛtīya paricchede-in the Third Chapter; janmera-of His birth; sāmānya-general; kāraṇa-reason.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is Kṛṣṇa Himself, has now appeared as the son of mother Śacī. The Third Chapter describes the general cause of His appearance.

TEXT 316

tahiṅ madhye prema-dāna–'viśeṣa' kāraṇa yuga-dharma–kṛṣṇa-nāma-prema-pracāraṇa

SYNONYMS

tahiṅ madhye-in that chapter; prema-dāna-distribution of love of Godhead; viśeṣa-specific; kāraṇa-reason; yuga-dharma-the religion of the millennium; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; prema-love of Godhead; pracāraṇa-propagating.

TRANSLATION

The Third Chapter specifically describes the distribution of love of Godhead. It also describes the religion of the age, which is simply to distribute the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa and propagate the process of loving Him.

TEXT 317

caturthe kahiluṅ janmera 'mūla' prayojana

SYNONYMS

caturthe-in the Fourth Chapter; kahiluṅ-I have described; janmera-of His birth; mūla-the real; prayojana-necessity; sva-mādhurya-His own transcendental sweetness; prema-ānanda-of ecstatic joy from love; rasa-the mellows; āsvādana-tasting.

TRANSLATION

The Fourth Chapter describes the main reason for His appearance, which is to taste the mellows of His own transcendental loving service and His own sweetness.

TEXT 318

pañcame 'śrī-nityānanda'-tattva nirūpaṇa nityānanda hailā rāma rohiṇī-nandana

SYNONYMS

pañcame-in the Fifth Chapter; śrī-nityānanda-of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; tattva-the truth; nirūpaṇa-description; nityānanda-Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; hailā-was; rāma-Balarāma; rohiṇī-nandana-the son of Rohiṇī.

TRANSLATION

The Fifth Chapter describes the truth of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu, who is none other than Balarāma, the son of Rohiṇī.

TEXT 319

TRANSLATION

I wish to place the lotus feet of the Gosvāmīs on my head. Their names are Śrī Svarūpa Dāmodara, Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī, Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī, Śrī Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī and Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī. Placing their lotus feet on my head, always hoping to serve them, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Ādi-līlā, Seventeenth Chapter, describing the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu in His youth.

END OF THE ĀDI-LĪLĀ

18.5 Madhya-līlā

18.5.1 Chapter 1

The Later Pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu

In this chapter there is a summary description of all the pastimes performed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu during the middle period of His activities as well as the six years at the end of His activities. All of these are described in brief. There is also a description of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's ecstasy that occurred when He recited the verse beginning yaḥ kaumāra-haraḥ, and there is also an explanation of that ecstasy given in the verse priyaḥ so 'yaṁ kṛṣṇaḥ, by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī. Because he wrote that verse, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī was specifically blessed by the Lord. There is also a description of the many books written by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī and Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī. There is also a description of the meeting between Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī in the village known as Rāmakeli.

TEXT 1

SYNONYMS

bhakti pracāriyā-broadcasting devotional service; sarva-tīrtha-all the places of pilgrimage; prakāśila-discovered; madana-gopāla-of Śrī Rādhā-Madana-mohana; govindera-of Śrī Rādhā-Govindajī; sevā-the service: pracārila-introduced.

TRANSLATION

After going to Vṛndāvana, the brothers preached devotional service and discovered many places of pilgrimage. They specifically initiated the service of Madana-mohana and Govindajī.

TEXT 33

nānā śāstra āni' kailā bhakti-grantha sāra mūḍha adhama-janere teṅho karilā nistāra

SYNONYMS

nānā śāstra-different types of scriptures; āni'-collecting; kailā-compiled; bhakti-grantha-of books on devotional service; sāra-the essence; mūḍha-rascals; adhama-janere-and fallen souls; teṅho-they; karilā nistāra-delivered.

TRANSLATION

Both Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī brought various scriptures to Vṛndāvana and collected the essence of these by compiling many scriptures on devotional service. In this way they delivered all rascals and fallen souls.

PURPORT

Śrīla Śrīnivāsa Ācārya has sung:

nānā-śāstra-vicāraṇaika-nipuṇau sad-dharma-saṁsthāpakau lokānāṁ hita-kāriṇau tri-bhuvane mānyau śaraṇyākarau rādhā-kṛṣṇa-padāravinda-bhajanānandena mattālikau vande rūpa-sanātanau raghu-yugau śrī-jīva-gopālakau

The six Gosvāmīs, under the direction of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī, studied various Vedic scriptures and picked up the essence of them, the devotional service of the Lord. This means that all the Gosvāmīs wrote many scriptures on devotional service with the support of the Vedic literature. Devotional service is not a sentimental activity. The essence of Vedic knowledge is devotional service, as confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (15.15): vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ. All the Vedic literature aims at understanding Kṛṣṇa, and how to understand Kṛṣṇa through devotional service has been explained by Śrīla Rūpa and Sanātana Gosvāmīs, with evidence from all the Vedic scriptures. They have put it so nicely that even a rascal or first-class fool can be delivered by devotional service under the guidance of the Gosvāmīs.

TEXT 34

prabhu ājñāya kaila saba śāstrera vicāra vrajera nigūḍha bhakti karila pracāra prabhu ājñāya-upon the order of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kaila-they did; saba śāstrera-of all scriptures; vicāra-analytical study; vrajera-of Śrī Vṛndāvana-dhāma; nigūḍha-most confidential; bhakti-devotional service; karila-did; pracāra-preaching.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Gosvāmīs carried out the preaching work of devotional service on the basis of an analytical study of all confidential Vedic scriptures. This was in compliance with the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Thus one can understand the most confidential devotional service of Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

This proves that bona fide devotional service is based on the conclusions of the Vedic literature. It is not based on the type of sentiment exhibited by the prākṛta-sahajiyās. The prākṛta-sahajiyās do not consult the Vedic literature, and they are debauchees, woman-hunters and smokers of gañjā. Sometimes they give a theatrical performance and cry for the Lord with tears in their eyes. Of course, all scriptural conclusions are washed off by these tears. The prākṛta-sahajiyās do not realize that they are violating the orders of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who specifically said that to understand Vṛndāvana and the pastimes of Vṛndāvana one must have sufficient knowledge of the śāstras (Vedic scriptures). As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.12), bhaktyā śruta-gṛhītayā. This means that devotional service is acquired from Vedic knowledge. Tac chraddadhānāḥ munayaḥ. Devotees who are actually serious attain bhakti, scientific devotional service, by hearing Vedic scriptures (bhaktyā śruta-gṛhītayā). It is not that one should create something out of sentimentality, become a sahajiyā and advocate such concocted devotional service. However, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura considered such sahajiyās to be more favorable than the impersonalists, who are hopelessly atheistic. The impersonalists have no idea of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The position of the sahajiyās is far better than that of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs. Although the sahajiyās do not think much of Vedic knowledge, they nonetheless have accepted Lord Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Lord. Unfortunately, they mislead others from authentic devotional service.

SYNONYMS

hari-bhakti-vilāsa-the scripture named Hari-bhakti-vilāsa; āra-and; bhāgavatāmṛta-the scripture named Bṛhad-bhāgavatāmṛta; daśama-ṭippanī-comments on the Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; āra-and; daśama-carita-poetry about the Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TRANSLATION

Some of the books compiled by Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī were the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa, Bṛhad-bhāgavatāmṛta, Daśama-ṭippanī and Daśama-carita.

PURPORT

In the First Wave of the book known as Bhakti-ratnākara, it is said that Sanātana Gosvāmī understood Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam by thorough study and explained it in his commentary known as Vaiṣṇava-toṣaṇī All the knowledge that Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī and Rūpa Gosvāmī directly acquired from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was broadcast all over the world by their expert service. Sanātana Gosvāmī gave his Vaiṣṇava-toṣaṇī commentary to Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī for editing, and Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī edited this under the name of Laghu-toṣaṇī. Whatever he immediately put down in writing was finished in the year 1476 Śaka (A.D. 1555). Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī completed Laghu-toṣaṇī in the year Śakābda 1504 (A.D. 1583).

The subject matter of the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa, by Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī, was collected by Śrīla Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī and is known as a vaiṣṇava-smṛti. This vaiṣṇava-smṛti-grantha was finished in twenty chapters, known as vilāsas. In the first vilāsa there is a description of how a relationship is established between the spiritual master and the disciple, and mantras are explained. In the second vilāsa, the process of initiation is described. In the third vilāsa, the methods of Vaiṣṇava behavior are given, with emphasis on cleanliness, constant remembrance of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and the chanting of the mantras given by the initiating spiritual master. In the fourth vilāsa are descriptions of saṁskāra, the reformatory method; tilaka, the application of twelve tilakas on twelve places of the body; mudrā, marks on the body; mālā, chanting with beads; and guru-pūjā, worship of the spiritual master. In the fifth vilāsa, one is instructed on how to make a place to sit for meditation, and there are descriptions of breathing exercises, meditation and worship of the śālagrāma-śilā representation of Lord Viṣṇu. In the sixth vilāsa, the required practices for inviting the transcendental form of the Lord and bathing Him are given. In the seventh vilāsa, one is instructed on how to collect flowers used for the worship of Lord Viṣṇu. In the eighth vilāsa, there is a description of the Deity and instructions on how to set up incense, light lamps, make offerings, dance, play music, beat drums, garland the Deity, offer prayers and obeisances and counteract offenses. In the ninth vilāsa, there are descriptions about collecting tulasī leaves, offering oblations to forefathers according to Vaiṣṇava rituals, and offering food. In the tenth vilāsa there are descriptions of the devotees of the Lord (Vaiṣṇavas, or saintly persons). In the eleventh vilāsa, there are elaborate descriptions of Deity worship and the glories of the holy name of the Lord. One is instructed on how to chant the holy name of the Deity, and there are discussions about offenses committed while chanting the holy name, along with methods for getting relief from such offenses. There are also descriptions of the glories of devotional service and the surrendering process. In the twelfth vilāsa, Ekādaśī is described. In the thirteenth vilāsa, fasting is discussed, as well as observance of the Mahā-dvādaśī ceremony. In the fourteenth vilāsa, different duties for different months are outlined. In the fifteenth vilāsa, there are instructions on how to observe Ekādaśī fasting without even drinking water. There are also descriptions of branding the body with the symbols of Viṣṇu, discussions of Cāturmāsya observations during the rainy season, and discussions of Janmāṣṭamī, Pārśvaikādaśī, Śravaṇā-dvādaśī, Rāma-navamī and Vijayā-daśamī. The sixteenth vilāsa discusses duties to be observed in the month of Kārttika (October-November), or the Dāmodara month, or Ūrja, when lamps are offered in the Deity room or above the temple. There are also descriptions of the Govardhana-pūjā and Ratha-yātrā. The seventeenth vilāsa discusses preparations for Deity worship, mahā-mantra chanting and the process of japa. In the eighteenth vilāsa the different forms of Śrī Viṣṇu are described. The nineteenth vilāsa discusses the establishment of the Deity and the rituals observed in bathing the Deity before installation. The twentieth vilāsa discusses the construction of temples, referring to those constructed by the great devotees. The details of the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa-grantha are given by Śrī Kavirāja Gosvāmī in the Madhya-līlā (24.329-345). The descriptions given in those verses by Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī are actually a description of those portions compiled by Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī. According to Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, the regulative principles of devotional service compiled by Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī do not strictly follow our Vaiṣṇava principles. Actually, Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī collected only a summary of the elaborate descriptions of Vaiṣṇava regulative principles from the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa. It is Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī's opinion, however, that to follow the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa strictly is to actually follow the Vaiṣṇava rituals in perfect order. He claims that the smārta-samāja, which is strictly followed by caste brāhmaṇas, has influenced portions that Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī collected from the original Hari-bhakti-vilāsa. It is therefore very difficult to find out Vaiṣṇava directions from the book of Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī. It is better to consult the commentary made by Sanātana Gosvāmī himself for the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa under the name of Dig-darśinī-ṭīkā. Some say that the same commentary was compiled by Gopīnātha-pūjā Adhikārī, who was engaged in the service of Śrī Rādhā-ramaṇajī and who happened to be one of the disciples of Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī.

Regarding the Bṛhad-bhāgavatāmṛta, there are two parts dealing with the discharge of devotional service. The first part is an analytical study of devotional service, in which there is also a description of different planets, including the earth, the heavenly planets, Brahma-loka and Vaikuṇṭha-loka. There are also descriptions of the devotees, including intimate devotees, most intimate devotees and complete devotees. The second part describes the glories of the spiritual world, known as Goloka-māhātmya-nirūpaṇa, as well as the process of renunciation of the material world. It also describes real knowledge, devotional service, the spiritual world, love of Godhead, attainment of life's destination, and the bliss of the world. In this way there are seven chapters in each part, fourteen chapters in all.

Daśama-ṭippanī is a commentary on the Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Another name for this commentary is Bṛhad-vaiṣṇava-toṣaṇī-ṭīkā. In the Bhakti-ratnākara, it is said that Daśama-ṭippanī was finished in 1476 Śakābda (A.D. 1555).

TRANSLATION

Who can count the rest of the books (headed by the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta) written by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī? He has described the pastimes of Vṛndāvana in all of them.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī has given a description of these books. The Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu is a great book of instruction on how to develop devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa and follow the transcendental process. It was finished in the year 1463 Śakābda (A.D. 1542). This book is divided into four parts: pūrva-vibhāga (eastern division), dakṣiṇa-vibhāga (southern division), paścima-vibhāga (western division) and uttara-vibhāga (northern division). In the pūrva-vibhāga, there is a description of the permanent development of devotional service. The general principles of devotional service, the execution of devotional service, ecstasy in devotional service and ultimately the attainment of love of Godhead are described. In this way there are four laharīs (waves) in this division of the ocean of the nectar of devotion.

In the dakṣiṇa-vibhāga (southern division) there is a general description of the mellow (relationship) called bhakti-rasa, which is derived from devotional service. There are also descriptions of the stages known as vibhāva, anubhāva, sāttvika, vyabhicārī and sthāyi-bhāva, all on this high platform of devotional service. Thus there are five waves in the dakṣiṇa-vibhāga division. In the western division (paścima-vibhāga) there is a description of the chief transcendental humors derived from devotional service. These are known as mukhya-bhakti-rasa-nirūpaṇa, or attainment of the chief humors or feelings in the execution of devotional service. In that part there is a description of devotional service in neutrality, further development in love and affection (called servitude), further development in fraternity, further development in parenthood, or parental love, and finally conjugal love between Kṛṣṇa and His devotees. Thus there are five waves in the western division.

In the northern division (uttara-vibhāga) there is a description of the indirect mellows of devotional service-namely, devotional service in laughter, devotional service in wonder, and devotional service in chivalry, pity, anger, dread and ghastliness. There are also mixing of mellows and the transgression of different humors. Thus there are nine waves in this part. This is but a brief outline of the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu.

The Vidagdha-mādhava is a drama of Lord Kṛṣṇa's pastimes in Vṛndāvana. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī finished this book in the year 1454 Śakābda (A.D. 1533). The first part of this drama is called veṇu-nāda-vilāsa, the second part manmatha-lekha, the third part rādhā-saṅga, the fourth part veṇu-haraṇa, the fifth part rādhā-prasādana, the sixth part śarad-vihāra, and the seventh and last part gaurī-vihāra.

There is also a book called Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi, a transcendental account of loving affairs that includes metaphor, analogy and higher bhakti sentiments. Devotional service in conjugal love is described briefly in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, but it is very elaborately discussed in the Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi. This book describes different types of lovers, their assistants, and those who are very dear to Kṛṣṇa. There is also a description of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and other female lovers, as well as various group leaders. Messengers and the constant associates, as well as others who are very dear to Kṛṣṇa, are all described. The book also relates how love of Kṛṣṇa is awakened and describes the ecstatic situation, the devotional situation, permanent ecstasy, disturbed ecstasy, steady ecstasy, different positions of different dresses, feelings of separation, prior attraction, anger in attraction, varieties of loving affairs, separation from the beloved, meeting with the beloved, and both direct and indirect enjoyment between the lover and the beloved. All this has been very elaborately described.

Similarly, Lalita-mādhava is a description of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes in Dvārakā. These pastimes were made into a drama, and the work was finished in the year 1459 Śakābda. The first part deals with festivities in the evening, the second with the killing of the Śaṅkhacūḍa, the third with maddened Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, the fourth with Rādhārāṇī's proceeding toward Kṛṣṇa, the fifth with the achievement of Candrāvalī, the sixth with the achievement of Lalitā, the seventh with the meeting in Nava-vṛndāvana, the eighth with the enjoyment in Nava-vṛndāvana, the ninth with looking over pictures, and the tenth with complete satisfaction of the mind. Thus the entire drama is divided into ten parts.

The Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta is divided into two parts. The first is called ”The Nectar of Kṛṣṇa” and the second ”The Nectar of Devotional Service.” The importance of Vedic evidence is stressed in the first part, and this is followed by a description of the original form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as Śrī Kṛṣṇa and descriptions of His pastimes and expansions in svāṁśa (personal forms) and vibhinnāṁśa. According to different absorptions, the incarnations are called āveśa and tad-ekātma. The first incarnation is divided into three puruṣāvatāras-namely, Mahā-Viṣṇu, Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu and Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu. Then there are the three incarnations of the modes of nature-namely, Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara (Śiva). All the paraphernalia used in the service of the Lord is transcendental, beyond the three qualities of this material world. There is also a description of twenty-five līlā-avatāras, namely Catuḥ-sana (the Kumāras), Nārada, Varāha, Matsya, Yajña, Nara-nārāyaṇa Ṛṣi, Kapila, Dattātreya, Hayagrīva, Haṁsa, Pṛśnigarbha, Ṛṣabha, Pṛthu, Nṛsiṁha, Kūrma, Dhanvantari, Mohinī, Vāmana, Paraśurāma, Dāśarathi, Kṛṣṇa-dvaipāyana, Balarāma, Vāsudeva, Buddha and Kalki. There are also fourteen incarnations of Manu: Yajña, Vibhu, Satyasena, Hari, Vaikuṇṭha, Ajita, Vāmana, Sārvabhauma, Ṛṣabha, Viṣvaksena, Dharmasetu, Sudhāmā, Yogeśvara and Bṛhadbhānu. There are also four incarnations for the four yugas, and their colors are described as white, red, blackish and black (sometimes yellow, as in the case of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu). There are different types of millenniums and incarnations for those millenniums. The categories called āveśa, prābhava, vaibhava and para constitute different situations for the different incarnations. According to specific pastimes, the names are spiritually empowered. There are also descriptions of the difference between the powerful and the power, and the inconceivable activities of the Supreme Lord.

Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, and no one is greater than Him. He is the source of all incarnations. In the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta there are descriptions of His partial incarnations, a description of the impersonal Brahman effulgence (actually the bodily effulgence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), the superexcellence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's pastimes as an ordinary human being with two hands and so forth. There is nothing to compare with the two-armed form of the Lord. In the spiritual world (vaikuṇṭha-jagat) there is no distinction between the owner of the body and the body itself. In the material world the owner of the body is called the soul, and the body is called a material manifestation. In the Vaikuṇṭha world, however, there is no such distinction. Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa is unborn, and His appearance as an incarnation is perpetual. Kṛṣṇa's pastimes are divided into two parts-manifest and unmanifest. For example, when Kṛṣṇa takes His birth within this material world, His pastimes are considered to be manifest. However, when He disappears, one should not think that He is finished, for His pastimes are going on in an unmanifest form. Varieties of humors, however, are enjoyed by the devotees and Lord Kṛṣṇa during His manifest pastimes. After all, His pastimes in Mathurā, Vṛndāvana and Dvārakā are eternal and are going on perpetually somewhere in some part of the universe.

TRANSLATION

In Śrī Bhāgavata-sandarbha, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī has written conclusively about the ultimate end of devotional service.

PURPORT

The Bhāgavata-sandarbha is also known as Ṣaṭ-sandarbha. In the first part, called Tattva-sandarbha, it is proved that Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is the most authoritative evidence directly pointing to the Absolute Truth. The second Sandarbha, called Bhagavat-sandarbha, draws a distinction between impersonal Brahman and localized Paramātmā and describes the spiritual world and the domination of the mode of goodness devoid of contamination by the other two material modes. In other words, there is a vivid description of the transcendental position known as śuddha-sattva. Material goodness is apt to be contaminated by the other two material qualities-ignorance and passion-but when one is situated in the śuddha-sattva position, there is no chance for such contamination. It is a spiritual platform of pure goodness. The potency of the Supreme Lord and the living entity is also described, and there is a description of the inconceivable energies and varieties of energies of the Lord. The potencies are divided into categories-internal, external, personal, marginal and so forth. There are also discussions of the eternality of Deity worship, the omnipotence of the Deity, His all-pervasiveness, His giving shelter to everyone, His subtle and gross potencies, His personal manifestations, His expressions of form, quality and pastimes, His transcendental position and His complete form. It is also stated that everything pertaining to the Absolute has the same potency and that the spiritual world, the associates in the spiritual world and the threefold energies of the Lord in the spiritual world are all transcendental. There are further discussions concerning the difference between the impersonal Brahman and the Personality of Godhead, the fullness of the Personality of Godhead, the objective of all Vedic knowledge, the personal potencies of the Lord, and the Personality of Godhead as the original author of Vedic knowledge.

The third Sandarbha is called Paramātma-sandarbha, and in this book there is a description of Paramātmā (the Supersoul) and an explanation of how the Supersoul exists in millions and millions of living entities. There are discussions of the differences between the qualitative incarnations, and discourses concerning the living entities, māyā, the material world, the theory of transformation, the illusory energy, the sameness of this world and the Supersoul, and the truth about this material world. In this connection, the opinions of Śrīdhara Svāmī are given. It is stated that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, although devoid of material qualities, superintends all material activities. There is also a discussion of how the līlā-avatāra incarnations respond to the desires of the devotees and how the Supreme Personality of Godhead is characterized by six opulences.

The fourth Sandarbha is called Kṛṣṇa-sandarbha, and in this book Kṛṣṇa is proved to be the Supreme Personality of Godhead. There are discussions of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes and qualities, His superintendence of the puruṣa-avatāras, and so forth. The opinions of Śrīdhara Svāmī are corroborated. In each and every scripture, the supremacy of Kṛṣṇa is stressed. Baladeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa and other expansions of Kṛṣṇa are emanations of Mahā-Saṅkarṣaṇa. All the incarnations and expansions exist simultaneously in the body of Kṛṣṇa, who is described as two-handed. There are also descriptions of the Goloka planet, Vṛndāvana (the eternal place of Kṛṣṇa), the identity of Goloka and Vṛndāvana, the Yādavas and the cowherd boys (both eternal associates of Kṛṣṇa), the adjustment and equality of the manifest and unmanifest pastimes, Śrī Kṛṣṇa's manifestation in Gokula, the queens of Dvārakā as expansions of the internal potency, and, superior to them, the superexcellent gopīs. There is also a list of the gopīs' names and a discussion of the topmost position of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.

The fifth Sandarbha is called Bhakti-sandarbha, and in this book there is a discussion of how devotional service can be directly executed, and how such service can be adjusted, either directly or indirectly. There is a discussion of the knowledge of all kinds of scripture, the establishment of the Vedic institution of varṇāśrama, bhakti as superior to fruitive activity, and so forth. It is also stated that without devotional service even a brāhmaṇa is condemned. There are discussions of the process of karma-tyāga (the giving of the results of karma to the Supreme Personality of Godhead), and the practices of mystic yoga and philosophical speculation, which are deprecated as simply hard labor. Worship of the demigods is discouraged, and worship of a Vaiṣṇava is considered exalted. No respect is given to the nondevotees. There are discussions of how one can be liberated even in this life (jīvan-mukta), Lord Śiva as a devotee, and how a bhakta and his devotional service are eternally existing. It is stated that through bhakti one can attain all success because for bhakti is transcendental to the material qualities. There is a discussion of how the self is manifest through bhakti. There is also a discussion of the self's bliss, as well as how bhakti, even imperfectly executed, enables one to attain the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Unmotivated devotional service is highly praised, and an explanation is given of how each devotee can achieve the platform of unmotivated service by association with other devotees. There is a discussion of the differences between the mahā-bhāgavata and the ordinary devotee, the symptoms of philosophical speculation, the symptoms of self-worship, or ahaṅgrahopāsanā, the symptoms of devotional service, the symptoms of imaginary perfection, the acceptance of regulative principles, service to the spiritual master, the mahā-bhāgavata (liberated devotee) and service to him, service to Vaiṣṇavas in general, the principles of hearing, chanting, remembering and serving the lotus feet of the Lord, offenses in worship, offensive effects, prayers, engaging oneself as an eternal servant of the Lord, making friendships with the Lord and surrendering everything for His pleasure. There is also a discussion of rāgānugā-bhakti (spontaneous love of Godhead), of the specific purpose of becoming a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa, and a comparative study of other perfectional stages.

The sixth Sandarbha is called Prīti-sandarbha, a thesis on love of Godhead. Here it is stated that through love of Godhead, one becomes perfectly liberated and attains the highest goal of life. A distinction is made between the liberated condition of a personalist and that of an impersonalist, and there is a discussion of liberation during one's lifetime as distinguished from liberation from material bondage. Of all kinds of liberation, liberation in loving service to the Lord is described as the most exalted, and meeting the Supreme Personality of Godhead face to face is shown to be the highest perfection of life. Immediate liberation is contrasted with liberation by a gradual process. Both realization of Brahman and meeting with the Supreme Personality of Godhead are described as liberation within one's lifetime, but meeting with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, both internally and externally, is shown to be superexcellent, above the transcendental realization of the Brahman effulgence. There is a comparative study of liberation as sālokya, sāmīpya and sārūpya. Sāmīpya is better than sālokya. Devotional service is considered to be liberation with greater facilities, and there is a discussion of how to obtain it. There are also discussions of the transcendental state one achieves after attaining the devotional platform, which is the exact position of love of Godhead; the marginal symptoms of transcendental love, and how it is awakened; the distinction between so-called love and transcendental love on the platform of love of Godhead; and different types of humors and mellows enjoyed in relishing the lusty affairs of the gopīs, which are different from mundane affairs, which in turn are symbolical representations of pure love for Kṛṣṇa. There are also discussions of bhakti mixed with philosophical speculation, the superexcellence of the love of the gopīs, the difference between opulent devotional service and loving devotional service, the exalted position of the residents of Gokula, the progressively exalted position of the friends of Kṛṣṇa, the gopas and the gopīs in parental love with Kṛṣṇa, and finally the superexcellence of the love of the gopīs and that of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. There is also a discussion of how spiritual feelings can be present when one simply imitates them and of how such mellows are far superior to the ordinary mellows of mundane love, and there are descriptions of different ecstasies, the awakening of ecstasy, transcendental qualities, the distinction of dhīrodātta, the utmost attractiveness of conjugal love, the ecstatic features, the permanent ecstatic features, the mellows divided in five transcendental features of direct loving service, and indirect loving service, considered in seven divisions. Finally there is a discussion of overlapping of different rasas, and there are discussions of śānta (neutrality), servitorship, taking shelter, parental love, conjugal love, direct transcendental enjoyment and enjoyment in separation, previous attraction and the glories of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.

SYNONYMS

gopāla-campū-Gopāla-campū; nāme-by the name; grantha-the transcendental work of literature; mahā-śūra-most formidable; nitya-līlā-of eternal pastimes; sthāpana-establishment; yāhe-in which; vraja-rasa-the transcendental mellows enjoyed in Vṛndāvana; pūra-complete.

TRANSLATION

The most famous and formidable transcendental literary work is the book named Gopāla-campū. In this book the eternal pastimes of the Lord are established, and the transcendental mellows enjoyed in Vṛndāvana are completely described.

PURPORT

In his Anubhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura gives the following information about the Gopāla-campū. The Gopāla-campū is divided into two parts. The first part is called the eastern wave, and the second part is called the northern wave. In the first part there are thirty-three supplications and in the second part thirty-seven supplications. In the first part, completed in 1510 Śakābda (A.D. 1589), the following subject matters are discussed: (1) Vṛndāvana and Goloka; (2) the killing of the Pūtanā demon, the gopīs' returning home under the instructions of mother Yaśodā, the bathing of Lord Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, snigdha-kaṇṭha and madhu-kaṇṭha; (3) the dream of mother Yaśodā; (4) the Janmāṣṭamī ceremony; (5) the meeting between Nanda Mahārāja and Vasudeva, and the killing of the Pūtanā demon; (6) the pastimes of awakening from bed, the deliverance of the demon Śakaṭa, and the name-giving ceremony; (7) the killing of the Tṛṇāvarta demon, Lord Kṛṣṇa's eating dirt, Lord Kṛṣṇa's childish naughtiness, and

Lord Kṛṣṇa as a thief; (8) churning of the yogurt, Kṛṣṇa's drinking from the breast of mother Yaśodā, the breaking of the yogurt pot, Kṛṣṇa bound with ropes, the deliverance of the two brothers (Yamalārjuna) and the lamentation of mother Yaśodā; (9) entering Śrī Vṛndāvana; (10) the killing of Vatsāsura, Bakāsura and Vyomāsura; (11) the killing of Aghāsura and the bewilderment of Lord Brahmā; (12) the tending of the cows in the forest; (13) taking care of the cows and chastising the Kāliya serpent; (14) the killing of Gardabhāsura (the ass demon), and the praise of Kṛṣṇa; (15) the previous attraction of the gopīs; (16) the killing of Pralambāsura and the eating of the forest fire; (17) the gopīs' attempt to approach Kṛṣṇa. (18) the lifting of Govardhana Hill; (19) bathing Kṛṣṇa with milk; (20) the return of Nanda Mahārāja from the custody of Varuṇa and the vision of Goloka Vṛndāvana by the gopīs; (21) the performance of the rituals in Kātyāyanī-vrata and the worship of the goddess Durgā; (22) the begging of food from the wives of the brāhmaṇas performing sacrifices, (23) the meeting of Kṛṣṇa and the gopīs; (24) Kṛṣṇa's enjoying the company of the gopīs, the disappearance of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa from the scene, and the search for Them by the gopīs; (25) the reappearance of Kṛṣṇa; (26) the determination of the gopīs; (27) pastimes in the waters of the Yamunā; (28) the deliverance of Nanda Mahārāja from the clutches of the serpent; (29) various pastimes in solitary places; (30) the killing of Śaṅkhacūḍa and the Hori; (31) the killing of Ariṣṭāsura; (32) the killing of the Keśī demon; (33) the appearance of Śrī Nārada Muni and a description of the year in which the book was completed.

In the second part, known as Uttara-campū, the following subject matters are discussed: (1) attraction for Vrajabhūmi; (2) the cruel activities of Akrūra; (3) Kṛṣṇa's departure for Mathurā; (4) a description of the city of Mathurā; (5) the killing of Kaṁsa; (6) Nanda Mahārāja's separation from Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma; (7) Nanda Mahārāja's entrance into Vṛndāvana without Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma; (8) the studies of Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma; (9) how the son of the teacher of Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma was returned; (10) Uddhava's visit to Vṛndāvana; (11) Rādhārāṇī's talking with the messenger bumblebee; (12) the return of Uddhava from Vṛndāvana; (13) the binding of Jarāsandha; (14) the killing of the yavana Jarāsandha; (15) the marriage of Balarāma; (16) the marriage of Rukmiṇī; (17) seven marriages; (18) the killing of Narakāsura, the taking of the pārijāta flower from heaven and Kṛṣṇa's marriage to 16,000 princesses; (19) victory over Bāṇāsura; (20) a description of Balarāma's return to Vraja; (21) the killing of Pauṇḍraka (the imitation Viṣṇu); (22) the killing of Dvivida and thoughts of Hastināpura; (23) departure for Kurukṣetra; (24) how the residents of Vṛndāvana and Dvārakā met at Kurukṣetra; (25) Kṛṣṇa's consultation with Uddhava; (26) the deliverance of the king; (27) the performance of the Rājasūya sacrifice; (28) the killing of Śālva; (29) Kṛṣṇa's considering returning to Vṛndāvana; (30) Kṛṣṇa's revisiting Vṛndāvana; (31) the adjustment of obstructions by Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and others; (32) everything completed; (33) the residence of Rādhā and Mādhava; (34) decorating Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and Kṛṣṇa; (35) the marriage ceremony of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and Kṛṣṇa; (36) the meeting of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and Kṛṣṇa; and (37) entering Goloka.

SYNONYMS

vidāya-departing; samaya-at the time; prabhu-the Lord; kahilā-said; sabāre-unto everyone; pratyabda-every year; āsibe-you should come; sabe-all; guṇḍicā-of the name Guṇḍicā; dekhibāre-to see.

TRANSLATION

At the time of departure, the Lord requested all the devotees, "Please come here every year to see the Ratha-yātrā festival of Lord Jagannātha's journey to the Guṇḍicā temple."

PURPORT

There is a temple named Guṇḍicā at Sundarācala. Lord Jagannātha, Baladeva and Subhadrā are pushed in their three carts from the temple in Purī to the Guṇḍicā temple in Sundarācala. In Orissa, this Ratha-yātrā festival is known as Jagannātha's journey to Guṇḍicā. Whereas others speak of it as the Ratha-yātrā festival, the residents of Orissa refer to it as Guṇḍicā-yātrā.

TEXT 49

kṛṣṇera viraha-līlā prabhura antara

SYNONYMS

śeṣa-at the end; āra-the balance; yei-whatever; rahe-remains; dvādaśa vatsara-twelve years; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; viraha-līlā-the pastimes of separation; prabhura-the Lord; antara-within.

TRANSLATION

The last twelve years were simply devoted to relishing the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa in separation within the heart of the Lord.

PURPORT

Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu enjoyed the position of the gopīs in separation from Kṛṣṇa. When Kṛṣṇa left the gopīs and went to Mathurā, the gopīs cried for Him the rest of their lives, feeling intense separation from Him. This ecstatic feeling of separation was specifically advocated by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu through His actual demonstrations.

TEXT 52

nirantara rātri-dina viraha unmāde hāse, kānde, nāce, gāya parama viṣāde

SYNONYMS

nirantara-without cessation; rātri-dina-night and day; viraha-of separation; unmāde-in madness; hāse-laughs; kānde-cries; nāce-dances; gāya-chants; parama-great; viṣāde-in moroseness.

TRANSLATION

In the attitude of separation, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu appeared mad both day and night. Sometimes He laughed, and sometimes He cried; sometimes He danced, and sometimes He chanted in great sorrow.

TEXT 53

ye kāle karena jagannātha daraśana

SYNONYMS

ye kāle-at those times; karena-does; jagannātha-Lord Jagannātha; daraśana-visiting; mane-within the mind; bhāve-thinks; kurukṣetre-on the field of Kurukṣetra; pāñāchi-I have gotten; milana-meeting.

TRANSLATION

At those times, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would visit Lord Jagannātha. Then His feelings exactly corresponded to those of the gopīs when they saw Kṛṣṇa at Kurukṣetra after long separation. Kṛṣṇa had come to Kurukṣetra with His brother and sister to visit.

PURPORT

When Kṛṣṇa was performing yajña (sacrifice) at Kurukṣetra, He invited all the inhabitants of Vṛndāvana to come see Him. Lord Caitanya's heart was always filled with separation from Kṛṣṇa, but as soon as He had the opportunity to visit the Jagannātha temple, He became fully absorbed in the thoughts of the gopīs who came to see Kṛṣṇa at Kurukṣetra.

TEXT 54

SYNONYMS

ratha-yātrāya-in the car festival; āge-in front; yabe-when; karena-does; nartana-dancing; tāhāṅ-there; ei-this; pada-stanza; mātra-only; karaye-does; gāyana-singing.

TRANSLATION

When Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to dance before the cart during the festival, He always sang the following two lines.

TEXT 55

seita parāṇa-nātha pāinu yāhā lāgī' madana-dahane jhuri genu seita-that; parāṇa-nātha-Lord of My life; pāinu-I have gotten; yāhā-whom; lāgi'-for; madana-dahane-in the fire of lusty desire; jhuri-burning; genu-I have become.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"I have gotten that Lord of My life for whom I was burning in the fire of lusty desires."

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.29.15) it is stated:

kāmaṁ krodhaṁ bhayaṁ sneham aikyaṁ sauhṛdam eva ca nityaṁ harau vidadhato yānti tan-mayatām hi te

The word kāma means lusty desire, bhaya means fear, and krodha means anger. If one somehow or other approaches Kṛṣṇa, his life becomes successful. The gopīs approached Kṛṣṇa with lusty desire. Kṛṣṇa was a very beautiful boy, and they wanted to meet and enjoy His company. But this lusty desire is different from that of the material world. It appears like mundane lust, but in actuality it is the highest form of attraction to Kṛṣṇa. Caitanya Mahāprabhu was a sannyāsī; He left home and everything else. He could certainly not be induced by any mundane lusty desires. So when He used the word madana-dahane ("in the fire of lusty desire"), He meant that out of pure love for Kṛṣṇa He was burning in the fire of separation from Kṛṣṇa. Whenever He met Jagannātha, either in the temple or during the Ratha-yātrā, Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to think, "Now I have gotten the Lord of My life and soul."

TEXT 56

ei dhuyā-gāne nācena dvitīya prahara kṛṣṇa lañā vraje yāi–e-bhāva antara

SYNONYMS

ei dhuyā-gāne-in the repetition of this song; nācena-He dances; dvitīya prahara-the second period of the day; kṛṣṇa lañā-taking Kṛṣṇa; vraje yāi-let Me go back to Vṛndāvana; e-bhāva-this ecstasy; antara-within.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to sing this song [seita parāṇa-nātha] especially during the latter part of the day, and He would think, "Let Me take Kṛṣṇa and go back to Vṛndāvana." This ecstasy was always filling His heart.

PURPORT

Being always absorbed in the ecstasy of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu felt the same separation from Kṛṣṇa that Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī felt when Kṛṣṇa left Vṛndāvana and went to Mathurā. This ecstatic feeling is very helpful in attaining love of God in separation. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has taught everyone that one should not be overly anxious to see the Lord, but should rather feel separation from Him in ecstasy. It is actually better to feel separation from Him than to desire to see Him face to face. When the gopīs of Vṛndāvana, the residents of Gokula, met Kṛṣṇa at Kurukṣetra during the solar eclipse, they wanted to take Kṛṣṇa back to Vṛndāvana. Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu also felt the same ecstasy as soon as He saw Jagannātha in the temple or on the Ratha-yātrā cart. The gopīs of Vṛndāvana did not like the opulence of Dvārakā. They wanted to take Kṛṣṇa to the village of Vṛndāvana and enjoy His company in the groves. This desire was also felt by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and He danced in ecstasy before the Ratha-yātrā festival when Lord Jagannātha went to Guṇḍicā.

TEXT 57

ei bhāve nṛtya-madhye paḍe eka śloka sei ślokera artha keha nāhi bujhe loka ei bhāve-in this ecstasy; nṛtya-madhye-during the dancing; paḍe-recites; eka-one; śloka-verse; sei ślokera-of that verse; artha-the meaning; keha-anyone; nāhi-not; bujhe-understands; loka-person.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In that ecstasy, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu recited one verse when dancing in front of Lord Jagannātha. Almost no one could understand the meaning of that verse.

TEXT 58

yaḥ kaumāra-haraḥ sa eva hi varas tā eva caitra-kṣapās

SYNONYMS

yaḥ-that same person who; kaumāra-haraḥ-the thief of my heart during youth; saḥ-he; eva hi-certainly; varaḥ-lover; tāḥ-these; eva-certainly; caitra-kṣapāḥ-moonlit nights of the month of Caitra; te-those; ca-and; unmīlita-fructified; mālatī-of mālatī flowers; surabhayaḥ-fragrances; prauḍhāḥ-full; kadamba-with the fragrance of the kadamba flower; anilāḥ-the breezes; sā-that one; ca-also; eva-certainly; asmi-I am; tathāpi-still; tatra-there; surata-vyāpāra-in intimate transactions; līlā-of pastimes; vidhau-in the manner; revā-of the river named Revā; rodhasi-on the bank; vetasī-of the name Vetasī; taru-tale-underneath the tree; cetaḥ-my mind; samutkaṇṭhate-is very eager to go.

TRANSLATION

"That very personality who stole away my heart during my youth is now again my master. These are the same moonlit nights of the month of Caitra. The same fragrance of mālatī flowers is there, and the same sweet breezes are blowing from the kadamba forest. In our intimate relationship, I am also the same lover, yet still my mind is not happy here. I am eager to go back to that place on the bank of the Revā under the Vetasī tree. That is my desire."

PURPORT

This verse appears in the Padyāvalī (386), an anthology of verses compiled by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TEXT 59

ei ślokera artha jāne ekale svarūpa

SYNONYMS

ei-this; ślokera-of the verse; artha-the meaning; jāne-knows; ekale-alone; svarūpa-Svarūpa Dāmodara; daive-by chance; se vatsara-that year; tāhāṅ-there; giyāchena-went; rūpa-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

This verse appears to be the hankering between some ordinary boy and girl, but its actual deep meaning was known only to Svarūpa Dāmodara. By chance, one year Rūpa Gosvāmī was also present there.

TEXT 60

SYNONYMS

prabhu-mukhe-in the mouth of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śloka-the verse; śuni'-hearing; śrī-rūpa-gosāñi-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; sei-that; ślokera-of the first verse; artha-giving the meaning; śloka-another verse; karilā-composed; tathāi-immediately.

TRANSLATION

Although the meaning of the verse was known only to Svarūpa Dāmodara, Rūpa Gosvāmī, after hearing it from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, immediately composed another verse that described the meaning of the original verse.

TEXT 61

SYNONYMS

śloka kari'-composing the verse; eka-one; tāla-patrete-on a palm leaf; likhiyā-writing; āpana-his own; vāsāra-of the residence; cāle-on the roof; rākhila-kept; guñjiyā-pushing.

TRANSLATION

After composing this verse, Rūpa Gosvāmī wrote it on a palm leaf and put it on the roof of the thatched house in which he was living.

TEXT 62

śloka rākhi' gelā samudra-snāna karite hena-kāle āilā prabhu tāṅhāre milite śloka rākhi'-keeping the verse in that way; gelā-went; samudra-snāna-a bath in the sea; karite-to take; hena-kāle-in the meantime; āilā-came; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅhāre-him; milite-to meet.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After composing this verse and putting it on the roof of his house, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī went to bathe in the sea. In the meantime, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to his hut to meet him.

TEXT 63

haridāsa ṭhākura āra rūpa-sanātana jagannātha-mandire nā yā'na tina jana haridāsa ṭhākura-Śrīla Haridāsa Ṭhākura; āra-and; rūpa-sanātana-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī; jagannātha-mandire-in the temple of Lord Jagannātha; nā-not; yā'na-go; tina jana-three persons.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

To avoid turmoil, three great personalities-Haridāsa Ṭhākura, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī-did not enter the temple of Jagannātha.

PURPORT

It is still the practice at the Jagannātha temple not to allow those to enter who do not strictly follow the Vedic culture known as Hinduism. Śrīla Haridāsa Ṭhākura, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī had had previous intimate connections with Muslims. Haridāsa Ṭhākura had been born in a Muslim family, and Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī, having given up their social status in Hindu society, had been appointed ministers in the Muslim government. They had even changed their names to Sākara Mallika and Dabira Khāsa. Thus they had supposedly been expelled from brāhmaṇa society. Consequently, out of humility they did not enter the temple of Jagannātha, although the personality of Godhead, Jagannātha, in His form of Caitanya Mahāprabhu, personally came to see them every day. Similarly, the members of this Kṛṣṇa consciousness society are sometimes refused entrance into some of the temples in India. We should not feel sorry about this as long as we engage in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Kṛṣṇa Himself associates with devotees who are chanting His holy name, and there is no need to be unhappy over not being able to enter a certain temple. Such dogmatic prohibitions were not approved by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Those who were thought unfit to enter the Jagannātha temple were daily visited by Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and this indicates that Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not approve of the prohibitions. To avoid unnecessary turmoil, however, these great personalities would not enter the Jagannātha temple.

TEXT 64

mahāprabhu jagannāthera upala-bhoga dekhiyā nija-gṛhe yā'na ei tinere miliyā mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jagannāthera-of Lord Jagannātha; upala-bhoga-offering of food on the stone; dekhiyā-after seeing; nija-gṛhe-to His own residence; yā'na-goes; ei-these; tinere-three; miliyā-meeting.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Every day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to see the upala-bhoga ceremony at the temple of Jagannātha, and after seeing this He used to go visit these three great personalities on His way to His own residence.

PURPORT

Upala-bhoga is a particular type of offering performed just behind the Garuḍa-stamba on a stone slab. That stone slab is called the upala. All food is offered within the temple room just below the altar of Jagannātha. This bhoga, however, was offered on the stone slab within the vision of the public; therefore it is called upala-bhoga.

TEXT 65

ei tina madhye yabe thāke yei jana tāṅre āsi' āpane mile,–prabhura niyama

SYNONYMS

ei tina madhye-of these three; yabe-when; thāke-remains; yei jana-that person who; tāṅre-to him; āsi'-coming; āpane mile-personally meets; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; niyama-regular practice.

TRANSLATION

If one of these three was not present, He would meet the others. That was His regular practice.

TEXT 66

daive āsi' prabhu yabe ūrdhvete cāhilā cāle goṅjā tāla-patre sei śloka pāilā

SYNONYMS

daive-accidentally; āsi'-coming there; prabhu-the Lord; yabe-when; ūrdhvete-on the roof; cāhilā-He looked; cāle-in the roof; goṅjā-pushed; tāla-patre-the palm leaf; sei-that; śloka-verse; pāilā-got.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to the residence of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, He accidentally saw the palm leaf on the roof, and thus He read the verse composed by him.

TEXT 67

śloka paḍi' āche prabhu āviṣṭa ha-iyā rūpa-gosāñi āsi' paḍe daṇḍavat hañā

SYNONYMS

śloka paḍi'-reading the verse; āche-remained; prabhu-the Lord; āviṣṭa-in an ecstatic mood; ha-iyā-being; rūpa-gosāñi-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; āsi'-coming; paḍe-fell down; daṇḍavat-like a rod; hañā-becoming.

TRANSLATION

After reading the verse, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went into a ecstatic mood. While He was in that state, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī came and immediately fell down on the floor like a rod.

PURPORT

The word daṇḍa means rod or pole. A rod or pole falls straight; similarly, when one offers obeisances to his superior with all eight aṅgas (parts) of the body, he performs what is called daṇḍavat. Sometimes we only speak of daṇḍavats but actually do not fall down. In any case, daṇḍavat means falling down like a rod before one's superior.

TEXT 68

uṭhi' mahāprabhu tāṅre cāpaḍa māriyā kahite lāgilā kichu kolete kariyā uṭhi'-standing up; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅre-unto Rūpa Gosvāmī; cāpaḍa māriyā-slapping; kahite-to say; lāgilā-began; kichu-something; kolete-on the lap; kariyā-taking.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Rūpa Gosvāmī fell down like a rod, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu got up and gave him a slap. Then, taking him on His lap, He began to speak to him.

TEXT 69

mora ślokera abhiprāya nā jāne kona jane mora manera kathā tumi jānile kemane?

SYNONYMS

mora-My; ślokera-of the verse; abhiprāya-purport; nā-does not; jāne-know; kona-any; jane-person; mora-My; manera-of mind; kathā-the intention; tumi-you; jānile-understood; kemane-how.

TRANSLATION

"No one knows the purport of My verse," Caitanya Mahāprabhu said. "How could you understand My intention?"

TEXT 70

eta bali' tāṇre bahu prasāda kariyā svarūpa-gosāñire śloka dekhāila lañā eta bali'-saying this; tāṅre-unto Rūpa Gosvāmī; bahu-much; prasāda-mercy; kariyā-showing; svarūpa-gosāñire-unto Svarūpa Gosvāmī; śloka-the verse; dekhāila-showed; lañā-taking.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Saying this, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu bestowed various benedictions upon Rūpa Gosvāmī, and taking the verse, He later showed it to Svarūpa Gosvāmī.

TEXT 71

svarūpe puchena prabhu ha-iyā vismite mora manera kathā rūpa jānila kemate svarūpe-unto Svarūpa Gosvāmī; puchena-inquired; prabhu-the Lord; ha-iyā-becoming; vismite-struck with wonder; mora-My; manera-of the mind; kathā-intention; rūpa-Rūpa Gosvāmī; jānila-understand; kemate-how.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Having shown the verse to Svarūpa Dāmodara with great wonder, Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked him how Rūpa Gosvāmī could understand the intentions of His mind.

PURPORT

We had the opportunity to receive a similar blessing from Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī when we presented an essay at his birthday ceremony. He was so much pleased with that essay that he used to call some of his confidential devotees and show it to them. How could we have understood the intentions of Śrīla Prabhupāda?

TEXT 72

svarūpa kahe,–yāte jānila tomāra mana tāte jāni,–haya tomāra kṛpāra bhājana

SYNONYMS

svarūpa kahe-Svarūpa Dāmodara replied; yāte-since; jānila-he knew; tomāra-Your; mana-intention; tāte-therefore; jāni-I can understand; haya-he is; tomāra-Your; kṛpāra-of the mercy; bhājana-recipient.

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī replied to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, "If Rūpa Gosvāmī can understand Your mind and intentions, he must have Your Lordship's special benediction."

TEXT 73

prabhu kahe,–tāre āmi santuṣṭa hañā āliṅgana kailu sarva-śakti sañcāriyā

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord said; tāre-him; āmi-I; santuṣṭa hañā-being very much satisfied; āliṅgana kailu-embraced; sarva-śakti-all potencies; sañcāriyā-bestowing.

TRANSLATION

The Lord said, "I was so much pleased with Rūpa Gosvāmī that I embraced him and bestowed upon him all necessary potencies for preaching the bhakti cult.

TEXT 74

SYNONYMS

yogya-suitable; pātra-recipient; haya-is; gūḍha-confidential; rasa-the mellows; vivecane-in analyzing; tumio-you also; kahio-instruct; tāre-him; gūḍha-confidential; rasa-the mellows; ākhyāne-in describing.

TRANSLATION

"I accept Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī as quite fit to understand the confidential mellows of devotional service, and I recommend that you explain devotional service to him further."

TEXT 75

SYNONYMS

e-saba-all these; kahiba-I shall narrate; āge-later; vistāra-elaboration; kariñā-making; saṅkṣepe-in brief; uddeśa-reference; kaila-did; prastāva-opportunity; pāiñā-getting.

TRANSLATION

I shall describe all these incidents elaborately later on. Now I have given only a brief reference.

TEXT 76

SYNONYMS

priyaḥ-very dear; saḥ-He; ayam-this; kṛṣṇaḥ-Lord Kṛṣṇa; saha-cari-O My dear friend; kuru-kṣetra-militaḥ-who is met on the field of Kurukṣetra; tathā-also; aham-I; sā-that; rādhā-Rādhārāṇī; tat-that; idam-this; ubhayoḥ-of both of Us; saṅgama-sukham-the happiness of meeting; tathāpi-still; antaḥ-within; khelan-playing; madhura-sweet; muralī-of the flute; pañcama-the fifth note; juṣe-which delights in; manaḥ-the mind; me-My; kālindī-of the river Yamunā; pulina-on the bank; vipināya-the trees; spṛhayati-desires.

TRANSLATION

[This is a verse spoken by Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.] ”My dear friend, now I have met My very old and dear friend Kṛṣṇa on this field of Kurukṣetra. I am the same Rādhārāṇī, and now We are meeting together. It is very pleasant, but still I would like to go to the bank of the Yamunā beneath the trees of the forest there. I wish to hear the vibration of His sweet flute playing the fifth note within that forest of Vṛndāvana.”

PURPORT

This verse also appears in the Padyāvalī (387), compiled by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TEXT 77

ei ślokera saṅkṣepārtha śuna, bhakta-gaṇa jagannātha dekhi’ yaiche prabhura bhāvana ei-this; ślokera-of the verse; saṅkṣepa-artha-a brief explanation; śuna-hear; bhakta-gaṇa-O devotees; jagannātha-Lord Jagannātha; dekhi’-after seeing; yaiche-just as; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya; bhāvana-the thinking.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Now, O devotees, please hear a brief explanation of this verse. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu was thinking in this way after having seen the Jagannātha Deity.

TEXT 78

śrī-rādhikā kurukṣetre kṛṣṇera daraśana yadyapi pāyena, tabu bhāvena aichana śrī-rādhikā-Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; kuru-kṣetre-on the field of Kurukṣetra; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; daraśana-meeting; yadyapi-although; pāyena-She gets; tabu-still; bhāvena-thinks; aichana-in this way.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The subject of His thoughts was Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, who met Kṛṣṇa on the field of Kurukṣetra. Although She met Kṛṣṇa there, She was nonetheless thinking of Him in the following way.

TEXT 79

rāja-veśa, hātī, ghoḍā, manuṣya gahana kāhāṅ gopa-veśa, kāhāṅ nirjana vṛndāvana

SYNONYMS

rāja-veśa-royal dress; hātī-elephants; ghoḍā-horses; manuṣya-men; gahana-crowds; kāhāṅ-where; gopa-veśa-the dress of a cowherd boy; kāhāṅ-where; nirjana-solitary; vṛndāvana-of the name Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

She thought of Him in the calm and quiet atmosphere of Vṛndāvana, dressed as a cowherd boy. But at Kurukṣetra He was in a royal dress and was accompanied by elephants, horses and crowds of men. Thus the atmosphere was not congenial for Their meeting.

TEXT 80

sei bhāva, sei kṛṣṇa, sei vṛndāvana yabe pāi, tabe haya vāñchita pūraṇa sei bhāva-that circumstance; sei kṛṣṇa-that Kṛṣṇa; sei vṛndāvana-that Vṛndāvana; yabe pāi-if I get; tabe-then; haya-is; vāñchita-desired object; pūraṇa-fulfilled.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thus meeting with Kṛṣṇa and thinking of the Vṛndāvana atmosphere, Rādhārāṇī longed for Kṛṣṇa to take Her to Vṛndāvana again to fulfill Her desire in that calm atmosphere.

TEXT 81

āhuś ca te nalina-nābha padāravindaṁ yogeśvarair hṛdi vicintyam agādha-bodhaiḥ saṁsāra-kūpa-patitottaraṇāvalambaṁ

SYNONYMS

āhuḥ-the gopīs said; ca-and; te-Your; nalina-nābha-O Lord, whose navel is just like a lotus flower; pada-aravindam-lotus feet; yoga-īśvaraiḥ-by the great mystic yogīs; hṛdi-within the heart; vicintyam-to be meditated upon; agādha-bodhaiḥ-who were highly learned philosophers; saṁsāra-kūpa-the dark well of material existence; patita-of those fallen; uttaraṇa-of deliverers; avalambam-the only shelter; geham-family affairs; juṣām-of those engaged; api-although; manasi-in the minds; udiyāt-let be awakened; sadā-always; naḥ-our.

TRANSLATION

The gopīs spoke thus, ”Dear Lord, whose navel is just like a lotus flower, Your lotus feet are the only shelter for those who have fallen into the deep well of material existence. Your feet are worshiped and meditated upon by great mystic yogīs and highly learned philosophers. We wish that these lotus feet may also be awakened within our hearts, although we are only ordinary persons engaged in household affairs.”

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.82.48).

TEXT 82

tomāra caraṇa mora vraja-pura-ghare udaya karaye yadi, tabe vāñchā pūre

SYNONYMS

tomāra-Your; caraṇa-lotus feet; mora-my; vraja-pura-ghare-at the home in Vṛndāvana; udaya-awaken; karaye-I do; yadi-if; tabe-then; vāñchā-desires; pūre-are fulfilled.

TRANSLATION

The gopīs thought, ”Dear Lord, if Your lotus feet again come to our home in Vṛndāvana, our desires will be fulfilled.”

PURPORT

In his Anubhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments: ”The gopīs are purely engaged in the service of the Lord without motive. They are not captivated by the opulence of Kṛṣṇa, nor by the understanding that He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.” Naturally the gopīs were inclined to love Kṛṣṇa, for He was an attractive young boy of Vṛndāvana village. Being village girls, they were not very much attracted to the field of Kurukṣetra, where Kṛṣṇa was present with elephants, horses and royal dress. Indeed, they did not very much appreciate Kṛṣṇa in that atmosphere. Kṛṣṇa was not attracted by the opulence or personal beauty of the gopīs but by their pure devotional service. Similarly, the gopīs were attracted to Kṛṣṇa as a cowherd boy, not in sophisticated guise. Lord Kṛṣṇa is inconceivably powerful. To understand Him, great yogīs and saintly persons give up all material engagements and meditate upon Him. Similarly, those who are overly attracted to material enjoyment, to enhancement of material opulence, to family maintenance or to liberation from the entanglements of this material world take shelter of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. But such activities and motivations are unknown to the gopīs; they are not at all expert in executing such auspicious activities. Already transcendentally enlightened, they simply engage their purified senses in the service of the Lord in the remote village of Vṛndāvana. The gopīs are not interested in dry speculation, in the arts, in music, or other conditions of material life. They are bereft of all understanding of material enjoyment and renunciation. Their only desire is to see Kṛṣṇa return and enjoy spiritual, transcendental pastimes with them. The gopīs want Him simply to stay in Vṛndāvana so that they can render service unto Him, for His pleasure. There is not even a tinge of personal sense gratification.

SYNONYMS

yā-that; te-Your; līlā-rasa-of the mellows tasted in the pastimes; parimala-the fragrance; udgāri-spreading; vanya-āparītā-filled with forests; dhanyā-glorious; kṣauṇī-the land; vilasati-enjoys; vṛtā-surrounded; māthurī-the Mathurā district; mādhurībhiḥ-by the beauties; tatra-there; asmābhiḥ-by us; caṭula-flickering; paśupī-bhāva-with ecstatic enjoyment as gopīs; mugdha-antarābhiḥ-by those whose hearts are enchanted; saṁvītaḥ-surrounded; tvam-You; kalaya-kindly perform; vadana-on the mouth; ullāsi-playing; veṇuḥ-with the flute; vihāram-playful pastimes.

TRANSLATION

The gopīs continued, ”Dear Kṛṣṇa, the fragrance of the mellows of Your pastimes is spread throughout the forests of the glorious land of Vṛndāvana, which is surrounded by the sweetness of the district of Mathurā. In the congenial atmosphere of that wonderful land, You may enjoy Your pastimes, with Your flute dancing on Your lips, and surrounded by us, the gopīs, whose hearts are always enchanted by unpredictable ecstatic emotions.”

PURPORT

This is a verse from the Lalita-mādhava (10.38), by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TEXT 85

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dekhi'-after seeing; jagannāthe-Lord Jagannātha; subhadrā-Subhadrā; sahita-with; dekhe-He sees; vaṁśī-the flute; nāhi-not; hāte-in the hand.

TRANSLATION

In this way, when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu saw Jagannātha, He saw that the Lord was with His sister Subhadrā and was not holding a flute in His hand.

TEXT 86

SYNONYMS

tri-bhaṅga-bent in three places; sundara-beautiful; vraje-in Vṛndāvana; vrajendra-nandana-the son of Nanda Mahārāja; kāhāṅ-where; pāba-shall I get; ei-this; vāñchā-desire; bāḍe-increases; anukṣaṇa-incessantly.

TRANSLATION

Absorbed in the ecstasy of the gopīs, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu wished to see Lord Jagannātha in His original form as Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja, standing in Vṛndāvana and appearing very beautiful, His body curved in three places. His desire to see that form was always increasing.

TEXT 87

rādhikā-unmāda yaiche uddhava-darśane udghūrṇā-pralāpa taiche prabhura rātri-dine rādhikā-unmāda-the madness of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; yaiche-just like; uddhava-darśane-in seeing Uddhava; udghūrṇā-pralāpa-talking inconsistently in madness; taiche-similarly; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya; rātri-dine-night and day.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Just as Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī talked inconsistently with a bumblebee in the presence of Uddhava, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in His ecstasy talked crazily and inconsistently day and night.

PURPORT

This unmāda (madness) is not ordinary madness. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu talked inconsistently, almost like a crazy fellow, He was in the transcendental ecstasy of love. In the highest transcendental ecstasy there is a feeling of being enchanted in the presence of the enchanter. When the enchanter and the enchanted become separated, mohana, or bewilderment, occurs. When so bewildered due to separation, one becomes stunned, and at that time all the bodily symptoms of transcendental ecstasy are manifested. When they are manifest, one appears inconceivably crazy. This is called transcendental madness. In this state, there is imaginative discourse, and one experiences emotions like those of a madman. The madness of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī was explained to Kṛṣṇa by Uddhava, who said, ”My dear Kṛṣṇa, because of extreme feelings of separation from You, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī is sometimes making Her bed in the groves of the forest, sometimes rebuking a bluish cloud, and sometimes wandering about in the dense darkness of the forest. Thus She has become like a crazy woman.”

TEXT 88

SYNONYMS

dvādaśa-twelve; vatsara-years; śeṣa-final; aiche-in that way; goṅāila-passed away; ei mata-in this way; śeṣa-līlā-the last pastimes; tri-vidhāne-in three ways; kaila-executed.

TRANSLATION

The last twelve years of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu were passed in this transcendental craziness. Thus He executed His last pastimes in three ways.

TEXT 89

SYNONYMS

sannyāsa kari’-after accepting the renounced order; cabbiśa vatsara-twenty-four years; kailā-did; ye ye-whatever; karma-activities; ananta-unlimited; apāra-insurmountable; tāra-of that; ke-who; jānibe-will know; marma-the purport.

TRANSLATION

For the twenty-four years after Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the renounced order, whatever pastimes He executed were unlimited and unfathomable. Who can understand the purport of such pastimes ?

TEXT 90

SYNONYMS

uddeśa-indication; karite-to make; kari-I do; dig-daraśana-a general survey; mukhya mukhya-the chief; līlāra-of the pastimes; kari-I do; sūtra-synopsis; gaṇana-enumeration.

TRANSLATION

Just to indicate those pastimes, I am presenting a general survey of the chief pastimes in the form of a synopsis.

TEXT 91

prathama sūtra prabhura sannyāsa-karaṇa sannyāsa kari’ calilā prabhu śrī-vṛndāvana

SYNONYMS

prathama-first; sūtra-synopsis; prabhura-of the Lord; sannyāsa-karaṇa-accepting the sannyāsa order; sannyāsa kari’-after accepting the renounced order; calilā-went; prabhu-the Lord; śrī-vṛndāvana-toward Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

This is the first synopsis: After accepting the sannyāsa order, Caitanya Mahāprabhu proceeded toward Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

Clearly these statements are a real account of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s acceptance of the renounced order of life. His acceptance of this renounced order is not at all comparable to the acceptance of sannyāsa by Māyāvādīs. After accepting sannyāsa, Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to reach Vṛndāvana. He was unlike the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, who desire to merge into the existence of the Absolute. For a Vaiṣṇava, acceptance of sannyāsa means getting relief from all material activities and completely devoting oneself to the transcendental loving service of the Lord. This is confirmed by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 1.2.255): anāsaktasya viṣayān yathārham upayuñjataḥ nirbandhaḥ kṛṣṇa-sambandhe yuktaṁ vairāgyam ucyate. For a Vaiṣṇava, the renounced order means completely giving up attachment for material things and engaging nonstop in the transcendental loving service of the Lord. The Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, however, do not know how to engage everything in the service of the Lord. Because they have no devotional training, they think material objects to be untouchable. Brahma satyaṁ jagan mithyā The Māyāvādīs think that the world is false, but the Vaiṣṇava sannyāsīs do not think like this. Vaiṣṇavas say, "Why should the world be false? It is reality, and it is meant for the service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead." For a Vaiṣṇava sannyāsī, renunciation means not accepting anything for personal sense enjoyment. Devotional service means engaging everything for the satisfaction of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TEXT 92

SYNONYMS

premete-in ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa; vihvala-overwhelmed; bāhya-external; nāhika-there is not; smaraṇa-remembrance; rāḍha-deśe-in the Rāḍha countries; tina dina-three days; karilā-did; bhramaṇa-traveling.

TRANSLATION

When proceeding toward Vṛndāvana, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was overwhelmed with ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa, and He lost all remembrance of the external world. In this way He traveled continuously for three days in Rāḍha-deśa, the country where the Ganges River does not flow.

TEXT 93

nityānanda prabhu mahāprabhu bhulāiyā gaṅgā-tīre lañā āilā 'yamunā' baliyā nityānanda prabhu-Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhulāiyā-bewildering; gaṅgā-tīre-on the bank of the Ganges; lañā-taking; āilā-brought; yamunā-the river Yamunā; baliyā-informing.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

First of all, Lord Nityānanda bewildered Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by bringing Him along the banks of the Ganges, saying that it was the river Yamunā.

TEXT 94

śāntipure ācāryera gṛhe āgamana prathama bhikṣā kaila tāhāṅ, rātre saṅkīrtana śāntipure-in the city of Śāntipura; ācāryera-of Advaita Ācārya; gṛhe-to the home; āgamana-coming; prathama-first; bhikṣā-accepting alms; kaila-did; tāhāṅ-there; rātre-at night; saṅkīrtana-performance of congregational chanting.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After three days, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu came to the house of Advaita Ācārya at Śāntipura and accepted alms there. This was His first acceptance of alms. At night He performed congregational chanting there.

PURPORT

It appears that in His transcendental ecstasy, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu forgot to eat for three continuous days. He was then misled by Nityānanda Prabhu, who said that the river Ganges was the Yamunā. Because the Lord was in the ecstasy of going to Vṛndāvana, He was engladdened to see the Yamunā, although in actuality the river was the Ganges. In this way the Lord was brought to the house of Advaita Prabhu at Śāntipura after three days, and He accepted food there. As long as the Lord remained there, He saw His mother, Śacīdevī, and every night executed congregational chanting with all the devotees.

TEXT 95

mātā bhakta-gaṇera tāhāṅ karila milana sarva samādhāna kari' kaila nīlādri-gamana

SYNONYMS

mātā-the mother; bhakta-gaṇera-of the devotees; tāhāṅ-in that place; karila-did; milana-meeting; sarva-all; samādhāna-adjustments; kari'-executing; kaila-did; nīlādri-gamana-going to Jagannātha Purī.

TRANSLATION

At the house of Advaita Prabhu, He met His mother as well as all the devotees from Māyāpura. He adjusted everything and then went to Jagannātha Purī.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu knew very well that His acceptance of sannyāsa was a thunderbolt for His mother. He therefore called for His mother and the devotees from Māyāpura, and by the arrangement of Śrī Advaita Ācārya, He met them for the last time after His acceptance of sannyāsa. His mother was overwhelmed with grief when she saw that He was clean-shaven. There was no longer any beautiful hair on His head. Mother Śacī was pacified by all the devotees, and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked her to cook for Him because He was very hungry, not having taken anything for three days. His mother immediately agreed, and forgetting everything else, she cooked for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu during all the days she was at the house of Śrī Advaita Prabhu. Then, after a few days, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu requested His mother's permission to go to Jagannātha Purī. At His mother's request, He made Jagannātha Purī His headquarters after His acceptance of sannyāsa. Thus everything was adjusted, and with His mother's permission Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu proceeded toward Jagannātha Purī.

TEXT 96

pathe nānā līlā-rasa, deva-daraśana mādhava-purīra kathā, gopāla-sthāpana

SYNONYMS

pathe-on the way; nānā-various; līlā-rasa-transcendental pastimes; deva-daraśana-visiting the temples; mādhava-purīra-of Mādhavendra Purī; kathā-incidents; gopāla-of Gopāla; sthāpana-the installation.

TRANSLATION

On the way toward Jagannātha Purī, Caitanya Mahāprabhu performed many other pastimes. He visited various temples and heard the story about Mādhavendra Purī and the installation of Gopāla.

PURPORT

This Mādhava Purī is Mādhavendra Purī. Another Mādhava Purī is Mādhavācārya, who was the spiritual master of a devotee in the line of Gadādhara Paṇḍita and who wrote a book known as Śrī Maṅgala-bhāṣya. Mādhavācārya, however, is different from Mādhavendra Purī, who is mentioned in this verse.

TEXT 97

kṣīra-curi-kathā, sākṣi-gopāla-vivaraṇa nityānanda kaila prabhura daṇḍa-bhañjana

SYNONYMS

kṣīra-curi-kathā-the narration of the stealing of the condensed milk; sākṣi-gopāla-vivaraṇa-the description of witness Gopāla; nityānanda-Nityānanda Prabhu; kaila-did; prabhura-of the Lord; daṇḍa-bhañjana-breaking the sannyāsa rod.

TRANSLATION

From Nityānanda Prabhu, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard the story of Kṣīra-curī Gopinātha and of the witness Gopāla. Then Nityānanda Prabhu broke the sannyāsa rod belonging to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

This Kṣīra-curī Gopinātha is situated about five miles away from the Bāleśvara station on the Northeastern Railway, formerly known as the Bengal Māyāpura Railway. This station is situated a few miles away from the famous Kargapura junction station. Sometimes the charge of the temple was given to Śyāmasundara Adhikārī from Gopīvallabhapura, which lies on the border of the district of Medinīpura. Śyāmasundara Adhikārī was a descendant of Rasikānanda Murāri, the chief disciple of Śyāmānanda Gosvāmī.

A few miles before the Jagannātha Purī station is a small station called Sākṣi-gopāla. Near this station is a village named Satyavādī, where the temple of Sākṣi-gopāla is situated.

TEXT 98

dekhiyā mūrcchita hañā paḍilā bhūmite

SYNONYMS

kruddha-angry; hañā-becoming; ekā-alone; gelā-went; jagannātha-Lord Jagannātha; dekhite-to see; dekhiyā-after seeing Jagannātha; mūrcchita-senseless; hañā-becoming; paḍilā-fell down; bhūmite-on the ground.

TRANSLATION

After His sannyāsa rod was broken by Nityānanda Prabhu, Caitanya Mahāprabhu apparently became very angry and left His company to travel alone to the Jagannātha temple. When Caitanya Mahāprabhu entered the Jagannātha temple and saw Lord Jagannātha, He immediately lost His senses and fell down on the ground.

TEXT 99

sārvabhauma lañā gelā āpana-bhavana

TRANSLATION

After visiting the temple of Trimalla, or Tripadī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had to subdue some atheists. He then visited the temple of Ahovala-nṛsiṁha.

PURPORT

This Ahovala temple is situated in Dākṣiṇātya, in the district of Karṇula, within the subdivision of Sārbela. Throughout the whole district this very famous temple is much appreciated by the people. There are eight other temples also, and all of them together are called the Nava-nṛsiṁha temples. There is much wonderful architecture and artistic engraving work in these temples. However, as stated in the local gazette, the Karṇula Manual, the work is not complete.

TEXT 112

tabe bhaṭṭathāri haite kṛṣṇa-dāsera uddhāra rāma-japī vipra-mukhe kṛṣṇa-nāma pracāra

SYNONYMS

tabe-after this; bhaṭṭa-thāri-a Bhaṭṭathāri; haite-from; kṛṣṇa-dāsera-of Kṛṣṇadāsa; uddhāra-the deliverance; rāma-japī-chanters of the name of Lord Rāma; vipra-mukhe-unto brāhmaṇas; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; pracāra-preaching.

TRANSLATION

After this, Kṛṣṇadāsa, the servant of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, was delivered from the clutches of a Bhaṭṭathāri. Caitanya Mahāprabhu then preached that Lord Kṛṣṇa's name should also be chanted by brāhmaṇas who were accustomed to chanting Lord Rāma's name.

PURPORT

In the Mālābāra district, a section of the brāhmaṇas are known as Nambudari brāhmaṇas, and the Bhaṭṭathāris are their priests. Bhaṭṭathāris know many tantric black arts, such as the art of killing a person, of bringing him under submission, and of destroying or devastating him. They are very expert in these black arts, and one such Bhaṭṭathāri bewildered the personal servant of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu while the servant accompanied the Lord in His travels through South India. Somehow or other Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu delivered this Kṛṣṇadāsa from the clutches of the Bhaṭṭathāri. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is well known as Patita-pāvana, the savior of all fallen souls, and He proved this in His behavior toward His personal servant, Kṛṣṇadāsa, whom He saved. Sometimes the word Bhaṭṭathāri is misspelled in Bengal as Bhaṭṭamāri.

TEXT 113

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then met Śrī Raṅgapurī and mitigated all the sufferings of a brāhmaṇa named Rāmadāsa.

TEXT 114

tattva-vādī saha kaila tattvera vicāra āpanāke hīna-buddhi haila tāṅ-sabāra tattva-vādī-a section of the Madhvācārya-sampradāya; saha-with; kaila-did; tattvera-of the Absolute Truth; vicāra-discussion; āpanāke-themselves; hīna-buddhi-consideration as inferior in quality; haila-was; tāṅ-sabāra-of all the opposing parties.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Caitanya Mahāprabhu also had a discussion with the Tattvavādī community, and the Tattvavādīs felt themselves to be inferior Vaiṣṇavas.

PURPORT

The Tattvavādī sect belongs to Madhvācārya's Vaiṣṇava community, but its behavior differs from the strict Madhvācārya Vaiṣṇava principles. There is one monastery named Uttararāḍhī, and its commander is named Raghuvarya Tīrtha Madhvācārya.

TEXT 115

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; prabhu-the Lord; kaila-did; sapta-tāla-vimocana-deliverance of the Sapta-tāla trees; setubandhe-at Cape Comorin; snāna-bathing; rāmeśvara-temple of Rāmeśvara; daraśana-visit.

TRANSLATION

After that, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu delivered the celebrated Sapta-tāla trees, took His bath at Setubandha Rāmeśvara and visited the temple of Lord Śiva known as Rāmeśvara.

PURPORT

It is said that the Sapta-tāla trees arevery old, massive palm trees. There was once a fight between Vāliand his brother Sugrīva, and Lord Rāmacandra took the side of Sugrīva and killed Vāli, keeping Himself behind one of these celebrated trees. When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu toured south India, He embraced these trees, which were delivered and directly promoted to Vaikuṇṭha.

TEXT 117

TRANSLATION

At Rāmeśvara, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had a chance to read the Kūrma Purāṇa, in which He discovered that the form of Sītā kidnapped by Rāvaṇa was not that of the real Sītā but a mere shadow representation.

PURPORT

The Kūrma Purāṇa states that this shadowy Sītā was placed into a fire as a test of chastity. It was Māyā-sītā who entered the fire and the real Sītā who came out of the fire.

TEXT 118

śuniyā prabhura ānandita haila mana rāma-dāsa viprera kathā ha-ila smaraṇa

SYNONYMS

śuniyā-hearing this; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ānandita-very happy; haila-became; mana-the mind; rāma-dāsa-of the name Rāmadāsa; viprera-with the brāhmaṇa; kathā-of the conversation; ha-ila-was; smaraṇa-remembrance.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very glad to read about the false Sītā, and He remembered His meeting with Rāmadāsa Vipra, who was very sorry that mother Sītā had been kidnapped by Rāvaṇa.

TEXT 119

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu also found two other books-namely, Brahma-saṁhitā and Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta. Knowing these books to be excellent, He took them to present to His devotees.

PURPORT

In the olden days there were no presses, and all the important scriptures were handwritten and kept in large temples. Caitanya Mahāprabhu found Brahma-saṁhitā and Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta in handwritten texts, and knowing them to be very authoritative, He took them with Him to present to His devotees. Of course, He obtained the permission of the temple commander. Now both Brahma-saṁhitā and Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta are available in print with commentaries by Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura.

TRANSLATION

When Jagannātha was absent from the temple, Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who could not see Him, felt separation and left Jagannātha Purī to go to a place known as Ālālanātha.

PURPORT

Ālālanātha is also known as Brahmagiri. This place is about fourteen miles from Jagannātha Purī and is also on the beach. There is a temple of Jagannātha there. At the present moment a police station and post office are situated there because so many people come to see the temple.

The word anavasara is used when Śrī Jagannāthajī cannot be seen in the temple. After the bathing ceremony (snāna-yātrā), Lord Jagannātha apparently becomes sick. He is therefore removed to His private apartment, where no one can see Him. Actually, during this period renovations are made on the body of the Jagannātha Deity. This is called nava-yauvana. During the Ratha-yātrā ceremony, Lord Jagannātha once again comes before the public. Thus for fifteen days after the bathing ceremony, Lord Jagannātha is not visible to any visitors.

TRANSLATION

When Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu finally left Ālālanātha to return to Jagannātha Purī, He was overwhelmed both day and night due to separation from Jagannātha. His lamentation knew no bounds. During this time, all the devotees from different parts of Bengal, and especially from Navadvīpa, arrived in Jagannātha Purī.

TEXT 126

sabe mili' yukti kari' kīrtana ārambhila kīrtana-āveśe prabhura mana sthira haila

SYNONYMS

sabe mili'-meeting all together; yukti kari'-after due consideration; kīrtana-congregational chanting of the holy name; ārambhila-began; kīrtana-āveśe-in the ecstasy of kīrtana; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mana-the mind; sthira-pacified; haila-became.

TRANSLATION

After due consideration, all the devotees began chanting the holy name congregationally. Lord Caitanya's mind was thus pacified by the ecstasy of the chanting.

PURPORT

Being absolute, Lord Jagannātha is identical in person, form, picture, kīrtana and all other circumstances. Therefore when Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard the chanting of the holy name of the Lord, He was pacified. Previously, He had been feeling very morose due to separation from Jagannātha. The conclusion is that whenever a kīrtana of pure devotees takes place, the Lord is immediately present. By chanting the holy names of the Lord, we associate with the Lord personally.

TRANSLATION

For five consecutive days all the people gathered to see the Lord, and still there was no rest. Out of fear of the crowd, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu left at night and went to the town of Kuliyā [present-day Navadvīpa].

PURPORT

If one considers the statements of the Caitanya-bhāgavata along with the description by Locana dāsa Ṭhākura, it is clear that present-day Navadvīpa was formerly known as Kuliyā-grāma. While at Kuliyā-grāma, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu bestowed His favor upon Devānanda Paṇḍita and delivered Gopāla Cāpala and many others who had previously committed offenses at His lotus feet. At that time, to go from Vidyānagara to Kuliyā-grāma one had to cross a branch of the Ganges. All of those old places still exist. Cināḍāṅgā was formerly situated in Kuliyā-grāma, which is now known as Kolera Gañja.

TRANSLATION

Within the mind of Nṛsiṁhānanda Brahmacārī, the road could not be constructed beyond Kānāi Nāṭaśālā. He could not understand why the road's construction could not be completed, and thus he was astonished.

TEXT 161

niścaya kariyā kahi, śuna, bhakta-gaṇa ebāra nā yābena prabhu śrī-vṛndāvana niścaya-assurance; kariyā-making; kahi-I say; śuna-please hear; bhakta-gaṇa-my dear devotees; ebāra-this time; nā-not; yābena-will go; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śrī-vṛndāvana-to Vṛndāvana.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

With great assurance he then told the devotees that Lord Caitanya would not go to Vṛndāvana at that time.

PURPORT

Śrīla Nṛsiṁhānanda Brahmacārī was a great devotee of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; therefore when he heard that from Kuliyā Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was going to Vṛndāvana, although he had no material wealth he began to construct within his mind a very attractive path or road for Caitanya Mahāprabhu to traverse. Some of the description of this path is given above. But even mentally he could not construct the road beyond Kānāi Nāṭaśālā. Therefore he concluded that Caitanya Mahāprabhu would not go to Vṛndāvana at that time.

For a pure devotee, it is the same whether he materially constructs a path or constructs one within his mind. This is because the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Janārdana, is bhāva-grāhī, or appreciative of the sentiment. For Him a path made with actual jewels and a path made of mental jewels are the same. Though subtle, mind is also matter, so any path-indeed, anything for the service of the Lord, whether in gross matter or in subtle matter-is accepted equally by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Lord accepts the attitude of His devotee and sees how much he is prepared to serve Him. The devotee is at liberty to serve the Lord either in gross matter or in subtle matter. The important point is that the service be in relation with the Supreme Personality of Godheand. This is confirmed in the Bhagavad-gītā (9.26):

patraṁ puṣpaṁ phalaṁ toyaṁ
yo me bhaktyā prayacchati
tad ahaṁ bhakty-upahṛtam
aśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ

"If one offers Me with love and devotion a leaf, a flower, a fruit or water, I will accept it." The real ingredient is bhakti (devotion). Pure devotion is uncontaminated by the modes of material nature. Ahaituky apratihatā: unconditional devotional service cannot be checked by any material condition. This means that one does not have to be very rich to serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Even the poorest man can equally serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead if he has pure devotion. If there is no ulterior motive, devotional service cannot be checked by any material condition.

SYNONYMS

gauḍa-īśvara-King of Bengal; yavana-rājā-Muslim king; prabhāva-influence; śuniñā-hearing; kahite-to say; lāgila-began; kichu-something; vismita-astonished; hañā-becoming.

TRANSLATION

When the Muslim King of Bengal heard of Caitanya Mahāprabhu's influence in attracting innumerable people, he became very astonished and began to speak as follows.

PURPORT

At that time the Muslim king of Bengal was Nawab Hussain Shah Bādasāha.

TEXT 169

vinā dāne eta loka yāṅra pāche haya sei ta' gosāñā, ihā jāniha niścaya

SYNONYMS

vinā-without; dāne-charity; eta-so many; loka-persons; yāṅra-whom; pāche-after; haya-become; sei ta'-He certainly; gosāñā-a prophet; ihā-this; jāniha-know; niścaya-surely.

TRANSLATION

"Such a person, who is followed by so many people without giving them charity, must be a prophet. I can surely understand this fact."

TEXT 170

kājī, yavana ihāra nā kariha hiṁsana āpana-icchāya buluna, yāhāṅ uṅhāra mana kājī-magistrate; yavana-Muslim; ihāra-of Him; nā-do not; kariha-make; hiṁsana-jealousy; āpana-icchāya-at His own will; buluna-let Him go; yāhāṅ-wherever; uṅhāra-of Him; mana-mind.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Muslim King ordered the magistrate, "Do not disturb this Hindu prophet out of jealousy. Let Him do His own will wherever He likes."

PURPORT

Even a Muslim king could understand Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's transcendental position as a prophet; therefore he ordered the local magistrate not to disturb Him but to let Him do whatever He liked.

TEXT 171

keśava-chatrīre rājā vārtā puchila prabhura mahimā chatrī uḍāiyā dila keśava-chatrīre-from the person named Keśava Chatrī; rājā-the King; vārtā-news; puchila-inquired; prabhura-of the Lord; mahimā-glories; chatrī-Keśava Chatrī; uḍāiyā-attaching no importance; dila-gave.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When the Muslim King asked his assistant, Keśava Chatrī, for news of the influence of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Keśava Chatrī, although knowing everything about Caitanya Mahāprabhu, tried to avoid the conversation by not giving any importance to Caitanya Mahāprabhu's activities.

PURPORT

Keśava Chatrī became a diplomat when questioned about Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Although he knew everything about Him, he was afraid that the Muslim King might become His enemy. He gave no importance to the Lord's activities so that the Muslim King would take Him to be an ordinary man and would not give Him any trouble.

TEXT 172

SYNONYMS

ye-that one who; tomāre-unto you; rājya-kingdom; dila-gave; ye-the one who; tomāra-your; gosāñā-prophet; tomāra deśe-in your country; tomāra bhāgye-on account of your good fortune; janmilā-took birth; āsiñā-coming.

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī said, "The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who gave you this kingdom and whom you accept as a prophet, has taken birth in your country due to your good fortune.

TEXT 177

tomāra maṅgala vāñche, kārya-siddhi haya ihāra āśīrvāde tomāra sarvatra-i jaya

SYNONYMS

tomāra-your; maṅgala-good fortune; vāñche-He desires; kārya-of business; siddhi-the perfection; haya-is; ihāra-of Him; āśīrvāde-by the blessings; tomāra-your; sarvatra-i-everywhere; jaya-victory.

TRANSLATION

"This prophet always desires your good fortune. By His grace, all your business is successful. By His blessings, you will attain victory everywhere.

TEXT 178

more kena pucha, tumi pucha āpana-mana tumi narādhipa hao viṣṇu-aṁśa sama more-unto me; kena-why; pucha-you inquire; tumi-you; pucha-inquire; āpana-mana-your own mind; tumi-you; nara-adhipa-King of the people; hao-you are; viṣṇu-aṁśa sama-representative of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Why are you questioning me? Better that you question your own mind. Because you are the King of the people, you are the representative of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore you can understand this better than I."

TEXT 179

tomāra citte caitanyere kaiche haya jñāna

SYNONYMS

tomāra citte-in your mind; caitanyere-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kaiche-how; haya-there is; jñāna-knowledge; tomāra-your; citte-mind; yei-whatever; laya-takes; sei ta' pramāṇa-that is evidence.

TRANSLATION

Thus Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī informed the King about his mind as a way of knowing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He assured the King that whatever occurred in his mind could be considered evidence.

TEXT 180

rājā kahe, śuna, mora mane yei laya

SYNONYMS

rājā kahe-the King replied; śuna-hear; mora-my; mane-mind; yei-what; laya-takes; sākṣāt-personally; īśvara-the Supreme Personality; ihaṅ-He; nāhika-there is not; saṁśaya-doubt.

TRANSLATION

The King replied, "I consider Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be the Supreme Personality of Godhead. There is no doubt about it."

TEXT 181

eta kahi' rājā gelā nija abhyantare tabe dabira khāsa āilā āpanāra ghare eta kahi'-saying this; rājā-the King; gelā-went; nija-own; abhyantare-to the private house; tabe-at that time; dabira khāsa-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; āilā-returned; āpanāra-his own; ghare-to the residence.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After having this conversation with Rūpa Gosvāmī, the King entered his private house. Rūpa Gosvāmī, then known as Dabira Khāsa, also returned to his residence.

PURPORT

A monarch is certainly a representative of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As stated in the Bhagavad-gītā, sarva-loka-maheśvaram: the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the proprietor of all planetary systems. In each and every planet there must be some king, governmental head or executive. Such a person is supposed to be the representative of Lord Viṣṇu. On behalf of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he must see to the interests of all the people. Therefore Lord Viṣṇu, as Paramātmā, gives the king all intelligence to execute governmental affairs. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī therefore asked the King what was in his mind concerning Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and indicated that whatever the King thought about Him was correct.

TEXT 182

ghare āsi' dui bhāi yukati kariñā prabhu dekhibāre cale veśa lukāñā ghare āsi'-after returning home; dui bhāi-two brothers; yukati-arguments; kariñā-making; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dekhibāre-to see; cale-go; veśa-dress; lukāñā-hiding.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After returning to his residence, Dabira Khāsa and his brother decided after much consideration to go see the Lord incognito.

TEXT 183

ardha-rātre dui bhāi āilā prabhu-sthāne

SYNONYMS

tāṅrā-they; dui-jana-two persons; jānāilā-informed; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; gocare-in the presence; rūpa-Rūpa Gosvāmī; sākara-mallika-and Sanātana Gosvāmī; āilā-have come; tomā'-You; dekhibāre-to see.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu and Haridāsa Ṭhākura told Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu that two personalities-Śrī Rūpa and Sanātana-had come to see Him.

PURPORT

Sākara Mallika was the name of Sanātana Gosvāmī, and Dabira Khāsa was the name of Rūpa Gosvāmī. They were recognized by these names in the service of the Muslim King; therefore these are Muslim names. As officials, the brothers adopted all kinds of Muslim customs.

TEXT 185

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya-all glories; śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-unto Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dayā-maya-the most merciful; patita-pāvana-the savior of the fallen souls; jaya-glories; jaya-glories; mahāśaya-to the great personality.

TRANSLATION

"All glories to Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the most merciful savior of the fallen souls! All glories to the Supreme Personality!

TEXT 189

nīca-jāti, nīca-saṅgī, kari nīca kāja tomāra agrete prabhu kahite vāsi lāja

SYNONYMS

nīca-jāti-classified among the fallen; nīca-saṅgī-associated with fallen souls; kari-we perform; nīca-abominable; kāja-work; tomāra-of You; agrete-in front; prabhu-O Lord; kahite-to say; vāsi-we feel; lāja-ashamed.

TRANSLATION

"Sir, we belong to the lowest class of men, and our associates and employment are also of the lowest type. Therefore we cannot introduce ourselves to You. We feel very much ashamed, standing here before You.

PURPORT

Although the two brothers, Rūpa and Sanātana (at that time Dabira Khāsa and Sākara Mallika), presented themselves as being born in a low family, they nonetheless belonged to a most respectable brāhmaṇa family that was originally from Karṇāta. Thus they actually belonged to the brāhmaṇa caste. Unfortunately, because of being associated with the Muslim governmental service, their customs and behavior resembled those of the Muslims. Therefore they presented themselves as nīca-jāti. The word jāti means birth. According to śāstra, there are three kinds of birth. The first birth is from the womb of the mother, the second birth is the acceptance of the reformatory method, and the third birth is acceptance by the spiritual master (initiation). One becomes abominable by adopting an abominable profession or by associating with people who are naturally abominable. Rūpa and Sanātana, as Dabira Khāsa and Sākara Mallika, associated with Muslims, who were naturally opposed to brahminical culture and cow protection. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (Seventh Canto) it is stated that every person belongs to a certain classification. A person is identifiable by the special symptoms mentioned in the śāstras. By one's symptoms, one is known to belong to a certain caste. Both Dabira Khāsa and Sākara Mallika belonged to the brāhmaṇa caste, but because they were employed by Muslims, their original habits degenerated into those of the Muslim community. Since the symptoms of brahminical culture were almost nil, they identified themselves with the lowest caste. In the Bhakti-ratnākara it is clearly stated that because Sākara Mallika and Dabira Khāsa associated with lower-class men, they introduced themselves as belonging to the lower classes. Actually, however, they had been born in respectable brāhmaṇa families.

TRANSLATION

"Dear Lord, let us inform you that no one is more sinful than us, nor is there any offender like us. Even if we wanted to mention our sinful activities, we would immediately become ashamed. And what to speak of giving them up!"

PURPORT

This verse is from the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.154), by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TEXT 191

SYNONYMS

jagāi-mādhāi-the two brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi; dui-two; karile-You did; uddhāra-deliverance; tāhāṅ-there; uddhārite-to deliver; śrama-exertion; nahila-there was not; tomāra-of You.

TRANSLATION

"You have delivered the two brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi, but to deliver them You did not have to exert Yourself very much.

TEXT 193

brāhmaṇa-jāti tārā, navadvīpe ghara nīca-sevā nāhi kare, nahe nīcera kūrpara

SYNONYMS

brāhmaṇa-jāti-born in a brāhmaṇa family; tārā-they; navadvīpe-the holy place of Navadvīpa-dhāma; ghara-their house; nīca-sevā-service to degraded persons; nāhi-not; kare-do; nahe-not; nīcera-of low persons; kūrpara-an instrument.

TRANSLATION

"The brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi belonged to the brāhmaṇa caste, and their residence was in the holy place of Navadvīpa. They never served low-class persons, nor were they instruments to abominable activities.

TEXT 194

sabe eka doṣa tāra, haya pāpācāra pāpa-rāśi dahe nāmābhāsei tomāra

SYNONYMS

sabe-in all; eka-one only; doṣa-fault; tāra-of them; haya-they are; pāpa-ācāra-attached to sinful activities; pāpa-rāśi-volumes of sinful activities; dahe-become burned; nāma-ābhāsei-simply by the dim reflection of chanting the holy name; tomāra-of Your Lordship.

TRANSLATION

”Jagāi and Mādhāi had but one fault-they were addicted to sinful activity. However, volumes of sinful activity can be burned to ashes simply by a dim reflection of the chanting of Your holy name.

PURPORT

Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī presented themselves as being lower than the two brothers Jagāi and Mādhāi, who were delivered by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When Rūpa and Sanātana compared themselves to Jagāi and Mādhāi, they found themselves inferior because the Lord had no trouble in delivering two drunken brothers. This was so because, despite the fact that they were addicted to sinful activity, in other ways their life was brilliant. They belonged to the brāhmaṇa caste of Navadvīpa, and such brāhmaṇas were pious by nature. Although they had been addicted to some sinful activities due to bad association, those unwanted things could vanish simply because of the chanting of the holy name of the Lord. Another point for Jagāi and Mādhāi was that, as members of a brāhmaṇa family, they did not accept service under anyone. The śāstras strictly forbid a brāhmaṇa to accept service under anyone. The idea is that by accepting a master, one accepts the occupation of a dog. In other words, a dog cannot thrive without having a master, and for the sake of pleasing the master, dogs offend many people. They bark at innocent people just to please the master. Similarly, when one is a servant, he has to perform abominable activities according to the orders of the master. Therefore, when Dabira Khāsa and Sākara Mallika compared their position to that of Jagāi and Mādhāi, they found Jagāi and Mādhāi's position far better. Jagāi and Mādhāi never accepted the service of a low-class person; nor were they forced to execute abominable activities under the order of a low-class master. Jagāi and Mādhāi chanted the name of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by way of blasphemy, but because they simply chanted His name, they immediately became free from the reactions of sinful activities. Thus later they were saved.

TEXT 195

SYNONYMS

tomāra-Your; nāma-holy name; lañā-taking; tomāra-of You; karila-did; nindana-blaspheming; sei-that; nāma-holy name; ha-ila-became; tāra-of them; muktira-of deliverance; kāraṇa-the cause.

TRANSLATION

”Jagāi and Mādhāi uttered Your holy name by way of blaspheming You. Fortunately, that holy name became the cause of their deliverance.

TEXT 196

jagāi-mādhāi haite koṭī koṭī guṇa

SYNONYMS

jagāi-mādhāi-of the name Jagāi and Mādhāi; haite-than; koṭī koṭī-millions and millions; guṇa-of times; adhama-degraded; patita-fallen; pāpī-sinful; āmi-we; dui-two; jana-persons.

TRANSLATION

”We two are millions and millions of times inferior to Jagāi and Mādhāi. We are more degraded, fallen and sinful than they.

TEXT 197

mleccha-jāti, mleccha-sevī, kari mleccha-karma go-brāhmaṇa-drohi-saṅge āmāra saṅgama

SYNONYMS

mleccha-jāti-belonging to the meat-eater caste; mleccha-sevī-servants of the meat-eaters; kari-we execute; mleccha-karma-the work of meat-eaters; go-cows; brāhmaṇa-brāhmaṇas; drohi-those inimical to; saṅge-with; āmāra-our; saṅgama-association.

TRANSLATION

”Actually we belong to the caste of meat-eaters because we are servants of meat-eaters. Indeed, our activities are exactly like those of the meat-eaters. Because we always associate with such people, we are inimical toward the cows and brāhmaṇas.”

PURPORT

There are two kinds of meat-eaters-one who is born in a family of meat-eaters and one who has learned to associate with meat-eaters. From Śrīla Rūpa and Sanātana Gosvāmīs (formerly Dabira Khāsa and Sākara Mallika) we can learn how one attains the character of a meat-eater simply by associating with meat-eaters. At the present moment in India the presidential offices are occupied by many so-called brāhmaṇas, but the state maintains slaughterhouses for killing cows and makes propaganda against Vedic civilization. The first principle of Vedic civilization is the avoidance of meat-eating and intoxication. Presently in India, intoxication and meat-eating are encouraged, and the so-called learned brāhmaṇas presiding over this state of affairs have certainly become degraded according to the standard given herein by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī. These so-called brāhmaṇas give sanction to slaughterhouses for the sake of a fat salary, and they do not protest these abominable activities. By deprecating the principles of Vedic civilization and supporting cow-killing, they are immediately degraded to the platform of mlecchas and yavanas. A mleccha is a meat-eater, and a yavana is one who has deviated from Vedic culture. Unfortunately, such mlecchas and yavanas are in executive power. How, then, can there be peace and prosperity in the state? The king or the president must be the representative of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. When Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira accepted the rule of Bhārata-varṣa (formerly this entire planet, including all the seas and land), he took sanction from authorities like Bhīṣmadeva and Lord Kṛṣṇa. He thus ruled the entire world according to religious principles. At the present moment, however, heads of state do not care for religious principles. If irreligious people vote on an issue, even though it be against the principles of the śāstras, the bills will be passed. The president and heads of state become sinful by agreeing to such abominable activities. Sanātana and Rūpa Gosvāmīs pleaded guilty to such activities; they therefore classified themselves among the mlecchas, although born in a brāhmaṇa family.

TEXT 198

mora karma, mora hāte-galāya bāndhiyā ku-viṣaya-viṣṭhā-garte diyāche phelāiyā

SYNONYMS

mora-our; karma-activities; mora-our; hāte-on the hand; galāya-on the neck; bāndhiyā-binding; ku-viṣaya-of abominable objects of sense gratification; viṣṭhā-of the stool; garte-in the ditch; diyāche phelāiyā-have been thrown.

TRANSLATION

The two brothers, Sākara Mallika and Dabira Khāsa, very humbly submitted that due to their abominable activities they were now bound by the neck and hands and had been thrown into a ditch filled with abominable stoollike objects of material sense enjoyment.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura has explained ku-viṣaya garta as follows: ”Because of the activities of the senses, we become subjected to many sense gratificatory processes and are thus entangled by the laws of material nature. This entanglement is called viṣaya. When the sense gratificatory processes are executed by pious activity, they are called su-viṣaya. The word su means ’good,’ and viṣaya means ’sense objects.’ When the sense gratificatory activities are performed under sinful conditions, they are called ku-viṣaya, bad sense enjoyment. In either case, either ku-viṣaya or su-viṣaya, these are material activities. As such, they are compared to stool. In other words, such things are to be avoided. To become free from su-viṣaya and ku-viṣaya, one must engage himself in the transcendental loving service of Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The activities of devotional service are free from the contamination of material qualities. Therefore, to be free from the reactions of su-viṣaya and ku-viṣaya, one must take to Kṛṣṇa consciousness. In that way, one will save himself from contamination.” In this connection, Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has sung:

karma-kāṇḍa, jñāna-kāṇḍa, kevala viṣera bhāṇḍa amṛta baliyā yeba khāya nānā yoni sadā phire, kadarya bhakṣaṇa kare
tāra janma adhaḥ-pāte yāya

Su-viṣaya and ku-viṣaya both fall under the category of karma-kāṇḍa. There is another kāṇḍa (platform of activity), called jñāna-kāṇḍa, or philosophical speculation about the effects of ku-viṣaya and su-viṣaya with the intention to find out the means of deliverance from material entanglement. On the platform of jñāna-kāṇḍa, one may give up the objects of ku-viṣaya and su-viṣaya. But that is not the perfection of life. Perfection is transcendental to both jñāna-kāṇḍa and karma-kāṇḍa; it is on the platform of devotional service. If we do not take to devotional service in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, we have to remain within this material world and endure the repetition of birth and death due to the effects of jñāna-kāṇḍa and karma-kāṇḍa. Therefore Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says:

nānā yoni sadā phire, kadarya bhakṣaṇa kare
tāra janma adhaḥ-pāte yāya

”One travels throughout various species of life and eats all kinds of nonsense. Thus he spoils his existence.” A man in material existence and attached to ku-viṣaya or su-viṣaya is in the same position as that of a worm in stool. After all, whether it be moist or dry, stool is stool. Similarly, material activities may be either pious or impious, but because they are all material, they are compared to stool. Worms cannot get out of stool by their own endeavor; similarly, those who are overly attached to material existence cannot get out of materialism and suddenly become Kṛṣṇa conscious. Attachment is there. As explained by Prahlāda Mahārāja in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.5.30):

matir na kṛṣṇe parataḥ svato vā
mitho ’bhipadyeta gṛha-vratānām adānta-gobhir viśatāṁ tamisraṁ punaḥ-punaś-carvita-carvaṇānām

”Those who have made up their minds to remain in this material world and enjoy sense gratification cannot become Kṛṣṇa conscious. Because of their attachment to material activity, they cannot attain liberation, either by the instructions of superior persons or by their own endeavor or by passing resolutions in big conferences. Because their senses are uncontrolled, they gradually descend to the darkest regions of material existence to repeat the same process of birth and death in desirable or undesirable species of life.”

TRANSLATION

” 'By serving You constantly, one is freed from all material desires and is completely pacified. When shall I engage as Your permanent eternal servant and always feel joyful to have such a fitting master?' ”

PURPORT

In His teachings to Sanātana Gosvāmī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has declared every living entity to be an eternal servitor of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is the constitutional position of all living entities. Just as a dog or servant is very satisfied to get a competent, perfect master, or as a child is completely satisfied to possess a competent father, so the living entity is satisfied by completely engaging in the service of the Supreme Lord. He thereby knows that he has a competent master to save him from all kinds of danger. Unless the living entity comes to the guaranteed protection of the Supreme Lord, He is full of anxiety. This life of anxiety is called material existence. To be completely satisfied and devoid of anxiety, one must come to the position of eternally rendering service to the Supreme Lord. This verse is also from the Stotra-ratna (43) by Śrī Yāmunācārya.

SYNONYMS

āji haite-from this day; duṅhāra-of both of you; nāma-these names; rūpa-Śrī Rūpa; sanātana-Śrī Sanātana; dainya chāḍa-give up your humility; tomāra-your; dainye-humility; phāṭe-breaks; mora-My; mana-heart.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Sākara Mallika, from this day your names will be changed to Śrīla Rūpa and Śrīla Sanātana. Now please abandon your humility, for My heart is breaking to see you so humble.

PURPORT

Actually this is Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's initiation of Dabira Khāsa and Sākara Mallika. They approached the Lord with all humility, and the Lord accepted them as old servants, as eternal servants, and He changed their names. It is to be understood from this that it is essential for a disciple to change his name after initiation.

śaṅkha-cakrādy-ūrdhva-puṇḍradhāraṇādy-ātma-lakṣaṇam tan nāma-karaṇaṁ caiva vaiṣṇavatvam ihocyate

"After initiation, the disciple's name must be changed to indicate that he is a servant of Lord Viṣṇu. The disciple should also immediately begin marking his body with tilaka (ūrdhva-puṇḍra), especially his forehead. These are spiritual marks, symptoms of a perfect Vaiṣṇava." This is a verse from the Padma Purāṇa, Uttara-khaṇḍa. A member of the sahajiyā-sampradāya does not change his name; therefore he cannot be accepted as a Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇava. If a person does not change his name after initiation, it is to be understood that he will continue in his bodily conception of life.

SYNONYMS

eta bali-saying this; duṅhāra śire-on the heads of both of them; dharila-placed; dui-two; hāte-hands; dui bhāi-the two brothers; prabhu-pada-the lotus feet of the Lord; nila-took; nija māthe-on their own heads.

TRANSLATION

The Lord then placed His two hands on the heads of both of them, and in return they immediately placed the lotus feet of the Lord on their heads.

TEXT 217

SYNONYMS

dui jane-unto the two persons; prabhura-of the Lord; kṛpā-the mercy; dekhi’-seeing; bhakta-gaṇe-all the devotees; hari hari-the holy name of the Lord; bale-chant; sabe-all; ānandita-cheerful; mane-in the mind.

TRANSLATION

When all of the devotees saw the mercy of the Lord upon the two brothers, they were very much gladdened, and they began to chant the holy name of the Lord, ”Hari! Hari!”

PURPORT

Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says, chāḍiyā vaiṣṇava sevā nistāra pāyeche kebā: unless one serves a Vaiṣṇava, he cannot be delivered. The spiritual master initiates the disciple to deliver him, and if the disciple executes the order of the spiritual master and does not offend other Vaiṣṇavas, his path is clear. Consequently Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu requested all the Vaiṣṇavas present to show mercy toward the two brothers, Rūpa and Sanātana, who had just been initiated by the Lord. When a Vaiṣṇava sees that another Vaiṣṇava is a recipient of the Lord’s mercy, he becomes very happy. Vaiṣṇavas are not envious. If a Vaiṣṇava, by the mercy of the Lord, is empowered by Him to distribute the Lord’s holy name all over the world, other Vaiṣṇavas become very joyful-that is, if they are truly Vaiṣṇavas. One who is envious of the success of a Vaiṣṇava is certainly not a Vaiṣṇava himself, but an ordinary mundane man. Envy and jealousy are manifested by mundane people, not by Vaiṣṇavas. Why should a Vaiṣṇava be envious of another Vaiṣṇava who is successful in spreading the holy name of the Lord? An actual Vaiṣṇava is very pleased to accept another Vaiṣṇava who is bestowing the Lord's mercy. A mundane person in the dress of a Vaiṣṇava should not be respected but rejected. This is enjoined in the śāstra (upekṣā). The word upekṣā means neglect. One should neglect an envious person. A preacher's duty is to love the Supreme Personality of Godhead, make friendships with Vaiṣṇavas, show mercy to the innocent and reject or neglect those who are envious or jealous. There are many jealous people in the dress of Vaiṣṇavas in this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, and they should be completely neglected. There is no need to serve a jealous person who is in the dress of a Vaiṣṇava. When Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says chāḍiyā vaiṣṇava sevā nistāra payeche kebā, he is indicating an actual Vaiṣṇava, not an envious or jealous person in the dress of a Vaiṣṇava.

TEXT 219

SYNONYMS

nityānanda-Lord Nityānanda; haridāsa-Haridāsa Ṭhākura; śrīvāsa-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; gadādhara-Gadādhara Paṇḍita; mukunda-Mukunda; jagadānanda-Jagadānanda; murāri-Murāri; vakreśvara-Vakreśvara.

TRANSLATION

All the Vaiṣṇava associates of the Lord were present, including Nityānanda, Haridāsa Ṭhākura, Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, Gadādhara Paṇḍita, Mukunda, Jagadānanda, Murāri and Vakreśvara.

TEXT 220

sabāra caraṇe dhari, paḍe dui bhāi sabe bale,–dhanya tumi, pāile gosāñi sabāra-of all of them; caraṇe-the lotus feet; dhari-touching; paḍe-fall down; dui bhāi-the two brothers; sabe bale-all the Vaiṣṇavas say; dhanya tumi-you are so fortunate; pāile gosāñi-you have gotten the shelter of the lotus feet of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In accordance with the instructions of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the two brothers, Rūpa and Sanātana, immediately touched the lotus feet of these Vaiṣṇavas, who all became very happy and congratulated the two brothers for having received the mercy of the Lord.

PURPORT

This behavior is indicative of real Vaiṣṇavas. When they saw that Rūpa and Sanātana were fortunate enough to receive the mercy of the Lord, they were so pleased that they all congratulated the two brothers. A jealous person in the dress of a Vaiṣṇava is not at all happy to see the success of another Vaiṣṇava in receiving the Lord's mercy. Unfortunately in this Age of Kali there are many mundane persons in the dress of Vaiṣṇavas, and Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has described them as disciples of Kali. He says, kali-celā. He indicates that there is another Vaiṣṇava, a pseudoVaiṣṇava with tilaka on his nose and kaṇṭhī beads around his neck. Such a pseudoVaiṣṇava associates with money and women and is jealous of successful Vaiṣṇavas. Although passing for a Vaiṣṇava, his only business is earning money in the dress of a Vaiṣṇava. Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura therefore says that such a pseudoVaiṣṇava is not a Vaiṣṇava at all but a disciple of Kali-yuga. A disciple of Kali cannot become an ācārya by the decision of some high court. Mundane votes have no jurisdiction to elect a Vaiṣṇava ācārya. A Vaiṣṇava ācārya is self-effulgent, and there is no need for any court judgment. A false ācārya may try to override a Vaiṣṇava by a high-court decision, but Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says that he is nothing but a disciple of Kali-yuga.

TEXT 221

SYNONYMS

sabā-all of them; pāśa-from; ājñā-order; māgi'-taking; calana-samaya-at the time of departure; prabhu-pade-at the lotus feet of the Lord; kahe-say; kichu-something; kariyā-doing; vinaya-submission.

TRANSLATION

After begging the permission of all the Vaiṣṇavas present, the two brothers, at the time of their departure, humbly submitted something at the lotus feet of the Lord.

TEXT 222

SYNONYMS

ihāṅ haite-from this place; cala-please depart; prabhu-dear Lord; ihāṅ-in this place; nāhi kāya-there is no other business; yadyapi-although; tomāre-unto You; bhakti-respect; kare-shows; gauḍa-rāja-the King of Bengal.

TRANSLATION

They said, "Dear Lord, although the King of Bengal, Nawab Hussain Shah, is very respectful toward You, You have no other business here. Kindly depart from this place.

TEXT 223

SYNONYMS

tathāpi-still; yavana jāti-by caste a Muslim; nā-does not; kari-do; pratīti-confidence; tīrtha-yātrāya-in going for a pilgrimage; eta-so; saṅghaṭṭa-crowd; bhāla-good; nahe-not; rīti-etiquette.

TRANSLATION

"Although the King is respectful toward You, he still belongs to the yavana class and should not be believed. We think that there is no need for such a great crowd to accompany You on Your pilgrimage to Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 224

yāra saṅge cale ei loka lakṣa-koṭi vṛndāvana-yātrāra e nahe paripāṭī

SYNONYMS

yāra-of whom; saṅge-in the company; cale-follow; ei-these; loka-people; lakṣa-koṭi-hundreds and thousands; vṛndāvana-yātrāra-of going to Vṛndāvana; e-this; nahe-not; paripāṭī-method.

TRANSLATION

"Dear Lord, You are going to Vṛndāvana with hundreds and thousands of people following You, and this is not a fitting way to go on a pilgrimage."

PURPORT

Sometimes, for business purposes, large crowds of men are taken to different places of pilgrimage, and money is collected from them. That is a very lucrative business, but Rūpa and Sanātana Gosvāmīs, expressing their opinion in the presence of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, disapproved of such crowded pilgrimages. Actually when Lord Caitanya visited Vṛndāvana, He visited it alone and accepted a servant only at His devotees' request. He never visited Vṛndāvana with crowds of people for a commercial purpose.

TEXT 225

SYNONYMS

yadyapi-although; vastutaḥ-in fact; prabhura-of the Lord; kichu-any; nāhi-there is not; bhaya-fear; tathāpi-still; laukika-līlā-general pastimes; loka-ceṣṭā-maya-consisting of popular behavior.

TRANSLATION

Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself, the Supreme Lord, and was therefore not at all fearful, He still acted like a human being to teach neophytes how to act.

TEXT 226

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-saying this; caraṇa vandi'-offering prayers to the lotus feet of Lord Caitanya; gelā-went back; dui-jana-the two brothers; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sei-that; grāma-village; haite-from; calite-to go; haila-there was; mana-the mind.

TRANSLATION

Having spoken thus, the two brothers offered prayers to the lotus feet of the Lord and returned to their homes. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu then desired to leave that village.

TEXT 227

SYNONYMS

prāte-in the morning; cali'-departing; āilā-came; prabhu-the Lord; kānāira nāṭaśālā-to the place of the name Kānāi Nāṭaśālā; dekhila-saw; sakala-all; tāhāṅ-there; kṛṣṇa-caritra-līlā-the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

In the morning, the Lord left and went to a place known as Kānāi Nāṭaśālā. While there, He saw may pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

In those days in Bengal there were many places known as Kānāi Nāṭaśālā, where pictures of the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa were kept. People used to go there to see them. This is called kṛṣṇa-caritra-līlā. In Bengal there are still many places called hari-sabhā, which indicates a place where local people gather to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and discuss the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa. The word kānāi means "Lord Kṛṣṇa's," and nāṭaśālā indicates a place where pastimes are demonstrated. So those places which at the present moment are called hari-sabhā may previously have been known as Kānāi Nāṭaśālā.

TEXT 228

SYNONYMS

sei rātre-that night; prabhu-the Lord; tāhāṅ-there; cinte-thinks; mane-within His mind; mana-the mind; saṅge-with Him; saṅghaṭṭa-crowds of men; bhāla nahe-is not good; kaila sanātana-Sanātana has so spoken.

TRANSLATION

That night the Lord considered Sanātana Gosvāmī's proposal that He should not go to Vṛndāvana followed by so many people.

TEXT 229

mathurā yāiba āmi eta loka saṅge

SYNONYMS

mathurā-the holy place of the name Mathurā; yāiba-shall go; āmi-I; eta-so many; loka-people; saṅge-with; kichu-any; sukha-happiness; nā-not; pāiba-I shall get; habe-there will be; rasa-bhaṅge-a disturbance in the atmosphere.

TRANSLATION

The Lord thought, "If I go to Mathurā with such crowds behind Me, it would not be a very happy situation, for the atmosphere would be disturbed."

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu confirms that visiting a holy place like Vṛndāvana with so many people is simply disturbing. He would not find the happiness He desired by visiting such holy places in that way.

TEXT 230

SYNONYMS

ekākī-alone; yāiba-I shall go; kimvā-or; saṅge-with; eka-one; jana-person; tabe-then only; se-that; śobhaye-becomes beautiful; vṛndāvanere-to Vṛndāvana; gamana-going.

TRANSLATION

The Lord concluded that He would go alone to Vṛndāvana or, at most, would take only one person as His companion. In that way, going to Vṛndāvana would be very pleasant.

TRANSLATION

After this, the Lord punished Junior Haridāsa, and Dāmodara Paṇḍita gave some warning to the Lord.

PURPORT

Actually Dāmodara Paṇḍita was the eternal servant of the Lord. He could not punish the Lord at any time, nor had he any desire to, but He did give some warning to the Lord so that others would not blaspheme Him. Of course, He should have known that the Lord is the Supreme Personality of Godhead and is free to act in any way. There is no need to warn Him, and such an action is not very much appreciated by advanced devotees.

TEXT 260

tabe sanātana-gosāñira punar-āgamana

TRANSLATION

Soon afterward, Vallabha Bhaṭṭa met the Lord at Jagannātha Purī, and the Lord explained to him the import of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

This Vallabha Bhaṭṭa is the head of the Vaiṣṇava sampradāya known as the Vallabhācārya-sampradāya in western India. There is a long story about Vallabha Ācārya narrated in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta, specifically in the Seventh Chapter of Antya-līlā and the Nineteenth Chapter of Madhya-līlā. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited the house of Vallabha Ācārya on the other side of Prayāga, in a place known as Ādāila-grāma. Later, Vallabha Bhaṭṭa saw Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī to explain his commentary on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. He was very proud of his writings, but Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu corrected him, telling him that a Vaiṣṇava should be humble and follow in the footsteps of his predecessors. The Lord told him that his pride in being superior to Śrīdhara Svāmī was not at all befitting a Vaiṣṇava.

TEXT 264

SYNONYMS

gopīnātha paṭṭanāyaka-of the name Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka; rāmānanda-bhrātā-the brother of Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya; rājā-the King; māritechila-condemned to death; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; haila-became; trātā-the deliverer.

TRANSLATION

After this, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu saved Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka, the younger brother of Rāmānanda Rāya, from being condemned to death by the King.

TEXT 266

rāmacandra-purī-bhaye bhikṣā ghāṭāilā vaiṣṇavera duḥkha dekhi' ardheka rākhilā rāmacandra-purī-bhaye-due to fear of Rāmacandra Purī; bhikṣā-the proportion of eating; ghāṭāilā-decreased; vaiṣṇavera-of all the Vaiṣṇavas; duḥkha-unhappiness; dekhi'-understanding; ardheka-half of the portion; rākhilā-kept.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Rāmacandra Purī criticized Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's eating; therefore the Lord reduced His eating to a minimum. However, when all the Vaiṣṇavas became very sorry, the Lord increased His portion to half as much as usual.

TEXT 267

brahmāṇḍa-bhitare haya caudda bhuvana caudda-bhuvane vaise yata jīva-gaṇa

SYNONYMS

brahmāṇḍa-bhitare-within the universe; haya-there are; caudda bhuvana-fourteen planetary systems; caudda-bhuvane-in those fourteen planetary systems; vaise-reside; yata-as many as there are; jīva-gaṇa-living entities.

TRANSLATION

There are fourteen planetary systems within the universe, and all living entities reside in those planetary systems.

TEXT 268

manuṣyera veśa dhari' yātrikera chale prabhura darśana kare āsi' nīlācale

SYNONYMS

manuṣyera-of human beings; veśa dhari'-dressing themselves; yātrikera chale-as if pilgrims; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; darśana kare-visit; āsi'-coming; nīlācale-to Jagannātha Purī.

TRANSLATION

Dressing like human beings on pilgrimage, they all used to come to Jagannātha Purī to visit Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 269

eka-dina śrīvāsādi yata bhakta-gaṇa mahāprabhura guṇa gāñā karena kīrtana

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; śrīvāsa-ādi-Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura and others; yata-all; bhakta-gaṇa-devotees; mahāprabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; guṇa-qualities; gāñā-describing; karena-perform; kīrtana-chanting.

TRANSLATION

One day all the devotees, headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, were chanting the transcendental qualities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 270

śuni' bhakta-gaṇe kahe sa-krodha vacane kṛṣṇa-nāma-guṇa chāḍi, ki kara kīrtane

SYNONYMS

śuni'-hearing this; bhakta-gaṇe-to all the devotees; kahe-the Lord says; sa-krodha vacane-talking in an angry mood; kṛṣṇa-nāma-guṇa chāḍi-leaving aside the transcendental qualities and the name of the Lord; ki kara kīrtane-what kind of chanting are you performing.

TRANSLATION

Not liking the chanting of His transcendental qualities, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu chastised them as if He were angry. ”What kind of chanting is this?” He asked. ”Are you leaving aside the chanting of the holy name of the Lord?”

TEXT 271

auddhatya karite haila sabākāra mana svatantra ha-iyā sabe nāśā ’be bhuvana

SYNONYMS

auddhatya-impudence; karite-to do; haila-was; sabākāra-of all of you; mana-the mind; svatantra-independent; ha-iyā-becoming; sabe-all of you; nāśā ’be-will spoil; bhuvana-the whole world.

TRANSLATION

Thus Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu chastised all the devotees, telling them not to show impudence and spoil the entire world by becoming independent.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu warned all His followers not to become independent or impudent. Unfortunately, after the disappearance of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, many apa-sampradāyas (so-called followers) invented many ways not approved by the ācāryas. Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has described them as the āula, bāula, kartābhajā, neḍā, daraveśa, sāni sahajiyā, sakhībhekī, smārta, jāta-gosāñi, ativāḍī, cūḍādhārī and gaurāṅga-nāgarī.

The āula-sampradāya, bāula-sampradāya and others invented their own ways of understanding Lord Caitanya’s philosophy, without following in the footsteps of the ācāryas. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself indicates herein that all such attempts would simply spoil the spirit of His cult.

TEXT 272

SYNONYMS

raghunātha-dāsa-of the name Raghunātha dāsa; nityānanda-Lord Nityānanda; pāśe-near; gelā-went; ciḍā-chipped rice; dadhi-curd; mahotsava-festival; tāhāṅi-there; karilā-performed.

TRANSLATION

At this time, Raghunātha dāsa approached Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu and, according to His order, prepared a feast and distributed prasāda composed of chipped rice and curd.

PURPORT

There is a special preparation in Bengal wherein chipped rice is mixed with curd and sometimes with sandeśa and mango. It is a very palatable food offered to the Deity and then distributed to the public. Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, who was a householder at this time, met Nityānanda Prabhu. According to His advice, he executed this festival of dadhi-ciḍā-prasāda.

TEXT 284

SYNONYMS

tāṅra-His; ājñā-order; lañā-taking; gelā-approached; prabhura-of Caitanya Mahāprabhu; caraṇe-the lotus feet; prabhu-the Lord; tāṅre-him; samarpilā-handed over; svarūpera-of Svarūpa Dāmodara; sthāne-to the place.

TRANSLATION

Later, Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī left home and took shelter of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī. At that time, the Lord received him and placed him under the care of Svarūpa Dāmodara for spiritual enlightenment.

PURPORT

In this regard, Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī writes in Vilāpa-kusumāñjali (5):

yo māṁ dustara-geha-nirjala-mahā-kūpād apāra-klamāt sadyaḥ sāndra-dayāmbudhiḥ prakṛtitaḥ svairīkṛpā-rajjubhiḥ brahmānanda-bhāratīra-of Brahmānanda Bhāratī; ghucāila-vanquished; carma-ambara-dress of skin; ei mata-in this way; līlā-pastimes; kaila-performed; chaya vatsara-six years.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Later, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu stopped Brahmānanda Bhāratī's habit of wearing deerskin. The Lord thus enjoyed His pastimes continuously for six years, experiencing varieties of transcendental bliss.

TEXT 286

TRANSLATION

I have thus given a synopsis of the madhya-līlā. Now please hear the pastimes the Lord performed during the last twelve years.

PURPORT

Thus Śrīla Kavirāja Gosvāmī, strictly following in the footsteps of Śrī Vyāsadeva, gives a synopsis of the līlās of Caitanya-caritāmṛta. He has given such a description at the end of each canto. In the Ādi-līlā he outlined the pastimes of the Lord in the five stages of boyhood, leaving the details of the description to Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura. Now in this chapter the pastimes that took place at the end of the Lord's life are summarized. These are described in the Madhya-līlā and Antya-līlā. The rest of the pastimes have been described in a synopsis in the Second Chapter of the Madhya-līlā. In this way the author has gradually described both the madhya-līlā and the antya-līlā.

TEXT 287

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, First Chapter, summarizing the later pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

18.5.2 Chapter 2

The Ecstatic Manifestations of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu

In the Second Chapter of the Madhya-līlā, the author describes the pastimes the Lord performed during the last twelve years of His life. Thus he has also described some of the pastimes of the Antya-līlā. Why he has done so is very difficult for an ordinary person to understand. The author expects that reading the pastimes of the Lord will gradually help a person awaken his dormant love of Kṛṣṇa. Actually this Caitanya-caritāmṛta was compiled by the author during very old age. Fearing he might not be able to finish the book, he has included a synopsis of the antya-līlā here in the Second Chapter. Śrīla Kavirāja Gosvāmī has confirmed that the opinion of Svarūpa Dāmodara is authoritative in the matter of devotional service. Over and above this are the notes of Svarūpa Dāmodara, memorized by Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, who also helped in the compilation of Caitanya-caritāmṛta. After the disappearance of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī went to Vṛndāvana. At that time the author, Śrīla Kavirāja Gosvāmī, met Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, by whose mercy he also could memorize all the notes. In this way the author was able to complete this transcendental literature, Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

gaurasya kṛṣṇa-vicchedapralāpādy anuvarṇyate

SYNONYMS

vicchede-in the chapter; asmin-this; prabhoḥ-of the Lord; antya-līlā-of the last division of His pastimes; sūtra-of a synopsis; anuvarṇane-in the matter of description; gaurasya-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛṣṇa-viccheda-of separation from Kṛṣṇa; pralāpa-craziness; ādi-other subject matters; anuvarṇyate-is being described.

TRANSLATION

While relating in synopsis form the last division of the pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, in this chapter I shall describe the Lord's transcendental ecstasy, which appears like madness due to His separation from Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

In this Second Chapter, the activities of Lord Caitanya that took place after the Lord accepted sannyāsa are generally described. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is specifically mentioned here as being gaura, or of fair complexion. Kṛṣṇa is generally known to be blackish, but when He is absorbed in the thought of the gopīs, who are all of fair complexion, Kṛṣṇa Himself also becomes fair. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in particular felt separation from Kṛṣṇa very deeply, exactly like a lover who is dejected in separation from the beloved. Such feelings, which were expressed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu for nearly twelve years at the end of His pastimes, are described in brief in this Second Chapter of the Madhya-līlā.

TEXT 2

jaya jaya śrī-caitanya jaya nityānanda
jayādvaitacandra jaya gaura-bhakta-vṛnda

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya śrī-caitanya-all glories to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jaya nityānanda-all glories to Lord Nityānanda; jaya advaitacandra-all glories to Advaita Prabhu; jaya gaura-bhakta-vṛnda-all glories to the devotees of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu! All glories to Lord Nityānanda! All glories to Advaitacandra! All glories to all the devotees of the Lord!

TEXT 3

śeṣa ye rahila prabhura dvādaśa vatsara kṛṣṇera viyoga-sphūrti haya nirantara śeṣa-at the end; ye-those; rahila-remained; prabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dvādaśa vatsara-twelve years; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; viyoga-of separation; sphūrti-manifestation; haya-is; nirantara-always.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

During His last twelve years, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu always manifested all the symptoms of ecstasy in separation from Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 4

śrī-rādhikāra ceṣṭā yena uddhava-darśane ei-mata daśā prabhura haya rātri-dine

SYNONYMS

śrī-rādhikāra-of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; ceṣṭā-the activities; yena-just like; uddhava-darśane-in seeing Uddhava at Vṛndāvana; ei-mata-in this way; daśā-the condition; prabhura-of the Lord; haya-is; rātri-dine-day and night.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's state of mind, day and night, was practically identical to Rādhārāṇī's state of mind when Uddhava came to Vṛndāvana to see the gopīs.

TEXT 5

nirantara haya prabhura viraha-unmāda bhrama-maya ceṣṭā sadā, pralāpa-maya vāda nirantara-constantly; haya-is; prabhura-of the Lord; viraha-of separation; unmāda-the madness; bhrama-maya-forgetful; ceṣṭā-activities; sadā-always; pralāpa-maya-full of delirium; vāda-talking.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Lord constantly exhibited a state of mind reflecting the madness of separation. All His activities were based on forgetfulness, and His talks were always based on madness.

TEXT 6

roma-kūpe raktodgama, danta saba hāle kṣaṇe aṅga kṣīṇa haya, kṣaṇe aṅga phule

SYNONYMS

roma-kūpe-the pores of the body; rakta-udgama-exuding blood; danta-teeth; saba-all; hāle-loosen; kṣaṇe-in one moment; aṅga-the whole body; kṣīṇa-slender; haya-becomes; kṣaṇe-in another moment; aṅga-the body; phule-fattens.

TRANSLATION

Blood flowed from all the pores of His body, and all His teeth were loosened. At one moment His whole body became slender, and at another moment His whole body became fat.

TEXT 7

gambhīrā-bhitare rātre nāhi nidrā-lava bhitte mukha-śira ghaṣe, kṣata haya saba

SYNONYMS

gambhīrā-bhitare-inside the inner room; rātre-at night; nāhi-there is not; nidrā-lava-a fraction of sleep; bhitte-on the wall; mukha-mouth; śira-head; ghaṣe-grind; kṣata-injuries; haya-there are; saba-all.

TRANSLATION

The small room beyond the corridor is called the Gambhīrā. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to stay in that room, but He did not sleep for a moment. All night He used to grind His mouth and head on the wall, and His face sustained injuries all over.

TEXT 8

tina dvāre kapāṭa, prabhu yāyena bāhire kabhu siṁha-dvāre paḍe, kabhu sindhu-nīre

SYNONYMS

tina dvāre-the three doors; kapāṭa-completely closed; prabhu-the Lord; yāyena-goes; bāhire-outside; kabhu-sometimes; siṁha-dvāre-at the gate of the temple of Jagannātha, known as Siṁha-dvāra; paḍe-falls flat; kabhu-sometimes; sindhu-nīre-in the water of the sea.

TRANSLATION

Although the three doors of the house were always closed, the Lord would nonetheless go out and sometimes would be found at the Jagannātha Temple, before the gate known as Siṁha-dvāra. And sometimes the Lord would fall flat into the sea.

TEXT 9

caṭaka parvata dekhi' 'govardhana' bhrame dhāñā cale ārta-nāda kariyā krandane

SYNONYMS

caṭaka parvata-the sand hills; dekhi'-seeing; govardhana-Govardhana Hill in Vṛndāvana; bhrame-mistakes; dhāñā-running; cale-goes; ārta-nāda-wail; kariyā-making; krandane-cries.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would also run very fast across the sand hills, mistaking them for Govardhana. As He ran, He would wail and cry loudly.

PURPORT

Because of the winds of the sea, sometimes the sand would form dunes. Such sand dunes are called caṭaka parvata. Instead of seeing these sand dunes simply as hills of sand, the Lord would take them to be Govardhana Hill. Sometimes He would run toward these dunes at high speed, crying very loudly, expressing the state of mind exhibited by Rādhārāṇī. Thus Caitanya Mahāprabhu was absorbed in thoughts of Kṛṣṇa and His pastimes. His state of mind brought Him the atmosphere of Vṛndāvana and Govardhana Hill, and thus He enjoyed the transcendental bliss of separation and meeting.

TEXT 10

upavanodyāna dekhi' vṛndāvana-jñāna tāhāṅ yāi' nāce, gāya, kṣaṇe mūrcchā yā'na upavana-udyāna-small parks; dekhi'-seeing; vṛndāvana-jñāna-took them to be the forests of Vṛndāvana; tāhāṅ-there; yāi'-going; nāce-dances; gāya-sings; kṣaṇe-in a moment; mūrcchā-unconsciousness; yā'na-goes.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Sometimes Caitanya Mahāprabhu mistook the small parks of the city for Vṛndāvana. Sometimes He would go there, dance and chant and sometimes fall unconscious in spiritual ecstasy.

TEXT 11

kāhāṅ nāhi śuni yei bhāvera vikāra sei bhāva haya prabhura śarīre pracāra

SYNONYMS

kāhāṅ-anywhere; nāhi-not; śuni-we hear; yei-that; bhāvera-of ecstasy; vikāra-transformation; sei-that; bhāva-ecstasy; haya-is; prabhura-of the Lord; śarīre-in the body; pracāra-manifest.

TRANSLATION

The extraordinary transformations of the body due to transcendental feelings would never have been possible for anyone but the Lord, in whose body all transformations were manifest.

PURPORT

The ecstatic transformations of the body as described in such exalted scriptures as the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu are practically not seen in this material world. However, these symptoms were perfectly present in the body of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. These symptoms are indicative of mahābhāva, or the highest ecstasy. Sometimes sahajiyās artificially imitate these symptoms, but experienced devotees reject them immediately. The author admits herein that these symptoms are not to be found anywhere but in the body of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 12

hasta-padera sandhi saba vitasti-pramāṇe sandhi chāḍi' bhinna haye, carma rahe sthāne hasta-padera-of the hands and legs; sandhi-joints; saba-all; vitasti-about eight inches; pramāṇe-in length; sandhi-joints; chāḍi'-dislocated; bhinna-separated; haye-become; carma-skin; rahe-remains; sthāne-in the place.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The joints of His hands and legs would sometimes become separated by eight inches, and they remained connected only by the skin.

TEXT 13

hasta, pada, śira saba śarīra-bhitare praviṣṭa haya–kūrma-rūpa dekhiye prabhure

SYNONYMS

hasta-the hands; pada-the legs; śira-head; saba-all; śarīra-the body; bhitare-within; praviṣṭa-entered; haya-is; kūrma-rūpa-like a tortoise; dekhiye-one sees; prabhure-the Lord.

TRANSLATION

Sometimes Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's hands, legs and head would all enter within His body, just like the withdrawn limbs of a tortoise.

TEXT 14

ei mata adbhuta-bhāva śarīre prakāśa manete śūnyatā, vākye hā-hā-hutāśa ei mata-in this way; adbhuta-wonderful; bhāva-ecstasy; śarīre-in the body; prakāśa-manifestation; manete-in the mind; śūnyatā-vacancy; vākye-in speaking; hā-hā-despondency; hutāśa-disappointment.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to manifest wonderful ecstatic symptoms. His mind appeared vacant, and there were only hopelessness and disappointment in His words.

TEXT 15

kāhāṅ mora prāṇa-nātha muralī-vadana kāhāṅ karoṅ kāhāṅ pāṅ vrajendra-nandana kāhāṅ-where; mora-My; prāṇa-nātha-Lord of the life; muralī-vadana-playing the flute; kāhāṅ-what; karoṅ-shall I do; kāhāṅ-where; pāṅ-I shall get; vrajendra-nandana-the son of Mahārāja Nanda.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to express His mind in this way, "Where is the Lord of My life, who is playing His flute? What shall I do now? Where should I go to find the son of Mahārāja Nanda?

TEXT 16

kāhāre kahiba, kebā jāne mora duḥkha vrajendra-nandana vinu phāṭe mora buka

SYNONYMS

kāhāre-unto whom; kahiba-I shall speak; kebā-who; jāne-knows; mora-My; duḥkha-disappointment; vrajendra-nandana-Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja; vinu-without; phāṭe-breaks; mora-My; buka-heart.

TRANSLATION

"To whom should I speak? Who can understand My disappointment? Without the son of Nanda Mahārāja, My heart is broken."

TEXT 17

ei-mata vilāpa kare vihvala antara rāyera nāṭaka-śloka paḍe nirantara ei-mata-in this way; vilāpa-lamentation; kare-does; vihvala-bewildered; antara-within; rāyera-of Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya; nāṭaka-drama; śloka-verses; paḍe-recites; nirantara-constantly.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu always expressed bewilderment and lamented in separation from Kṛṣṇa. At such times He used to recite the ślokas from Rāmānanda Rāya's drama known as Jagannātha-vallabha-nāṭaka.

TEXT 18

SYNONYMS

prema-cheda-rujaḥ-the sufferings of a broken loving relationship; avagacchati-knows; hariḥ-the Supreme Lord; na-not; ayam-this; na ca-nor; prema-love; vā-nor; sthāna-the proper place; asthānam-an unsuitable place; avaiti-knows; na-not; api-also; madanaḥ-Cupid; jānāti-knows; naḥ-us; durbalāḥ-very weak; anyaḥ-another; veda-knows; na-not; ca-also; anya-duḥkham-the difficulties of others; akhilam-all; naḥ-our; jīvanam-life; vā-or; āśravam-simply full of miseries; dvi-two; trāṇi-three; eva-certainly; dināni-days; yauvanam-youth; idam-this; hā-hā-alas; vidhe-O creator; kā-what; gatiḥ-our destination.

TRANSLATION

”[Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī used to lament:] ’Our Kṛṣṇa does not realize what we have suffered from injuries inflicted in the course of loving affairs. We are actually misused by love because love does not know where to strike and where not to strike. Even Cupid does not know of our very weakened condition. What should I tell anyone? No one can understand another’s difficulties. Our life is actually not under our control, for youth will remain for two or three days and soon be finished. In this condition, O creator, what will be our destination?’

PURPORT

This verse is from the Jagannātha-vallabha-nāṭaka (3.9), by Rāmānanda Rāya.

TEXT 19

SYNONYMS

upajila-grew up; prema-aṅkura-fructification of love of God; bhāṅgila-was broken; ye-that; duḥkha-pūra-full of miseries; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; tāhā-that; nāhi-not; kare-does; pāna-drinking; bāhire-externally; nāgara-rāja-the most attractive person; bhitare-within; śaṭhera-of a cheater; kāja-activities; para-nārī-others’ wives; vadhe-kills; sāvadhāna-very careful.

TRANSLATION

[Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī spoke thus, in distress due to separation from Kṛṣṇa:] ”Oh, what shall I say of My distress? After I met Kṛṣṇa My loving propensities sprouted, but upon separating from Him I sustained a great shock, which is now continuing like the sufferings of a disease. The only physician for this disease is Kṛṣṇa Himself, but He is not taking care of this sprouting plant of devotional service. What can I say about the behavior of Kṛṣṇa? Outwardly He is a very attractive young lover, but at heart He is a great cheat, very expert in killing others’ wives.”

TEXT 20

sakhī he, nā bujhiye vidhira vidhāna sukha lāgi’ kailuṅ prīta, haila duḥkha viparīta, ebe yāya, nā rahe parāṇa

SYNONYMS

sakhī he-(My dear) friend; nā bujhiye-I do not understand; vidhira-of the Creator; vidhāna-the regulation; sukha lāgi’-for happiness; kailuṅ-I did; prīta-love; haila-it became; duḥkha-unhappiness; viparīta-the opposite; ebe-now; yāya-going; nā-does not; rahe-remain; parāṇa-life.

TRANSLATION

[Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī continued lamenting about the consequences of loving Kṛṣṇa:] ”My dear friend, I do not understand the regulative principles given by the Creator. I loved Kṛṣṇa for happiness, but the result was just the opposite. I am now in an ocean of distress. It must be that now I am going to die, for My vital force no longer remains. This is My state of mind.

bhāla-manda nāre vicārite krūra śaṭhera guṇa-ḍore, hāte-gale bāndhi’ more, rākhiyāche, nāri’ ukāśite

SYNONYMS

kuṭila-crooked; premā-love of Kṛṣṇa; ageyāna-ignorant; nāhi-does not; jāne-know; sthāna-asthāna-a suitable place or unsuitable place; bhāla-manda-what is good or what is bad; nāre-not able; vicārite-to consider; krūra-very cruel; śaṭhera-of the cheater; guṇa-ḍore-by the ropes of the good qualities; hāte-on the hands; gale-on the neck; bāndhi’-binding; more-Me; rākhiyāche-has kept; nāri’-being unable; ukāśite-to get relief.

TRANSLATION

”By nature loving affairs are very crooked. They are not entered with sufficient knowledge, nor do they consider whether a place is suitable or not, nor do they look forward to the results. By the ropes of His good qualities, Kṛṣṇa, who is so unkind, has bound My neck and hands, and I am unable to get relief.

TEXT 22

pāṅca bāṇa sandhe anukṣaṇa abalāra śarīre, vindhi’ kaila jarajare, duḥkha deya, nā laya jīvana

SYNONYMS

ye madana-that Cupid; tanu-hīna-without a body; para-drohe-in putting others in difficulty; paravīṇa-very expert; pāṅca-five; bāṇa-arrows; sandhe-fixes; anukṣaṇa-constantly; abalāra-of an innocent woman; śarīre-in the body; vindhi’-piercing; kaila-made; jarajare-almost invalid; duḥkha deya-gives tribulation; nā-does not; laya-take; jīvana-the life.

TRANSLATION

”In My loving affairs there is a person named Madana. His qualities are thus: Personally He possesses no gross body, yet He is very expert in giving pains to others. He has five arrows, and fixing them on His bow, He shoots them into the bodies of innocent women. Thus these women become invalids. It would be better if He took My life without hesitation, but He does not do so. He simply gives Me pain.

TEXT 23

SYNONYMS

anyera-of others; ye-that; duḥkha-unhappiness; mane-in the minds; anye-others; tāhā-that; nāhi-do not; jāne-know; satya-truth; ei-this; śāstrera-of scripture; vicāre-in the judgment; anya jana-other persons; kāhāṅ-what; likhi-I shall write; nā jānaye-do not know; prāṇa-sakhī-My dear friends; yāte-by which; kahe-speak; dhairya dharibāre-to take patience.

TRANSLATION

"In the scriptures it is said that one person can never know the unhappiness in the mind of another. Therefore what can I say of My dear friends, Lalitā and the others? Nor can they understand the unhappiness within Me. They simply try to console Me repeatedly, saying, 'Dear friend, be patient.'

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; kṛpā-pārāvāra-an ocean of mercy; kabhu-sometimes; karibena-will make; aṅgīkāra-acceptance; sakhī-My dear friend; tora-your; e-these; vyartha-untruthful; vacana-complimentary words; jīvera-of the living entity; jīvana-life; cañcala-flickering; yena-like; padma-patrera-of the leaf of the lotus flower; jala-the water; tata-so many; dina-days; jīve-lives; kon-what; jana-person.

TRANSLATION

"I say, 'My dear friends, you are asking Me to be patient, saying that Kṛṣṇa is an ocean of mercy and that some time in the future He will accept Me. However, I must say that this will not console Me. A living entity's life is very flickering. It is like water on the leaf of a lotus flower. Who will live long enough to expect Kṛṣṇa's mercy?

SYNONYMS

śata vatsara paryanta-up to one hundred years; jīvera-of the living entity; jīvana-of the life; anta-the end; ei vākya-this word; kaha-you speak; nā-without; vicāri'-making consideration; nārīra-of a woman; yauvana-dhana-the wealth of youthfulness; yāre-in which; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; kare-does; mana-intention; se yauvana-that youthfulness; dina-days; dui-cāri-two or four.

TRANSLATION

" 'A human being does not live more than a hundred years. You should also consider that the youthfulness of a woman, which is the only attraction for Kṛṣṇa, remains for only a few days.

TEXT 26

SYNONYMS

agni-fire; yaiche-like; nija-dhāma-his own place; dekhāiyā-showing; abhirāma-attractive; pataṅgīre-the flies; ākarṣiyā-attracting; māre-kills; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; aiche-in that way; nija-guṇa-His transcendental qualities; dekhāiyā-showing; hare mana-attracts our mind; pāche-in the end; duḥkha-samudrete-in an ocean of unhappiness; ḍāre-drowns.

TRANSLATION

" 'If you say that Kṛṣṇa is an ocean of transcendental qualities and therefore must be merciful some day, I can only say that He is like fire, which attracts flies by its dazzling brightness and kills them. Such are the qualities of Kṛṣṇa. By showing us His transcendental qualities, He attracts our minds, and then later, by separating from us, He drowns us in an ocean of unhappiness.' "

SYNONYMS

eteka-in this way; vilāpa-lamentation; kari'-doing; viṣāde-in moroseness; śrī-gaurahari-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ughāḍiyā-opening; duḥkhera-of unhappiness; kapāṭa-doors; bhāvera-of ecstasy; taraṅga-bale-by the force of the waves; nānā-rūpe-in various ways; mana-His mind; cale-wanders; āra eka-another one; śloka-verse; kaila-did; pāṭha-recite.

TRANSLATION

In this way, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu lamented in a great ocean of sadness, and thus He opened the doors of His unhappiness. Forced by the waves of ecstasy, His mind wandered over transcendental mellows, and in this way He recited another verse [as follows].

TEXT 28

śrī-kṛṣṇa-rūpādi-niṣevaṇaṁ vinā vyarthāni me ’hāny akhilendriyāṇy alam pāṣāṇa-śuṣkendhana-bhārakāṇy aho bibharmi vā tāni kathaṁ hata-trapaḥ

SYNONYMS

śrī-kṛṣṇa-rūpa-ādi-of the transcendental form and pastimes of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa; niṣevaṇam-the service; vinā-without; vyarthāni-meaningless; me-My; ahāni-days; akhila-all; indriyāṇi-senses; alam-entirely; pāṣāṇa-dead stones; śuṣka-dry; indhana-wood; bhārakāṇi-burdens; aho-alas; bibharmi-I bear; vā-or; tāni-all of them; katham-how; hata-trapaḥ-without shame.

TRANSLATION

” ’My dear friends, unless I serve the transcendental form, qualities and pastimes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, all My days and all My senses will become entirely useless. Now I am uselessly bearing the burden of My senses, which are like stone blocks and dried wood. I do not know how long I will be able to continue without shame.’

ye nā dekhe se cāṅda vadana se nayane kibā kāja, paḍuka tāra muṇḍe vāja, se nayana rahe ki kāraṇa

SYNONYMS

vaṁśī-gāna-amṛta-dhāma-the abode of the nectar derived from the songs of the flute; lāvaṇya-amṛta-janma-sthāna-the birthplace of the nectar of beauty; ye-anyone who; nā-not; dekhe-sees; se-that; cāṅda-moonlike; vadana-face; se-those; nayane-eyes; kibā kāja-what is the use; paḍuka-let there be; tāra-his; muṇḍe-on the head; vāja-thunderbolt; se-those; nayana-eyes; rahe-keeps; ki-what; kāraṇa-reason.

TRANSLATION

”Of what use are eyes if one does not see the face of Kṛṣṇa, which resembles the moon and is the birthplace of all beauty and the reservoir of the nectarean songs of His flute? Oh, let a thunderbolt strike his head! Why does he keep such eyes?

PURPORT

The moonlike face of Kṛṣṇa is the reservoir of nectarean songs and the abode of His flute. It is also the root of all bodily beauty. If the eyes of the gopīs are not engaged in seeing the beautiful face of Kṛṣṇa, it is better that they be struck by a thunderbolt. For the gopīs, to see anything but Kṛṣṇa is uninteresting and, indeed, detestful. The gopīs are never pleased to see anything but Kṛṣṇa. The only solace for their eyes is the beautiful moonlike face of Kṛṣṇa, the worshipful object of all senses. When they cannot see the beautiful face of Kṛṣṇa, they actually see everything as vacant, and they desire to be struck by a thunderbolt. They do not find any reason to maintain their eyes when they are bereft of the beauty of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 30

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; madhura-sweet; vāṇī-words; amṛtera-of nectar; taraṅgiṇī-waves; tāra-of those; praveśa-entrance; nāhi-there is not; ye-which; śravaṇe-in the ear; kāṇākaḍi-of a damaged conchshell; chidra-the hole; sama-like; jāniha-please know; se-that; śravaṇa-ear; tāra-his; janma-birth; haila-was; akāraṇe-without purpose.

TRANSLATION

”Topics about Kṛṣṇa are like waves of nectar. If such nectar does not enter one’s ear, the ear is no better than the hole of a damaged conchshell. Such an ear is created for no purpose.

PURPORT

In this connection, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura quotes the following verses from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.3.17-24):

”Both by rising and setting, the sun decreases the duration of life of everyone except one who utilizes the time by discussing topics of the all-good Personality of Godhead. Do the trees not live? Do the bellows of the blacksmith not breathe? All around us, do the beasts not eat and discharge semen? Men who are like dogs, hogs, camels and asses praise those men who never listen to the transcendental pastimes of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the deliverer from evils. One who has not listened to the messages about the prowess and marvelous acts of the Personality of Godhead and has not sung or chanted loudly the worthy songs about the Lord should be considered to possess ears like the holes of snakes and a tongue like that of a frog. The upper portion of the body, though crowned with a silk turban, is only a heavy burden if not bowed down before the Personality of Godhead, who can award mukti [freedom]. And the hands, though decorated with glittering bangles, are like those of a dead man if not engaged in the service of the Personality of Godhead Hari. The eyes which do not look at the symbolic representations of the Personality of Godhead Viṣṇu [His forms, name, quality, etc.] are like those printed on the plumes of a peacock, and the legs which do not move to the holy places [where the Lord is remembered] are considered to be like tree trunks. The person who has not at any time received upon his head the dust from the feet of a pure devotee of the Lord is certainly a dead body. And the person who has never experienced the flavor of the tulasī leaves from the lotus feet of the Lord is also a dead body, although breathing. Certainly that heart is steel-framed which, in spite of one’s chanting the holy name of the Lord with concentration, does not change and feel ecstasy, at which time tears fill the eyes and the hairs stand on end.”

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; adhara-amṛta-the nectar of the lips; kṛṣṇa-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; guṇa-the qualities; carita-the activities; sudhā-sāra-of the essence of all nectar; svāda-the taste; vinindana-surpassing; tāra-of that; svāda-the taste; ye-anyone who; nā jāne-does not know; janmiyā-taking birth; nā maila-did not die; kene-why; se-that; rasanā-tongue; bheka-of the frog; jihvā-the tongue; sama-like.

TRANSLATION

”The nectar from the lips of Lord Kṛṣṇa and His transcendental qualities and characteristics surpass the taste of the essence of all nectar, and there is no fault in tasting such nectar. If one does not taste it, he should die immediately after birth, and his tongue is to be considered no better than the tongue of a frog.

SYNONYMS

mṛga-mada-the fragrance of musk; nīla-utpala-and the bluish lotus flower; milane-in mixing; ye-that; parimala-fragrance; yei-which; hare-vanquishes; tāra-of them; garva-pride; māna-and prestige; hena-such; kṛṣṇa-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; aṅga-of the body; gandha-the aroma; yāra-whose; nāhi-not; se-that; sambandha-relationship; sei-such; nāsā-nose; bhastrāra-to the bellows; samāna-equal.

TRANSLATION

"One's nostrils are no better than the bellows of a blacksmith if he has not smelled the fragrance of Kṛṣṇa's body, which is like the aroma of musk combined with that of the bluish lotus flower. Indeed, such combinations are actually defeated by the aroma of Kṛṣṇa's body.

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kara-the palms; pada-tala-the soles of His feet; koṭi-candra-like the light of millions of moons; su-śītala-cool and pleasing; tāra-of them; sparśa-the touch; yena-like; sparśa-maṇi-touchstone; tāra-his; sparśa-touch; nāhi-not; yāra-of whom; se-that person; yāuk-let him go; chārakhāra-to ruin; sei vapu-that body; lauha-sama-like iron; jāni-I know.

TRANSLATION

"The palms of Kṛṣṇa's hands and the soles of His feet are so cool and pleasant that they can be compared only to the light of millions of moons. One who has touched such hands and feet has indeed tasted the effects of touchstone. If one has not touched them, his life is spoiled, and his body is like iron."

SYNONYMS

kari'-doing; eta-such; vilapana-lamenting; prabhu-the Lord; śacī-nandana-the son of mother Śacī; ughāḍiyā-opening; hṛdayera-of the heart; śoka-the lamentation; dainya-humility; nirveda-disappointment; viṣāde-in moroseness; hṛdayera-of the heart; avasāde-in despondency; punarapi-again and again; paḍe-recites; eka-one; śloka-verse.

TRANSLATION

Lamenting in this way, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu opened the doors of grief within His heart. Morose, humble and disappointed, He recited a verse again and again with a despondent heart.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, the word dainya (humility) is explained as follows: "When unhappiness, fearfulness and the sense of having offended combine, one feels condemned. This sense of condemnation is described as dīnatā, humility. When one is subjected to such humility, he feels physically inactive, he apologizes, and his consciousness is disturbed. His mind is also restless, and many other symptoms are visible."1.

Can you look this quote up and see if it ends where we indicate?

(1) The word nirveda is also explained in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu: "One may feel unhappiness and separation, as well as jealousy and lamentation, due to not discharging one's duties. The despondency that results is called nirveda. When one is captured by this despondency, thoughts, tears, loss of bodily luster, humility and heavy breathing result." Viṣāda is also explained in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu: "When one fails to achieve his desired goal of life and repents for all his offenses, there is a state of regret called viṣāda." The symptoms of avasāda are also explained: "One hankers to revive his original condition and inquires how to do so. There are also deep thought, heavy breathing, crying and lamentation, as well as a changing of the bodily color and drying up of the tongue."

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu thirty-three such destructive symptoms are mentioned. They are expressed in words, in the eyebrows and in the eyes. These symptoms are called vyabhicārī bhāva, destructive ecstasy. If they continue, they are sometimes called sañcārī, or continued ecstasy.

TRANSLATION

" 'If by chance the transcendental form of Kṛṣṇa comes before My path of vision, My heart, injured from being beaten, will be stolen away by Cupid, happiness personified. Because I could not see the beautiful form of Kṛṣṇa to My heart's content, when I again see His form I shall decorate the phases of time with many jewels.' "

PURPORT

This verse is spoken by Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī in the Jagannātha-vallabha-nāṭaka (3.11), by Rāmānanda Rāya.

TRANSLATION

In an instant, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu regained external consciousness and saw two persons before Him. Questioning them, He asked, "Am I conscious? What dreams have I been seeing? What craziness have I spoken? Have you heard some expressions of humility?"

PURPORT

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu thus spoke in ecstasy, He saw two persons before Him. One was His secretary, Svarūpa Dāmodara, and the other was Rāya Rāmānanda. Coming to His external consciousness, He saw them both present, and although He was still talking in the ecstasy of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, He immediately began to question whether He was the same Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

punaḥ-again; kahe-says; hāya hāya-alas; śuna-kindly hear; svarūpa-rāma-rāya-My dear Svarūpa Dāmodara and Rāmānanda Rāya; ei-this; mora-My; hṛdaya-niścaya-the certainty in My heart; śuni-hearing; karaha-just make; vicāra-judgment; haya, naya-correct or not; kaha sāra-tell Me the essence; eta bali'-saying this; śloka-another verse; uccāraya-recites.

TRANSLATION

Again He addressed both Svarūpa Dāmodara and Rāya Rāmānanda, speaking despondently, "Alas! My friends, you can now know the certainty within My heart, and after knowing My heart you should judge whether I am correct or not. You can speak of this properly." Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then began to chant another verse.

TEXT 42

ka-i-avarahi-aṁ pemmaṁ ṇa hi hoi māṇuse loe ja-i hoi kassa virahe hontammi ko jīa-i

SYNONYMS

ka-i-avarahi-am-without any cheating propensity, without any motive concerning the four principles of material existence (namely, religiosity, economic development, sense gratification and liberation); pemmam-love of Godhead; ṇa-never; hi-certainly; hoi-becomes; māṇuse-in human society; loe-in this world; ja-i-if; hoi-there is; kassa-whose; virahe-in separation; hontammi-is; ko-who; jīa-i-lives.

TRANSLATION

” ’Love of Godhead, devoid of cheating propensities, is not possible within this material world. If there is such a love, there cannot be separation, for if there is separation, how can one live?’

PURPORT

This is a verse in a common language called prākṛta, and the exact Sanskrit transformation is kaitava-rahitaṁ premā na hi bhavati mānuṣe loke yadi bhavati kasya viraho virahe saty api ko jīvati.

TEXT 43

akaitava kṛṣṇa-prema, yena jāmbūnada-hema, sei premā nṛloke nā haya
yadi haya tāra yoga, nā haya tabe viyoga, viyoga haile keha nā jīyaya

SYNONYMS

akaitava kṛṣṇa-prema-unalloyed love of Kṛṣṇa; yena-like; jāmbū-nada-hema-gold from the Jāmbū River; sei premā-that love of Godhead; nṛ-loke-in the material world; nā haya-is not possible; yadi-if; haya-there is; tāra-with it; yoga-connection; nā-not; haya-is; tabe-then; viyoga-separation; viyoga-separation; haile-if there is; keha-someone; nā jīyaya-cannot live.

TRANSLATION

”Pure love for Kṛṣṇa, just like gold from the Jāmbū River, does not exist in human society. If it existed, there could not be separation. If separation were there, one could not live.”

TEXT 44

eta kahi’ śacī-suta, śloka paḍe adbhuta, śune duṅhe eka-mana hañā āpana-hṛdaya-kāja, kahite vāsiye lāja, tabu kahi lāja-bīja khāñā

SYNONYMS

eta kahi’-thus saying; śacī-suta-the son of Śrīmatī Śacīmātā; śloka-verse; paḍe-recites; adbhuta-wonderful; śune-hear; duṅhe-the two persons; eka-mana hañā-with rapt attention; āpana-hṛdaya-kāja-the activities of one’s own heart; kahite-to speak; vāsiye-I feel; lāja-shameful; tabu-still; kahi-I speak; lāja-bīja-the seed of bashfulness; khāñā-finishing.

TRANSLATION

Thus speaking, the son of Śrīmatī Śacīmātā recited another wonderful verse, and Rāmānanda Rāya and Svarūpa Dāmodara heard this verse with rapt attention. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, ”I feel shameful to disclose the activities of My heart. Nonetheless, I shall be done with all formalities and speak from the heart. Please hear.”

TEXT 45

na prema-gandho ’sti darāpi me harau krandāmi saubhāgya-bharaṁ prakāśitum vaṁśī-vilāsy-ānana-lokanaṁ vinā bibharmi yat prāṇa-pataṅgakān vṛthā

SYNONYMS

na-never; prema-gandhaḥ-a scent of love of Godhead; asti-there is; darā api-even in a slight proportion; me-My; harau-in the Supreme Personality of Godhead; krandāmi-I cry; saubhāgya-bharam-the volume of My fortune; prakāśitum-to exhibit; vaṁśī-vilāsi-of the great flute-player; ānana-at the face; lokanam-looking; vinā-without; bibharmi-I carry; yat-because; prāṇa-pataṅgakān-My insectlike life; vṛthā-with no purpose.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, ” ’My dear friends, I have not the slightest tinge of love of Godhead within My heart. When you see Me crying in separation, I am just falsely exhibiting a demonstration of My great fortune. Indeed, not seeing the beautiful face of Kṛṣṇa playing His flute, I continue to live My life like an insect, without purpose.’

TEXT 46

seha mora nāhi kṛṣṇa-pāya tabe ye kari krandana, sva-saubhāgya prakhyāpana, kari, ihā jāniha niścaya

SYNONYMS

dūre-far away; śuddha-prema-gandha-a scent of pure devotional love; kapaṭa-false; premera-of love of Godhead; bandha-binding; seha-that; mora-My; nāhi-there is not; kṛṣṇa-pāya-at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; tabe-but; ye-that; kari-I do; krandana-crying; sva-saubhāgya-My own fortune; prakhyāpana-demonstration; kari-I do; ihā-this; jāniha-know; niścaya-certainly.

TRANSLATION

”Actually, My love for Kṛṣṇa is far, far away. Whatever I do is actually false. When you see Me cry, I am simply exhibiting My great fortune. Please try to understand this beyond a doubt.

TEXT 47

yāte vaṁśī-dhvani-sukha, nā dekhi' se cāṅda mukha, yadyapi nāhika 'ālambana'
nija-dehe kari prīti, kevala kāmera rīti, prāṇa-kīṭera kariye dhāraṇa

SYNONYMS

yāte-in which; vaṁśī-dhvani-sukha-the happiness of hearing the playing of the flute; nā dekhi'-not seeing; se-that; cāṅda mukha-moonlike face; yadyapi-although; nāhika-there is not; 'ālambana'-the meeting of the lover and beloved; nija-own; dehe-in the body; kari-I do; prīti-affection; kevala-only; kāmera-of lust; rīti-the way; prāṇa-of life; kīṭera-of the fly; kariye-I do; dhāraṇa-continuing.

TRANSLATION

"Even though I do not see the moonlike face of Kṛṣṇa playing on His flute and although there is no possibility of My meeting Him, still I take care of My own body. That is the way of lust. In this way, I maintain My flylike life.

PURPORT

In this connection, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that the lovable Supreme Lord is the supreme shelter. The Lord is the supreme subject, and the devotees are the object. The coming together of a subject and object is called ālambana. The object hears, and the subject plays the flute. That the object cannot see the moonlike face of Kṛṣṇa and has no eagerness to see Him is the sign of being without ālambana. Externally imagining such a thing simply satisfies one's lusty desires, and thus one lives without purpose.

sei premā–amṛtera sindhu nirmala se anurāge, nā lukāya anya dāge, śukla-vastre yaiche masī-bindu

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-premā-love of Kṛṣṇa; su-nirmala-without material contamination; yena-exactly like; śuddha-gaṅgā-jala-the pure water of the Ganges; sei premā-that love; amṛtera sindhu-the ocean of nectar; nirmala-pure; se-that; anurāge-attraction; nā lukāya-does not conceal; anya-other; dāge-spot; śukla-vastre-on white cloth; yaiche-as; masī-bindu-a spot of ink.

TRANSLATION

"Love for Lord Kṛṣṇa is very pure, just like the waters of the Ganges. That love is an ocean of nectar. That pure attachment to Kṛṣṇa does not conceal any spot, which would appear just like a spot of ink on a white cloth.

PURPORT

Unalloyed love of Kṛṣṇa is just like a big sheet of white cloth. Absence of attachment is compared to a black spot on that white cloth. Just as the black spot is prominent, so the absence of love of Godhead is prominent on the platform of pure love of Godhead.

TEXT 49

śuddha-prema-sukha-sindhu, pāi tāra eka bindu, sei bindu jagat ḍubāya kahibāra yogya naya, tathāpi bāule kaya, kahile vā kebā pātiyāya

SYNONYMS

śuddha-prema-unalloyed love; sukha-sindhu-an ocean of happiness; pāi-if I get; tāra-of that; eka-one; bindu-drop; sei bindu-that drop; jagat-the whole world; ḍubāya-drowns; kahibāra-to speak; yogya naya-is not fit; tathāpi-still; bāule-a madman; kaya-speaks; kahile-if spoken; vā-or; kebā pātiyāya-who believes.

TRANSLATION

"Unalloyed love of Kṛṣṇa is like an ocean of happiness. If someone gets one drop of it, the whole world can drown in that drop. It is not befitting to express such love of Godhead, yet a madman must speak. However, even though he speaks, no one believes him."

TEXT 50

ei mata dine dine, svarūpa-rāmānanda-sane, nija-bhāva karena vidita bāhye viṣa-jvālā haya, bhitare ānanda-maya, ei mata-in this way; dine dine-day after day; svarūpa-Svarūpa Dāmodara; rāmānanda-Rāmānanda Rāya; sane-with; nija-own; bhāva-ecstasy; karena-makes; vidita-known; bāhye-externally; viṣa-jvālā haya-there is suffering from poisonous effects; bhitare-within; ānanda-maya-transcendental ecstasy; kṛṣṇa-premāra-of love of Kṛṣṇa; adbhuta-wonderful; carita-characteristic.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In this way, Lord Caitanya used to revel in ecstasy day after day and exhibit these ecstasies before Svarūpa and Rāmānanda Rāya. Externally there appeared severe tribulation, as if He were suffering from poisonous effects, but internally He was experiencing bliss. This is characteristic of transcendental love of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 51

ei premā-āsvādana, tapta-ikṣu-carvaṇa, mukha jvale, nā yāya tyajana sei premā yāṅra mane, tāra vikrama sei jāne, viṣāmṛte ekatra milana

SYNONYMS

ei-this; premā-love of Kṛṣṇa; āsvādana-tasting; tapta-hot; ikṣu-carvaṇa-chewing sugarcane; mukha jvale-the mouth burns; nā yāya tyajana-still not possible to give up; sei-that; premā-love of Godhead; yāṅra mane-in someone's mind; tāra-of that; vikrama-the power; sei jāne-he knows; viṣa-amṛte-poison and nectar; ekatra-in oneness; milana-meeting.

TRANSLATION

If one tastes such love of Godhead, he can compare it to hot sugarcane. When one chews hot sugarcane, his mouth burns, yet he cannot give it up. Similarly, if one has but a little love of Godhead, he can perceive its powerful effects. It can only be compared to poison and nectar mixed together.

SYNONYMS

pīḍābhiḥ-by the sufferings; nava-fresh; kāla-kūṭa-of poison; kaṭutā-of the severity; garvasya-of pride; nirvāsanaḥ-banishment; nisyandena-by pouring down; mudām-happiness; sudhā-of nectar; madhurimā-of the sweetness; ahaṅkāra-the pride; saṅkocanaḥ-minimizing; premā-love; sundari-beautiful friend; nanda-nandana-paraḥ-fixed upon the son of Mahārāja Nanda; jāgarti-develops; yasya-of whom; antare-in the heart; jñāyante-are perceived; sphuṭam-explicitly; asya-of that; vakra-crooked; madhurāḥ-and sweet; tena-by him; eva-alone; vikrāntayaḥ-the influences.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu spoke, " 'My dear beautiful friend, if one develops love of Godhead, love of Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja, all the bitter and sweet influences of this love will manifest in one's heart. Such love of Godhead acts in two ways. The poisonous effects of love of Godhead defeat the severe and fresh poison of the serpent. Yet there is simultaneously transcendental bliss, which pours down and defeats the pride of nectar and diminishes its value. In other words, love of Kṛṣṇa is so powerful that it simultaneously defeats the poisonous effects of a snake, as well as the happiness derived from pouring nectar on one's head. It is perceived as doubly effective, simultaneously poisonous and nectarean.' "

PURPORT

This verse is spoken by Paurṇamāsī to Nāndīmukhī in the Vidagdha-mādhava (2.18), by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TEXT 53

SYNONYMS

ye kāle-at that time when; dekhe-He sees; jagannātha-Lord Jagannātha; śrī-rāma-Balarāma; subhadrā-Subhadrā; sātha-with; tabe-at that time; jāne-knows; āilāma-I have come; kurukṣetra-to the pilgrimage site known as Kurukṣetra; sa-phala-successful; haila-has become; jīvana-life; dekhiluṅ-I have seen; padma-locana-the lotus eyes; juḍāila-pacified; tanu-body; mana-mind; netra-eyes.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would see Jagannātha along with Balarāma and Subhadrā, He would immediately think that He had reached Kurukṣetra, where all of them had come. He would think that His life was successful because He had seen the lotus-eyed one, whom, if seen, pacifies the body, mind and eyes.

SYNONYMS

garuḍera-Garuḍa; sannidhāne-near; rahi'-staying; kare-does; daraśane-seeing; se ānandera-of that bliss; ki-what; kahiba-I shall say; ba'le-on the strength; garuḍa-of the statue of Garuḍa; stambhera-of the column; tale-underneath; āche-there is; eka-one; nimna-low; khāle-ditch; se khāla-that ditch; bharila-became filled; aśru-jale-with the water of tears.

TRANSLATION

Staying near the Garuḍa-stambha, the Lord would look upon Lord Jagannātha. What can be said about the strength of that love? On the ground beneath the column of the Garuḍa-stambha was a deep ditch, and that ditch was filled with the water of His tears.

PURPORT

In front of the temple of Jagannātha is a column on which the statue of Garuḍa is situated. It is called the Garuḍa-stambha. At the base of that column is a ditch, and that ditch was filled with the tears of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

tāhāṅ haite-from there; ghare āsi'-coming back home; māṭīra-the ground; upare-upon; vasi'-sitting; nakhe-by the nails; kare-does; pṛthivī-on the surface of the earth; likhana-marking; hā-hā-alas; kāhāṅ-where is; vṛndāvana-Vṛndāvana; kāhāṅ-where; gopa-indra-nandana-the son of the King of the cowherd men; kāhāṅ-where; sei-that; vaṁśī-vadana-the person with the flute.

TRANSLATION

When coming from the Jagannātha temple to return to His house, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to sit on the ground and mark it with His nails. At such times He would be greatly morose and would cry, "Alas, where is Vṛndāvana? Where is Kṛṣṇa, the son of the King of the cowherd men? Where is that person who plays the flute?"

SYNONYMS

kāhāṅ-where; se-that; tri-bhaṅga-ṭhāma-figure curved in three places; kāhāṅ-where; sei-that; veṇu-gāna-sweet song of the flute; kāhāṅ-where; sei-that; yamunā-pulina-bank of the Yamunā River; kāhāṅ-where; se-that; rāsa-vilāsa-the rāsa dance; kāhāṅ-where; nṛtya-gīta-hāsa-dancing, music and laughing; kāhāṅ-where; prabhu-My Lord; madana-mohana-the enchanter of Madana (Cupid).

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to lament by saying, "Where is Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose form is curved in three places? Where is the sweet song of His flute, and where is the bank of the Yamunā? Where is the rāsa dance? Where is that dancing, singing, and laughing? Where is My Lord, Madana-mohana, the enchanter of Cupid?"

SYNONYMS

uṭhila-arose; nānā-various; bhāva-āvega-forces of emotion; mane-in the mind; haila-there was; udvega-anxiety; kṣaṇa-mātra-even for a moment; nāre-not able; goṅāite-to pass; prabala-powerful; viraha-anale-in the fire of separation; dhairya-patience; haila-became; ṭalamale-tottering; nānā-various; śloka-verses; lāgilā-began; paḍite-to recite.

TRANSLATION

In this way various ecstatic emotions evolved, and the Lord's mind filled with anxiety. He could not escape even for a moment. In this way, because of fierce feelings of separation, His patience began to totter, and He began to recite various verses.

amūni-all those; adhanyāni-inauspicious; dina-antarāṇi-other days; hare-O My Lord; tvat-of You; ālokanam-seeing; antareṇa-without; anātha-bandho-O friend of the helpless; karuṇā-eka-sindho-O only ocean of mercy; hā hanta-alas; hā hanta-alas; katham-how; nayāmi-shall I pass.

TRANSLATION

" 'O My Lord, O Supreme Personality of Godhead, O friend of the helpless! You are the only ocean of mercy! Because I have not met You, My inauspicious days and nights have become unbearable. I do not know how I shall pass the time.'

PURPORT

This is a verse from Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta (41), by Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura.

TEXT 59

tomāra darśana-vine, adhanya e rātri-dine, tomāra-Your; darśana-audience; vine-without; adhanya-inauspicious; e-this; rātri-dine-night and day; ei kāla-this time; nā yāya-does not go; kāṭana-passing; tumi-You; anāthera bandhu-friend of the helpless; apāra-unlimited; karuṇā-sindhu-ocean of mercy; kṛpā kari'-showing mercy; deha-kindly give; daraśana-audience.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"All these inauspicious days and nights are not passing, for I have not met You. It is difficult to know how to pass all this time. But You are the friend of the helpless and an ocean of mercy. Kindly give Me Your audience, for I am in a precarious position."

TEXT 60

SYNONYMS

uṭhila-arose; bhāva-cāpala-restlessness of ecstatic emotion; mana-mind; ha-ila-became; cañcala-agitated; bhāvera-of ecstatic emotion; gati-the course; bujhana-understanding; nā yāya-not possible; adarśane-without seeing; poḍe-burns; mana-the mind; kemane-how; pāba-I shall get; daraśana-audience; kṛṣṇa-ṭhāñi-from Kṛṣṇa; puchena-inquires; upāya-the means.

TRANSLATION

In this way, the Lord's restlessness was awakened by ecstatic feelings, and His mind became agitated. No one could understand what course such ecstasy would take. Because Lord Caitanya could not meet the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, His mind burned. He began to ask Kṛṣṇa of the means by which He could reach Him.

TRANSLATION

" 'O Kṛṣṇa, O flute-player, the sweetness of Your early age is wonderful within these three worlds. You know My unsteadiness, and I know Yours. No one else knows about this. I want to see Your beautiful attractive face somewhere in a solitary place, but how can this be accomplished?'

SYNONYMS

nānā-various; bhāvera-of ecstasies; prābalya-the force; haila-there was; sandhi-meeting; śābalya-contradiction; bhāve-bhāve-between ecstasies; haila-there was; mahā-raṇa-a great fight; autsukya-eagerness; cāpalya-impotence; dainya-humility; roṣa-amarṣa-anger and impatience; ādi-all these; sainya-soldiers; prema-unmāda-madness in love; sabāra-of all; kāraṇa-the cause.

TRANSLATION

Because of the various kinds of ecstasy, contradictory states of mind occurred, and this resulted in a great fight between different types of ecstasy. Anxiety, impotence, humility, anger and impatience were all like soldiers fighting, and the madness of love of Godhead was the cause.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu it is stated that when similar ecstasies from separate causes meet, they are called svarūpa-sandhi. When opposing elements meet, whether they arise from a common cause or different causes, their conjunction is called bhinna-rūpa-sandhi, the meeting of contradictory ecstasies. The simultaneous joining of different ecstasies-fear and happiness, regret and happiness-is called meeting (sandhi). The word śābalya refers to different types of ecstatic symptoms combined together, like pride, despondency, humility, remembrance, doubt, impatience caused by insult, fear, disappointment, patience and eagerness. The friction that occurs when these combine is called śābalya. Similarly, when the desire to see the object is very prominent, or when one is unable to tolerate any delay in seeing the desired object, the incapability is called autsukya, or eagerness. If such eagerness is present, one's mouth dries up and one becomes restless. One also becomes full of anxiety, and hard breathing and patience are observed. Similarly, the lightness of heart caused by strong attachment and strong agitation of the mind is called impotence (cāpalya). Failure of judgment, misuse of words, and obstinate activities devoid of anxiety are observed. Similarly, when one becomes too angry at the other party, offensive and abominable speech occurs, and this anger is called roṣa. When one becomes impatient due to being scolded or insulted, the resultant state of mind is called amarṣa. In this state of mind, one perspires, acquires a headache, fades in bodily color and experiences anxiety and an urge to search out the remedy. The bearing of a grudge, aversion and chastisement are all visible symptoms.

SYNONYMS

matta-gaja-mad elephant; bhāva-gaṇa-symptoms of ecstasy; prabhura-of the Lord; deha-body; ikṣu-vana-sugarcane forest; gaja-yuddhe-in the fight of the elephants; vanera-of the forest; dalana-trampling; prabhura-of the Lord; haila-was; divya-unmāda-transcendental madness; tanu-manera-of the mind and body; avasāda-despondency; bhāva-āveśe-on account of absorption in ecstasy; kare-does; sambodhana-addressing.

TRANSLATION

The body of the Lord was just like a field of sugarcane into which the mad elephants of ecstasy entered. There was a fight amongst the elephants, and in the process the entire field of sugarcane was destroyed. Thus transcendental madness was awakened in the body of the Lord, and He experienced despondency in mind and body. In this ecstatic condition, He began to speak as follows.

TEXT 65

unmādera lakṣaṇa, karāya kṛṣṇa-sphuraṇa, bhāvāveśe uṭhe praṇaya māna solluṇṭha-vacana-rīti, māna, garva, vyāja-stuti, kabhu nindā, kabhu vā sammāna

SYNONYMS

unmādera lakṣaṇa-the symptoms of madness; karāya-causes; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; sphuraṇa-impetus; bhāva-āveśe-in an ecstatic condition; uṭhe-awakens; praṇaya-love; māna-disdain; solluṇṭha-vacana-of disrespect by sweet words; rīti-the way; māna-honor; garva-pride; vyāja-stuti-indirect prayer; kabhu-sometimes; nindā-blasphemy; kabhu-sometimes; vā-or; sammāna-honor.

TRANSLATION

The symptoms of madness served as an impetus for remembering Kṛṣṇa. The mood of ecstasy awoke love, disdain, defamation by words, pride, honor and indirect prayer. Thus Śrī Kṛṣṇa was sometimes blasphemed and sometimes honored.

PURPORT

The word unmāda is explained in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu as extreme joy, misfortune and bewilderment in the heart due to separation. Symptoms of unmāda are laughing like a madman, dancing, singing, performing ineffectual activities, talking nonsense, running, shouting and sometimes working in contradictory ways. The word praṇaya is explained thus: When there is a possibility of receiving direct honor but it is avoided, that love is called praṇaya. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, in his Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi, explains the word māna thus: When the lover feels novel sweetness by exchanging hearty loving words but wishes to hide his feelings by crooked means, māna is experienced.

TRANSLATION

”My dear Lord, You are the master and the life and soul of Vṛndāvana. Kindly arrange for the deliverance of Vṛndāvana. We have no leisure hours away from our many activities. Actually, You are My enjoyer. You have appeared just to give Me happiness, and this is one of Your expert activities.

PURPORT

The word vaidagdhya means that one is very expert, learned, humorous, cunning, beautiful and expert in manifesting caricatures.

SYNONYMS

stambha-being stunned; kampa-trembling; prasveda-perspiration; vaivarṇya-fading away of the color; aśru-tears; svara-bheda-choking of the voice; deha-body; haila-was; pulake-in joy; vyāpita-pervaded; hāse-laughs; kānde-cries; nāce-dances; gāya-sings; uṭhi’-getting up; iti uti-here and there; dhāya-runs; kṣaṇe-sometimes; bhūme-on the ground; paḍiyā-falling down; mūrcchita-unconscious.

TRANSLATION

There were different transformations of the body of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu: being stunned, trembling, perspiring, fading away of color, weeping, and choking of the voice. In this way His whole body was pervaded by transcendental joy. As a result, sometimes Caitanya Mahāprabhu would laugh, sometimes cry, sometimes dance and sometimes sing. Sometimes He would get up and run here and there, and sometimes fall on the ground and lose consciousness.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, eight kinds of transcendental change taking place in the body are described. Stambha, being stunned, refers to the mind’s becoming transcendentally absorbed. In that state, the peaceful mind is placed on the life air, and different bodily transformations are manifest. These symptoms are visible in the body of an advanced devotee. When life becomes almost inactive, it is called ”stunned.” The emotions resulting from this condition are joy, fear, astonishment, moroseness and anger. In this condition the power of speech is lost, and there is no movement in the hands and legs. Otherwise, being stunned is a mental condition. Many other symptoms are visible on the entire body in the beginning. These are very subtle, but gradually they become very apparent. When one cannot speak, naturally one’s active senses are arrested, and the knowledge-acquiring senses are rendered inoperative. Kampa, trembling of the body, is mentioned in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu as a result of a special kind of fear, anger and joy. This is called vepathu, or kampa. When the body begins to perspire because of joy, fear and anger combined, this is called sveda. Vaivarṇya is described as a change in the bodily color. It is caused by a combination of moroseness, anger and fear. When these emotions are experienced, the complexion turns pale and the body becomes lean and thin. Aśru is explained in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu as a combination of joy, anger and moroseness that causes water to flow from the eyes without effort. When there is joy and there are tears in the eyes, the temperature of the tears is cold, but when there is anger, the tears are hot. In both cases, the eyes are restless, the eyeballs are red and there is itching. These are all symptoms of aśru. When there is a combination of moroseness, astonishment, anger, joy and fear, there is a choking in the voice. This choking is called gadgada. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu refers to gadgada-ruddhayā girā, or "a faltering voice." In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, pulaka is described as joy, encouragement and fear. When these combine, the hairs on the body stand on end, and this bodily state is called pulaka.

kahe–ei āilā mahāśaya kṛṣṇera mādhurī-guṇe, nānā bhrama haya mane, śloka paḍi' karaye niścaya

SYNONYMS

mūrcchāya-in the swoon; haila-there was; sākṣātkāra-direct meeting; uṭhi'-getting up; kare-does; hu-huṅ-kāra-tumultuous sound; kahe-says; ei-thus; āilā-He has come; mahā-āśaya-the great personality; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; mādhurī-sweetness; guṇe-by qualities; nānā-various; bhrama-mistakes; haya-are; mane-in the mind; śloka-the verse; paḍi'-reciting; karaye-does; niścaya-ascertainment.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was thus unconscious, He happened to meet the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Consequently He got up and immediately made a tumultuous sound, very loudly declaring, "Now Kṛṣṇa, the great personality, is present." In this way, because of Kṛṣṇa's sweet qualities, Caitanya Mahāprabhu made different types of mistakes in His mind. Thus by reciting the following verse, He ascertained the presence of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 74

māraḥ svayaṁ nu madhura-dyuti-maṇḍalaṁ nu mādhuryam eva nu mano-nayanāmṛtaṁ nu veṇī-mṛjo nu mama jīvita-vallabho nu

SYNONYMS

māraḥ-Cupid; svayam-personally; nu-whether; madhura-sweet; dyuti-of effulgence; maṇḍalam-encirclement; nu-whether; mādhuryam-sweetness; eva-even; nu-certainly; manaḥ-nayana-amṛtam-nectar for the mind and eyes; nu-whether; veṇī-mṛjaḥ-loosening of the hair; nu-whether; mama-My; jīvita-vallabhaḥ-the pleasure of the life and soul; nu-whether; kṛṣṇaḥ-Lord Kṛṣṇa; ayam-this; abhyudayate-manifests; mama-My; locanāya-for the eyes.

TRANSLATION

In the attitude of Rādhārāṇī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu addressed the gopīs, " 'My dear friends, where is that Kṛṣṇa, Cupid personified, who has the effulgence of a kadamba flower, who is sweetness itself, the nectar of My eyes and mind, He who loosens the hair of the gopīs, who is the supreme source of transcendental bliss and My life and soul? Has He come before My eyes again?' "

PURPORT

This is another verse from the Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta (68).

TEXT 75

kibā ei sākṣāt kāma, dyuti-bimba mūrtimān, ki mādhurya svayaṁ mūrtimanta kibā mano-netrotsava, kibā prāṇa-vallabha, satya kṛṣṇa āilā netrānanda

SYNONYMS

kibā-whether; ei-this; sākṣāt-directly; kāma-Cupid; dyuti-bimba-reflection of the effulgence; mūrtimān-personified; ki-whether; mādhurya-sweetness; svayam-personally; mūrtimanta-personified; kibā-whether; manaḥ-netra-utsava-festival of the mind and eyes; kibā-whether; prāṇa-vallabha-My life and soul; satya-truly; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; āilā-has come; netra-ānanda-the pleasure of My eyes.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then would begin to talk like this: "Is Cupid personified present with the effulgence and reflection of the kadamba tree? Is He the same person, personified sweetness, who is the pleasure of My eyes and mind, who is My life and soul? Has Kṛṣṇa actually come before My eyes ?"

ei nṛtye prabhura kāla yāya

SYNONYMS

guru-the teacher; nānā-various; bhāva-gaṇa-ecstasies; śiṣya-disciples; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya; tanu-mana-body and mind; nānā-various; rīte-in ways; satata-always; nācāya-causes to dance; nirveda-despondency; viṣāda-moroseness; dainya-humility; cāpalya-restlessness; harṣa-joy; dhairya-endurance; manyu-anger; ei-this; nṛtye-in dancing; prabhura-of the Lord; kāla-time; yāya-passes.

TRANSLATION

As the spiritual master chastises the disciple and teaches him the art of devotional service, so all the ecstatic symptoms of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu-including despondency, moroseness, humility, restlessness, joy, endurance and anger-all instructed His body and mind. In this way, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed His time.

TEXT 77

caṇḍīdāsa, vidyāpati, rāyera nāṭaka-gīti, karṇāmṛta, śrī-gīta-govinda svarūpa-rāmānanda-sane, mahāprabhu rātri-dine, gāya, śune–parama ānanda

SYNONYMS

caṇḍīdāsa-the poet Caṇḍīdāsa; vidyāpati-the poet Vidyāpati; rāyera-of the poet Rāya Rāmānanda; nāṭaka-the Jagannātha-vallabha-nāṭaka; gīti-songs; karṇāmṛta-the Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta of Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura; śrī-gīta-govinda-the Gīta-govinda, by Jayadeva Gosvāmī; svarūpa-Svarūpa Dāmodara; rāmānanda-sane-with Rāya Rāmānanda; mahāprabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; rātri-dine-day and night; gāya-sings; śune-hears; parama ānanda-with great pleasure.

TRANSLATION

He also passed His time reading the books and singing the songs of Caṇḍīdāsa and Vidyāpati, and listening to quotations from the Jagannātha-vallabha-nāṭaka, Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta and Gīta-govinda. Thus in the association of Svarūpa Dāmodara and Rāya Rāmānanda, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed His days and nights chanting and hearing with great pleasure.

SYNONYMS

purīra-of Paramānanda Purī; vātsalya-paternal affection; mukhya-chiefly; rāmānandera-of Rāya Rāmānanda; śuddha-sakhya-pure fraternity; govinda-ādyera-of Govinda and others; śuddha-dāsya-rasa-the pure and unalloyed mellow of service; gadādhara-Gadādhara Paṇḍita; jagadānanda-Jagadānanda Paṇḍita; svarūpera-of Svarūpa Dāmodara; mukhya-chiefly; rasa-ānanda-tasting the pleasure of conjugal love; ei-these; cāri-in four; bhāve-ecstatic conditions; prabhu-the Lord; vaśa-became obliged.

TRANSLATION

Among His associates, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu enjoyed paternal loving affection from Paramānanda Purī, friendly affection with Rāmānanda Rāya, unalloyed service from Govinda and others, and humors of conjugal love with Gadādhara, Jagadānanda and Svarūpa Dāmodara. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu enjoyed all these four mellows, and thus He remained obliged to His devotees.

PURPORT

Paramānanda Purī is said to have been Uddhava in Vṛndāvana. His affections with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu were on the platform of paternal love. This was because Paramānanda Purī happened to be the Godbrother of the spiritual master of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Similarly, Rāmānanda Rāya, who is considered an incarnation of Arjuna and by some an incarnation of Viśākhādevī, enjoyed unalloyed fraternal love with the Lord. Unalloyed personal service was enjoyed by Govinda and others. In the presence of His most confidential devotees like Gadādhara Paṇḍita, Jagadānanda and Svarūpa Dāmodara, Caitanya Mahāprabhu enjoyed the ecstatic conditions of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī in Her conjugal relationship with Kṛṣṇa. Absorbed in these four transcendental mellows, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu resided in Jagannātha Purī, feeling very much obliged to His devotees.

SYNONYMS

līlā-śuka-Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura; martya-jana-a person of this world; tāṅra-of him; haya-there is; bhāva-udgama-manifestation of different ecstasies; īśvare-in the Supreme Lord; se-that; ki-what; ihā-here; vismaya-astonishing; tāhe-in that; mukhya-chief; rasa-āśraya-mellows,; ha-iyāchena-has become; mahā-āśaya-the great personality Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāte-therefore; haya-there is; sarva-bhāva-udaya-a manifestation of all ecstasies.

TRANSLATION

Līlāśuka [Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura] was an ordinary human being, yet he developed many ecstatic symptoms in his body. What, then, is so astonishing about these symptoms' being manifest in the body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead? In the ecstatic mood of conjugal love, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was on the highest platform; therefore, all the exuberant ecstasies were naturally visible in His body.

PURPORT

Līlāśuka is Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura Gosvāmī. He was a South Indian, a brāhmaṇa, and his former name was Śilhaṇa Miśra. When he was a householder, he became attracted to a prostitute named Cintāmaṇi, but eventually he took her advice and became renounced. Thus he wrote a book named Śānti-śataka, and later, by the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa and the Vaiṣṇavas, he became a great devotee. Thus he became famous as Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura Gosvāmī. On that elevated platform he wrote a book named Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta, which is very famous amongst Vaiṣṇavas. Since he exhibited so many ecstatic symptoms, people used to call him Līlāśuka.

SYNONYMS

pūrve-formerly; vraja-vilāse-in the pastimes of Vṛndāvana; yei tina-those three; abhilāṣe-in desires; yatneha-by great endeavor; āsvāda-taste; nā haila-there was not; śrī-rādhāra-of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; bhāva-sāra-the essence of the ecstasy; āpane-personally; kari'-making; aṅgīkāra-acceptance; sei-those; tina vastu-three subjects; āsvādila-tasted.

TRANSLATION

During His previous pastimes in Vṛndāvana, Lord Kṛṣṇa desired to enjoy the three different types of ecstasy, but despite great endeavor, He could not taste them. Such ecstasies are the monopoly of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. Therefore, in order to taste them, Śrī Kṛṣṇa accepted the position of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī in the form of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

SYNONYMS

āpane-personally; kari'-doing; āsvādane-tasting; śikhāila-He taught; bhakta-gaṇe-to His direct disciples; prema-cintāmaṇira-of the touchstone of love of Godhead; prabhu-the Lord; dhanī-capitalist; nāhi-does not; jāne-know; sthāna-asthāna-the proper place or improper place; yāre-to whomever; tāre-to him; kaila-made; dāna-charity; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dātā-śiromaṇi-the most munificent personality.

TRANSLATION

By personally tasting the mellows of love of Godhead, Caitanya Mahāprabhu taught His direct disciples the process. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is a wealthy capitalist possessing the touchstone of love of God. Not considering whether one is a proper or improper recipient, He gives His treasure to anyone and everyone. Thus He is the most munificent.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's capital is the touchstone of love of Godhead, and consequently He is a great owner of that transcendental treasure. After making unlimited amounts of gold, the touchstone remains the same. Similarly, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, although distributing love of Godhead unlimitedly, still remained the supreme owner of this transcendental opulence. His devotees, who learned it from Him, also had to distribute it munificently all over the world. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His confidential devotees, is also trying to distribute love of Godhead all over the world through the chanting of the holy names of the Lord-Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare.

TRANSLATION

No one, not even Lord Brahmā, can ascertain or even taste a drop of this confidential ocean of ecstasy, but Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, out of His causeless mercy, has distributed this love of Godhead all over the world. Thus there cannot be any incarnation more munificent than Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. There is no greater donor. Who can describe His transcendental qualities?

TRANSLATION

Such topics are not to be discussed freely because if they are, no one will understand them. Such are the wonderful pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Unto one who is able to understand, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has shown mercy by giving him the association of the servant of His own servant.

PURPORT

An ordinary person cannot understand the transcendental ecstasies in the mode of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. Unfit persons who utilize them are perverted into the sahajiyā, bāula and other sampradāyas. Thus the teachings are perverted. Even learned scholars in the academic field cannot understand the transcendental bliss and ecstasy exhibited by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His pure devotees. One must be fit to understand the purport of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's activities.

TRANSLATION

The pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are the topmost of jewels. They have been kept in the storehouse of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī, who has explained them to Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, who has repeated them to me. Whatever little I have heard from Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī I have described in this book, which is presented to all devotees.

PURPORT

All the activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu were noted by His personal secretary Svarūpa Dāmodara and repeated to Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, who memorized them. Whatever Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī heard is recorded in Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta. This is called the paramparā system, from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to Svarūpa Dāmodara to Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī to Kavirāja Gosvāmī. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī has distributed this information in his book Caitanya-caritāmṛta. In other words, Caitanya-caritāmṛta is the essence of the instruction given through the paramparā system of the disciplic succession stemming from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

If one says that Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta is full of Sanskrit verses and therefore not understandable by a common man, I reply that what I have described are the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and that for me to satisfy everyone is not possible.

PURPORT

Śrīla Kavirāja Gosvāmī and one who follows in his footsteps do not have to cater to the public. Their business is simply to satisfy the previous ācāryas and describe the pastimes of the Lord. One who is able to understand can relish this exalted transcendental literature, which is actually not meant for ordinary persons like scholars and literary men. Generally, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes recorded in Caitanya-caritāmṛta are studied in universities and scholastic circles from a literary and historical point of view, but actually Caitanya-caritāmṛta is not a subject matter for research workers or literary scholars. It is simply meant for those devotees who have dedicated their lives to the service of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

nāhi kāhāṅ savirodha, nāhi kāhāṅ anurodha, sahaja vastu kari vivaraṇa yadi haya rāgoddeśa, tāhāṅ haye āveśa, sahaja vastu nā yāya likhana

SYNONYMS

nāhi-there is not; kāhāṅ-anywhere; sa-virodha-opposing element; nāhi-there is not; kāhāṅ-anywhere; anurodha-acceptance of someone's opinion; sahaja-simple; vastu-substance; kari-I do; vivaraṇa-description; yadi-if; haya-there is; rāga-uddeśa-someone's attraction or obstruction; tāhāṅ-there; haye-becoming; āveśa-involved; sahaja-simple; vastu-substance; nā yāya-is not possible; likhana-the writing.

TRANSLATION

In this Caitanya-caritāmṛta there is no contradictory conclusion, nor is anyone else's opinion accepted. I have written this book to describe the simple substance as I have heard it from superiors. If I become involved in someone's likes and dislikes, I cannot possibly write the simple truth.

PURPORT

The simplest thing for human beings is to follow their predecessors. Judgment according to mundane senses is not a very easy process. Whatever is awakened by attachment to one's predecessor is the way of devotional service as indicated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The author says, however, that he cannot consider the opinions of those who become attracted or repelled by such things, because one cannot write impartially in that way. In other words, the author is stating that he did not inject personal opinion in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta. He has simply described his spontaneous understanding from superiors. If he had been carried away by someone's likes and dislikes, he could not have written of such a sublime subject matter in such an easy way. The actual facts are understandable to real devotees. When these facts are recorded, they are very congenial to the devotees, but one who is not a devotee cannot understand. Such is the subject matter for realization. Mundane scholarship and its concomitant attachments and detachments cannot arouse spontaneous love of Godhead. Such love cannot be described by a mundane scholar.

SYNONYMS

yebā-whoever; nāhi-does not; bujhe-understand; keha-someone; śunite śunite-hearing and hearing; seha-he; ki-what; adbhuta-wonderful; caitanya-carita-pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛṣṇe-unto Kṛṣṇa; upajibe-will develop; prīti-love; jānibe-he will understand; rasera-of transcendental mellows; rīti-the ways; śunilei-simply by hearing; baḍa-great; haya-there is; hita-benefit.

TRANSLATION

If one does not understand in the beginning but continues to hear again and again, the wonderful effects of Lord Caitanya's pastimes will bring love for Kṛṣṇa. Gradually one will come to understand the loving affairs between Kṛṣṇa and the gopīs and other associates of Vṛndāvana. Everyone is advised to continue to hear over and over again in order to greatly benefit.

SYNONYMS

bhāgavata-Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; śloka-maya-full of Sanskrit verses; ṭīkā-commentaries; tāra-of that; saṁskṛta-Sanskrit language; haya-there are; tabu-still; kaiche-how; bujhe-understands; tri-bhuvana-the whole world; ihāṅ-in this; śloka-verses; dui cāri-a few; tāra-of them; vyākhyā-explanation; bhāṣā-in simple language; kari-I do; kene-why; nā-not; bujhibe-will understand; sarva-jana-all people.

TRANSLATION

In reply to those critics who say that Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta is full of Sanskrit verses, it can be said that Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is also full of Sanskrit verses, as are the commentaries on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Nonetheless, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam can be understood by everyone, as well as by advanced devotees who study the Sanskrit commentaries. Why, then, will people not understand the Caitanya-caritāmṛta? There are only a few Sanskrit verses, and these have been explained in the Bengali vernacular. What is the difficulty in understanding?

SYNONYMS

śeṣa-līlāra-of the pastimes at the end; sūtra-gaṇa-the synopsis; kailuṅ-I have done; kichu-some; vivaraṇa-description; ihāṅ-here; vistārite-to expand more and more; citta haya-there is a desire; thāke-remains; yadi-if; āyuḥ-śeṣa-the end of life; vistāriba-I shall describe; līlā-pastimes; śeṣa-at the end; yadi-if; mahāprabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛpā-mercy; haya-there is.

TRANSLATION

I have already given a synopsis of all the facts and figures of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's last pastimes, and I have a desire to describe them elaborately. If I remain longer and am fortunate enough to receive the mercy of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, I shall try to describe them again more elaborately.

SYNONYMS

āmi-I; vṛddha-old man; jarā-ātura-disturbed by invalidity; likhite-to write; kāṅpaye-trembles; kara-the hand; mane-in the mind; kichu-any; smaraṇa-remembrance; nā haya-there is not; nā dekhiye-I cannot see; nayane-by the eyes; nā śuniye-I cannot hear; śravaṇe-with the ears; tabu-still; likhi'-writing; e-this; baḍa vismaya-a great wonder.

TRANSLATION

I have now become too old and disturbed by invalidity. While I write, my hands tremble. I cannot remember anything, nor can I see or hear properly. Still I write, and this is a great wonder.

SYNONYMS

ei antya-līlā-sāra-the essence of the antya-līlā (Lord Caitanya's pastimes at the end); sūtra-madhye-in the form of a synopsis; vistāra-expansion; kari'-doing; kichu-something; kariluṅ varṇana-have described; ihā-madhye-in the meantime; mari-I die; yabe-when; varṇite-to describe; nā pāri-not able; tabe-then; ei līlā-these pastimes; bhakta-gaṇa-dhana-the treasure of the devotees.

TRANSLATION

In this chapter I have to some extent described the essence of the pastimes of Lord Caitanya at the end. If I die in the meantime and cannot describe them in detail, at least the devotees will have this transcendental treasure.

TEXT 92

SYNONYMS

saṅkṣepe-in brief; ei sūtra-these notes; kaila-I have made; yei-whatever; ihāṅ-in this; nā likhila-I could not write; āge-in the future; tāhā-that; kariba-I shall make; vistāra-expansion; yadi-if; tata-so many; dina-days; jiye-I live; mahāprabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛpā-the mercy; haye-there is; icchā bhari'-satisfying the desire; kariba-I shall do; vicāra-consideration.

TRANSLATION

In this chapter I have briefly described the antya-līlā. Whatever I have not described I shall describe extensively in the future. If by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's mercy I live for so many days that I can fulfill my desires, I will give full consideration to these pastimes.

TRANSLATION

I worship herewith the lotus feet of all kinds of devotees, both advanced and neophyte. I request all of them to be satisfied with me. I am faultless because I have written herein whatever I have understood from Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and Rūpa and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmīs. I have neither added to nor subtracted from their version.

PURPORT

According to Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, there are three kinds of devotees, known as bhajana-vijña (experts in devotional service), bhajana-śīla (devotees engaged in devotional service), and kṛṣṇa-nāme dīkṣita kṛṣṇa-nāma-kārī (initiated devotees engaged in chanting). The author of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta begs the mercy of all these devotees and asks them to be pleased with him. He says, "Let the neophyte devotees-the devotees who are very expert in arguing though they have no sense of advanced devotional service, who think themselves very advanced because they imitate some smārta-brāhmaṇa-let such devotees not be displeased with me, thinking that I have committed errors in this regard. I beg their pardon with great humility, but I am submitting that I personally have no desire to add or subtract anything. I have only written what I have heard in the disciplic succession because I am dedicated to the lotus feet of previous ācāryas like Svarūpa Dāmodara, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī and Rūpa Gosvāmī. I have only written what I have learned from them."

TRANSLATION

According to the paramparā system, I wish to take the dust from the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Nityānanda Prabhu, Advaita Prabhu, and all the associates of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu like Svarūpa Dāmodara, Rūpa Gosvāmī, Sanātana Gosvāmī and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī. I wish to take the dust of their lotus feet upon my head. In this way I wish to be blessed with their mercy.

TRANSLATION

Receiving orders from the above authorities and the Vaiṣṇavas of Vṛndāvana, especially from Haridāsa, the priest of Govindajī, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, have tried to describe one small particle of one drop of one wave of the ocean of the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Second Chapter, describing the ecstatic manifestations of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

18.5.3 Chapter 3

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's Stay at the House of Advaita Ācārya

In his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives the following summary of the Third Chapter. After accepting the sannyāsa order at Katwa, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu traveled continuously for three days in Rāḍha-deśa and, by the trick of Nityānanda Prabhu, eventually came to the western side of Śāntipura. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was induced to believe that the river Ganges was the Yamunā. When He was worshiping the sacred river, Advaita Prabhu arrived in a boat. Advaita Prabhu asked Him to take His bath in the Ganges and took Him to His (Advaita's) house. There all the Navadvīpa devotees, along with mother Śacīdevī, came to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This house was located at Śāntipura. Mother Śacīdevī cooked for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu, and at that time there were many joking exchanges between Advaita Prabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu. In the evening there was a mass saṅkīrtana at the house of Advaita Prabhu, and mother Śacīdevī gave Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu permission to leave. She requested Him to make Jagannātha Purī, Nīlācala, His headquarters. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu granted His mother's request and, followed by Nityānanda, Mukunda, Jagadānanda and Dāmodara, left Śāntipura. Bidding farewell to mother Śacīdevī, they all proceeded toward Jagannātha Purī, following the path of Chatrabhoga.

TRANSLATION

After accepting the sannyāsa order of life, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, out of intense love for Kṛṣṇa, wanted to go to Vṛndāvana, but apparently by mistake He wandered in the Rāḍha-deśa. Later He arrived at Śāntipura and enjoyed Himself there with His devotees. I offer my respectful obeisances to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

At the end of His twenty-fourth year, in the month of Māgha, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the sannyāsa order during the waxing period of the moon.

TEXT 4

sannyāsa kari' premāveśe calilā vṛndāvana rāḍha-deśe tina dina karilā bhramaṇa

SYNONYMS

sannyāsa kari'-after accepting the sannyāsa order; prema-āveśe-in intense love for Kṛṣṇa; calilā-proceeded; vṛndāvana-toward Vṛndāvana-dhāma; rāḍha-deśe-in the tract of land known as Rāḍha; tina dina-continuously for three days; karilā-did; bhramaṇa-wandering.

TRANSLATION

After accepting the sannyāsa order, Caitanya Mahāprabhu, out of intense love for Kṛṣṇa, started for Vṛndāvana. However, He mistakenly wandered about in a trance continuously for three days in the tract of land known as Rāḍha-deśa.

PURPORT

The word Rāḍha-deśa comes from the word rāṣṭra, or "state." From rāṣṭra the perverted word rāḍha has come. The part of Bengal on the western side of the Ganges is known as Rāḍha-deśa. Another name is Pauṇḍra-deśa or Peṅḍo-deśa. The word peṅḍo is a perverted form of the word pauṇḍra. It appears that the capital of Rāṣṭra-deśa was situated in that part of Bengal.

TEXT 5

SYNONYMS

ei śloka-this verse; paḍi'-reciting; prabhu-the Lord; bhāvera-of ecstasy; āveśe-in a condition; bhramite-wandering; pavitra-purified; kaila-did; saba rāḍha-deśe-all of the tract of land known as Rāḍha-deśa.

TRANSLATION

Passing through the tract of land known as Rāḍha-deśa, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu recited the following verse in ecstasy.

TEXT 6

etāṁ sa āsthāya parātma-niṣṭhām adhyāsitāṁ pūrvatamair mahadbhiḥ ahaṁ tariṣyāmi duranta-pāraṁ tamo mukundāṅghri-niṣevayaiva

SYNONYMS

etām-this; saḥ-such; āsthāya-being completely fixed in; para-ātma-niṣṭhām-devotion to the Supreme Person, Kṛṣṇa; adhyāsitām-worshiped; pūrva-tamaiḥ-by previous; mahadbhiḥ-ācāryas; aham-I; tariṣyāmi-shall cross over; duranta-pāram-the insurmountable; tamaḥ-the ocean of nescience; mukunda-aṅghri-of the lotus feet of Mukunda; niṣevayā-by worship; eva-certainly.

TRANSLATION

"[As a brāhmaṇa from Avantī-deśa said:] 'I shall cross over the insurmountable ocean of nescience by being firmly fixed in the service of the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. This was approved by the previous ācāryas, who were fixed in firm devotion to the Lord, Paramātmā, the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

PURPORT

In connection with this verse, which is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.23.57), Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that of the sixty-four items required for rendering devotional service, acceptance of the symbolic marks of sannyāsa is a regulative principle. If one accepts the sannyāsa order, his main business is to devote his life completely to the service of Mukunda, Kṛṣṇa. If one does not completely devote his mind and body to the service of the Lord, he does not actually become a sannyāsī. It is not simply a matter of changing dress. In Bhagavad-gītā (6.1) it is also stated, anāśritaḥ karma-phalaṁ kāryaṁ karma karoti yaḥ sa sannyāsī ca yogī ca: one who works devotedly for the satisfaction of Kṛṣṇa is a sannyāsī. The dress is not sannyāsa, but the attitude of service to Kṛṣṇa is.

The word parātma-niṣṭhā means being a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Parātmā, the Supreme Person, is Kṛṣṇa. Īśvaraḥ paramaḥ kṛṣṇaḥ sac-cid-ānanda-vigrahaḥ. Those who are completely dedicated to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa in service are actually sannyāsīs. As a matter of formality, the devotee accepts the sannyāsa dress as previous ācāryas did. He also accepts the three daṇḍas. Later Viṣṇusvāmī considered that accepting the dress of a tridaṇḍī was parātma-niṣṭhā. Therefore sincere devotees add another daṇḍa, the jīva-daṇḍa, to the three existing daṇḍas. The Vaiṣṇava sannyāsī is known as a tridaṇḍi-sannyāsī. The Māyāvādī sannyāsī accepts only one daṇḍa, not understanding the purpose of tri-daṇḍa. Later, many persons in the community of Śiva Svāmī gave up the ātma-niṣṭhā (devotional service) of the Lord and followed the path of Śaṅkarācārya. Instead of accepting 108 names, those in the Śiva Svāmī sampradāya follow the path of Śaṅkarācārya and accept the ten names of sannyāsa. Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the then-existing order of sannyāsa (namely eka-daṇḍa), He still recited a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam about the tridaṇḍa-sannyāsa accepted by the brāhmaṇa of Avantīpura. Indirectly He declared that within that eka-daṇḍa, one daṇḍa, four daṇḍas existed as one. Accepting ekadaṇḍa-sannyāsa without parātma-niṣṭhā (devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa) is not acceptable to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In addition, according to the exact regulative principles, one should add the jīva-daṇḍa to the tri-daṇḍa. These four daṇḍas, bound together as one, are symbolic of unalloyed devotional service to the Lord. Because the ekadaṇḍi-sannyāsīs of the Māyāvāda school are not devoted to the service of Kṛṣṇa, they try to merge into the Brahman effulgence, which is a marginal position between material and spiritual existence. They accept this impersonal position as liberation. Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, not knowing that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was a tridaṇḍī, think of Caitanya Mahāprabhu as an ekadaṇḍi-sannyāsī. This is due to their vivarta, bewilderment. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam there is no such thing as an ekadaṇḍi-sannyāsī; indeed, the tridandi-sannyāsī is accepted as the symbolic representation of the sannyāsa order. By citing this verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the sannyāsa order recommended in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. The Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, who are enamored of the external energy of the Lord, cannot understand the mind of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

To date, all the devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, following in His footsteps, accept the sannyāsa order and keep the sacred thread and tuft of unshaved hair. The ekadaṇḍi-sannyāsīs of the Māyāvādī school give up the sacred thread and do not keep any tuft of hair. Therefore they are unable to understand the purport of tridaṇḍa-sannyāsa, and as such they are not inclined to dedicate their lives to the service of Mukunda. They simply think of merging into the existence of Brahman because of their disgust with material existence. The ācāryas who advocate the daiva-varṇāśrama (the social order of cātur-varṇyam mentioned in the Bhagavad-gītā) do not accept the proposition of āsura-varṇāśrama, which maintains that the social order of varṇa is indicated by birth.

The most intimate devotee of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, namely Gadādhara Paṇḍita, accepted tridaṇḍa-sannyāsa and also accepted Mādhava Upādhyāya as his tridaṇḍi-sannyāsī disciple. It is said that from this Mādhavācārya the sampradāya known in western India as the Vallabhācārya sampradāya has begun. Śrīla Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, who is known as a smṛty-ācārya in the Gauḍīya-Vaiṣṇava-sampradāya, later accepted the tridaṇḍa-sannyāsa order from Tridaṇḍipāda Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī. Although acceptance of tridaṇḍa-sannyāsa is not distinctly mentioned in the Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇava literature, the first verse of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī's Upadeśāmṛta advocates that one should accept the tridaṇḍa-sannyāsa order by controlling the six forces:

vāco vegaṁ manasaḥ krodha-vegaṁ jihvā-vegam udaropastha-vegam etān vegān yo viṣaheta dhīraḥ sarvām apīmāṁ pṛthivīṁ sa śiṣyāt

”One who can control the forces of speech, mind, anger, belly, tongue and genitals is known as a gosvāmī and is competent to accept disciples all over the world.” The followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu never accepted the Māyāvāda order of sannyāsa, and for this they cannot be blamed. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted Śrīdhara Svāmī, who was a tridaṇḍi-sannyāsī, but the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, not understanding Śrīdhara Svāmī, sometimes think that Śrīdhara Svāmī belonged to the Māyāvāda ekadaṇḍa-sannyāsa community. Actually this was not the case.

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord said; sādhu-very much purified; ei-this; bhikṣura-of the mendicant; vacana-words; mukunda-Lord Kṛṣṇa; sevana-vrata-decision to serve; kaila-made; nirdhāraṇa-indication.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu approved the purport of this verse on account of the determination of the mendicant devotee to engage in the service of Lord Mukunda. He gave His approval of this verse, indicating that it was very good.

SYNONYMS

para-ātma-niṣṭhā-mātra-only for the determination to serve Kṛṣṇa; veṣa-dhāraṇa-changing the dress; mukunda-sevāya-by serving Mukunda; haya-there is; saṁsāra-tāraṇa-liberation from this materiai bondage.

TRANSLATION

The real purpose of accepting sannyāsa is to dedicate oneself to the service of Mukunda. By serving Mukunda, one can actually be liberated from the bondage of material existence.

PURPORT

In this connection, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the sannyāsa order and recommended the determination of the Avantīpura bhikṣu to engage in the service of Mukunda. He accepted the brāhmaṇa’s version due to his determination to serve Mukunda. The sannyāsī dress is actually an attraction for material formality. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not like such formality, but He wanted the essence of it-service to Mukunda. Such determination in any condition is parātma-niṣṭhā. That is required. The conclusion is that the sannyāsa order depends not on the dress but the determination to serve Mukunda.

TRANSLATION

"O river Yamunā, you are the blissful spiritual water that gives love to the son of Nanda Mahārāja. You are the same as the water of the spiritual world, for you can vanquish all our offenses and the sinful reactions incurred in life. You are the creator of all auspicious things for the world. O daughter of the sun-god, kindly purify us by your pious activities."

PURPORT

This verse is recorded in the Caitanya-candrodaya-nāṭaka (5.35), by Kavi-karṇapura.

TEXT 29

SYNONYMS

ācārya kahe-Ācārya replied; tumi yāhāṅ-wherever You are; sei-that; vṛndāvana-Vṛndāvana; mora bhāgye-by My great fortune; gaṅgā-tīre-on the bank of the Ganges; tomāra āgamana-Your appearance.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya disclosed the whole situation, telling Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, "Wherever You are, that is Vṛndāvana. Now it is My great fortune that You have come to the bank of the Ganges."

TEXT 34

prabhu kahe,–nityānanda āmāre vañcilā gaṅgāke āniyā more yamunā kahilā

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord replied; nityānanda-Lord Nityānanda; āmāre-Me; vañcilā-has cheated; gaṅgāke-to the bank of the Ganges; āniyā-bringing; more-Me; yamunā-the river Yamunā; kahilā-informed.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then said, "Nityānanda has cheated Me. He has brought Me to the bank of the Ganges and told Me that it was the Yamunā."

TEXT 35

ācārya kahe, mithyā nahe śrīpāda-vacana yamunāte snāna tumi karilā ekhana

SYNONYMS

ācārya kahe-Advaita Ācārya replied; mithyā nahe-this is not untrue; śrīpāda-vacana-the words of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu; yamunāte-in the river Yamunā; snāna-bathing; tumi-You; karilā-did; ekhana-just now.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accused Nityānanda of cheating Him, Śrīla Advaita Ācārya said, "Whatever Nityānanda Prabhu has told You is not false. You have indeed just now taken Your bath in the river Yamunā."

TEXT 36

gaṅgāya yamunā vahe hañā eka-dhāra paścime yamunā vahe, pūrve gaṅgā-dhāra

SYNONYMS

gaṅgāya-with the river Ganges; yamunā-the river Yamunā; vahe-flows; hañā-becoming; eka-dhāra-one stream; paścime-on the western side; yamunā-the river Yamunā; vahe-flows; pūrve-on the eastern side; gaṅgā-dhāra-the flow of the Ganges.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya then explained that at that spot both the Ganges and Yamunā flow together. On the western side was the Yamunā, and on the eastern side was the Ganges.

PURPORT

The Ganges and Yamunā mix at the confluence at Allahabad (Prayāga). The Yamunā flows from the western side and the Ganges from the eastern, and they merge. Since Caitanya Mahāprabhu bathed on the western side, He actually took His bath in the river Yamunā.

TEXT 37

paścima-dhāre yamunā vahe, tāhāṅ kaile snāna ārdra kaupīna chāḍi' śuṣka kara paridhāna paścima-dhāre-in the western flow; yamunā-the river Yamunā; vahe-flows; tāhāṅ-there; kaile-You did; snāna-bathing; ārdra-wet; kaupīna-underwear; chāḍi'-giving up; śuṣka-dry; kara-do; paridhāna-putting on.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya then suggested that since Caitanya Mahāprabhu had taken His bath in the river Yamunā and His underwear was now wet, the Lord should change His underwear for dry garments.

TEXT 38

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-saying this; naukāya caḍāñā-making Him board the small boat; nila-took; nija-ghara-to His own residence; pāda-prakṣālana-washing the feet; kaila-did; ānanda-antara-very happy within Himself.

TRANSLATION

Saying this, Śrī Advaita Ācārya took the Lord into the boat and brought the Lord to His residence. There Advaita Ācārya washed the feet of the Lord and was consequently very happy within.

TEXT 41

prathame pāka kariyāchena ācāryāṇī viṣṇu-samarpaṇa kaila ācārya āpani prathame-first; pāka-cooking; kariyāchena-performed; ācāryāṇī-the wife of Advaita Ācārya; viṣṇu-samarpaṇa-offering to Lord Viṣṇu; kaila-did; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; āpani-Himself.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

All the eatables were first cooked by the wife of Advaita Ācārya. Then Śrīla Advaita Ācārya personally offered everything to Lord Viṣṇu.

PURPORT

This is the ideal householder's life. The husband and wife live together, and the husband works very hard to secure paraphernalia for worshiping Lord Viṣṇu. The wife at home cooks a variety of foods for Lord Viṣṇu, and the husband offers it to the Deity. After that, ārati is performed, and the prasāda is distributed amongst family members and guests. According to the Vedic principles, there must always be a guest in a householder's house. In my childhood I have actually seen my father receive not less than four guests every day, and in those days my father's income was not very great. Nonetheless, there was no difficulty in offering prasāda to at least four guests every day. According to Vedic principles, a householder, before taking lunch, should go outside and shout very loudly to see if there is anyone without food. In this way he invites people to take prasāda. If someone comes, the householder offers him prasāda, and if there is not much left, he should offer his own portion to the guest. If no one responds to his call, the householder can accept his own lunch. Thus the householder's life is also a kind of austerity. Because of this, the householder's life is called the gṛhastha-āśrama. Although a person may live with his wife and children happily in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, he also observes the regulative principles followed in any temple. If there is no Kṛṣṇa consciousness, the householder's abode is called a gṛhamedhī's house. Householders in Kṛṣṇa consciousness are actually gṛhasthas-that is, those living in the āśrama with their families and children. Śrī Advaita Prabhu was an ideal gṛhastha, and His house was the ideal gṛhastha-āśrama.

TEXT 42

tina ṭhāñi bhoga bāḍāila sama kari' kṛṣṇera bhoga bāḍāila dhātu-pātropari

SYNONYMS

tina ṭhāñi-in three places; bhoga-cooked food; bāḍāila-distributed; sama-equal; kari'-making; kṛṣṇera bhoga-the food offered to Kṛṣṇa; bāḍāila-was arranged; dhātu-pātra upari-on a metal plate.

TRANSLATION

All the prepared food was divided into three equal parts. One part was arranged on a metal plate for offering to Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

The word bāḍāila, meaning "increased," is very significant in this verse. It is a sophisticated word used by the gṛhasthas in Bengal. Whenever food is prepared and we take away a portion, the food is actually decreased. But here it is the system to say bāḍāila, or "increased." If food is prepared for Kṛṣṇa and offered to Him and the Vaiṣṇavas, the stock is increased, never decreased.

TEXT 43

battiśā-āṭhiyā-kalāra āṅgaṭiyā pāte dui ṭhāñi bhoga bāḍāila bhāla mate

SYNONYMS

battiśā-āṭhiyā-producing thirty-two bunches; kalāra-of a banana tree; āṅgaṭiyā-undivided; pāte-on leaves; dui ṭhāñi-in two places; bhoga-the eatables; bāḍāila-arranged; bhāla mate-very nicely.

TRANSLATION

Of the three divisions, one was arranged on a metal plate, and the other two were arranged on plantain leaves. These leaves were not bifurcated, and they were taken from a banana tree that held at least thirty-two bunches of bananas. The two plates were filled very nicely with the kinds of food described below.

TEXT 44

madhye pīta-ghṛta-sikta śāly-annera stūpa

SYNONYMS

pañcāśa pañcāśa-fifty and fifty; ḍoṅgā-pots; vyañjane-with vegetables; pūriñā-filling; tina-three; bhogera-of eating places; āśe pāśe-all around; rākhila-kept; dhariñā-fixing.

TRANSLATION

All around the three eating places were a hundred pots filled with various kinds of vegetables.

TEXT 53

saghṛta-pāyasa nava-mṛt-kuṇḍikā bhariñā tina pātre ghanāvarta-dugdha rākheta dhariñā

SYNONYMS

sa-ghṛta-pāyasa-sweet rice mixed with ghee; nava-mṛt-kuṇḍikā-new earthen pots; bhariñā-filling; tina pātre-in three pots; ghana-āvarta-dugdha-finely condensed milk; rākheta-were kept; dhariñā-fixing.

TRANSLATION

Along with the various vegetables was sweet rice mixed with ghee. This was kept in new earthen pots. Earthen pots filled with highly condensed milk were placed in three places.

TEXT 54

dugdha-ciḍā-kalā āra dugdha-laklakī yateka karila' tāhā kahite nā śaki

SYNONYMS

dugdha-ciḍā-chipped rice made with milk; kalā-mixed with bananas; āra-and; dugdha-laklakī-a kind of squash known as lāu, boiled with milk; yateka-all that; karila'-was prepared; tāhā-that; kahite-to describe; nā-not; śaki-I am able.

TRANSLATION

Besides the other preparations, there were chipped rice made with milk and mixed with bananas, and also white squash boiled in milk. Indeed, it is not possible to describe all the preparations that were made.

TEXT 55

anna-vyañjana-upari-on top of the boiled rice and vegetables; dila-placed; tulasī-mañjarī-flowers of tulasī; tina-three; jala-pātre-waterpots; su-vāsita-scented; jala-water; bhari'-filling.

TRANSLATION

Upon the stack of boiled rice and all the vegetables were flowers of the tulasī trees. There were also pots filled with scented rosewater.

TEXT 57

tina śubhra-pīṭha, tāra upari vasana ei-rūpe sākṣāt kṛṣṇe karāila bhojana

SYNONYMS

tina-three; śubhra-pīṭha-white sitting places; tāra-of them; upari-on top; vasana-soft cloth; ei-rūpe-in this way; sākṣāt-directly; kṛṣṇe-unto Kṛṣṇa; karāila-made to do; bhojana-eating.

TRANSLATION

There were three sitting places where soft cloths were placed. Thus Lord Kṛṣṇa was offered all the food, and the Lord took it very pleasantly.

TEXT 58

āratira kāle dui prabhu bolāila prabhu-saṅge sabe āsi' ārati dekhila āratira kāle-during the time of ārati; dui prabhu-Lord Nityānanda and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bolāila-He called; prabhu-saṅge-with the Lords; sabe-all other people; āsi'-coming there; ārati-the ārati ceremony; dekhila-observed.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

It is the system, after offering food, to perform bhoga-ārati. Advaita Prabhu asked the two brothers, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu, to come see the ārati. The two Lords and all others present went to see the ārati ceremony.

TEXT 59

ārati kariyā kṛṣṇe karā'la śayana ācārya āsi' prabhure tabe kailā nivedana

SYNONYMS

ārati kariyā-after finishing the ārati; kṛṣṇe-Lord Kṛṣṇa; karā'la-made to do; śayana-lying down to rest; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; āsi'-coming; prabhure-unto Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tabe-then; kailā-made; nivedana-submission.

TRANSLATION

After ārati was performed for the Deities in the temple, Lord Kṛṣṇa was made to lie down to rest. Advaita Ācārya then came out to submit something to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 60

gṛhera bhitare prabhu karuna gamana dui bhāi āilā tabe karite bhojana

SYNONYMS

gṛhera bhitare-within the room; prabhu-Caitanya Mahāprabhu; karuna-kindly do; gamana-entering; dui bhāi-the two brothers, Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu; āilā-came; tabe-then; karite bhojana-to partake of the prasāda.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Advaita Prabhu said, "My dear Lords, kindly enter this room." The two brothers, Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu, then came forward to take the prasāda.

TEXT 61

mukunda, haridāsa,–dui prabhu bolāila yoḍa-hāte dui-jana kahite lāgila

SYNONYMS

mukunda-Mukunda; haridāsa-Haridāsa; dui prabhu-the two Lords; bolāila-called for; yoḍa-hāte-with folded hands; dui-jana-two persons; kahite lāgila-began to say.

TRANSLATION

When Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu went to accept the prasāda, They both called Mukunda and Haridāsa to come with Them. However, Mukunda and Haridāsa, both with folded hands, spoke as follows.

TEXT 62

mukunda kahe–mora kichu kṛtya nāhi sare pāche muñi prasāda pāmu, tumi yāha ghare mukunda kahe-Mukunda said; mora-of me; kichu-something; kṛtya-to perform; nāhi sare-not yet finished; pāche-later; muñi-I; prasāda-prasāda; pāmu-shall accept; tumi yāha ghare-You both kindly enter the room.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Mukunda was called for, he submitted, "My dear sir, I have something to do that is not yet finished. Later I shall accept the prasāda, so You two Prabhus should now please enter the room."

TEXT 63

haridāsa kahe–muñi pāpiṣṭha adhama bāhire eka muṣṭi pāche karimu bhojana haridāsa kahe-Haridāsa said; muñi-I; pāpiṣṭha-sinful; adhama-the lowest of men; bāhire-outside; eka-one; muṣṭi-palmful; pāche-later; karimu-I shall do; bhojana-eating.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Haridāsa Ṭhākura said, "I am the most sinful and lowest among men. Later I shall eat one palmful of prasāda while waiting outside."

PURPORT

Although the Hindus and Muslims lived together in a very friendly manner, still there were distinctions between them. The Muslims were considered yavanas, or low-born, and whenever a Muslim was invited, he would be fed outside of the house. Although personally called by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu to take prasāda with Them, still, out of great humility, Haridāsa Ṭhākura submitted, "I shall take the prasāda outside of the house." Although Haridāsa Ṭhākura was an exalted Vaiṣṇava accepted by Advaita Ācārya, Nityānanda Prabhu and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, nonetheless, in order not to disturb social tranquillity, he humbly kept himself in the position of a Muslim, outside the jurisdiction of the Hindu community. Therefore he proposed to take prasāda outside the house. Although he was in an exalted position and equal to other great Vaiṣṇavas, he considered himself a pāpiṣṭha, a most sinful man, and adhama, the lowest among men. Although a Vaiṣṇava may be very much advanced spiritually, he keeps himself externally humble and submissive.

TEXT 64

dui prabhu lañā ācārya gelā bhitara ghare prasāda dekhiyā prabhura ānanda antare

SYNONYMS

dui prabhu-the two prabhus (Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu); lañā-with; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; gelā-went; bhitara-within; ghare-the room; prasāda-the prasāda; dekhiyā-seeing; prabhura-of Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ānanda antare-was very pleased within Himself.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya took Lord Nityānanda Prabhu and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu within the room, and the two Lords saw the arrangement of the prasāda. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was especially very much pleased.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was pleased because He saw how nicely so many varieties of food were prepared for Kṛṣṇa. Actually all kinds of prasāda are prepared for Kṛṣṇa, not for the people, but the devotees partake of prasāda with great pleasure.

TEXT 65

aiche anna ye kṛṣṇake karāya bhojana janme janme śire dharoṅ tāṅhāra caraṇa aiche-in this way; anna-the eatables; ye-anyone who; kṛṣṇake-unto Kṛṣṇa; karāya-made to do; bhojana-eating; janme janme-birth after birth; śire-on My head; dharoṅ-I keep; tāṅhāra-his; caraṇa-lotus feet.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu approved of all the methods employed in cooking and offering food to Kṛṣṇa. Indeed, He was so pleased that He said, "Frankly, I will personally take the lotus feet of anyone who can offer Kṛṣṇa such nice food and place those lotus feet on My head birth after birth."

TEXT 66

prabhu jāne tina bhoga–kṛṣṇera naivedya ācāryera manaḥ-kathā nahe prabhura vedya prabhu jāne-the Lord knows; tina bhoga-three divisions of bhoga; kṛṣṇera naivedya-offerings to Lord Kṛṣṇa; ācāryera-of Advaita Ācārya; manaḥ-kathā-the intentions; nahe-not; prabhura-to the Lord; vedya-understandable.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu entered the room, He saw three divisions of food, and He knew that all of these were meant for Kṛṣṇa. However, He did not understand the intentions of Advaita Ācārya.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura states that one of these servings was offered in a metal dish and was meant for Kṛṣṇa, whereas the other two were placed on big banana leaves. The offering on the metal plate was personally offered by Advaita Ācārya to Kṛṣṇa. The other two servings, on banana leaves, were to be accepted by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lord Nityānanda. That was Advaita Ācārya's intention, but He did not disclose this to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Thus when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu saw the food offered in three places, He thought that all of it was meant for Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 67

prabhu bale–vaisa tine kariye bhojana ācārya kahe–āmi kariba pariveśana

SYNONYMS

prabhu bale-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; vaisa-sit down; tine-in the three places; kariye-do; bhojana-eating; ācārya kahe-Advaita Ācārya replied; āmi kariba pariveśana-I shall distribute.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "Let Us sit down in these three places, and We shall take prasāda." However, Advaita Ācārya said, "I shall distribute the prasāda."

TEXT 68

kon sthāne vasiba, āra āna dui pāta alpa kari' āni' tāhe deha vyañjana bhāta kon sthāne vasiba-where shall We sit down; āra-other; āna-bring; dui pāta-two leaves; alpa kari'-making a small quantity; āni'-bringing; tāhe-on that; deha-give; vyañjana-vegetables; bhāta-and boiled rice.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu thought that all three servings were meant for distribution; therefore He asked for another two banana leaves, saying, "Let Us have a very little quantity of vegetable and rice."

TEXT 69

ācārya kahe–vaisa doṅhe piṅḍira upare eta bali' hāte dhari' vasāila duṅhāre

SYNONYMS

ācārya kahe-Advaita Ācārya said; vaisa-sit down; doṅhe-You two; piṅḍira upare-on the planks of wood; eta bali'-saying this; hāte dhari'-catching Their hands; vasāila duṅhāre-sat the two Lords down.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya said, "Just sit down here on these seats." Catching Their hands, He sat Them both down.

TEXT 70

prabhu kahe–sannyāsīra bhakṣya nahe upakaraṇa ihā khāile kaiche haya indriya vāraṇa

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord said; sannyāsīra-by a sannyāsī; bhakṣya-to be eaten; nahe-this is not; upakaraṇa-varieties of food; ihā-this; khāile-if eating; kaiche-how; haya-there is; indriya-senses; vāraṇa-controlling.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "It is not proper for a sannyāsī to eat such a variety of foods. If he does, how can he control his senses?"

PURPORT

The word upakaraṇa indicates a variety of foods, such as dāl, vegetables and other varieties of possible dishes that one can eat very nicely with rice. It is not proper, however, for a sannyāsī to eat such palatable dishes. If he did so, he would not be able to control his senses. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not encourage sannyāsīs to eat very palatable dishes, for the whole Vaiṣṇava cult is vairāgya-vidyā, as renounced as possible. Caitanya Mahāprabhu also advised Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī not to eat very palatable dishes, wear very nice garments or talk on mundane subjects. These things are all prohibited for those in the renounced order. A devotee does not accept anything to eat that is not first offered to Kṛṣṇa. All the rich foods offered to Kṛṣṇa are given to the gṛhasthas, the householders. There are many nice things offered to Kṛṣṇa-garlands, bedsteads, nice ornaments, nice food and even nicely prepared pan, betel nuts-but a humble Vaiṣṇava, thinking his body material and nasty, does not accept such preparations for himself. He thinks that by accepting such things he will offend the lotus feet of the Lord. Those who are sahajiyās cannot understand what Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu meant when He asked Advaita Ācārya to bring two separate leaves and give a small quantity of the prasāda to Him.

TEXT 71

ācārya kahe–chāḍa tumi āpanāra curi āmi saba jāni tomāra sannyāsera bhāri-bhuri ācārya kahe-Advaita Ācārya replied; chāḍa-give up; tumi-You; āpanāra-of Yourself; curi-the concealment; āmi-I; saba-all; jāni-know; tomāra-of You; sannyāsera-of the acceptance of the renounced order; bhāri-bhuri-the confidential meaning.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not accept the food that had already been served, Advaita Ācārya said, "Please give up Your concealment. I know what You are, and I know the confidential meaning of Your accepting the sannyāsa order."

TEXT 72

bhojana karaha, chāḍa vacana-cāturī prabhu kahe–eta anna khāite nā pāri bhojana karaha-kindly accept this prasāda; chāḍa-give up; vacana-cāturī-jugglery of words; prabhu kahe-the Lord said; eta-so much; anna-food; khāite-to eat; nā pāri-I am not able.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya thus requested Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to eat and give up juggling words. The Lord replied, "I certainly cannot eat so much food."

TEXT 73

ācārya bale–akapaṭe karaha āhāra yadi khāite nā pāra pāte rahibeka āra ācārya bale-Advaita Ācārya says; akapaṭe-without pretense; karaha-kindly do; āhāra-eating; yadi-if; khāite-to eat; nā pāra-You are not able; pāte-on the leaf; rahibeka āra-let the balance remain.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya then requested the Lord to simply accept the prasāda without pretense. If He could not eat it all, the balance could be left on the plate.

TEXT 74

prabhu bale–eta anna nāriba khāite sannyāsīra dharma nahe ucchiṣṭa rākhite

SYNONYMS

prabhu bale-the Lord said; eta-so much; anna-eatables; nāriba-I will not be able; khāite-to eat; sannyāsīra-of a sannyāsī; dharma nahe-it is not the duty; ucchiṣṭa-remnants of food; rākhite-to keep.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "I will not be able to eat so much food, and it is not the duty of a sannyāsī to leave remnants."

According to Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.18.19):

bahir jalāśayaṁ gatvā tatopaspṛśya vāg-yataḥ vibhajya pāvitaṁ śeṣaṁ bhuñjītāśeṣam āhṛtam

"A sannyāsī should take whatever edibles he gets from a householder's house, outside near some lake or river, and after offering the food to Viṣṇu, Brahmā and the sun (three divisions), he should eat the entire offering and not leave anything for others to eat."

TEXT 75

ācārya bale–nīlācale khāo cauyānna-bāra eka-bāre anna khāo śata śata bhāra

SYNONYMS

ācārya bale-Advaita Ācārya replies; nīlācale-at Jagannātha Purī; khāo-You eat; cauyānna-bāra-fifty-four times; eka-bāre-at one time; anna-eatables; khāo-You eat; śata śata bhāra-hundreds of pots.

TRANSLATION

In this connection Advaita Ācārya referred to Caitanya Mahāprabhu's eating at Jagannātha Purī. Lord Jagannātha and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are identical. Advaita Ācārya pointed out that at Jagannātha Purī Caitanya Mahāprabhu ate fifty-four times a day, and each time He ate many hundreds of pots of food.

TEXT 76

tina janāra bhakṣya-piṇḍa–tomāra eka grāsa tāra lekhāya ei anna nahe pañca-grāsa

SYNONYMS

tina janāra-of three persons; bhakṣya-piṇḍa-the stack of eatables; tomāra-of You; eka grāsa-one morsel; tāra-to that; lekhāya-in proportion; ei anna-this food; nahe-is not; pañca-grāsa-five morsels.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Advaita Ācārya said, "The amount of food that three people can eat does not constitute even a morsel for You. In proportion to that, these edibles are not even five morsels of food for You."

TEXT 77

mora bhāgye, mora ghare, tomāra āgamana chāḍaha cāturī, prabhu, karaha bhojana mora bhāgye-by My fortune; mora ghare-at My home; tomāra-Your; āgamana-appearance; chāḍaha-please give up; cāturī-all this jugglery; prabhu-My Lord; karaha-just do; bhojana-eating.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya continued, "By My great fortune You have just come to My home. Please do not juggle words. Just begin eating and do not talk."

TEXT 78

eta bali' jala dila dui gosāñira hāte hāsiyā lāgilā duṅhe bhojana karite eta bali'-saying this; jala dila-supplied water; dui gosāñira-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lord Nityānanda; hāte-on the hands; hāsiyā-smiling; lāgilā-began; duṅhe-both of Them; bhojana karite-to eat.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Upon saying this, Advaita Ācārya supplied water to the two Lords so that They could wash Their hands. The two Lords then sat down and, smiling, began to eat the prasāda.

TEXT 79

nityānanda kahe–kailuṅ tina upavāsa āji pāraṇā karite chila baḍa āśa nityānanda kahe-Lord Nityānanda said; kailuṅ-I have undergone; tina-three; upavāsa-fasting days; āji-today; pāraṇā-breaking the fast; karite-to do; chila-there was; baḍa-great; āśa-hope.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Nityānanda Prabhu said, "I have undergone fasting for three days continuously. Today I hoped to break My fast."

TEXT 80

āji upavāsa haila ācārya-nimantraṇe ardha-peṭa nā bharibe ei grāseka anne

SYNONYMS

āji-today also; upavāsa-fasting; haila-there was; ācārya-nimantraṇe-by the invitation of Advaita Ācārya; ardha-peṭa-half My belly; nā-not; bharibe-will fill; ei-this; grāseka anne-one morsel of food.

TRANSLATION

Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was thinking that the quantity of food was enormous, Nityānanda Prabhu, on the contrary, thought it not even a morsel. He had been fasting for three days and had greatly hoped to break fast on that day. Indeed, He said, "Although I am invited to eat by Advaita Ācārya, today also is a fast. So small a quantity of food will not even fill half My belly."

TEXT 81

ācārya kahe–tumi hao tairthika sannyāsī kabhu phala-mūla khāo, kabhu upavāsī

SYNONYMS

ācārya kahe-Advaita Ācārya replied to Nityānanda Prabhu; tumi-You; hao-are; tairthika sannyāsī-a mendicant wandering on pilgrimages; kabhu-sometimes; phala-mūla-fruits and roots; khāo-You eat; kabhu upavāsī-sometimes fasting.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya replied, "Sir, You are a mendicant traveling on pilgrimage. Sometimes You eat fruits and roots, and sometimes You simply go on fasting.

TEXT 82

daridra-brāhmaṇa-ghare ye pāilā muṣṭy-eka anna ihāte santuṣṭa hao, chāḍa lobha-mana daridra-brāhmaṇa-of a poor brāhmaṇa; ghare-at the home; ye-whatever; pāilā-You have gotten; muṣṭi-eka-one handful; anna-food; ihāte-in this; santuṣṭa hao-please be satisfied; chāḍa-give up; lobha-mana-Your greedy mentality.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"I am a poor brāhmaṇa, and You have come to My home. Please be satisfied with whatever little food You have received and give up Your greedy mentality."

TEXT 83

nityānanda bale–yabe kaile nimantraṇa tata dite cāha, yata kariye bhojana nityānanda bale-Lord Nityānanda said; yabe-when; kaile-You have done; nimantraṇa-invitation; tata-so much; dite cāha-You must supply; yata-as much as; kariye bhojana-I can eat.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Lord Nityānanda Prabhu replied, "Whatever I may be, You have invited Me. Therefore You must supply as much as I want to eat."

TEXT 84

śuni' nityānandera kathā ṭhākura advaita kahena tāṅhāre kichu pāiyā pirīta

SYNONYMS

śuni'-hearing; nityānandera-of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; kathā-words; ṭhākura-His Divine Grace; advaita-Advaita Ācārya; kahena-spoke; tāṅhāre-unto Nityānanda Prabhu; kichu-something; pāiyā-taking the opportunity; pirīta-pleasing words.

TRANSLATION

His Divine Grace Advaita Ācārya, after hearing the statement of Nityānanda Prabhu, took the opportunity presented by the joking words and spoke to Him as follows.

TEXT 85

bhraṣṭa avadhūta tumi, udara bharite sannyāsa la-iyācha, bujhi, brāhmaṇa daṇḍite

SYNONYMS

bhraṣṭa avadhūta-reject paramahaṁsa; tumi-You; udara bharite-to fill Your belly; sannyāsa la-iyācha-You have accepted the renounced order of life; bujhi-I understand; brāhmaṇa daṇḍite-to give trouble to a brāhmaṇa.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya said, "You are a reject paramahaṁsa, and You have accepted the renounced order of life just to fill up Your belly. I can understand that Your business is to give trouble to brāhmaṇas."

PURPORT

There is always a difference of opinion between a smārta-brāhmaṇa and a Vaiṣṇava gosvāmī. There are even smārta opinions and Vaiṣṇava gosvāmī opinions available in astrological and astronomical calculations. By calling Nityānanda Prabhu a bhraṣṭa avadhūta (a rejected paramahaṁsa), Advaita Ācārya Prabhu in a sense accepted Nityānanda Prabhu as a paramahaṁsa. In other words, Nityānanda Prabhu had nothing to do with the rules governing smārta-brāhmaṇas. Thus under pretense of condemning Him, Advaita Ācārya was actually praising Him. In the avadhūta stage, the paramahaṁsa stage, which is the supermost stage, one may appear to be viṣayī, on the platform of sense gratification, but in actuality he has nothing to do with sense gratification. At that stage, a person sometimes accepts the symptoms and dress of a sannyāsī and sometimes does not. Sometimes he dresses like a householder. We should know, however, that these are all joking words between Advaita Ācārya and Nityānanda Prabhu. They are not to be taken as insults.

In Khaḍadaha, sometimes people misunderstood Nityānanda Prabhu to belong to the śākta-sampradāya, whose philosophy is antaḥ śāktaḥ bahiḥ śaivaḥ sabhāyāṁ vaiṣṇavo mataḥ. According to the śākta-sampradāya, a person called kaulāvadhūta thinks materially while externally appearing to be a great devotee of Lord Śiva. When such a person is in an assembly of Vaiṣṇavas, he appears like a Vaiṣṇava. Actually Nityānanda Prabhu did not belong to such a community. Nityānanda Prabhu was always a brahmacārī of a sannyāsī of the vaidika order. Actually He was a paramahaṁsa. Sometimes He is accepted to be a disciple of Lakṣmīpati Tīrtha. If He is so accepted, Nityānanda Prabhu belonged to the Madhva-sampradāya. He did not belong to the tāntrika-sampradāya of Bengal.

TEXT 86

tumi khete pāra daśa-viśa mānera anna āmi tāhā kāṅhā pāba daridra brāhmaṇa

SYNONYMS

tumi-You; khete-to eat; pāra-able; daśa-viśa-ten or twenty; mānera-of the measurement of a māna; anna-rice; āmi-I; tāhā-that; kāṅhā-where; pāba-shall get; daridra-poverty-stricken; brāhmaṇa-brāhmaṇa.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya accused Nityānanda Prabhu, saying, "You can eat ten to twenty mānas of rice. I am a poor brāhmaṇa. How shall I get so much rice?

PURPORT

A māna is a measurement containing about four kilos.

TEXT 87

ye pāñācha muṣṭy-eka anna, tāhā khāñā uṭha pāgalāmi nā kariha, nā chaḍāio jhuṭha

SYNONYMS

ye pāñācha-whatever You have; muṣṭi-eka-one handful; anna-rice; tāhā-that; khāñā-eating; uṭha-please get up; pāgalāmi-madness; nā-do not; kariha-do; nā-do not; chaḍāio-strew; jhuṭha-remnants of food.

TRANSLATION

"Whatever You have, though it be a palmful of rice, please eat it and get up. Don't show Your madness and strew the remnants of food here and there."

TEXT 88

ei mata hāsya-rase karena bhojana ardha-ardha khāñā prabhu chāḍena vyañjana

SYNONYMS

ei mata-in this way; hāsya-rase-jokingly; karena-does; bhojana-eating; ardha-ardha-half and half; khāñā-after eating; prabhu-the Lord; chāḍena-gives up; vyañjana-all the vegetables.

TRANSLATION

In this way, Nityānanda Prabhu and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu ate and talked with Advaita Ācārya jokingly. After eating half of each vegetable preparation given to Him, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu abandoned it and went on to the next.

TEXT 89

sei vyañjana ācārya punaḥ karena pūraṇa ei mata punaḥ punaḥ pariveśe vyañjana

SYNONYMS

sei vyañjana-that half-finished vegetable; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; punaḥ-again; karena-does; pūraṇa-filling; ei mata-in this way; punaḥ punaḥ-again and again; pariveśe-distributes; vyañjana-vegetables.

TRANSLATION

As soon as half of the vegetable in the pot was finished, Advaita Ācārya filled it up again. In this way, as the Lord finished half of a preparation, Advaita Ācārya again and again filled it up.

TEXT 90

donā vyañjane bhari' karena prārthana prabhu balena–āra kata kariba bhojana

SYNONYMS

donā-the pot; vyañjane-with vegetables; bhari'-filling; karena-makes; prārthana-request; prabhu balena-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu says; āra-more; kata-how much; kariba-can I do; bhojana-eating.

TRANSLATION

After filling a pot with vegetables, Advaita Ācārya requested Them to eat more, and Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "How much more can I go on eating?"

TEXT 91

ācārya kahe–ye diyāchi, tāhā nā chāḍibā ekhana ye diye, tāra ardheka khāibā

SYNONYMS

ācārya kahe-Advaita Ācārya said; ye diyāchi-whatever I have given; tāhā nā chāḍibā-please do not give it up; ekhana-now; ye-whatever; diye-I am giving; tāra ardheka-half of it; khāibā-You will eat.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya said, "Please do not give up whatever I have already given You. Now, whatever I am giving, You may eat half and leave half."

TEXT 92

nānā yatna-dainye prabhure karāila bhojana ācāryera icchā prabhu karila pūraṇa

SYNONYMS

nānā yatna-dainye-in this way, by various efforts and by humility; prabhure-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; karāila-caused; bhojana-eating; ācāryera icchā-the wish of Advaita Ācārya; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; karila-did; pūraṇa-fulfillment.

TRANSLATION

In this way, by submitting various humble requests, Advaita Ācārya made Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lord Nityānanda eat. Thus Caitanya Mahāprabhu fulfilled all the desires of Advaita Ācārya.

TEXT 93

nityānanda kahe–āmāra peṭa nā bharila lañā yāha, tora anna kichu nā khāila nityānanda kahe-Nityānanda Prabhu said; āmāra-My; peṭa-belly; nā-not; bharila-filled; lañā-taking away; yāha-go; tora-Your; anna-food; kichu nā khāila-I have not eaten anything.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Again Nityānanda Prabhu jokingly said, "My belly is not yet filled up. Please take away Your food. I have not taken the least of it."

TEXT 94

eta bali' eka-grāsa bhāta hāte lañā ujhāli' phelila āge yena kruddha hañā

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-saying this; eka-grāsa-one palmful; bhāta-rice; hāte-in the hand; lañā-taking; ujhāli'-releasing; phelila-threw; āge-in front; yena-as if; kruddha hañā-becoming angry.

TRANSLATION

After saying this, Nityānanda Prabhu took a handful of rice and threw it on the floor in front of Him, as if He were angry.

TEXT 95

bhāta dui-cāri lāge ācāryera aṅge bhāta aṅge lañā ācārya nāce bahu-raṅge

SYNONYMS

bhāta dui-cāri-two or four pieces of the thrown rice; lāge-touch; ācāryera aṅge-the body of Advaita Ācārya; bhāta-the rice; aṅge-on His body; lañā-with; ācārya nāce-the Ācārya began to dance; bahu-raṅge-in many ways.

TRANSLATION

When two or four pieces of the thrown rice touched His body, Advaita Ācārya began to dance in various ways with the rice still stuck to His body.

TEXT 96

avadhūtera jhuṭhā lāgila mora aṅge parama pavitra more kaila ei ḍhaṅge avadhūtera jhuṭhā-the remnants of the food of the avadhūta; lāgila-touched; mora-My; aṅge-on the body; parama pavitra-perfectly purified; more-Me; kaila-made; ei-this; ḍhaṅge-behavior.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When the rice thrown by Nityānanda Prabhu touched His body, Advaita Ācārya thought Himself purified by the touch of remnants thrown by Paramahaṁsa Nityānanda. Therefore He began dancing.

PURPORT

The word avadhūta refers to one above all rules and regulations. Sometimes, not observing all the rules and regulations of a sannyāsī, Nityānanda Prabhu exhibited the behavior of a mad avadhūta. He threw the remnants of food on the ground, and some of these remnants touched the body of Advaita Ācārya. Advaita Ācārya accepted this happily because He presented Himself as a member of the community of smārta-brāhmaṇas. By touching the remnants of food thrown by Nityānanda Prabhu, Advaita Ācārya immediately felt Himself purified of all smārta contamination. The remnants of food left by a pure Vaiṣṇava are called mahā-mahā-prasāda. This is completely spiritual and is identified with Lord Viṣṇu. Such remnants are not ordinary. The spiritual master is to be considered on the stage of paramahaṁsa and beyond the jurisdiction of the varṇāśrama institution. The remnants of food left by the spiritual master and similar paramahaṁsas or pure Vaiṣṇavas are purifying. When an ordinary person touches such prasāda, his mind is purified, and his mind is raised to the status of a pure brāhmaṇa. The behavior and statements of Advaita Ācārya are meant for the understanding of ordinary people who are unaware of the strength of spiritual values, not knowing the potency of food left by the bona fide spiritual master and pure Vaiṣṇavas.

TEXT 97

tore nimantraṇa kari' pāinu tāra phala tora jāti-kula nāhi, sahaje pāgala

SYNONYMS

tore-You; nimantraṇa-invitation; kari'-making; pāinu-I have gotten in return; tāra-of that; phala-the result; tora-Your; jāti-kula nāhi-there is no indication of Your caste and family; sahaje-by nature; pāgala-You are a madman.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya jokingly said, "My dear Nityānanda, I invited You, and indeed I have received the results. You have no fixed caste or dynasty. By nature You are a madman.

PURPORT

The words sahaje pāgala ("by nature a madman") indicate that Nityānanda Prabhu was transcendentally situated on the paramahaṁsa stage. Because He always remembered Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa and Their service, this was transcendental madness. Śrī Advaita Ācārya was pointing out this fact.

TEXT 98

āpanāra sama more karibāra tare jhuṭhā dile, vipra bali' bhaya nā karile āpanāra sama-like You; more-Me; karibāra tare-for making; jhuṭhā-remnants of food; dile-You have given; vipra bali'-considering as a brāhmaṇa; bhaya-fear; nā karile-You did not do.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"To make Me a madman like Yourself, You have thrown the remnants of Your food at Me. You did not even fear the fact that I am a brāhmaṇa."

PURPORT

The words āpanāra sama indicate that Advaita Ācārya considered Himself to belong to the smārta-brāhmaṇas, and He considered Nityānanda Prabhu to be on the transcendental stage with pure Vaiṣṇavas. Lord Nityānanda gave Advaita Ācārya His remnants to situate Him on the same platform and make Him a pure unalloyed Vaiṣṇava or paramahaṁsa. Advaita Ācārya's statement indicates that a paramahaṁsa Vaiṣṇava is transcendentally situated. A pure Vaiṣṇava is not subject to the rules and regulations of the smārta-brāhmaṇas. That was the reason for Advaita Ācārya's stating, āpanāra sama more karibāra tare: "to raise Me to Your own standard." A pure Vaiṣṇava, or a person on the paramahaṁsa stage, accepts the remnants of food (mahā-prasāda) as spiritual. He does not consider it to be material or sense gratificatory. He accepts mahā-prasāda not as ordinary dāl and rice but as spiritual substance. To say nothing of the remnants of food left by a pure Vaiṣṇava, prasāda is never polluted even if it is touched by the mouth of a caṇḍāla. Indeed, it retains its spiritual value. Therefore by eating or touching such mahā-prasāda, a brāhmaṇa is not degraded. There is no question of being polluted by touching the remnants of such food. Actually, by eating such mahā-prasāda, one is freed from all the contaminations of the material condition. That is the verdict of the śāstra.

TEXT 99

nityānanda bale,–ei kṛṣṇera prasāda ihāke 'jhuṭhā' kahile, tumi kaile aparādha

SYNONYMS

nityānanda bale-Lord Nityānanda said; ei-this; kṛṣṇera prasāda-mahā-prasāda of Lord Kṛṣṇa; ihāke-unto it; jhuṭhā-remnants of food; kahile-if You say; tumi-You; kaile-have made; aparādha-offense.

TRANSLATION

Nityānanda Prabhu replied, "These are the remnants of food left by Lord Kṛṣṇa. If You take them to be ordinary remnants, You have committed an offense."

PURPORT

In the Bṛhad-viṣṇu Purāṇa it is stated that one who considers mahā-prasāda to be equal to ordinary rice and dāl certainly commits a great offense. Ordinary edibles are touchable and untouchable, but there are no such dualistic considerations where prasāda is concerned. prasāda is transcendental, and there are no transformations or contaminations, just as there are no contaminations or transformations in the body of Lord Viṣṇu Himself. Thus even if one is a brāhmaṇa he is certain to be attacked by leprosy and bereft of all family members if he makes such dualistic considerations. Such an offender goes to hell, never to return. This is the injunction of the Bṛhad-viṣṇu Purāṇa.

TEXT 100

śateka sannyāsī yadi karāha bhojana tabe ei aparādha ha-ibe khaṇḍana

SYNONYMS

śateka sannyāsī-one hundred sannyāsīs; yadi-if; karāha-You make; bhojana-the eating; tabe-then; ei-this; aparādha-offense; ha-ibe-there will be; khaṇḍana-nullification.

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Nityānanda Prabhu continued, "If you invite at least one hundred sannyāsīs to Your home and feed them sumptuously, Your offense will be nullified."

TEXT 101

ācārya kahe–nā kariba sannyāsi-nimantraṇa sannyāsī nāśila mora saba smṛti-dharma

SYNONYMS

ācārya kahe-Advaita Ācārya said; nā kariba-I shall never do; sannyāsi-nimantraṇa-invitation to the sannyāsīs; sannyāsī-a sannyāsī; nāśila-has spoiled; mora-My; saba-all; smṛti-dharma-regulative principles of the smṛti-śāstra.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya replied, "I shall never again invite another sannyāsī, for it is a sannyāsī who has spoiled all My brahminical smṛti regulations."

TEXT 102

eta bali' dui jane karāila ācamana uttama śayyāte la-iyā karāila śayana eta bali'-saying this; dui jane-unto the two personalities; karāila ācamana-washed Their hands and mouth; uttama-very nice; śayyāte-on a bed; la-iyā-taking; karāila-made Them do; śayana-lying down.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After this, Advaita Ācārya made the Lords wash Their hands and mouths. He then took Them to a nice bed and made Them lie down to take rest.

TEXT 103

lavaṅga elācī-bīja–uttama rasa-vāsa tulasī-mañjarī saha dila mukha-vāsa

SYNONYMS

lavaṅga-cloves; elācī-cardamom; bīja-seeds; uttama-very nice; rasa-vāsa-tasteful spices; tulasī-mañjarī-the flowers of tulasī; saha-with; dila-gave; mukha-vāsa-perfume of the mouth.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Advaita Ācārya fed the two Lords cloves and cardamom mixed with tulasī flowers. Thus there was a good flavor within Their mouths.

TEXT 104

sugandhi candane lipta kaila kalevara sugandhi puṣpa-mālā āni' dila hṛdaya-upara

SYNONYMS

su-gandhi-fragrant; candane-in sandalwood; lipta-smeared; kaila-made; kalevara-the bodies; su-gandhi-very fragrant; puṣpa-mālā-flower garlands; āni'-bringing; dila-gave; hṛdaya-upara-on the chests.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Advaita Ācārya then smeared the bodies of the Lords with sandalwood pulp and then placed very fragrant flower garlands on Their chests.

TEXT 105

ācārya karite cāhe pāda-saṁvāhana saṅkucita hañā prabhu balena vacana

SYNONYMS

ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; karite-to do; cāhe-wants; pāda-saṁvāhana-massaging the feet; saṅkucita-hesitant; hañā-becoming; prabhu-the Lord; balena-says; vacana-the words.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord lay down on the bed, Advaita Ācārya waited to massage His legs, but the Lord was very hesitant and spoke as follows to Advaita Ācārya.

TEXT 106

bahuta nācāile tumi, chāḍa nācāna mukunda-haridāsa la-iyā karaha bhojana bahuta-in various ways; nācāile-have made Me dance; tumi-You; chāḍa-give up; nācāna-dancing; mukunda-Mukunda; haridāsa-Haridāsa; la-iyā-with; karaha-do; bhojana-eating.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "Advaita Ācārya, You have made Me dance in various ways. Now give up this practice. Go with Mukunda and Haridāsa and accept Your lunch."

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is here telling Advaita Ācārya that it is not befitting for a sannyāsī to accept nice beds to lie on or to chew cloves and cardamom and have his body smeared with sandalwood pulp. Nor is it befitting for him to accept fragrant garlands and have his legs massaged by a pure Vaiṣṇava. "You have already made Me dance according to Your vow," Caitanya Mahāprabhu said. "Now please stop it. You can go and take Your lunch with Mukunda and Haridāsa."

TEXT 107

tabe ta' ācārya saṅge lañā dui jane karila icchāya bhojana, ye āchila mane

SYNONYMS

tabe ta'-thereafter; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; saṅge-with; lañā-taking; dui jane-the two persons, namely Mukunda and Haridāsa; karila-did; icchāya-according to desire; bhojana-eating; ye āchila mane-whatever there was in mind.

TRANSLATION

Thereupon Advaita Ācārya took prasāda with Mukunda and Haridāsa, and they all wholeheartedly ate as much as they desired.

TEXT 108

SYNONYMS

ki-what; kahiba-shall I say; re-O; sakhī-My dear friends; ājuka-today; ānanda-pleasure; ora-the limit; cira-dine-after many days; mādhava-Lord Kṛṣṇa; mandire-in the temple; mora-My.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya said, " 'My dear friends, what shall I say? Today I have received the highest transcendental pleasure. After many, many days, Lord Kṛṣṇa is in My house.' "

PURPORT

This is a song composed by Vidyāpati. Sometimes the word mādhava is misunderstood to refer to Mādhavendra Purī. Advaita Ācārya was a disciple of Mādhavendra Purī, and consequently some people think that He was referring to Mādhavendra Purī by using the word mādhava. But actually this is not the fact. This song was composed to commemorate the separation of Kṛṣṇa from Rādhārāṇī during Kṛṣṇa's absence in Mathurā. It is thought that this song was sung by Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī when Kṛṣṇa returned. It is technically called Mathurā-viraha.

TEXT 115

SYNONYMS

phiri' phiri'-turning and turning; kabhu-sometimes; prabhura-of the Lord; dharena-catches; caraṇa-the lotus feet; caraṇe dhariyā-catching the lotus feet; prabhure-unto the Lord; balena-says; vacana-words.

TRANSLATION

While dancing, Advaita Ācārya would sometimes turn around and around and catch the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Advaita Ācārya would then speak to Him as follows.

TEXT 117

aneka dina tumi more beḍāile bhāṇḍiyā gharete pāñāchi, ebe rākhiba bāndhiyā

SYNONYMS

aneka dina-many days; tumi-You; more-Me; beḍāile-escaped; bhāṇḍiyā-cheating or bluffing; gharete-at My home; pāñāchi-I have gotten; ebe-now; rākhiba-I shall keep; bāndhiyā-binding up.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Advaita Ācārya would say, "Many days You escaped Me by bluffing. Now I have You in My home, and I will keep You bound up."

TEXT 118

eta bali' ācārya ānande karena nartana

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-saying this; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; ānande-in pleasure; karena-does; nartana-dancing; prahareka-about three hours; rātri-at night; ācārya-Śrī Advaita Ācārya; kaila saṅkīrtana-performed saṅkīrtana, or congregational chanting.

TRANSLATION

So speaking, Advaita Ācārya performed congregational chanting with great pleasure for three hours that night and danced all the time.

TEXT 119

premera utkaṇṭhā,–prabhura nāhi kṛṣṇa-saṅga virahe bāḍila prema-jvālāra taraṅga

SYNONYMS

premera utkaṇṭhā-the ecstasy of the love; prabhura-of the Lord; nāhi-there is not; kṛṣṇa-saṅga-meeting with Lord Kṛṣṇa; virahe-in separation; bāḍila-increased; prema-jvālāra-of flames of love; taraṅga-waves.

TRANSLATION

When Advaita Ācārya danced in that way, Lord Caitanya felt ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa, and because of His separation, the waves and flames of love increased.

TEXT 120

vyākula hañā prabhu bhūmite paḍilā

SYNONYMS

ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; uṭhāila-raised; prabhuke-the Lord; karite-to do; nartana-dancing; pada śuni'-by hearing the stanzas; prabhura-of the Lord; aṅga-the body; nā-not; yāya-possible; dhāraṇa-to hold.

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya raised the body of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to help Him dance, but the Lord, after hearing the stanzas sung by Mukunda, could not be held due to His bodily symptoms.

TEXT 123

aśru, kampa, pulaka, sveda, gadgada vacana kṣaṇe uṭhe, kṣaṇe paḍe, kṣaṇeka rodana

SYNONYMS

aśru-tears; kampa-trembling; pulaka-standing of bodily hairs in ecstasy; sveda-perspiration; gadgada-faltering; vacana-words; kṣaṇe-sometimes; uṭhe-stands; kṣaṇe-sometimes; paḍe-falls down; kṣaṇeka-sometimes; rodana-crying.

TRANSLATION

Tears fell from His eyes, and His whole body trembled. His hair stood on end, He perspired heavily, and His words faltered. Sometimes He stood, and sometimes He fell. And sometimes He cried.

TEXT 124

hā hā prāṇa-priya-sakhī, ki nā haila more kānu-prema-viṣe mora tanu-mana jare

SYNONYMS

hā hā-O; prāṇa-priya-sakhī-my dear friend; ki nā haila more-what has not happened to me; kānu-prema-viṣe-the poison of love of Kṛṣṇa; mora-my; tanu-body; mana-mind; jare-afflicts.

TRANSLATION

Mukunda sang, " 'My dear intimate friend! What has not happened to me! Due to the effects of the poison of love for Kṛṣṇa, my body and mind have been severely afflicted.

PURPORT

When Mukunda saw that Caitanya Mahāprabhu was feeling ecstatic pain and manifesting ecstatic bodily symptoms, all due to feelings of separation from Kṛṣṇa, he sang songs about meeting with Kṛṣṇa. Advaita Ācārya also stopped dancing.

TEXT 125

ei pada-this stanza; gāya-sings; mukunda-Mukunda; madhura-sweet; su-svare-in a voice; śuniyā-hearing; prabhura-of the Lord; citta-mind; antare-within; vidare-splits into pieces.

TRANSLATION

This stanza was sung by Mukunda in a very sweet voice, but as soon as Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard this stanza, His mind went to pieces.

TEXT 127

nirveda, viṣāda, harṣa, cāpalya, garva, dainya prabhura sahita yuddha kare bhāva-sainya

SYNONYMS

nirveda-disappointment; viṣāda-moroseness; harṣa-pleasure; cāpalya-restlessness; garva-pride; dainya-humility; prabhura-the Lord; sahita-with; yuddha-fight; kare-do; bhāva-of ecstatic feelings; sainya-soldiers.

TRANSLATION

The transcendental ecstatic symptoms of disappointment, moroseness, pleasure, restlessness, pride and humility all began to fight like soldiers within the Lord.

PURPORT

Harṣa is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu. Harṣa is experienced when one finally attains the desired goal of life and consequently becomes very glad. When harṣa is present, the body shivers, and one's bodily hairs stand on end. There are perspiration, tears and an outburst of passion and madness. The mouth becomes swollen, and one experiences inertia and illusion. When a person attains his desired object and feels very fortunate, the luster of his body increases. Because of his own qualities and feelings of greatness, he does not care for anyone else, and this is called garva, or pride. In this condition one utters prayers and does not reply to others' inquiries. Seeing one's own body, concealing one's desires and not heeding the words of others are symptoms visible in the ecstasy of garva.

TEXT 128

TRANSLATION

Although the Lord was fatigued, Nityānanda Prabhu kept Him steady by holding Him. At that time Advaita Ācārya suspended the chanting and, by rendering various services to the Lord, made Him lie down to take rest.

TEXT 136

ei-mata daśa-dina bhojana-kīrtana eka-rūpe kari' kare prabhura sevana ei-mata-in this way; daśa-dina-continuously for ten days; bhojana-kīrtana-eating and chanting; eka-rūpe-without change; kari'-doing; kare-does; prabhura-of the Lord; sevana-service.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

For ten continuous days Advaita Ācārya held feasting and chanting in the evening. He served the Lord in this way without any change.

TEXT 137

TRANSLATION

When the Lord performed kīrtana, He manifested all kinds of transcendental symptoms. He appeared stunned and trembling, His hair stood on end, and His voice faltered. There were tears and devastation.

PURPORT

Devastation is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu as a combination of happiness and distress that becomes conspicuous by an absence of any sense of them. In this condition, a devotee falls to the ground, and the subsequent symptoms in the body ensue. These symptoms are mentioned above, and when they become prominent in the body, a state called pralaya (devastation) is manifest.

TEXT 163

kṣaṇe kṣaṇe paḍe prabhu āchāḍa khāñā

TRANSLATION

"Whenever Nimāi falls to the surface of the earth, please do not let Him feel any pain."

TEXT 167

ei-mata śacīdevī vātsalye vihvala harṣa-bhaya-dainya-bhāve ha-ila vikala

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; śacī-devī-mother Śacī; vātsalye-in parental affection; vihvala-overwhelmed; harṣa-happiness; bhaya-fear; dainya-bhāve-and in humility; ha-ila-became; vikala-transformed.

TRANSLATION

When mother Śacī was thus overwhelmed in parental love for Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, she became transformed with happiness, fear and humility, as well as bodily symptoms.

PURPORT

These verses indicate that mother Śacī, born in the family of Nīlāmbara Cakravartī, used to worship Lord Viṣṇu even before her marriage. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā (6:41):

prāpya puṇya-kṛtāṁ lokān uṣitvā śāśvatīḥ samāḥ śucīnāṁ śrīmatāṁ gehe
yoga-bhraṣṭo 'bhijāyate

"The unsuccessful yogī, after many, many years of enjoyment on the planets of the pious living entities, is born into a family of righteous people, or into a family of rich aristocracy." Mother Śacī, a nitya-siddha living entity, is an incarnation of mother Yaśodā. She appeared in the house of Nīlāmbara Cakravartī and was everlastingly engaged in the service of Lord Viṣṇu. Later she directly had as her child Lord Viṣṇu, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and she served Him from the day of His appearance. This is the position of nitya-siddha associates. Śrī Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura therefore sings:

gaurāṅgera saṅgi-gaṇe nitya-siddha kari māne. Every devotee should know that all the associates of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu-His family members, friends and other associates-were all nitya-siddhas. A nitya-siddha never forgets the service of the Lord. He is always engaged, even from childhood, in worshiping the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TEXT 168

śrīvāsādi yata prabhura vipra bhakta-gaṇa prabhuke bhikṣā dite haila sabākāra mana śrīvāsa-ādi-the devotees, headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; yata-all; prabhura-of the Lord; vipra-especially the brāhmaṇas; bhakta-gaṇa-devotees; prabhuke-unto the Lord; bhikṣā-lunch; dite-to give; haila-there was; sabākāra-of all of them; mana-the mind.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Since Advaita Ācārya was giving alms and food to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the other devotees, headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura, also desired to give Him alms and invite Him for lunch.

PURPORT

It is the duty of all gṛhasthas to invite a sannyāsī to their homes if he happens to be in the neighborhood or village. This very system is still current in India. If a sannyāsī is in the neighborhood of a village, he is invited by all householders, one after another. As long as a sannyāsī remains in the village, he enlightens the inhabitants in spiritual understanding. In other words, a sannyāsī has no housing or food problems even when he travels extensively. Even though Advaita Ācārya was supplying Caitanya Mahāprabhu with prasāda, the other devotees from Navadvīpa and Śāntipura also desired to offer Him prasāda.

SYNONYMS

teṅho-Lord Caitanya; yadi-if; ihāṅ-here; rahe-stays; tabe-then; mora-my; sukha-happiness; tāṅ'ra nindā-blasphemy of Him; haya-there is; yadi-if; seha-that also; mora-my; duḥkha-unhappiness.

TRANSLATION

Śacīmātā said, ”It will be a great happiness for me if Nimāi, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, stays here. But at the same time, if someone blames Him, it will be my great unhappiness.”

PURPORT

It is a great happiness for a mother if her son does not leave home to search out Kṛṣṇa but remains with her. At the same time, if a son does not search after Kṛṣṇa but simply remains at home, he is certainly blamed by experienced saintly persons. Such blame certainly causes great unhappiness for a mother. If a real mother wants her son to progress spiritually, she had better allow him to go out searching for Kṛṣṇa. The mother naturally desires the welfare of the son. If a mother does not allow her son to search for Kṛṣṇa, she is called mā, which indicates māyā. By allowing her son to go as a sannyāsī and search for Kṛṣṇa, Śacīmātā instructs all mothers of the world. She indicates that all sons should become real devotees of Kṛṣṇa and should not stay at home under the care of an affectionate mother. This is supported by Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.5.18):

gurur na sa syāt sva-jano na sa syāt pitā na sa syāj jananī na sā syāt daivaṁ na tat syān na patiś ca sa syān na mocayed yaḥ samupeta-mṛtyum

”No one should become a spiritual master-nor a relative, father, mother, worshipable Deity or husband-if he cannot help a person escape the imminent path of death.” Every living entity is wandering within the universe, subjected to the law of karma and transmigrating from one body to another and from one planet to another. Therefore the whole Vedic process is meant to save the wandering living entities from the clutches of māyā-birth, death, disease and old age. This means stopping the cycle of birth and death. This cycle can be stopped only if one worships Kṛṣṇa. As the Lord says in the Bhagavad-gītā (4.9):

janma karma ca me divyam evaṁ yo vetti tattvataḥ tyaktvā dehaṁ punar janma naiti mām eti so ’rjuna

”One who knows the transcendental nature of My appearance and activities does not, upon leaving the body, take his birth again in this material world, but attains My eternal abode, O Arjuna.”

To stop the cycle of birth and death, one has to understand Kṛṣṇa as He is. Simply by knowing Kṛṣṇa, one can stop the process of rebirth into this material world. By acting in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, one can return to Godhead. The highest perfection of life is for a father, mother, spiritual master, husband or any other family member to help others return home, back to Godhead. That is the most preferred welfare activity for the benefit of relatives. Therefore, Śacīmātā, although the mother of Nimāi Paṇḍita, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, considered all the facts and decided to allow her son to go out and search for Kṛṣṇa. At the same time, she made some arrangements in order that she might get news of all the activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 182

tāte ei yukti bhāla, mora mane laya nīlācale rahe yadi, dui kārya haya

SYNONYMS

tāte-therefore; ei-this; yukti-consideration; bhāla-as good; mora-my; mane-mind; laya-takes; nīlācale-in Jagannātha Purī; rahe-He stays; yadi-if; dui-two; kārya-purposes; haya-are achieved.

TRANSLATION

Mother Śacī said, ”This consideration is good. In my opinion, if Nimāi remains at Jagannātha Purī, He may not leave any one of us and at the same time can remain aloof as a sannyāsī. Thus both purposes are fulfilled.

TEXT 183

nīlācale navadvīpe yena dui ghara

SYNONYMS

nīlācale-at Jagannātha Purī; navadvīpe-as well as Navadvīpa; yena-as if; dui-two; ghara-rooms; loka-people; gatāgati-come and go; vārtā-news; pāba-I shall get; nirantara-always.

TRANSLATION

”Since Jagannātha Purī and Navadvīpa are intimately related-as if they were two rooms in the same house-people from Navadvīpa generally go to Jagannātha Purī, and those in Jagannātha Purī go to Navadvīpa. This going and coming will help carry news of Lord Caitanya. In this way I will be able to get news of Him.

TEXT 184

SYNONYMS

tumi-saba loka-all of you people; mora-My; parama bāndhava-intimate friends; ei bhikṣā māgoṅ-I beg one favor; more-unto Me; deha-kindly give; tumi-you; saba-all.

TRANSLATION

"My dear friends, you are all My intimate friends. Now I am begging a favor of you. Please give it to Me."

TEXT 190

ghare yāñā kara sadā kṛṣṇa-saṅkīrtana kṛṣṇa-nāma, kṛṣṇa-kathā, kṛṣṇa ārādhana

SYNONYMS

ghare yāñā-returning home; kara-kindly do; sadā-always; kṛṣṇa-saṅkīrtana-chanting of the holy name of the Lord; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of the Lord; kṛṣṇa-kathā-discussion of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes; kṛṣṇa-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; ārādhana-worshiping.

TRANSLATION

Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu requested them all to return home and begin chanting the holy name congregationally. He also requested them to worship Kṛṣṇa, chant His holy name and discuss His holy pastimes.

PURPORT

The cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement, is very nicely explained by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu authoritatively. It is not that everyone has to take sannyāsa like Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Everyone can execute the cult of Kṛṣṇa consciousness at home, as ordered by the Lord. Everyone can congregationally chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa, the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. One can also discuss the subject matter of the Bhagavad-gītā and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and install Deities of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa or Gaura-Nitāi or both and worship them very carefully in one's own home. It is not that we have to open different centers all over the world. Whoever cares for the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement can install Deities at home and, under superior guidance, worship the Deity regularly, chanting the mahā-mantra and discussing the Bhagavad-gītā and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. We are actually teaching in our classes how to go about this. One who feels that he is not yet ready to live in a temple or undergo strict regulative principles in the temple-especially householders who live with a wife and children-can start a center at home by installing the Deity, worshiping the Lord morning and evening, chanting Hare Kṛṣṇa and discussing the Bhagavad-gītā and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Anyone can do this at home without difficulty, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu requested all the devotees present there to do so.

TEXT 191

ājñā deha nīlācale kariye gamana madhye madhye āsi' tomāya diba daraśana

SYNONYMS

ājñā deha-give permission; nīlācale-to Jagannātha Purī; kariye-I do; gamana-going; madhye madhye-sometimes; āsi'-coming here; tomāya-to all of you; diba-I shall give; daraśana-audience.

TRANSLATION

After thus instructing the devotees, the Lord asked their permission to go to Jagannātha Purī. He assured them that at intervals He would come there and meet them again and again.

TEXT 192

eta bali' sabākāre īṣat hāsiñā vidāya karila prabhu sammāna kariñā eta bali'-saying this; sabākāre-to all the devotees; īṣat hāsiñā-smiling very mildly; vidāya karila-bid them farewell; prabhu-the Lord; sammāna kariñā-showing all respect.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In this way, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, offering due respects to all the devotees and smiling very mildly, bid them farewell.

TEXT 193

sabā vidāya diyā prabhu calite kaila mana haridāsa kāndi' kahe karuṇa vacana

SYNONYMS

sabā vidāya diyā-asking everyone to return home; prabhu-the Lord; calite-to go; kaila-decided; mana-the mind; haridāsa kāndi'-Haridāsa Ṭhākura began to cry; kahe-says; karuṇa-pathetic; vacana-words.

TRANSLATION

After requesting all the devotees to return home, the Lord decided to go to Jagannātha Purī. At that time Haridāsa Ṭhākura began to cry and speak some pathetic words.

TEXT 194

nīlācale yābe tumi, mora kon gati nīlācale yāite mora nāhika śakati

SYNONYMS

nīlācale yābe tumi-You will go to Jagannātha Purī; mora-my; kon-what; gati-destination; nīlācale-to Jagannātha Purī; yāite-to go; mora-my; nāhika-there is not; śakati-strength.

TRANSLATION

Haridāsa Ṭhākura said, "You are going to Jagannātha Purī, and that is all right, but what will be my destination? I am not able to go to Jagannātha Purī."

PURPORT

Although Śrīla Haridāsa Ṭhākura was born in a Muslim family, he was accepted as a properly initiated brāhmaṇa. As such, he had every right to enter the temple of Jagannātha Purī, but because there were some rules and regulations stipulating that only brāhmaṇas, kṣatriyas, vaiśyas and śūdras (members of the varṇāśrama-dharma system) could enter, Haridāsa Ṭhākura, out of his great humility, did not want to violate these existing rules. He therefore said that he did not have the strength to enter into the temple, and he pointed out that if Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu lived within the temple, there would be no way for Haridāsa Ṭhākura to see Him. Later, when Haridāsa Ṭhākura went to Jagannātha Purī, he lived outside the temple on the beach by the sea. A monastery has now been erected there, known as Siddhabakula Maṭha. people go there to see the place of worship (bhajana-kuṭīra) of Haridāsa Ṭhākura.

TEXT 195

SYNONYMS

ācāryera-of Advaita Ācārya; śraddhā-faith; bhakti-devotion; gṛha-home; sampada-opulence; dhane-the wealth; sakala-all; saphala-successful; haila-became; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ārādhane-in the worship.

TRANSLATION

In this way all the opulences of Advaita Ācārya-His faith, devotion, home, riches and everything else-were successfully utilized in the worship of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

Advaita Ācārya set an ideal example for all householder devotees in His receiving of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His devotees and in His execution of a daily festival at His home. If one has the proper means and wealth, he should occasionally invite the devotees of Lord Caitanya, who are engaged in preaching all over the world, and hold a festival at home simply by distributing prasāda and talking about Kṛṣṇa during the day and holding congregational chanting for at least three hours in the evening. This procedure must be adopted in all centers of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. Thus they will daily perform saṅkīrtana-yajña. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.32) the daily performance of saṅkīrtana-yajña is recommended for this age (yajñaiḥ saṅkīrtana-prāyair yajanti hi su-medhasaḥ). One should worship Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His four associates, the Pañca-tattva, by distributing prasāda and holding congregational chanting. Indeed, that yajña or sacrifice is most recommended in this Age of Kali. In this age, other yajñas are not possible to perform, but this yajña can be performed everywhere and anywhere without difficulty.

TEXT 204

kāndite kāndite ācārya paścāt calilā

SYNONYMS

nirapekṣa-indifferent; hañā-becoming; prabhu-the Lord; śīghra-very quickly; calilā-went; kāndite kāndite-crying and crying; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; paścāt-behind; calilā-went.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was unaffected. He left swiftly, and Advaita Ācārya followed Him weeping.

PURPORT

As Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura explains, the word nirapekṣa means not being affected by anything material and remaining fixed in the service of the Lord. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not very much care for the roaring tumult and cry at the house of Advaita Ācārya, which He heard when starting for Jagannātha Purī. Worldly moralists may criticize Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu for being very cruel, but the Lord did not care for such criticism. As the world teacher of this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, He actually showed that a person seriously engaged in Kṛṣṇa consciousness should not be affected by worldly affection. The best course is to engage in rendering service to the Lord and to become callous to material objectives. Externally everyone is attached to material things, but if one becomes entangled in such things, he cannot make progress in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Therefore those who are engaged in Kṛṣṇa consciousness should not care for the so-called morality of the material world if that morality opposes the service of the Lord. As Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu has personally shown, one cannot properly execute Kṛṣṇa consciousness without being neutral.

SYNONYMS

gaṅgā-tīre-tīre-on the banks of the Ganges; prabhu-the Lord; cāri-jana-sāthe-with the other four persons; nīlādri-to Jagannātha Purī; calilā-proceeded; prabhu-the Lord; chatrabhoga-pathe-on the path of Chatrabhoga.

TRANSLATION

The Lord, with the other four persons, went along the banks of the Ganges through the path of Chatrabhoga toward Nīlādri, Jagannātha Purī.

PURPORT

In the southern section of the eastern railway, in the district of twenty-four pargaṇās, is a station named Magrāhāṭa. If one goes to the southeastern side of that station for some fourteen miles, there is a place called Jayanagara. About six miles south of this Jayanagara station is a village named Chatrabhoga. Sometimes this village is called Khāḍi. In this village is a Deity of Lord Śiva known as Vaijurkānātha. A festival takes place there every year during the months of March and April. The festival is known as Nandā-melā. At the present moment the Ganges does not flow there. On the same railway line is another station, known as Bāruipura, and near this station is another place, called Āṭisārā. Formerly this village was also situated on the banks of the Ganges. One can go from this village to Pāṇihāṭī and from there to Varāha-nagara, north of Calcutta. In those days the Ganges flowed to the south of Calcutta through Kālī-ghāṭa, which is still known as Ādi-gaṅgā. From Bāruipura, the Ganges branched out and flowed through Diamond Harbor near the Mathurāpura police station. It is to be noted that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed through all these places on His way to Jagannātha Purī.

TRANSLATION

In his book known as Caitanya-maṅgala [Caitanya-bhāgavata], Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has elaborately described the Lord's passage to Jagannātha Purī.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura states that while Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed through Bengal, He passed through Āṭisārā-grāma, Varāha-grāma and Chatrabhoga. He then reached the Orissa province, where He passed through Prayāga-ghāṭa, Suvarṇarekhā, Remuṇā, Yājapura, Vaitaraṇī, Daśāśvamedha-ghāṭa, Kaṭaka, Mahānadī, Bhuvaneśvara (where there is a big lake known as Bindu-sarovara), Kamalapura and Āthāranālā. In this way, passing through all these and other places, He reached Jagannātha Purī.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Third Chapter, describing Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu's stay at the house of Advaita Ācārya, His acceptance of the sannyāsa order and observation of daily festivals at Advaita Ācārya's house, His congregationally chanting the holy name of the Lord and His feasting with all the devotees.

18.5.4 Chapter 4

Śrī Mādhavendra Puri's Devotional Service

In his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives the following summary of the Fourth Chapter. Passing along the path of Chatrabhoga and coming to Vṛddhamantreśvara, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu reached the border of Orissa. On His way He enjoyed transcendental bliss by chanting and begging alms in different villages. In this way He reached the celebrated village of Remuṇā, where there is a Deity of Gopīnātha. There He narrated the story of Mādhavendra Purī, as He had heard it from His spiritual master, Īśvara Purī. The narration is as follows.

One night while in Govardhana, Mādhavendra Purī dreamed that the Gopāla Deity was within the forest. The next morning he invited his neighborhood friends to accompany him to excavate the Deity from the jungle. He then established the Deity of Śrī Gopālajī on top of Govardhana Hill with great pomp. Gopāla was worshiped, and the Annakūṭa festival was observed. This festival was known everywhere, and many people from the neighboring villages came to join. One night the Gopāla Deity again appeared to Mādhavendra Purī in a dream and asked him to go to Jagannātha Purī to collect some sandalwood pulp and smear it on the body of the Deity. Having received this order, Mādhavendra Purī immediately started for Orissa. Traveling through Bengal, he reached Remuṇā village and there received a pot of condensed milk (kṣīra) offered to the Deity of Gopīnāthajī. This pot of condensed milk was stolen by Gopīnātha and delivered to Mādhavendra Purī. Since then, the Gopīnātha Deity has been known as Kṣīra-corā-gopīnātha, the Deity who stole the pot of condensed milk. After reaching Jagannātha Purī, Mādhavendra Purī received permission from the King to take out one maṇa of sandalwood and eight ounces of camphor. Aided by two men, he brought these things to Remuṇā. Again he saw in a dream that Gopāla at Govardhana Hill desired that very sandalwood to be turned into pulp mixed with camphor and smeared over the body of Gopīnāthajī. Understanding that that would satisfy the Gopāla Deity at Govardhana, Mādhavendra Purī executed the order and returned to Jagannātha Purī.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu narrated this story for Lord Nityānanda Prabhu and other devotees and praised the pure devotional service of Mādhavendra Purī. When He recited some verses composed by Mādhavendra Purī, He went into an ecstatic mood. But when He saw that many people were assembled, He checked Himself and ate some sweet rice prasāda. Thus He passed that night, and the next morning He again started for Jagannātha Purī.

yasmai-unto whom; dātum-to deliver; corayan-stealing; kṣīra-bhāṇḍam-the pot of sweet rice; gopīnāthaḥ-Gopīnātha; kṣīra-corā-stealer of a pot of sweet rice; abhidhaḥ-celebrated; abhūt-became; śrī-gopālaḥ-Śrī Gopāla Deity; prāduḥrāsīt appeared; vaśaḥ-captivated; san-being; yat-premṇā-by his love; tam-unto him; mādhavendram-Mādhavendra Purī, who was in the Madhva-sampradāya; nataḥ asmi-I offer my respectful obeisances.

TRANSLATION

I offer my respectful obeisances unto Mādhavendra Purī, who was given a pot of sweet rice stolen by Śrī Gopīnātha, celebrated thereafter as Kṣīra-corā. Being pleased by Mādhavendra Purī's love, Śrī Gopāla, the Deity at Govardhana, appeared to the public vision.

PURPORT

Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura annotates that this Gopāla Deity was originally installed by Vajra, the grandson of Kṛṣṇa. Mādhavendra Purī rediscovered Gopāla and established Him on top of Govardhana Hill. This Gopāla Deity is still situated at Nāthadvāra and is under the management of descendants of Vallabhācārya. The worship of the Deity is very luxurious, and one who goes there can purchase varieties of prasāda by paying a small price.

TRANSLATION

After the first bathing, further bathings were conducted with pañca-gavya and then with pañcāmṛta. Then the mahā-snāna was performed with ghee and water, which had been brought in one hundred pots.

PURPORT

The ingredients of pañca-gavya are milk, yogurt, ghee (clarified butter), cow urine and cow dung. All these items come from the cow; therefore we can just imagine how important the cow is, since its urine and stool are required for bathing the Deity. The pañcāmṛta consists of five kinds of nectar-yogurt, milk, ghee, honey and sugar. The major portion of this preparation also comes from the cow. To make it more palatable, sugar and honey are added.

TEXT 62

TRANSLATION

After the mahā-snāna was finished, the Deity was again massaged with scented oil and His body made glossy. Then the last bathing ceremony was performed with scented water kept within a conchshell.

PURPORT

In his commentary on this occasion, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura quotes from the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa. Barley powder, wheat powder, vermilion powder, urad dāl powder and another powder preparation called āvāṭā (made by mixing banana powder and ground rice) are applied to the Deity's body with a brush made from the hair at the end of a cow's tail. This produces a nice finish. The oil smeared over the body of the Deity should be scented. To perform the mahā-snāna, at least two and a half mānas (about twenty-four gallons) of water are needed to pour over the body of the Deity.

TEXT 63

SYNONYMS

janā pāṅca-sāta-five to seven men; ruṭi-chapatis; kare-make; rāśi-rāśi-in great quantity; anna-vyañjana-food grains and vegetables; saba-all; rahe-remained; ghṛte-in ghee; bhāsi'-overflooding.

TRANSLATION

Five to seven men had prepared a huge quantity of chapatis, which were sufficiently covered with ghee [clarified butter], as were all the vegetables, rice and dāl.

TEXT 72

nava-vastra pāti' tāhe palāśera pāta rāndhi' rāndhi' tāra upara rāśi kaila bhāta

SYNONYMS

nava-vastra-new cloth; pāti'-spreading; tāhe-on that; palāśera pāta-the leaves of palāśa; rāndhi' rāndhi'-cooking and cooking; tāra upara-on that; rāśi-stacked; kaila-made; bhāta-rice.

TRANSLATION

All the cooked rice was stacked on palāśa leaves, which were on new cloths spread over the ground.

TEXT 73

tāra pāśe ruṭi-rāśira parvata ha-ila sūpa-ādi-vyañjana-bhāṇḍa caudike dharila

SYNONYMS

tāra pāśe-around the stack of rice; ruṭi-of chapatis; rāśira-of stacks; parvata-another small hill; ha-ila-became; sūpa-ādi-of all liquid vegetables; vyañjana-and of all other vegetables; bhāṇḍa-pots; caudike-all around; dharila-were placed.

TRANSLATION

Around the stack of cooked rice were stacks of chapatis, and all the vegetables and liquid vegetable preparations were placed in different pots and put around them.

TEXT 74

tāra pāśe dadhi, dugdha, māṭhā, śikhariṇī pāyasa, mathanī, sara pāśe dhari āni'

SYNONYMS

tāra pāśe-by the side of the vegetables; dadhi-yogurt; dugdha-milk; māṭhā-buttermilk; śikhariṇī-a sweet preparation made with yogurt; pāyasa-sweet rice; mathanī-cream; sara-solid cream collected over yogurt; pāśe-by the side; dhari-keeping; āni'-bringing.

TRANSLATION

Pots of yogurt, milk, buttermilk and śikhariṇī, sweet rice, cream and solid cream were placed alongside the vegetables.

PURPORT

In this kind of ceremony, which is called Annakūṭa, cooked rice is stacked like a small mountain for prasāda distribution.

TEXT 75

hena-mate anna-kūṭa karila sājana purī-gosāñi gopālere kaila samarpaṇa

SYNONYMS

hena-mate-in this way; anna-kūṭa-of the Annakūṭa ceremony; karila-did; sājana-performance; purī-gosāñi-Mādhavendra Purī; gopālere-unto the Gopāla Deity; kaila-did; samarpaṇa-offering.

TRANSLATION

In this way the Annakūṭa ceremony was performed, and Mādhavendra Purī Gosvāmī personally offered everything to Gopāla.

TEXT 76

aneka ghaṭa bhari' dila suvāsita jala bahu-dinera kṣudhāya gopāla khāila sakala

SYNONYMS

aneka ghaṭa-many waterpots; bhari'-filled; dila-offered; suvāsita-scented; jala-water; bahu-dinera-of many days; kṣudhāya-by hunger; gopāla-Gopāla; khāila-ate; sakala-everything.

TRANSLATION

Many waterpots were filled with scented water for drinking, and Lord Śrī Gopāla, who had been hungry for many days, ate everything offered to Him.

TEXT 77

yadyapi gopāla saba anna-vyañjana khāila tāṅra hasta-sparśe punaḥ temani ha-ila yadyapi-although; gopāla-Lord Gopāla; saba-all; anna-vyañjana-dāl, rice and vegetables; khāila-ate; tāṅra-His; hasta-of the hands; sparśe-by the touch; punaḥ-again; temani-exactly as before; ha-ila-became.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Although Śrī Gopāla ate everything offered, still, by the touch of His transcendental hand, everything remained as before.

PURPORT

The atheists cannot understand how the Supreme Personality of Godhead, appearing in the form of the Deity, can eat all the food offered by His devotees. In the Bhagavad-gītā (9.26) Kṛṣṇa says:

patraṁ puṣpaṁ phalaṁ toyaṁ yo me bhaktyā prayacchati
tad ahaṁ bhakty-upahṛtam
aśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ

"If one offers Me with love and devotion a leaf, a flower, a fruit or water, I will accept it." (Bg. 9.26) The Lord is pūrṇa, complete, and therefore He eats everything offered by His devotees. However, by the touch of His transcendental hand, all the food remains exactly as before. It is the quality that is changed. Before the food was offered, it was something else, but after it is offered the food acquires a transcendental quality. Because the Lord is pūrṇa, He remains the same even after eating. Pūrṇasya pūrṇam ādāya pūrṇam evāvaśiṣyate. The food offered to Kṛṣṇa is qualitatively as good as Kṛṣṇa; just as Kṛṣṇa is avyaya, indestructible, the food eaten by Kṛṣṇa, being identical with Him, remains as before.

Apart from this, Kṛṣṇa can eat the food with any one of His transcendental senses. He can eat by seeing the food or by touching it. Nor should one think that it is necessary for Kṛṣṇa to eat. He does not become hungry like an ordinary human being; nonetheless, He presents Himself as being hungry, and as such, He can eat everything and anything, regardless of quantity. The philosophy underlying Kṛṣṇa's eating is understandable by our transcendental senses. When our senses are purified by constantly being engaged in the devotional service of the Lord, we can understand Kṛṣṇa's activities, names, forms, qualities, pastimes and entourage.

ataḥ śrī-kṛṣṇa-nāmādi
na bhaved grāhyam indriyaiḥ
sevonmukhe hi jihvādau
svayam eva sphuraty adaḥ

"No one can understand Kṛṣṇa by the blunt material senses. But He reveals Himself to the devotees, being pleased with them for their transcendental loving service unto Him." (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 1.2.234) The devotees understand Kṛṣṇa through revelation. It is not possible for a mundane scholar to understand Kṛṣṇa and His pastimes through research work on the nondevotional platform.

TEXT 78

ihā anubhava kaila mādhava gosāñi tāṅra ṭhāñi gopālera lukāna kichu nāi ihā-this; anubhava kaila-perceived; mādhava gosāñi-Mādhavendra Purī Gosvāmī; tāṅra ṭhāñi-before him; gopālera-of Lord Gopāla; lukāna-secret; kichu-anything; nāi-there is not.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

How Gopāla ate everything while the food remained the same was transcendentally perceived by Mādhavendra Purī Gosvāmī; nothing remains a secret to the devotees of the Lord.

TEXT 79

eka-dinera udyoge aiche mahotsava kaila gopāla-prabhāve haya, anye nā jānila

SYNONYMS

eka-dinera udyoge-by one day's attempt; aiche-such; mahotsava-festival; kaila-performed; gopāla-of Gopāla; prabhāve-by the potency; haya-is possible; anye-others; nā-not; jānila-know.

TRANSLATION

The wonderful festival and installation of Śrī Gopālajī was arranged in one day. Certainly all this was accomplished by the potency of Gopāla. No one but a devotee can understand this.

PURPORT

The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement has spread all over the world within a very short time (within five years), and mundane people are very astonished at this. However, by the grace of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, we understand that everything is possible by the grace of Kṛṣṇa. Why does Kṛṣṇa have to take five years? In five days He can spread His name and fame all over the world like wildfire. Those who have faith in and devotion to Kṛṣṇa can understand that these things happen so wonderfully by the grace of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. We are simply the instruments. In the fierce Battle of Kurukṣetra, Arjuna was victorious within eighteen days simply because Kṛṣṇa's grace was on his side.

yatra yogeśvaraḥ kṛṣṇo yatra pārtho dhanur-dharaḥ tatra śrīr vijayo bhūtir dhruvā nītir matir mama

"Wherever there is Kṛṣṇa, the master of all mystics, and wherever there is Arjuna, the supreme archer, there will also certainly be opulence, victory, extraordinary power and morality. That is my opinion." (Bg. 18.78)

If the preachers in our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement are sincere devotees of Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa will always be with them because He is very kind and favorable to all His devotees. Just as Arjuna and Kṛṣṇa were victorious in the Battle of Kurukṣetra, this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement will surely emerge victorious if we but remain sincere devotees of the Lord and serve the Lord according to the advice of predecessors (the six Gosvāmīs and other devotees of the Lord). As Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has stated: tāṅdera caraṇa sevi bhakta-sane vāsa, janame janame haya ei abhilāṣa. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness devotees must always desire to remain in the society of devotees. Bhakta-sane vāsa: they cannot go outside the Kṛṣṇa conscious society or the movement. Within the society we must try to serve the predecessors by preaching Caitanya Mahāprabhu's cult and spreading His name and fame all over the world. If we attempt this seriously within the society, it will be successfully done. There is no question of estimating how this will happen in the mundane sense. But without a doubt, it happens by the grace of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 80

ācamana diyā dila viḍaka-sañcaya ārati karila loke, kare jaya jaya

SYNONYMS

ācamana-washing water; diyā-offering; dila-gave; viḍaka-sañcaya-betel nuts; ārati karila-ārati was performed; loke-all the people; kare-chant; jaya jaya-the words jaya jaya, "all glories."

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī offered water to Gopāla for washing His mouth, and he gave Him betel nuts to chew. Then, while ārati was performed, all the people chanted, ”Jaya, Jaya!” [”All glories to Gopāla!”].

TEXT 81

śayyā karāila, nūtana khāṭa ānāñā nava vastra āni' tāra upare pātiyā

SYNONYMS

śayyā-a bedstead; karāila-made; nūtana-new; khāṭa-bedstead; ānāñā-bringing; nava vastra-new cloth; āni'-bringing; tāra-of the cot; upare-on the top; pātiyā-spreading.

TRANSLATION

Arranging for the Lord's rest, Śrī Mādhavendra Purī brought a new cot, and over this he spread a new bedspread and thus made the bed ready.

TEXT 82

tṛṇa-ṭāṭi diyā cāri-dik āvarila uparete eka ṭāṭi diyā ācchādila

SYNONYMS

tṛṇa-ṭāṭi-straw mattress; diyā-with; cāri-dik-all around; āvarila-covered; uparete-on top; eka-one; ṭāṭi-similar straw mattress; diyā-with; ācchādila-covered.

TRANSLATION

A temporary temple was constructed by covering the bed all around with a straw mattress. Thus there was a bed and a straw mattress to cover it.

TEXT 83

purī-gosāñi ājñā dila sakala brāhmaṇe ā-bāla-vṛddha grāmera loka karāha bhojane purī-gosāñi-Mādhavendra Purī; ājñā-order; dila-gave; sakala brāhmaṇe-to all the brāhmaṇas; ā-bāla-vṛddha-beginning from the children up to the old persons; grāmera-of the village; loka-the people; karāha-make; bhojane-take prasāda.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After the Lord was laid down to rest on the bed, Mādhavendra Purī gathered all the brāhmaṇas who had prepared the prasāda and said to them, ”Now feed everyone sumptuously, from the children on up to the aged!”

TEXT 84

sabe vasi' krame krame bhojana karila brāhmaṇa-brāhmaṇī-gaṇe āge khāoyāila

SYNONYMS

sabe-all; vasi'-sitting; krame krame-by and by; bhojana karila-honored prasāda and ate it; brāhmaṇa-brāhmaṇī-gaṇe-the brāhmaṇas and their wives; āge-first; khāoyāila-were fed.

TRANSLATION

All the people gathered there sat down to honor the prasāda, and by and by they took food. All the brāhmaṇas and their wives were fed first.

PURPORT

According to the varṇāśrama system, the brāhmaṇas are always honored first. Thus at the festival, the brāhmaṇas and their wives were first offered the remnants of food, and then the others (kṣatriyas, vaiśyas and śūdras). This has always been the system, and it is still prevalent in India, even though the caste brāhmaṇas are not qualified. The system is still current due to the varṇāśrama institutional rules and regulations.

TEXT 85

SYNONYMS

anya-other; grāmera-of the villages; loka-people; yata-all; dekhite-to see; āila-came; gopāla-the Lord Gopāla; dekhiyā-seeing; saba-all; prasāda-remnants of food; khāila-partook.

TRANSLATION

Not only did the people of Govardhana village take prasāda, but also those who came from other villages. They also saw the Deity of Gopāla and were offered prasāda to eat.

TEXT 86

SYNONYMS

dekhiyā-by seeing; purīra-of Mādhavendra Purī; prabhāva-the influence; loke-all the people; camatkāra-struck with wonder; pūrva-formerly; anna-kūṭa-the Annakūṭa ceremony during the time of Kṛṣṇa; yena-as if; haila-became; sākṣātkāra-directly manifest.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the influence of Mādhavendra Purī, all the people gathered there were struck with wonder. They saw that the Annakūṭa ceremony, which had been performed before during the time of Kṛṣṇa, was now taking place again by the mercy of Śrī Mādhavendra Purī.

PURPORT

Formerly, at the end of Dvāpara-yuga, all the cowherd men of Vṛndāvana had arranged to worship King Indra, but they gave this worship up, following the advice of Kṛṣṇa. Instead, they performed a ceremony whereby they worshiped the cows, brāhmaṇas and Govardhana Hill. At that time Kṛṣṇa expanded Himself and declared, "I am Govardhana Hill." In this way He accepted all the paraphernalia and food offered to Govardhana Hill. It is stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.24.26, 31-33):

pacyantāṁ vividhāḥ pākāḥ sūpāntāḥ pāyasādayaḥ saṁyāvā-pūpa-śaṣkulyaḥ sarva-dohaś ca gṛhyatām kālātmanā bhagavatā proktaṁ niśamya nandādyāḥ sādhv agṛhṇanta tad-vacaḥ tathā ca vyadadhuḥ sarvaṁ yathāha madhusūdanaḥ vācayitvā svasty-ayanaṁ tad-dravyeṇa giri-dvijān upahṛtya balīn sarvān ādṛtā yavasaṁ gavām go-dhanāni puras-kṛtya giriṁ cakruḥ pradakṣiṇam

" 'Prepare very nice foods of all descriptions from the grains and ghee collected for the yajña. Prepare rice, dāl, then halavah, pākorā, purī and all kinds of milk preparations like sweet rice, sweetballs, sandeśa, rasagullā and lāḍḍu.'

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, therefore advised the cowherd men to stop the Indra-yajña and begin the Govardhana-pūjā to chastise Indra, who was very much puffed up at being the supreme controller of the heavenly planets. The honest and simple cowherd men, headed by Nanda Mahārāja, accepted Kṛṣṇa's proposal and executed in detail everything He advised. They performed Govardhana worship and circumambulation of the hill. According to the instruction of Lord Kṛṣṇa, Nanda Mahārāja and the cowherd men called in learned brāhmaṇas and began to worship Govardhana Hill by chanting Vedic hymns and offering prasāda. The inhabitants of Vṛndāvana assembled together, decorated their cows and gave them grass. Keeping the cows in front, they began to circumambulate Govardhana Hill."

TEXT 87

sakala brāhmaṇe purī vaiṣṇava karila sei sei sevā-madhye sabā niyojila

SYNONYMS

sakala brāhmaṇe-all the brāhmaṇas who were present there; purī-Mādhavendra Purī Gosvāmī; vaiṣṇava karila-elevated to the position of Vaiṣṇavas; sei sei-under different divisions; sevā-madhye-in rendering service; sabā-all of them; niyojila-were engaged.

TRANSLATION

All the brāhmaṇas present on that occasion were initiated by Mādhavendra Purī into the Vaiṣṇava cult, and Mādhavendra Purī engaged them in different types of service.

PURPORT

In the scriptures it is stated: ṣaṭ-karma-nipuṇo vipro mantra-tantra-viśāradaḥ. A qualified brāhmaṇa must be expert in the occupational duties of a brāhmaṇa. His duties are mentioned as six brahminical engagements. Paṭhana means that a brāhmaṇa must be conversant with the Vedic scriptures. He must also be able to teach others to study the Vedic scriptures. This is pāṭhana. He must also be expert in worshiping different deities and in performing the Vedic rituals (yajana). On account of this yajana, the brāhmaṇa, being the head of society, performs all the Vedic rituals for kṣatriyas, vaiśyas, and śūdras. This is called yājana, assisting others in performing ceremonies. The remaining two items are dāna and pratigraha. The brāhmaṇa accepts all kinds of contributions (pratigraha) from his followers (namely, the kṣatriyas, vaiśyas and śūdras). But he does not keep all the money. He keeps only as much as required and gives the balance to others in charity (dāna).

In order for such a qualified brāhmaṇa to worship the Deity, he must be a Vaiṣṇava. Thus the Vaiṣṇava's position is superior to that of the brāhmaṇa. This example given by Mādhavendra Purī confirms that even though a brāhmaṇa may be very expert, he cannot become a priest or servitor of the viṣṇu-mūrti unless he is initiated in vaiṣṇava-mantra. After installing the Deity of Gopāla, Mādhavendra Purī initiated all the brāhmaṇas into Vaiṣṇavism. He then allotted the brāhmaṇas different types of service to the Deity. From four in the morning until ten at night (from maṅgala-ārātrika to śayana-ārātrika), there must be at least five or six brāhmaṇas to take care of the Deity. Six ārātrikas are performed in the temple, and food is frequently offered to the Deity and the prasāda distributed. This is the method of worshiping the Deity according to the rules and regulations set by predecessors. Our sampradāya belongs to the disciplic succession of Mādhavendra Purī, who belonged to the Madhva-sampradāya. We are in the disciplic succession of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who was initiated by Śrī Īśvara Purī, a disciple of Mādhavendra Purī's. Our sampradāya is therefore called the Madhva-Gauḍīya-sampradāya. As such, we must carefully follow in the footsteps of Śrī Mādhavendra Purī and observe how he installed the Gopāla Deity on top of Govardhana Hill, how he arranged and performed the Annakūṭa ceremony in only one day, and so forth. Our installation of Deities in America and in the wealthy countries of Europe should be carried out in terms of Śrī Mādhavendra Purī's activities. All the servitors of the Deity must be strictly qualified as brāhmaṇas and, specifically, must engage in the Vaiṣṇava custom of offering as much prasāda as possible and distributing it to the devotees who visit the temple to see the Lord.

punaḥ dina-śeṣe prabhura karāila utthāna kichu bhoga lāgāila karāila jala-pāna

SYNONYMS

punaḥ-again; dina-śeṣe-at the end of the day; prabhura-of the Lord; karāila-caused to do; utthāna-rising; kichu-some; bhoga-food; lāgāila-offered; karāila-caused to do; jala-water; pāna-drinking.

TRANSLATION

After taking rest, the Deity must be awakened at the end of the day, and immediately some food and some water must be offered to Him.

PURPORT

This offering is called vaikāli-bhoga, food offered at the end of the day.

TEXT 89

gopāla prakaṭa haila,–deśe śabda haila āśa-pāśa grāmera loka dekhite āila gopāla-Lord Gopāla; prakaṭa haila-has appeared; deśe-throughout the country; śabda haila-the news spread; āśa-pāśa-neighboring; grāmera-of the villages; loka-the people; dekhite āila-came to see.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When it was advertised throughout the country that Lord Gopāla had appeared atop Govardhana Hill, all the people from neighboring villages came to see the Deity.

TEXT 90

ekeka dina ekeka grāme la-ila māgiñā anna-kūṭa kare sabe harașita hañā

SYNONYMS

ekeka dina-one day after another; ekeka grāme-one village after another; la-ila-took permission; māgiñā-begging; anna-kūṭa kare-perform the Annakūṭa ceremony; sabe-all; harașita-pleased; hañā-becoming.

TRANSLATION

One village after another was pleased to beg Mādhavendra Purī to allot them one day to perform the Annakūṭa ceremony. Thus, day after day, the Annakūṭa ceremony was performed for some time.

TEXT 91

rātri-kāle ṭhākurere karāiyā śayana purī-gosāñi kaila kichu gavya bhojana

SYNONYMS

rātri-kāle-at night; ṭhākurere-the Deity; karāiyā-causing to do; śayana-lying down for rest; purī-gosāñi-Mādhavendra Purī; kaila-did; kichu-some; gavya-milk preparation; bhojana-eating.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Mādhavendra Purī did not eat anything throughout the day, but at night, after laying the Deity down to rest, he took a milk preparation.

TEXT 92

prātaḥ-kāle punaḥ taiche karila sevana anna lañā eka-grāmera āila loka-gaṇa prātaḥ-kāle-in the morning; punaḥ-again; taiche-just as before; karila-rendered; sevana-service; anna lañā-with food grains; eka-grāmera-of one village; āila-came; loka-gaṇa-the people.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The next morning, the rendering of service to the Deity began again, and people from one village arrived with all kinds of food grains.

TEXT 93

anna, ghṛta, dadhi, dugdha,–grāme yata chila gopālera āge loka āniyā dharila

SYNONYMS

anna-food grain; ghṛta-ghee, or clarified butter; dadhi-yogurt; dugdha-milk; grāme-in the village; yata-as much; chila-as there was; gopālera āge-before the Deity Gopāla; loka-all people; āniyā-bringing; dharila-placed.

TRANSLATION

The inhabitants of the village brought to the Deity of Gopāla as much food grains, ghee, yogurt and milk as they had in their village.

PURPORT

Anna, ghṛta, dadhi and dugdha are food grains, ghee, yogurt and milk. Actually these are the basis of all food. Vegetables and fruits are subsidiary. Hundreds and thousands of preparations can be made out of grains, vegetables, ghee, milk and yogurt. The food offered to Gopāla in the Annakūṭa ceremony contained only these five ingredients. Only demoniac people are attracted to other types of food, which we will not even mention in this connection. We should understand that in order to prepare nutritious food, we require only grains, ghee, yogurt and milk. We cannot offer anything else to the Deity. The Vaiṣṇava, the perfect human being, does not accept anything not offered to the Deity. People are often frustrated with national food policies, but from the Vedic scriptures we find that if there are sufficient cows and grains, the entire food problem is solved. The vaiśyas (people engaged in agriculture and commerce) are therefore recommended in the Bhagavad-gītā to produce grains and give protection to cows. Cows are the most important animal because they produce the miracle food, milk, from which we can prepare ghee and yogurt.

The perfection of human civilization depends on Kṛṣṇa consciousness, which recommends Deity worship. Preparations made from vegetables, grains, milk, ghee and yogurt are offered to the Deity and then distributed. Here we can see the difference between the East and the West. The people who came to see the Deity of Gopāla brought all kinds of food to offer the Deity. They brought all the food they had in stock, and they came before the Deity not only to accept prasāda for themselves but to distribute it to others. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement vigorously approves this practice of preparing food, offering it to the Deity and distributing it to the general population. This activity should be extended universally to stop sinful eating habits as well as other behavior befitting only demons. A demoniac civilization will never bring peace within the world. Since eating is the first necessity in human society, those engaged in solving the problems of preparing and distributing food should take lessons from Mādhavendra Purī and execute the Annakūṭa ceremony. When the people take to eating only prasāda offered to the Deity, all the demons will be turned into Vaiṣṇavas. When the people are Kṛṣṇa conscious, naturally the government will be so also. A Kṛṣṇa conscious man is always a very liberal well-wisher of everyone. When such men head the government, the people will certainly be sinless. They will no longer be disturbing demons. It is then and then only that a peaceful condition can prevail in society.

TEXT 94

pūrva-dina-prāya vipra karila randhana taiche anna-kūṭa gopāla karila bhojana

SYNONYMS

pūrva-dina-prāya-almost like the previous day; vipra-all the brāhmaṇas; karila-did; randhana-cooking; taiche-similarly; anna-kūṭa-heaps of food; gopāla-the Deity of Lord Gopāla; karila-did; bhojana-eating.

TRANSLATION

The next day, almost like before, there was an Annakūṭa ceremony. All the brāhmaṇas prepared foods and Gopāla accepted them.

TEXT 95

vraja-vāsī lokera kṛṣṇe sahaja pirīti gopālera sahaja-prīti vraja-vāsi-prati

SYNONYMS

vraja-vāsī-the inhabitants of Vṛndāvana (Vrajabhūmi); lokera-of the people; kṛṣṇe-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; sahaja-natural; pirīti-love; gopālera-of Lord Gopāla; sahaja-natural; prīti-love; vraja-vāsi-prati-toward the inhabitants of Vrajabhūmi.

TRANSLATION

The ideal place to execute Kṛṣṇa consciousness is Vrajabhūmi, or Vṛndāvana, where the people are naturally inclined to love Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa is naturally inclined to love them.

PURPORT

In the Bhagavad-gītā it is said: ye yathā māṁ prapadyante tāṁs tathaiva bhajāmy aham. There is a responsive cooperation between the Supreme Lord Kṛṣṇa and His devotees. The more a devotee sincerely loves Kṛṣṇa, the more Kṛṣṇa reciprocates, so much so that a highly advanced devotee can talk with Kṛṣṇa face to face. Kṛṣṇa confirms this in the Bhagavad-gītā (10.10):

teṣāṁ satata-yuktānāṁ
bhajatāṁ prīti-pūrvakam
dadāmi buddhi-yogaṁ taṁ
yena mām upayānti te

"To those who are constantly devoted to worshiping Me with love, I give the understanding by which they can come to Me." The actual mission of human life is to understand Kṛṣṇa and return home, back to Godhead. Therefore one who is sincerely engaged in the service of the Lord with love and faith can talk with Kṛṣṇa and receive instructions by which he can speedily return home, back to Godhead. Today many scholars defend the science of religion, and they have some conception of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but religion without practical experience of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is no religion at all. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam describes this as a form of cheating. Religion means abiding by the orders of Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. If one is not qualified to talk with Him and take lessons from Him, how can one understand the principles of religion? Thus talks of religion or religious experience without Kṛṣṇa consciousness are a useless waste of time.

SYNONYMS

āśa-pāśa-neighboring; vraja-bhūmera-of Vrajabhūmi; yata-all; grāma-villages; saba-all; eka eka-one after another; dina-days; sabe-all; kare-perform; mahā-utsava-festivals.

TRANSLATION

All the villages in neighboring Vrajabhūmi [Vṛndāvana] became aware of the appearance of Gopāla, and all the people from these villages came to see Him. Day after day they all performed the Annakūṭa ceremony.

TEXT 98

gopāla-prakaṭa śuni' nānā deśa haite nānā dravya lañā loka lāgila āsite gopāla-of the Deity of Gopāla; prakaṭa-appearance; śuni'-hearing; nānā-various; deśa-countries; haite-from; nānā-various; dravya-things; lañā-bringing; loka-people; lāgila-began; āsite-to come.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In this way not only the neighboring villages but all the other provinces came to know of Gopāla's appearance. Thus people came from all over, bringing a variety of presentations.

TEXT 99

SYNONYMS

eka-one; mahā-dhanī-very rich man; kṣatriya-of the royal order; karāila-constructed; mandira-a temple; keha-someone; pāka-bhāṇḍāra-clay pots for cooking; kaila-made; keha-someone; ta'-certainly; prācīra-the boundary walls.

TRANSLATION

One very rich kṣatriya of the royal order constructed a temple, someone made cooking utensils, and someone constructed boundary walls.

TEXT 102

eka eka vraja-vāsī eka eka gābhī dila sahasra sahasra gābhī gopālera haila

SYNONYMS

eka eka-each and every; vraja-vāsī-resident of Vṛndāvana; eka eka-one; gābhī-cow; dila-contributed; sahasra sahasra-thousands and thousands; gābhī-cows; gopālera-of Gopāla; haila-there were.

TRANSLATION

Each and every family residing in the land of Vrajabhūmi contributed one cow. In this way, thousands of cows became the property of Gopāla.

PURPORT

This is the way to install the Deity, construct the temple and increase the property of the temple. Everyone should be enthusiastic to contribute to the construction of the temple for the Deity, and everyone should also contribute food for the distribution of prasāda. The devotees should preach the gospel of devotional service and thus engage people in practical service to the Deity. Wealthy people can also be attracted to take part in these activities. In this way everyone will become spiritually inclined, and the entire society will be converted to Kṛṣṇa consciousness. The desire to satisfy the material senses will automatically diminish, and the senses will become so purified that they will be able to engage in bhakti (devotional service to the Lord). Hṛṣīkeṇa hṛṣīkeśa-sevanaṁ bhaktir ucyate. By serving the Lord, one's senses are gradually purified. The engagement of one's purified senses in the service of Lord Hṛṣīkeśa is called bhakti. When the dormant propensity for bhakti is awakened, one can understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead as He is. Bhaktyā mām abhijānāti yāvān yaś cāsmi tattvataḥ. (Bg. 18.55) This is the process of giving humanity the chance to awaken Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Thus people can perfect their lives in all respects.

TEXT 103

gauḍa ha-ite āilā dui vairāgī brāhmaṇa purī-gosāñi rākhila tāre kariyā yatana

SYNONYMS

gauḍa ha-ite-from Bengal; āilā-came; dui-two; vairāgī-of the renounced order; brāhmaṇa-persons born in brāhmaṇa families; purī-gosāñi-Mādhavendra Purī; rākhila-kept; tāre-them; kariyā-making; yatana-all efforts.

TRANSLATION

Eventually two brāhmaṇas in the renounced order arrived from Bengal, and Mādhavendra Purī, who liked them very much, kept them in Vṛndāvana and gave them all kinds of comforts.

TEXT 104

sei dui śiṣya kari' sevā samarpila rāja-sevā haya,–purīra ānanda bāḍila

SYNONYMS

sei dui-these two persons; śiṣya kari'-initiating; sevā-with the service; samarpila-entrusted; rāja-sevā-gorgeous performance of service; haya-is; purīra-of Mādhavendra Purī; ānanda-pleasure; bāḍila-increased.

TRANSLATION

These two were then initiated by Mādhavendra Purī, and he entrusted them with the daily service of the Lord. This service was performed continuously, and the worship of the Deity became very gorgeous. Thus Mādhavendra Purī was very pleased.

PURPORT

The six Gosvāmīs and their followers started many temples, such as the temples of Govinda, Gopīnātha, Madana-mohana, Rādhā-Dāmodara, Śyāmasundara, Rādhā-ramaṇa and Gokulānanda. The disciples of the Gosvāmīs were entrusted with the sevā-pūjā (Deity worship) of these temples. It was not that the disciples were family members of the original Gosvāmīs. All the Gosvāmīs were in the renounced order of life, and Jīva Gosvāmī in particular was a lifelong brahmacārī. At present, sevāitas assume the title of gosvāmī on the basis of their being engaged as sevāitas of the Deity. The sevāitas who have inherited their positions now assume proprietorship of the temples, and some of them are selling the Deities' property as if it were their own. However, the temples did not originally belong to these sevāitas.

TEXT 105

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; vatsara-years; dui-two; karila-performed; sevana-worship; eka-dina-one day; purī-gosāñi-Mādhavendra Purī; dekhila-saw; svapana-a dream.

TRANSLATION

In this way the Deity worship in the temple was very gorgeously performed for two years. Then one day Mādhavendra Purī had a dream.

TEXT 106

gopāla kahe, purī āmāra tāpa nāhi yāya malayaja-candana lepa', tabe se juḍāya

SYNONYMS

gopāla-the Deity of Gopāla; kahe-said; purī-My dear Mādhavendra Purī; āmāra-My; tāpa-body temperature; nāhi-does not; yāya-go away; malayaja-candana-sandalwood produced in the Malaya Hills; lepa'-smear over the body; tabe-then; se-that; juḍāya-cools.

TRANSLATION

In his dream, Mādhavendra Purī saw Gopāla, who said, "My bodily temperature still has not decreased. Please bring sandalwood from the Malaya province and smear the pulp over My body to cool Me.

PURPORT

The Deity of Gopāla had been buried within the jungle for many years, and although He was installed and was offered thousands of pots of water, He still felt very hot. He therefore asked Mādhavendra Purī to bring sandalwood from the Malaya province. Sandalwood produced in Malaya is very popular. That province is situated on the western ghāṭa, and the hill Nīlagiri is sometimes known as Malaya Hill. The word malaya-ja is used to indicate the sandalwood produced in the Malaya province. Sometimes the word Malaya refers to the modern country of Malaysia. Formerly this country also produced sandalwood, but now they have found it profitable to produce rubber trees. Although the Vedic culture was once prevalent in Malaysia, now all the inhabitants are Muslims. The Vedic culture is now lost in Malaysia, Java and Indonesia.

TEXT 107

malayaja āna, yāñā nīlācala haite anye haite nahe, tumi calaha tvarite malaya-ja-sandalwood; āna-bring; yāñā-coming; nīlācala haite-from Jagannātha Purī; anye-others; haite-from; nahe-not; tumi-you; calaha-go; tvarite-quickly.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Bring sandalwood pulp from Jagannātha Purī. Kindly go quickly. Since no one else can do it, you must."

TEXT 108

SYNONYMS

śāntipura-to the place known as Śāntipura; āilā-came; advaita-ācāryera-of Śrī Advaita Ācārya; ghare-to the home; purīra prema-the ecstatic love of Mādhavendra Purī; dekhi'-seeing; ācārya-Advaita Ācārya; ānanda-pleased; antare-within Himself.

TRANSLATION

When Mādhavendra Purī arrived at the house of Advaita Ācārya in Śāntipura, the Ācārya became very pleased upon seeing the ecstatic love of Godhead manifest in Mādhavendra Purī.

TEXT 111

tāṅra ṭhāñi mantra laila yatana kariñā calilā dakṣiṇe purī tāṅre dīkṣā diñā tāṅra ṭhāñi-from him; mantra-initiation; laila-accepted; yatana-efforts; kariñā-making; calilā-started; dakṣiṇe-toward the south; purī-Mādhavendra Purī; tāṅre-to Him (Advaita Ācārya); dīkṣā-initiation; diñā-giving.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Advaita Ācārya begged to be initiated by Mādhavendra Purī. After initiating Him, Mādhavendra Purī started for South India.

PURPORT

In this connection, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that Advaita Ācārya took initiation from Mādhavendra Purī, who was a sannyāsī in the disciplic succession of the Madhva-sampradāya. According to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu:

kibā vipra kibā nyāsī śūdra kene naya, yei kṛṣṇa-tattva-vettā, sei 'guru' haya

"A person may be a brāhmaṇa, a sannyāsī, a śūdra or whatever, but if he is well conversant in the science of Kṛṣṇa, he can become a guru." (Cc. Madhya 8.128) This statement is supported by Śrī Mādhavendra Purī. According to the pañcarātra injunction, only a householder brāhmaṇa can initiate. Others cannot. When a person is initiated, it is assumed that he has become a brāhmaṇa; without being initiated by a proper brāhmaṇa, one cannot be converted into a brāhmaṇa. In other words, unless one is a brāhmaṇa, he cannot make another a brāhmaṇa. A gṛhastha-brāhmaṇa partaking of the varṇāśrama-dharma institution can secure various types of paraphernalia to worship Lord Viṣṇu through his honest labor. Actually, people beg to be initiated by these householder brāhmaṇas just to become successful in the varṇāśrama institution or to become free from material desires. It is therefore necessary for a spiritual master in the gṛhastha-āśrama to be a strict Vaiṣṇava. A spiritual master from the sannyāsa order has very little opportunity to perform arcana, Deity worship, but when one accepts a spiritual master from the transcendental sannyāsīs, the principle of Deity worship is not at all neglected. To implement this conclusion, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu gave us His opinion in the verse kibā vipra kibā nyāsī, etc. This indicates that the Lord understood the weakness of society in its maintaining that only a gṛhastha-brāhmaṇa should be a spiritual master. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu indicated that it does not matter whether the spiritual master is a gṛhastha (householder), a sannyāsī or even a śūdra. A spiritual master simply must be conversant in the essence of the śāstra; he must understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Only then can one become a spiritual master. Dīkṣā actually means initiating a disciple with transcendental knowledge by which he becomes freed from all material contamination.

TEXT 112

SYNONYMS

nṛtya-gīta kari'-after performing dancing and chanting; jaga-mohane-in the corridor of the temple; vasilā-he sat down; kyā kyā-what; bhoga-foods; lāge-they offer; brāhmaṇe-from the brāhmaṇa priest; puchilā-inquired.

TRANSLATION

In the corridor of the temple, from which people generally viewed the Deity, Mādhavendra Purī chanted and danced. Then he sat down there and asked a brāhmaṇa what kinds of foods they offered to the Deity.

TEXT 114

sevāra sauṣṭhava dekhi' ānandita mane uttama bhoga lāge–ethā bujhi anumāne

SYNONYMS

sevāra-of the worship; sauṣṭhava-excellence; dekhi'-seeing; ānandita-pleased; mane-in the mind; uttama bhoga-first-class foods; lāge-they offer; ethā-thus; bujhi-I understand; anumāne-by deduction.

TRANSLATION

From the excellence of the arrangements, Mādhavendra Purī understood by deduction that only the best food was offered.

TEXT 115

yaiche ihā bhoga lāge, sakala-i puchiba taiche bhiyāne bhoga gopāle lāgāiba yaiche-just like; ihā-here; bhoga-foods; lāge-they offer; sakala-i-all; puchiba-I shall inquire; taiche-similarly; bhiyāne-in the kitchen; bhoga-foods; gopāle-to Śrī Gopāla; lāgāiba-I shall arrange.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī thought, "I shall inquire from the priest what foods are offered to Gopīnātha so that by making arrangements in our kitchen, we can offer similar foods to Śrī Gopāla."

TEXT 116

ei lāgi' puchilena brāhmaṇera sthāne

SYNONYMS

gopīnāthera kṣīra-the sweet rice offered to Gopīnātha; bali'-as; prasiddha-celebrated; nāma-the name; yāra-of which; pṛthivīte-throughout the whole world; aiche-such; bhoga-food; kāhāṅ-anywhere; nāhi-not; āra-else.

TRANSLATION

"This sweet rice is celebrated throughout the world as gopīnātha-kṣīra. It is not offered anywhere else in the world."

TEXT 119

hena-kāle sei bhoga ṭhākure lāgila śuni' purī-gosāñi kichu mane vicārila

SYNONYMS

hena-kāle-at this time; sei bhoga-that wonderful food; ṭhākure-in front of the Deity; lāgila-was placed; śuni'-hearing; purī-gosāñi-Mādhavendra Purī; kichu-something; mane-within the mind; vicārila-considered.

TRANSLATION

While Mādhavendra Purī was talking with the brāhmaṇa priest, the sweet rice was placed before the Deity as an offering. Hearing this, Mādhavendra Purī thought as follows.

TEXT 120

ayācita kṣīra prasāda alpa yadi pāi svāda jāni' taiche kṣīra gopāle lāgāi

SYNONYMS

ayācita-without asking; kṣīra-sweet rice; prasāda-remnants of food; alpa-a little; yadi-if; pāi-I get; svāda-the taste; jāni'-knowing; taiche-similar; kṣīra-sweet rice; gopāle-to my Gopāla; lāgāi-I can offer.

TRANSLATION

"If, without my asking, a little sweet rice is given to me, I can then taste it and make a similar preparation to offer my Lord Gopāla."

TEXT 121

ei icchāya lajjā pāñā viṣṇu-smaraṇa kaila hena-kāle bhoga sari' ārati bājila

SYNONYMS

ei icchāya-by this desire; lajjā-shame; pāñā-getting; viṣṇu-smaraṇa-remembrance of Lord Viṣṇu; kaila-did; hena-kāle-at that time; bhoga-the food; sari'-being finished; ārati-the ārati ceremony; bājila-was sounded.

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī became greatly ashamed when he desired to taste the sweet rice, and he immediately began to think of Lord Viṣṇu. While he was thus thinking of Lord Viṣṇu, the offering was completed, and the ārati ceremony began.

TEXT 122

ārati dekhiyā purī kaila namaskāra bāhire āilā, kāre kichu nā kahila āra ārati dekhiyā-after seeing the ārati; purī-Mādhavendra Purī; kaila-offered; namaskāra-obeisances; bāhire āilā-he went out; kāre-to anyone; kichu-anything; nā-not; kahila-say; āra-more.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After the ārati was finished, Mādhavendra Purī offered his obeisances to the Deity and then left the temple. He did not say anything more to anyone.

TEXT 123

ayācita-vṛtti purī–virakta, udāsa ayācita pāile khā'na, nahe upavāsa

SYNONYMS

ayācita-vṛtti-accustomed to avoid begging; purī-Mādhavendra Purī; virakta-unattached; udāsa-indifferent; ayācita-without begging; pāile-if getting; khā'na-he eats; nahe-if not; upavāsa-fasting.

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī avoided begging. He was completely unattached and indifferent to material things. If, without his begging, someone offered him some food, he would eat; otherwise he would fast.

PURPORT

This is the paramahaṁsa stage, the highest stage for a sannyāsī. A sannyāsī can beg from door to door just to collect food, but a paramahaṁsa who has taken ayācita-vṛtti, or ājagara-vṛtti, does not ask anyone for food. If someone offers him food voluntarily, he eats. Ayācita-vṛtti means being accustomed to refrain from begging, and ājagara-vṛtti indicates one who is compared to a python, the big snake that makes no effort to acquire food but rather allows food to come automatically within its mouth. In other words, a paramahaṁsa simply engages exclusively in the service of the Lord without caring even for eating or sleeping. It was stated about the six Gosvāmīs: nidrāhāra-vihārakādi-vijitau. In the paramahaṁsa stage one conquers the desire for sleep, food and sense gratification. One remains a humble, meek mendicant engaged in the service of the Lord day and night. Mādhavendra Purī had attained this paramahaṁsa stage.

TEXT 124

premāmṛte tṛpta, kṣudhā-tṛṣṇā nāhi bādhe kṣīra-icchā haila, tāhe māne aparādhe

SYNONYMS

prema-amṛte tṛpta-being satisfied only in the loving service of the Lord; kṣudhā-tṛṣṇā-hunger and thirst; nāhi-not; bādhe-impede; kṣīra-for sweet rice; icchā-the desire; haila-became; tāhe-for that reason; māne-he considers; aparādhe-offense.

TRANSLATION

A paramahaṁsa like Mādhavendra Purī is always satisfied in the loving service of the Lord. Material hunger and thirst cannot impede his activities. When he desired to taste a little sweet rice offered to the Deity, he considered that he had committed an offense by desiring to eat what was being offered to the Deity.

PURPORT

It is advisable that food being offered to the Deity be covered when taken from the kitchen to the Deity room. In that way, others may not see it. Those who are not accustomed to following the advanced regulative devotional principles may desire to eat the food, and that is an offense. Therefore no one should be given a chance to even see it. However, when it is brought before the Deity, it must be uncovered. Seeing the food uncovered before the Deity, Mādhavendra Purī desired to taste a little of it so that he could prepare a similar sweet rice for his Gopāla. Mādhavendra Purī was so strict, however, that he considered this to be an offense. Consequently he left the temple without saying anything to anyone. The paramahaṁsa is therefore called vijita-ṣaḍ-guṇa. He must conquer the six material qualities-kāma, krodha, lobha, moha, matsarya and kṣudhā-tṛṣṇā (lust, anger, greed, illusion, enviousness and hunger and thirst).

TEXT 125

grāmera śūnya-hāṭe vasi' karena kīrtana ethā pūjārī karāila ṭhākure śayana

SYNONYMS

grāmera-of the village; śūnya-hāṭe-in the vacant marketplace; vasi'-sitting down; karena-performs; kīrtana-chanting; ethā-in the temple; pūjārī-the priest; karāila-made; ṭhākure-the Deity; śayana-lying down.

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī left the temple and sat down in the village marketplace, which was vacant. Sitting there, he began to chant. In the meantime, the temple priest laid the Deity down to rest.

PURPORT

Although Mādhavendra Purī was not interested in eating and sleeping, his interest in chanting the mahā-mantra was as acute as if he were an aspiring transcendentalist rather than a paramahaṁsa. This means that even in the paramahaṁsa stage, one cannot give up chanting. Haridāsa Ṭhākura and the Gosvāmīs were all engaged in chanting a fixed number of rounds; therefore chanting on beads is very important for everyone, even though one may become a paramahaṁsa. This chanting can be executed anywhere, either inside or outside the temple. Mādhavendra Purī even sat down in a vacant marketplace to perform his chanting. As stated by Śrīnivāsa Ācārya in his prayers to the Gosvāmīs: nāma-gāna-natibhiḥ. A paramahaṁsa devotee is always engaged in chanting and rendering loving service to the Lord. Chanting the Lord's holy names and engaging in His service are identical. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.5.23), there are nine kinds of devotional service: hearing (śravaṇam), chanting (kīrtanam), remembering (viṣṇoḥ smaraṇam), serving (pāda-sevanam), worship of the Deity (arcanam), praying (vandanam), carrying out orders (dāsyam), serving Him as a friend (sakhyam) and sacrificing everything for the Lord (ātma-nivedanam). Although each process appears distinct, when one is situated on the absolute platform he can see that they are identical. For instance, hearing is as good as chanting, and remembering is as good as chanting or hearing. Similarly, engaging in Deity worship is as good as chanting, hearing or remembering. The devotee is expected to accept all nine processes of devotional service, but even if only one process is properly executed, he can still attain the highest position (paramahaṁsa) and go back home, back to Godhead.

snāna kari' kapāṭa khuli, mukta kaila dvāra svapna dekhi'-after seeing the dream; pūjārī-the priest; uṭhi'-getting up; karilā-made; vicāra-considerations; snāna kari'-taking his bath before entering the Deity room; kapāṭa-the door; khuli-opening; mukta-opened; kaila-made; dvāra-the doors.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Awaking from the dream, the priest immediately rose from bed and thought it wise to take a bath before entering the Deity's room. He then opened the temple door.

TEXT 131

dhaḍāra āñcala-tale pāila sei kṣīra sthāna lepi' kṣīra lañā ha-ila bāhira

SYNONYMS

dhaḍāra-of the mantle; āñcala-tale-at the skirt; pāila-he got; sei-that; kṣīra-pot of sweet rice; sthāna lepi'-mopping that place; kṣīra-the pot of sweet rice; lañā-taking; ha-ila-he went; bāhira-out of the temple.

TRANSLATION

According to the Deity's directions, the priest found the pot of sweet rice behind the cloth curtain. He removed the pot and mopped up the place where it had been kept. He then went out of the temple.

TEXT 132

dvāra diyā grāme gelā sei kṣīra lañā hāṭe hāṭe bule mādhava-purīke cāhiñā

SYNONYMS

dvāra diyā-closing the door; grāme-to the village; gelā-went; sei-that; kṣīra-pot of sweet rice; lañā-taking; hāṭe hāṭe-in every stall; bule-walks; mādhava-purīke-to Mādhavendra Purī; cāhiñā-calling.

TRANSLATION

Closing the door of the temple, he went to the village with the pot of sweet rice. He called out in every stall in search of Mādhavendra Purī.

TEXT 133

kṣīra laha ei, yāra nāma 'mādhava-purī' tomā lāgi' gopīnātha kṣīra kaila curi

SYNONYMS

kṣīra laha-take the pot of sweet rice; ei-this; yāra-whose; nāma-name; mādhava-purī-Mādhavendra Purī; tomā lāgi'-for you only; gopīnātha-the Deity of Lord Gopīnātha; kṣīra-the pot of sweet rice; kaila-did; curi-steal.

TRANSLATION

Holding the pot of sweet rice, the priest called, "Will he whose name is Mādhavendra Purī please come and take this pot! Gopīnātha has stolen this pot of sweet rice for you!"

PURPORT

The difference between the Absolute Truth and relative truth is explained here. Lord Gopīnātha has openly declared herein that He is a thief. He had stolen the pot of sweet rice, and this was not kept a secret because His act of stealing is a source of great transcendental bliss. In the material world, theft is criminal, but in the spiritual world the Lord's stealing is a source of transcendental bliss. Mundane rascals, who cannot understand the absolute nature of the Personality of Godhead, sometimes call Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa immoral, but they do not know that His seemingly immoral activities, which are not kept secret, afford pleasure to the devotees. Not understanding the transcendental behavior of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, these rascals slur His character and immediately fall into the category of miscreants (rascals, lowest among men, demons and those whose knowledge is taken away by the illusory energy). Kṛṣṇa explains in the Bhagavad-gītā (7.15):

na māṁ duṣkṛtino mūḍhāḥ prapadyante narādhamāḥ
māyayāpahṛta-jñānā
āsuraṁ bhāvam āśritāḥ

"Those miscreants who are grossly foolish, who are lowest among mankind, whose knowledge is stolen by illusion, and who partake of the atheistic nature of demons, do not surrender unto Me." (Bg. 7.15)

Mundane rascals cannot understand that whatever Kṛṣṇa does, being absolute in nature, is all good. This quality of the Lord is explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.33.29). One may consider certain acts of a supremely powerful person to be immoral by mundane calculations, but this is not actually the case. For example, the sun absorbs water from the surface of the earth, but it does not absorb water only from the sea. It also absorbs water from filthy sewers and ditches containing urine and other impure substances. The sun is not polluted by absorbing such water. Rather, the sun makes the filthy place pure. If a devotee approaches the Supreme Personality of Godhead for an immoral or improper purpose, he nonetheless becomes purified; the Lord does not become infected. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.29.15) it is stated that if one approaches the Supreme Lord even out of lust, anger or fear (kāmaṁ krodhaṁ bhayam), he is purified. The gopīs, being young girls, approached Kṛṣṇa because He was a beautiful young boy. From the external point of view, they approached the Lord out of lust, and the Lord danced with them at midnight. From the mundane point of view, these activities may appear immoral because a married or unmarried young girl cannot leave home to mix with a young boy and dance with him. Although this is immoral from the mundane viewpoint, the activities of the gopīs are accepted as the highest form of worship because it was Lord Kṛṣṇa whom they approached with lusty desires in the dead of night.

But these things cannot be understood by nondevotees. One must understand Kṛṣṇa in tattva (truth). One should use his common sense and consider that if simply by chanting Kṛṣṇa's holy name one is purified, how then can the person Kṛṣṇa be immoral? Unfortunately, mundane fools are accepted as educational leaders and are offered exalted posts for teaching irreligious principles to the general populace. This is explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.5.31): andhā yathāndhair upanīyamānāḥ. Blind men are trying to lead other blind men. Due to the immature understanding of such rascals, common men should not discuss Kṛṣṇa's pastimes with the gopīs. A nondevotee should not even discuss His stealing sweet rice for His devotees. It is warned that one should not even think about these things. Although Kṛṣṇa is the purest of the pure, mundane people, thinking of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes that appear immoral, themselves become polluted. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore never publicly discussed Kṛṣṇa's dealings with the gopīs. He used to discuss these dealings only with three confidential friends. He never discussed rāsa-līlā publicly, as the professional reciters do, although they do not understand Kṛṣṇa or the nature of the audience. However, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu encouraged the public chanting of the holy name on a huge scale for as many hours as possible.

kṣīra lañā sukhe tumi karaha bhakṣaṇe tomā-sama bhāgyavān nāhi tribhuvane

SYNONYMS

kṣīra lañā-taking the pot of sweet rice; sukhe-in happiness; tumi-you; karaha-do; bhakṣaṇe-eating; tomā-sama-like you; bhāgyavān-fortunate; nāhi-there is no one; tri-bhuvane-within the three worlds.

TRANSLATION

The priest continued, "Would the sannyāsī whose name is Mādhavendra Purī please come and take this pot of sweet rice and enjoy the prasāda with great happiness! You are the most fortunate person within these three worlds!"

PURPORT

Here is an example of a personal benediction by Kṛṣṇa's immoral activity. By Gopīnātha's stealing for His devotee, the devotee becomes the most fortunate person within the three words. Thus even the Lord's criminal activities make His devotee the most fortunate person. How can a mundane rascal understand the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa and judge whether He is moral or immoral? Since Kṛṣṇa is the Absolute Truth, there are no mundane distinctions such as moral and immoral. Whatever He does is good. This is the real meaning of "God is good." He is good in all circumstances because He is transcendental, outside the jurisdiction of this material world. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa can be understood only by those who are already living in the spiritual world. This is corroborated in the Bhagavad-gītā (14.26):

māṁ ca yo 'vyabhicāreṇa
bhakti-yogena sevate
sa guṇān samatītyaitān
brahma-bhūyāya kalpate

"One who engages in full devotional service, unfailing in all circumstances, at once transcends the modes of material nature and thus comes to the level of Brahman."

One who is engaged in unalloyed devotional service to the Lord is already situated in the spiritual world (brahma-bhūyāya kalpate). In all circumstances, his activities and dealings with Kṛṣṇa are transcendental and thus not understandable by mundane moralists. It is therefore better not to discuss such activities among mundane people. It is better to give them the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra so that they will be gradually purified and then come to understand the transcendental activities of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 135

eta śuni' purī-gosāñi paricaya dila kṣīra diyā pūjārī tāṅre daṇḍavat haila eta śuni'-hearing this; purī-gosāñi-Mādhavendra Purī; paricaya-introduction; dila-gave; kṣīra diyā-delivering the pot of sweet rice; pūjārī-the priest; tāṅre-to him; daṇḍavat haila-offered obeisances.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Hearing this invitation, Mādhavendra Purī came out and identified himself. The priest then delivered the pot of sweet rice and offered his obeisances, falling flat before him.

PURPORT

A brāhmaṇa is not supposed to offer his obeisances by falling flat before anyone because a brāhmaṇa is considered to be in the highest caste. However, when a brāhmaṇa sees a devotee, he offers his daṇḍavats. This brāhmaṇa priest did not ask Mādhavendra Purī whether he was a brāhmaṇa, but when he saw that Mādhavendra Purī was such a bona fide devotee that Kṛṣṇa would even steal for him, he immediately understood the position of the saint. As stated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu: kibā vipra, kibā nyāsī, śūdra kene naya yei kṛṣṇa-tattva-vettā, sei 'guru' haya. (Cc. Madhya 8.128) Had the brāhmaṇa priest been an ordinary brāhmaṇa, Gopīnātha would not have talked with him in a dream. Since the Deity spoke to both Mādhavendra Purī and the brāhmaṇa priest in dreams, practically speaking they were on the same platform. However, because Mādhavendra Purī was a senior sannyāsī Vaiṣṇava, a paramahaṁsa, the priest immediately fell flat before him and offered obeisances.

TEXT 136

SYNONYMS

kṣīrera vṛttānta-all the incidents that took place on account of the pot of sweet rice; tāṅre-to Mādhavendra Purī; kahila-explained; pūjārī-the priest; śuni'-hearing; prema-āviṣṭa-saturated with love of Godhead; haila-became; śrī-mādhava-purī-Śrīla Mādhavendra Purī.

TRANSLATION

When the story about the pot of sweet rice was explained to him in detail, Śrī Mādhavendra Purī at once became absorbed in ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 137

prema dekhi' sevaka kahe ha-iyā vismita kṛṣṇa ye iṅhāra vaśa,–haya yathocita

SYNONYMS

prema dekhi'-seeing the ecstatic position of Mādhavendra Purī; sevaka-the priest; kahe-said; ha-iyā-being; vismita-struck with wonder; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; ye-that; iṅhāra-by him; vaśa-obliged; haya-it is; yathocita-befitting.

TRANSLATION

Upon seeing the ecstatic loving symptoms manifest in Mādhavendra Purī, the priest was struck with wonder. He could understand why Kṛṣṇa had become so much obliged to him, and he saw that Kṛṣṇa's action was befitting.

PURPORT

A devotee can bring Kṛṣṇa perfectly under his control. This is explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.3): ajita jito 'py asi tais tri-lokyām. Kṛṣṇa is never conquered by anyone, but a devotee can conquer Him through devotional service. As stated in the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.33): vedeṣu durlabham adurlabham ātma-bhaktau. One cannot understand Kṛṣṇa simply by reading Vedic literature. Although all Vedic literature is meant for understanding Kṛṣṇa, one cannot understand Kṛṣṇa without being a lover of Kṛṣṇa. Therefore along with the reading of Vedic literature (svādhyāya), one must engage in devotional worship of the Deity (arcana-vidhi). Together these will enhance the devotee's transcendental understanding of devotional service. Śravaṇādi śuddha-citte karaye udaya (Cc. Madhya 22.107). Love of Godhead is dormant within everyone's heart, and if one simply follows the standard process of devotional service, it is awakened. But foolish mundane people who simply read about Kṛṣṇa mistakenly think that He is immoral or criminal.

TEXT 138

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-saying this; namaskari'-offering obeisances; karilā gamana-returned; āveśe-in ecstasy; karilā-did; purī-Purī Gosāñi; se-that; kṣīra-sweet rice; bhakṣaṇa-eating.

TRANSLATION

The priest offered his obeisances to Mādhavendra Purī and returned to the temple. Then, in ecstasy, Mādhavendra Purī ate the sweet rice offered to him by Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 139

SYNONYMS

prati-dina-every day; eka-khāni-one piece; karena-does; bhakṣaṇa-eating; khāile-by eating; prema-āveśa-ecstasy; haya-there is; adbhuta-wonderful; kathana-narrations.

TRANSLATION

Each day, Mādhavendra Purī would eat one piece of that earthen pot, and after eating it he would immediately be overwhelmed with ecstasy. These are wonderful stories.

TEXT 141

SYNONYMS

ṭhākura-the Lord; more-to me; kṣīra-sweet rice; dila-has given; loka-the people; saba-all; śuni'-after hearing; dine-at daytime; loka-of people; bhiḍa-crowd; habe-there will be; mora-my; pratiṣṭhā-fame; jāni'-knowing.

TRANSLATION

Having broken the pot and bound the pieces in his cloth, Mādhavendra Purī began to think, "The Lord has given me a pot of sweet rice, and when the people hear of this tomorrow morning, there will be great crowds."

TEXT 142

SYNONYMS

sei bhaye-fearing that; rātri-śeṣe-at the end of the night; calilā-left; śrī-purī-Śrī Mādhavendra Purī; sei-khāne-on that spot; gopīnāthe-to Lord Gopīnātha; daṇḍavat-obeisances; kari'-doing.

TRANSLATION

Thinking this, Śrī Mādhavendra Purī offered his obeisances to Gopīnātha on the spot and left Remuṇā before morning.

TEXT 143

SYNONYMS

cali' cali'-walking and walking; āilā-he reached; purī-Jagannātha Purī; śrī-nīlācala-known as Nīlācala; jagannātha dekhi'-seeing Lord Jagannātha; hailā-became; premete-in love; vihvala-overwhelmed.

TRANSLATION

Walking and walking, Mādhavendra Purī finally reached Jagannātha Purī, which is also known as Nīlācala. There he saw Lord Jagannātha and was overwhelmed with loving ecstasy.

TEXT 144

SYNONYMS

prema-āveśe-in loving ecstasy; uṭhe-sometimes stands; paḍe-sometimes falls; hāse-laughs; nāce-dances; gāya-sings; jagannātha daraśane-by seeing Lord Jagannātha in the temple; mahā-sukha-transcendental happiness; pāya-he felt.

TRANSLATION

When Mādhavendra Purī was overwhelmed in the ecstasy of love of Godhead, he sometimes stood up and sometimes fell to the ground. Sometimes he laughed, danced and sang. In this way he enjoyed transcendental bliss by seeing the Jagannātha Deity.

TEXT 145

'mādhava-purī śrīpāda āila',–loke haila khyāti

SYNONYMS

mādhava-purī-Śrī Mādhavendra Purī; śrīpāda-sannyāsī; āila-has come; loke-among the people; haila-there was; khyāti-reputation; saba loka-all people; āsi'-coming; tāṅre-unto him; kare-do; bahu-much; bhakti-devotion.

TRANSLATION

When Mādhavendra Purī came to Jagannātha Purī, people were aware of his transcendental reputation. Therefore crowds of people came and offered him all sorts of respect in devotion.

TEXT 146

pratiṣṭhāra svabhāva ei jagate vidita

SYNONYMS

pratiṣṭhāra-of reputation; svabhāva-the nature; ei-this; jagate-in the world; vidita-known; ye-the person who; nā vāñche-does not desire it; tāra-of him; haya-it is; vidhātā-nirmita-created by providence.

TRANSLATION

Even though one may not like it, reputation, as ordained by providence, comes to him. Indeed, one's transcendental reputation is known throughout the entire world.

TEXT 147

pratiṣṭhāra bhaye purī gelā palāñā kṛṣṇa-preme pratiṣṭhā cale saṅge gaḍāñā pratiṣṭhāra bhaye-in fear of reputation; purī-Mādhavendra Purī; gelā-went away; palāñā-fleeing; kṛṣṇa-preme-in love of Kṛṣṇa; pratiṣṭhā-reputation; cale-goes; saṅge-simultaneously; gaḍāñā-gliding down.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Being afraid of his reputation [pratiṣṭhā], Mādhavendra Purī fled from Remuṇā. But the reputation brought by love of Godhead is so sublime that it goes along with the devotee, as if following him.

PURPORT

Almost all the conditioned souls within the material world are envious. Jealous people generally turn against one who automatically attains some reputation. This is natural for jealous people. Consequently, when a devotee is fit to receive worldly reputation, he is envied by many people. This is quite natural. When a person, out of humility, does not desire fame, people generally think him quite humble and consequently give him all kinds of fame. Actually a Vaiṣṇava does not hanker after fame or a great reputation. Mādhavendra Purī, the king of Vaiṣṇavas, bore his reputation, but he wanted to keep himself outside of the vision of the general populace. He wanted to cover his real identity as a great devotee of the Lord, but when people saw him overwhelmed in the ecstasy of love of Godhead, they naturally gave credit to him. Actually a first-class reputation is due Mādhavendra Purī because he was a most confidential devotee of the Lord. Sometimes a sahajiyā presents himself as being void of desires for reputation (pratiṣṭhā) in order to become famous as a humble man. Such people cannot actually attain the platform of celebrated Vaiṣṇavas.

TEXT 148

SYNONYMS

yadyapi-although; udvega-anxiety; haila-there was; palāite-to go away; mana-the mind; ṭhākurera-of the Lord; candana-of the sandalwood; sādhana-the collecting; ha-ila-there was; bandhana-bondage.

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī wanted to leave Jagannātha Purī because the people were honoring him as a great devotee; however, this threatened to hinder his collecting sandalwood for the Gopāla Deity.

TEXT 149

SYNONYMS

rāja-pātra-government officers; sane-with; yāra yāra-whoever; paricaya-had acquaintance; tāre māgi'-begging them; karpūra-candana-camphor and sandalwood; karilā-made; sañcaya-collection.

TRANSLATION

Those who were acquainted with government officers met with them and begged for camphor and sandalwood, which they collected.

PURPORT

It appears that malayaja-candana (sandalwood) and camphor were used for the Jagannātha Deity. The camphor was used in His ārātrika, and the sandalwood was used to smear His body. Both these items were under government control; therefore the devotees had to meet with the government officials. Informing them of all the details, they attained permission to take the sandalwood and camphor outside Jagannātha Purī.

TEXT 152

SYNONYMS

gopīnātha-caraṇe-at the lotus feet of Lord Gopīnātha; kaila-made; bahu-many; namaskāra-obeisances; prema-āveśe-in the ecstasy of love; nṛtya-gīta-dancing and chanting; karilā-performed; apāra-unlimitedly.

TRANSLATION

When Mādhavendra Purī reached the temple of Gopīnātha, he offered his respectful obeisances many times at the lotus feet of the Lord. In the ecstasy of love, he began to dance and sing without cessation.

TEXT 156

SYNONYMS

gopāla-the Deity of Gopāla; āsiyā-coming; kahe-says; śuna-hear; he-O; mādhava-Mādhavendra Purī; karpūra-candana-the camphor and sandalwood; āmi-I; pāilāma-have received; saba-all.

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī dreamed that Gopāla came before him and said, ”O Mādhavendra Purī, I have already received all the sandalwood and camphor.

TEXT 159

SYNONYMS

gopīnātha-Lord Gopīnātha; āmāra-My; se-that; eka-i-one; aṅga-body; haya-is; iṅhāke-unto Him; candana dile-in offering this candana; habe-there will be; mora-My; tāpa-kṣaya-reduction of temperature.

TRANSLATION

”There is no difference between My body and Gopīnātha's body. They are one and the same. Therefore if you smear the sandalwood pulp on the body of Gopīnātha, you will naturally also smear it on My body. Thus the temperature of My body will be reduced.

PURPORT

Gopāla was situated in Vṛndāvana, which was far from Remuṇā. In those days, one had to pass through provinces governed by the Muslims, who sometimes hindered travelers. Considering the trouble of His devotee, Lord Gopāla, the greatest well-wisher of His devotees, ordered Mādhavendra Purī to smear the sandalwood pulp on the body of Gopīnātha, which was nondifferent from the body of Gopāla. In this way the Lord relieved Mādhavendra Purī from trouble and inconvenience.

SYNONYMS

grīṣma-kāla-of the summer season; ante-at the end; punaḥ-again; nīlācale-to Jagannātha Purī; gelā-went; nīlācale-in Jagannātha Purī; cātur-māsya-the four months for vows; ānande-in great pleasure; rahilā-remained.

TRANSLATION

At the end of summer Mādhavendra Purī returned to Jagannātha Purī, where he remained with great pleasure during the whole period of Cāturmāsya.

PURPORT

The Cāturmāsya period begins in the month of Āṣāḍha (June-July) from the day of Ekādaśī called Śayanā-ekādaśī, in the fortnight of the waxing moon. The period ends in the month of Kārtika (October-November) on the Ekādaśī day known as Utthānā-ekādaśī, in the fortnight of the waxing moon. This four-month period is known as Cāturmāsya. Some Vaiṣṇavas also observe it from the full-moon day of Āṣāḍha until the full-moon day of Kārtika. That is also a period of four months. This period, calculated by the lunar months, is called Cāturmāsya, but others also observe Cāturmāsya according to the solar month from Śrāvaṇa to Kārtika. The whole period, either lunar or solar, takes place during the rainy season. Cāturmāsya should be observed by all sections of the population. It does not matter whether one is a gṛhastha or a sannyāsī. The observance is obligatory for all āśramas. The real purpose behind the vow taken during these four months is to minimize the quantity of sense gratification. This is not very difficult. In the month of Śrāvaṇa one should not eat spinach, in the month of Bhādra one should not eat yogurt, and in the month of Āśvina one should not drink milk. One should not eat fish or other nonvegetarian food during the month of Kārtika. A nonvegetarian diet means fish and meat. Similarly, masūra dāl and urad dāl are also considered nonvegetarian. These two dāls contain a great amount of protein, and food rich in protein is considered nonvegetarian. On the whole, during the four-month period of Cāturmāsya one should practice giving up all food intended for sense enjoyment.

SYNONYMS

purīra-of Mādhavendra Purī; prema-parā-kāṣṭhā-the standard of intense love of Godhead; karaha-just make; vicāra-judgment; alaukika-uncommon; prema-love of Godhead; citte-in the mind; lāge-strikes; camatkāra-wonder.

TRANSLATION

Caitanya Mahāprabhu placed the standard of Mādhavendra Purī's intense love before Nityānanda Prabhu for judgment. "All his loving activities are uncommon," Caitanya Mahāprabhu said. "Indeed, one is struck with wonder to hear of his activities."

PURPORT

When the living entity feels spiritual separation from Kṛṣṇa (kṛṣṇa-viraha), he has achieved the prime success of life. When one becomes disinterested in material things, he is simply experiencing the other side of attraction for material things. However, feeling separation from Kṛṣṇa and engaging in the service of the Lord to fulfill His mission constitute the best example of love of Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to point out this intense love of Kṛṣṇa exhibited by Mādhavendra Purī. All Caitanya Mahāprabhu's devotees later followed in the footsteps of Mādhavendra Purī, serving the Lord without personal considerations.

TEXT 179

parama virakta, maunī, sarvatra udāsīna

SYNONYMS

pragāḍha-intense; premera-of love of Godhead; ei-this; svabhāva-natural; ācāra-behavior; nija-personal; duḥkha-inconvenience; vighna-impediments; ādira-and so on; nā-not; kare-does; vicāra-consideration.

TRANSLATION

”This is the natural result of intense love of Godhead. The devotee does not consider personal inconveniences or impediments. In all circumstances he wants to serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

PURPORT

It is natural for those who have developed intense love for Kṛṣṇa not to care for personal inconvenience and impediments. Such devotees are simply determined to execute the order of the Supreme Personality of Godhead or His representative, the spiritual master. In all circumstances, even amidst the greatest dangers, they undeviatingly carry on with the greatest determination. This definitely proves the intense love of the servitor. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.8), tat te ’nukampāṁ su-samīkṣamāṇaḥ: those who seriously desire to get free from the clutches of material existence, who have developed intense love for Kṛṣṇa, are worthy candidates for going back home, back to Godhead. An intense lover of Kṛṣṇa does not care for any number of material discomforts, scarcity, impediments or unhappiness. It is said that when one sees apparent unhappiness or distress in a perfect Vaiṣṇava, it is not at all unhappiness for him; rather, it is transcendental bliss. In the Śikṣāṣṭaka (8), Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has also instructed: āśliṣya vā pāda-ratāṁ pinaṣṭu mām. The intense lover of Kṛṣṇa is never deviated from his service, despite all difficulties and impediments brought before him.

TEXT 187

SYNONYMS

ei-this; tāra-of Mādhavendra Purī; gāḍha-intense; premā-love of Godhead; loke-unto the people; dekhāite-to show; gopāla-Lord Gopāla; tāṅre-to him; ājñā-order; dila-gave; candana-sandalwood; ānite-to bring.

TRANSLATION

”Śrī Gopāla wanted to show how intensely Mādhavendra Purī loved Kṛṣṇa; therefore He asked him to go to Nīlācala to fetch sandalwood and camphor.

TEXT 188

bahu pariśrame candana remuṇā ānila ānanda bāḍila mane, duḥkha nā gaṇila

SYNONYMS

bahu-much; pariśrame-with labor; candana-sandalwood; remuṇā-to Remuṇā (the village of Gopīnātha); ānila-brought; ānanda-pleasure; bāḍila-increased; mane-in the mind; duḥkha-difficulties; nā-not; gaṇila-counted.

TRANSLATION

”With great trouble and after much labor, Mādhavendra Purī brought the load of sandalwood to Remuṇā. However, he was still very pleased; he discounted all the difficulties.

TEXT 189

SYNONYMS

ei bhakti-this type of devotion; bhakta-of the devotee; priya-and the most lovable object; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; vyavahāra-the behavior; bujhiteo-to understand; āmā-sabāra-of all of us; nāhi-there is not; adhikāra-the capacity.

TRANSLATION

"Such behavior exhibited in loving service between the devotee and the devotee's lovable object, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, is transcendental. It is not possible for a common man to understand. Common men do not even have the capacity."

TEXT 191

eta bali' paḍe prabhu tāṅra kṛta śloka yei śloka-candre jagat karyāche āloka eta bali'-saying this; paḍe-reads; prabhu-Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅra-by Mādhavendra Purī; kṛta-composed; śloka-verse; yei-that; śloka-candre-by the moonlike verse; jagat-all over the world; karyāche-produced; āloka-light.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After saying this, Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu read the famous verse of Mādhavendra Purī. That verse is just like the moon. It has spread illumination all over the world.

TEXT 192

ghaṣite ghaṣite yaiche malayaja-sāra gandha bāḍe, taiche ei ślokera vicāra

SYNONYMS

ghaṣite ghaṣite-rubbing and rubbing; yaiche-just as; malayaja-sāra-sandalwood; gandha-the fragrance; bāḍe-increases; taiche-similarly; ei-this; ślokera-of the verse; vicāra-the consideration.

TRANSLATION

Continuous rubbing increases the aroma of Malaya sandalwood. Similarly, consideration of this verse increases one's understanding of its importance.

TEXT 193

rasa-kāvya-madhye taiche ei śloka gaṇi

SYNONYMS

ratna-gaṇa-the valuable jewels; madhye-among; yaiche-just as; kaustubha-maṇi-the jewel known as Kaustubha-maṇi; rasa-kāvya-poetry dealing with the mellows of devotional service; madhye-among; taiche-similarly; ei-this; śloka-verse; gaṇi-I count.

TRANSLATION

As the Kaustubha-maṇi is considered the most precious of valuable stones, this verse is similarly considered the best of poems dealing with the mellows of devotional service.

TEXT 194

ei śloka kahiyāchena rādhā-ṭhākurāṇī tāṅra kṛpāya sphuriyāche mādhavendra-vāṇī ei-this; śloka-verse; kahiyāchena-has spoken; rādhā-ṭhākurāṇī-Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; tāṅra-Her; kṛpāya-by the mercy; sphuriyāche-has manifested; mādhavendra-of Mādhavendra Purī; vāṇī-the words.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Actually this verse was spoken by Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī Herself, and by Her mercy only was it manifest in the words of Mādhavendra Purī.

TEXT 195

kibā gauracandra ihā kare āsvādana

SYNONYMS

kibā-how excellent; gauracandra-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ihā-this; kare-does; āsvādana-tasting; ihā-this verse; āsvādite-to taste; āra-another; nāhi-there is not; cauṭha-jana-a fourth man.

TRANSLATION

Only Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has tasted the poetry of this verse. No fourth man is capable of understanding it.

PURPORT

This indicates that only Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, Mādhavendra Purī and Caitanya Mahāprabhu are capable of understanding the purport of this verse.

TEXT 196

śeṣa-kāle ei śloka paṭhite paṭhite siddhi-prāpti haila purīra ślokera sahite

SYNONYMS

śeṣa-kāle-at the end; ei śloka-this verse; paṭhite paṭhite-by reciting repeatedly; siddhi-prāpti-attainment of perfection; haila-there was; purīra-of Mādhavendra Purī; ślokera-this verse; sahite-with.

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī recited this verse again and again at the end of his material existence. Thus uttering this verse, he attained the ultimate goal of life.

TEXT 197

ayi dīna-dayārdra nātha he mathurā-nātha kadāvalokyase hṛdayaṁ tvad-aloka-kātaraṁ dayita bhrāmyati kiṁ karomy aham

SYNONYMS

ayi-O My Lord; dīna-on the poor; dayā-ārdra-compassionate; nātha-O master; he-O; mathurā-nātha-the master of Mathurā; kadā-when; avalokyase-I shall see You; hṛdayam-My heart; tvat-of You; aloka-without seeing; kātaram-very much aggrieved; dayita-O most beloved; bhrāmyati-becomes overwhelmed; kim-what; karomi-shall do; aham-I.

TRANSLATION

”O My Lord! O most merciful master! O master of Mathurā! When shall I see You again? Because of My not seeing You, My agitated heart has become unsteady. O most beloved one, what shall I do now?”

PURPORT

The uncontaminated devotees who strictly depend on the Vedānta philosophy are divided into four sampradāyas, or transcendental parties. Out of the four sampradāyas, the Śrī Madhvācārya-sampradāya was accepted by Mādhavendra Purī. Thus he took sannyāsa according to paramparā, the disciplic succession. Beginning from Madhvācārya down to the spiritual master of Mādhavendra Purī, the ācārya named Lakṣmīpati, there was no realization of devotional service in conjugal love. Śrī Mādhavendra Purī introduced the conception of conjugal love for the first time in the Madhvācārya-sampradāya, and this conclusion of the Madhvācārya-sampradāya was revealed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu when He toured southern India and met the Tattvavādīs, who supposedly belonged to the Madhvācārya-sampradāya.

When Śrī Kṛṣṇa left Vṛndāvana and accepted the kingdom of Mathurā, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, out of ecstatic feelings of separation, expressed how Kṛṣṇa can be loved in separation. Thus devotional service in separation is central to this verse. Worship in separation is considered by the Gauḍīya-Mādhva sampradāya to be the topmost level of devotional service. According to this conception, the devotee thinks of himself as very poor and neglected by the Lord. Thus he addresses the Lord as dīna-dayārdra nātha, as did Mādhavendra Purī. Such an ecstatic feeling is the highest form of devotional service. Because Kṛṣṇa had gone to Mathurā, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī was very much affected, and She expressed Herself thus: ”My dear Lord, because of Your separation My mind has become overly agitated. Now tell Me, what can I do? I am very poor and You are very merciful, so kindly have compassion upon Me and let Me know when I shall see You.” Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was always expressing the ecstatic emotions of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī that She exhibited when She saw Uddhava at Vṛndāvana. Similar feelings, experienced by Mādhavendra Purī, are expressed in this verse. Therefore, Vaiṣṇavas in the Gauḍīya-Mādhva sampradāya say that the ecstatic feelings experienced by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu during His appearance came from Śrī Mādhavendra Purī through Īśvara Purī. All the devotees in the line of the Gauḍīya-Mādhva sampradāya accept these principles of devotional service.

TEXT 198

ei śloka paḍite prabhu ha-ilā mūrcchite

TRANSLATION

Exhibiting ecstatic emotions, the Lord began to run here and there, making resounding noises. Sometimes He laughed, and sometimes He cried, and sometimes He danced and sang.

TEXT 201

’ayi dīna, ’ayi dīna’ bale bāra-bāra kaṇṭhe nā niḥsare vāṇī, netre aśru-dhāra

SYNONYMS

ayi dīna-O My Lord, master of the poor; ayi dīna-O My Lord, master of the poor; bale-says; bāra-bāra-repeatedly; kaṇṭhe-in the throat; nā-not; niḥsare-comes out; vāṇī-the voice; netre-in the eyes; aśru-dhāra-torrents of tears.

TRANSLATION

Caitanya Mahāprabhu could not recite the whole verse. He simply said, ”Ayi dīna, ayi dīna,” repeatedly. Thus He could not speak, and profuse tears were in His eyes.

TEXT 202

kampa, sveda, pulakāśru, stambha, vaivarṇya nirveda, viṣāda, jāḍya, garva, harṣa, dainya

SYNONYMS

kampa-trembling; sveda-perspiration; pulaka-aśru-jubilation and tears; stambha-shock; vaivarṇya-loss of color; nirveda-disappointment; viṣāda-moroseness; jāḍya-loss of memory; garva-pride; harṣa-joy; dainya-humility.

TRANSLATION

Trembling, perspiration, jubilant tears, shock, fading of the bodily luster, disappointment, moroseness, loss of memory, pride, joy and humility were all visible in Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s body.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, jāḍya is explained as loss of memory brought about by severe shock due to separation from the beloved. In that state of mind, one loses all concern for loss and gain, hearing and seeing, as well as all other considerations. This marks the preliminary appearance of illusion.

TEXT 203

ei śloke ughāḍilā premera kapāṭa

SYNONYMS

kṣīra-the sweet rice; dekhi’-seeing; mahāprabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ānanda-the pleasure; bāḍila-increased; bhakta-gaṇe-the devotees; khāoyaīte-to feed them; pañca-five pots; kṣīra-sweet rice; laila-accepted.

TRANSLATION

When all the pots of sweet rice, remnants left by Gopīnātha, were placed before Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, He became very pleased. In order to feed the devotees, He accepted five of them.

TEXT 207

sāta kṣīra pūjārīke bāhuḍiyā dila pañca-kṣīra pañca-jane vāṅṭiyā khāila

SYNONYMS

sāta kṣīra-seven pots of sweet rice; pūjārīke-toward the pūjārī; bāhuḍiyā-pushing forward; dila-gave; pañca-kṣīra-five pots of sweet rice; pañca-jane-to five men; vāṇṭiyā-distributing; khāila-ate.

TRANSLATION

The seven remaining pots were pushed forward and delivered to the priest. Then the five pots of sweet rice the Lord had accepted were distributed among the five devotees, and they ate the prasāda.

TEXT 208

gopīnātha-rūpe yadi kariyāchena bhojana

SYNONYMS

nāma-saṅkīrtane-in congregational chanting; sei-that; rātri-night; goṅāilā-passed; maṅgala-ārati-the early ārati; dekhi'-after seeing; prabhāte-in the morning; calilā-departed.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed that night at the temple engaged in congregational chanting. In the morning, after seeing the maṅgala-ārati performance, He departed.

TEXT 210

gopāla-gopīnātha-purī-gosāñira guṇa bhakta-saṅge śrī-mukhe prabhu kailā āsvādana gopāla-of the Gopāla Deity; gopīnātha-of the Gopīnātha Deity; purī-gosāñira-of Mādhavendra Purī; guṇa-the qualities; bhakta-saṅge-with the devotees; śrī-mukhe-in His own mouth; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kailā-did; āsvādana-tasting.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In this way, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally tasted with His own mouth the transcendental qualities of Gopālajī, Gopīnātha and Śrī Mādhavendra Purī.

TEXT 211

ei ta' ākhyāne kahilā doṅhāra mahimā

SYNONYMS

śrī-rūpa-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; raghunātha-Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; pade-at the lotus feet; yāra-whose; āśa-expectation; caitanya-caritāmṛta-the book named Caitanya-caritāmṛta; kahe-describes; kṛṣṇadāsa-Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Fourth Chapter, describing Śrī Mādhavendra Purī's devotional service.

18.5.5 Chapter 5

The Activities of Sākṣi-gopāla

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives the following summary of the Fifth Chapter in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: After passing through Yājapura, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu reached the town of Kaṭaka (Cuttak) and there went to see the temple of Sākṣi-gopāla. While there, He heard the story of Sākṣi-gopāla from the mouth of Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu.

Once there were two brāhmaṇas, one elderly and the other young, who were inhabitants of a place known as Vidyānagara. After touring many places of pilgrimage, the two brāhmaṇas finally reached Vṛndāvana. The elderly brāhmaṇa was very satisfied with the service of the young brāhmaṇa, and he wanted to offer him his youngest daughter in marriage. The young brāhmaṇa received the promise of his elder before the Gopāla Deity of Vṛndāvana. Thus the Gopāla Deity acted as a witness. When both brāhmaṇas returned to Vidyānagara, the younger brāhmaṇa raised the question of this marriage, but the elderly brāhmaṇa, due to obligations to his friends and wife, answered that he could not remember his promise. Because of this, the younger brāhmaṇa returned to Vṛndāvana and narrated the whole story to Gopālajī. Thus Gopālajī, being obliged by the young man's devotional service, accompanied him to southern India. Gopālajī followed the younger brāhmaṇa, who could hear the tinkling sound of Gopālajī's ankle bells. When all the respectable gentlemen of Vidyānagara were assembled, Gopālajī testified to the promise of the elderly brāhmaṇa. Thus the marriage was performed. Later, the King of that country constructed a fine temple for Gopāla.

Afterwards, King Puruṣottama of Orissa was insulted by the King of Kaṭaka, who refused to give him his daughter in marriage and called him a sweeper of Lord Jagannātha. With the help of Lord Jagannātha, King Puruṣottama fought the King of Kaṭaka and defeated him. Thus he took charge of both the King's daughter and the state of Kaṭaka as well. At that time, Gopālajī, being very much obligated by the devotional service of King Puruṣottama, was brought to the town of Kaṭaka.

After hearing this narration, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited the temple of Gopāla in great ecstasy of love of God. From Kaṭaka He went to Bhuvaneśvara and saw the temple of Lord Śiva. In this way, He gradually arrived at Kamalapura, and on the banks of the Bhārgī River He came to the temple of Lord Śiva, where He entrusted His sannyāsa staff to Nityānanda Prabhu. However, Nityānanda Prabhu broke the staff into three pieces and threw it into the Bhārgī River at a place known as Āṭhāranālā. Being angry at not getting His staff back, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu left the company of Nityānanda Prabhu and went alone to see the Jagannātha temple.

TRANSLATION

At that time, Nityānanda Prabhu had heard the story of Sākṣi-gopāla from the townspeople. He now recited this again, and Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard the narration with great pleasure.

PURPORT

The Sākṣi-gopāla temple is situated between the Khurdā Road junction railway station and the Jagannātha Purī station. The Deity is not presently situated in Kaṭaka, but when Nityānanda Prabhu traveled there, the Deity was present. Kaṭaka is a town in Orissa situated on the Mahānadī River. When Sākṣi-gopāla was brought from Vidyānagara in southern India, He stayed for some time at Kaṭaka. Thereafter, He was situated for some time in the Jagannātha temple. It seems that in the temple of Jagannātha there was some disagreement between Jagannātha and Sākṣi-gopāla, a disagreement called prema-kalaha, a quarrel of love. In order to settle this love quarrel, the King of Orissa constructed a village about six miles from Jagannātha Purī. The village was called Satyavādī, and Gopāla was stationed there. Thereafter, a new temple was constructed. Now there is a Sākṣi-gopāla station, and people go there to see the witness Gopāla.

TRANSLATION

After reaching Mathurā, they started visiting the different forests of Vṛndāvana and came to Govardhana Hill. They visited all twelve forests [vanas] and at last came to the town of Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

The five forests situated on the eastern side of the river Yamunā are Bhadra, Bilva, Loha, Bhāṇḍīra and Mahāvana. The seven forests situated on the western side of the Yamunā are Madhu, Tāla, Kumuda, Bahulā, Kāmya, Khadira and Vṛndāvana. After visiting all these forests, these pilgrims went to a place known as Pañcakrośī Vṛndāvana. Out of the twelve forests, the Vṛndāvana forest extends from the town of Vṛndāvana up to Nanda-grāma and Varṣāṇa, a distance of thirty-two miles, within which the Pañcakrośī Vṛndāvana town is situated.

TRANSLATION

"You are a most aristocratic family man, well educated and very rich. I am not at all aristocratic, and I am without a decent education and have no wealth.

PURPORT

Due to pious activities, one can be enriched by four opulences: one may obtain birth in an aristocratic family, become highly educated, become very beautiful or get a sufficient quantity of riches. These are symptoms of pious activities performed in one's past life. In India it is still current for an aristocratic family never to consider a marriage with a common family. Though the caste may be the same, to maintain the aristocracy such marriages are rejected. No poor man will dare marry the daughter of a rich man. Because of this, when the elderly brāhmaṇa offered the young brāhmaṇa his daughter, the young brāhmaṇa did not believe that it would be possible to marry her. Therefore he asked the elderly brāhmaṇa why he was proposing something unprecedented (asambhava). It was unheard of for an aristocratic person to offer his daughter to a person who was both uneducated and poor.

TEXT 23

kanyā-dāna-pātra āmi nā ha-i tomāra kṛṣṇa-prītye kari tomāra sevā-vyavahāra

SYNONYMS

kanyā-dāna-pātra-a bridegroom suitable for one's daughter; āmi-I; nā-not; ha-i-am; tomāra-of you; kṛṣṇa-prītye-only for satisfaction of Kṛṣṇa; kari-I do; tomāra-of you; sevā-of service; vyavahāra-activities.

TRANSLATION

"Sir, I am not a suitable bridegroom for your daughter. I render service to you only for the satisfaction of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Both brāhmaṇas were pure Vaiṣṇavas. The younger man took special care of the older one simply to please Kṛṣṇa. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.19.21) Kṛṣṇa says, mad-bhakta-pūjābhyadhikā: "It is better to render service to My devotee." Thus, according to the Gauḍīya-Vaiṣṇava philosophy of Caitanya Mahāprabhu, it is better to be a servant of the servant of God. One should not try to serve Kṛṣṇa directly. A pure Vaiṣṇava serves a servant of Kṛṣṇa and identifies himself as a servant of a servant of Kṛṣṇa. This is pleasing to Lord Kṛṣṇa. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura confirms this philosophy: chāḍiyā vaiṣṇava-sevā nistāra pāyeche kebā. Unless one serves a liberated Vaiṣṇava, he cannot attain liberation by directly serving Kṛṣṇa. He must serve the servant of Kṛṣṇa.

brāhmaṇa-sevāya kṛṣṇera prīti baḍa haya tāṅhāra santoṣe bhakti-sampad bāḍaya" brāhmaṇa-sevāya-by rendering service to a brāhmaṇa; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; prīti-the satisfaction; baḍa-very great; haya-is; tāṅhāra santoṣe-by pleasing the Lord; bhakti-of devotional service; sampad-the opulence; bāḍaya-increases.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Lord Kṛṣṇa is very pleased by service rendered to brāhmaṇas, and when the Lord is pleased, the opulence of one's devotional service increases."

PURPORT

In this regard, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that the younger brāhmaṇa rendered service to the older one with the purpose of pleasing Kṛṣṇa. It was not a matter of ordinary worldly dealings. Kṛṣṇa is pleased when a Vaiṣṇava is rendered service. Because the younger brāhmaṇa served the older one, Lord Gopāla agreed to become a witness of the marriage negotiation in order to maintain the prestige of both devotees. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would certainly not have liked to hear about marital dealings unless such dealings were exchanged between two Vaiṣṇavas. Marriage arrangements and ceremonies belong to ordinary material karma-kāṇḍa sections of the scriptures. The Vaiṣṇavas, however, are not interested in any kind of karma-kāṇḍa dealings. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says: karma-kāṇḍa jñāna-kāṇḍa kevala viṣera bhāṇḍa. For a Vaiṣṇava, the karma-kāṇḍa and jñāna-kāṇḍa sections of the Vedas are unnecessary. Indeed, a real Vaiṣṇava takes these sections as a poison pot (viṣera bhāṇḍa). Sometimes we take part in a marriage ceremony for our disciples, but this does not mean that we are interested in karma-kāṇḍa activities. Sometimes, not knowing the Vaiṣṇava philosophy, an outsider criticizes such activity, maintaining that a sannyāsī should not take part in a marriage ceremony between a young boy and a young girl. However, this is not a karma-kāṇḍa activity, because our purpose is to spread the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. We are giving all facility to the general populace to take to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, and in order to fix the devotees in concentration on the service of the Lord, marriage is sometimes allowed. We have experienced that such married couples actually render very important service to the mission. Therefore, one should not misunderstand when a sannyāsī takes part in a marriage ceremony. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu took great pleasure in hearing about the marriage ceremony between the young brāhmaṇa and the daughter of the elderly brāhmaṇa.

TRANSLATION

”King Bhīṣmaka wanted to give his daughter, Rukmiṇī, in charity to Kṛṣṇa, but Rukmī, his eldest son, objected. Therefore he could not carry out his decision.”

PURPORT

As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.52.25):

bandhūnām icchatāṁ dātuṁ kṛṣṇāya bhaginīṁ nṛpa tato nivārya kṛṣṇa-dviḍ rukmī caidyam amanyata

King Bhīṣmaka of Vidarbha wanted to offer Kṛṣṇa his daughter, Rukmiṇī, but Rukmī, the eldest of his five sons, objected. Therefore he withdrew his decision and decided to offer Rukmiṇī to the King of Cedi, Śiśupāla, who was a cousin of Kṛṣṇa's. However, Rukmiṇī conceived of a trick: she sent a letter to Kṛṣṇa asking Him to kidnap her. Thus in order to please Rukmiṇī, who was His great devotee, Kṛṣṇa kidnapped her. There ensued a great fight between Kṛṣṇa and the opposing party, headed by Rukmiṇī's brother Rukmī. Rukmī was defeated and, because of his harsh words against Kṛṣṇa, was about to be killed, but he was saved at the request of Rukmiṇī. However, Kṛṣṇa shaved off all of Rukmī's hair with His sword. Śrī Balarāma did not like this, and so to please Rukmiṇī, Balarāma rebuked Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

gopālera āge-in front of the Gopāla Deity; vipra-the elderly brāhmaṇa; kahite-to speak; lāgila-began; tumi jāna-my Lord, please know; nila-kanyā-my own daughter; ihāre-to this boy; āmi-I; dila-have given in charity.

TRANSLATION

Coming before Gopāla, the elderly brāhmaṇa said, ”My dear Lord, please witness that I have given my daughter to this boy.”

PURPORT

In India it is still the custom for a daughter to be offered to someone simply by word. This is called vāg-datta. This means that the father, brother or guardian of a girl has given his word that she will be married to a certain man. Consequently, that daughter cannot be married to anyone else. She is reserved by virtue of the honest words of the father or guardian. There are many instances in which the parents of a female child have given someone a verbal promise that their daughter will be married to his son. Both parties agree to wait until the boy and girl are grown up, and then the marriage takes place. Following this custom, which is very old in India, the elderly brāhmaṇa promised to give his daughter to the younger brāhmaṇa in charity, and he promised this before the Gopāla Deity. In India the custom is to honor any promise made before the Deity. Such a promise cannot be canceled. In Indian villages, whenever there is a quarrel between two parties, they go to a temple to settle the quarrel. Whatever is spoken in front of the Deity is taken to be true, for no one would dare lie before the Deity. This same principle was followed in the Battle of Kurukṣetra. Therefore in the very beginning of the Bhagavad-gītā it is stated: dharma-kṣetre kuru-kṣetre.

By not becoming God conscious, human society is deteriorating to the lowest standard of animal life. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is very essential to reviving God consciousness among the general populace. If people actually become God conscious, all quarrels can be settled outside of court, as happened in the case of the two brāhmaṇas whose disagreement was settled by the witness Gopāla.

TEXT 33

SYNONYMS

tumi-you; yadi-if; kaha-say; āmi kichui nā jāni-I do not remember anything; tabe-in that case; āmi-I; nyāya kari'-arguing; brāhmaṇere-the younger brāhmaṇa; jini-shall conquer.

TRANSLATION

"If you simply say, 'I do not remember,' I shall take care of the rest. By argument, I shall defeat the young brāhmaṇa."

PURPORT

The son of the elderly brāhmaṇa was an atheist and a follower of the Raghunātha-smṛti. He was very expert in dealing with pounds-shillings-pence, but he was fool number one. Consequently, he did not believe in the spiritual position of the Deity, nor did he have any faith in the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore, as a typical idol worshiper, he considered the form of the Lord to be made of stone or wood. Thus he assured his father that the witness was only a stone Deity and was not capable of speaking. Besides that, he assured his father that the Deity was situated far away and consequently could not come to bear witness. In essence, he was saying: "Have no anxiety. You do not have to lie directly, but you should speak like a diplomat, like King Yudhiṣṭhira when he spoke to Droṇācārya-aśvatthāmā hata iti gajaḥ. Following this principle, simply say that you do not remember anything and are completely unaware of the statements given by the young brāhmaṇa. If you make the background like that, I shall know how to fill in the argument and defeat him by word jugglery. Thus I shall save you from having to give your daughter to him. In this way, our aristocracy will be saved. You have nothing to worry about."

TEXT 46

SYNONYMS

ei vākye-in this statement; sākṣī-witness; mora-my; āche-there is; mahājana-a great personality; yāṅra-whose; vākya-words; satya-true; kari-taking as; māne-accepts; tri-bhuvana-the whole world.

TRANSLATION

”Thus I have called upon a great personality in this transaction. I have asked the Supreme Godhead to be my witness. The entire world accepts the words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.”

PURPORT

Although the young brāhmaṇa described himself as having no claims to aristocracy and being an uneducated common man, still he had one good qualification: he believed that the Supreme Personality of Godhead was the topmost authority, he accepted the words of Lord Kṛṣṇa without hesitation, and he had firm faith in the Lord’s consistency. According to Prahlāda Mahārāja, another authority on the Supreme Personality of Godhead, such a staunch and faithful devotee of the Lord must be understood to be a most learned scholar: tan manye ’dhītam uttamam (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 7.5.24). A pure devotee who has firm faith in the words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is to be considered a most learned scholar, the topmost aristocrat and the richest man in the whole world. All godly qualities automatically exist in such a devotee. In the preaching work of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, we, as the servant of the servant of the servant of the servant of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, fully believe in the words of Kṛṣṇa and His servants, the disciplic succession. In this way we are presenting the words of Kṛṣṇa throughout the world. Even though we are neither a rich man nor a very learned scholar, and even though we do not belong to any aristocracy, this movement is still being welcomed and is very easily spreading all over the world. Although we are very poor and have no professional source of income, Kṛṣṇa supplies money whenever we need it. Whenever we need some men, Kṛṣṇa supplies them. Thus it is stated in the Bhagavad-gītā (6.22): yaṁ labdhvā cāparaṁ lābhaṁ manyate nādhikaṁ tataḥ. Actually, if we can attain the favor of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, we do not need anything else. We certainly do not need those things which a mundane person considers to be material assets.

SYNONYMS

tabe-at that time; baḍa-vipra-the elderly brāhmaṇa; kahe-says; ei satya kathā-this is true; gopāla-the Gopāla Deity; yadi-if; sākṣī-witness; dena-gives; āpane-personally; āsi’-coming; ethā-here; tabe-at that time; kanyā-daughter; diba-must give in charity; āmi-I; jāniha-you all know it; niścaya-certainly; tāṅra-his; putra-son; kahe-says; ei-this; bhāla-nice; bāta-statement; haya-is.

TRANSLATION

Taking this opportunity, the elderly brāhmaṇa immediately confirmed that this was really true. He said, ”If Gopāla personally comes here to serve as a witness, I shall surely give my daughter to the young brāhmaṇa.” The elderly brāhmaṇa’s son immediately confirmed this, saying, ”Yes, this is a very nice settlement.”

PURPORT

As the Supersoul within the heart of all living entities, Kṛṣṇa knows everyone’s desire, everyone’s request and everyone’s prayer. Although all these may be contradictory, the Lord has to create a situation in which everyone will be pleased. This is an instance of a marriage negotiation between an elderly brāhmaṇa and a youthful one. The elderly brāhmaṇa was certainly willing to give his daughter in charity to the young brāhmaṇa, but his son and relatives became impediments to this transaction. The elderly brāhmaṇa considered how to get out of this situation and still offer his daughter to the young brāhmaṇa. His son, an atheist and a very cunning fellow, was thinking of how to stop the marriage. The father and son were thinking in a contradictory way, yet Kṛṣṇa created a situation wherein they both agreed. They both agreed that if the Gopāla Deity would come and serve as a witness, the daughter would be given to the young brāhmaṇa.

SYNONYMS

eta śuni’-hearing this; nāstika-atheistic; loka-class of men; upahāsa-joking; kare-do; keha bale-someone says; īśvara-God; dayālu-merciful; āsiteha pāre-He is able to come.

TRANSLATION

Hearing the emphatic statement of the younger brāhmaṇa, some atheists in the meeting began to cut jokes. However, someone else said, ”After all, the Lord is merciful, and if He likes, He can come.”

TEXT 87

SYNONYMS

brahmaṇya-deva-O Lord of brahminical culture; tumi-You; baḍa-very; dayā-maya-merciful; dui-two; viprera-of brāhmaṇas; dharma-the religious principles; rākha-protect; hañā-becoming; sa-daya-merciful.

TRANSLATION

He said, ”My Lord, You are the protector of brahminical culture, and You are also very merciful. Therefore, kindly show Your great mercy by protecting the religious principles of us two brāhmaṇas.

TEXT 89

kanyā pāba,–mora mane ihā nāhi sukha brāhmaṇera pratijñā yāya–ei baḍa duḥkha

SYNONYMS

kanyā pāba-I shall get the daughter; mora-my; mane-in the mind; ihā-this; nāhi-is not; sukha-happiness; brāhmaṇera-of a pure brāhmaṇa; pratijñā-the promise; yāya-becomes lost; ei-this; baḍa-very much; duḥkha-unhappiness.

TRANSLATION

”My dear Lord, I am not thinking to become happy by getting the daughter as a bride. I am simply thinking that the brāhmaṇa has broken his promise, and that is giving me great pain.”

PURPORT

It was not at all the intention of the young brāhmaṇa to get the daughter of the elderly brāhmaṇa in marriage and thus enjoy material happiness and sense gratification. It was not for that reason that the young brāhmaṇa went to Vṛndāvana to ask the Supreme Personality of Godhead to act as a witness. His only concern was that the elderly brāhmaṇa had promised something, and if Gopāla did not bear witness to that transaction, then the older brāhmaṇa would incur a spiritual blemish. Therefore, the young brāhmaṇa wanted protection and help from the Deity. The young brāhmaṇa was thus a pure Vaiṣṇava, and he had no desire for sense gratification. He wanted only to serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the older brāhmaṇa, who was also a Vaiṣṇava and very devoted to the Lord.

TEXT 90

eta jāni’ tumi sākṣī deha, dayā-maya jāni’ sākṣī nāhi deya, tāra pāpa haya eta jāni’-knowing this; tumi-You; sākṣī-witness; deha-please give; dayā-maya-O most merciful one; jāni’-knowing; sākṣī-witness; nāhi deya-does not give; tāra-for him; pāpa-sin; haya-there is.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The young brāhmaṇa continued, ”My dear sir, You are very merciful and You know everything. Therefore, kindly be a witness in this case. A person who knows things as they are and still does not bear witness becomes involved in sinful activities.”

PURPORT

The dealings between a devotee and the Lord are very simple. The young brāhmaṇa said to the Lord, ”You know everything, but if You do not bear witness, You will be involved in sinful activities.” There is no possibility, however, of the Lord’s being involved in sinful activities. A pure devotee, even though he knows everything of the Supreme Lord, can speak with the Lord exactly as if He were a common man. Although the dealings between the Lord and His devotee are always very simple and open, there is formality. All these things happen because of the connection between the Lord and the devotee.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Gopālajī then smiled and said, "My dear brāhmaṇa, just listen to Me. I shall walk behind you, and in this way I shall go with you."

PURPORT

The conversation between Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa and the brāhmaṇa is proof that the Lord in His arcā-mūrti, or form made of material elements, is not material, for those elements, although separated from the Lord, are also a part of the Lord's energy, as stated in the Bhagavad-gītā. Because the elements are the Lord's own energy and because there is no difference between the energy and the energetic, the Lord can appear through any element. Just as the sun can act through the sunshine and thus distribute its heat and light, so Kṛṣṇa, by His inconceivable power, can appear in His original spiritual form in any material element, including stone, wood, paint, gold, silver and jewels, because the material elements are all His energy. The śāstras warn, arcye viṣṇau śilā-dhīḥ . . . nārakī saḥ: one should never think of the arcā-mūrti, the Deity within the temple, as stone, wood or any other material element. Because of his advanced devotional position, the younger brāhmaṇa knew that although the Deity of Gopāla appeared to be stone, He was not stone. He was the son of Nanda Mahārāja, Vrajendra-nandana Himself.

As such, the Deity can act exactly as the Lord did in His original form as Kṛṣṇa. Lord Kṛṣṇa was talking to the young brāhmaṇa just to test his knowledge about the arcā-vigraha. In other words, those who have understood the science of Kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa's name, form, quality and so forth-can also talk with the Deity. To an ordinary person, however, the Deity will appear to be made of stone, wood or some other material. In the higher sense, since all material elements ultimately emanate from the supreme spiritual entity, nothing is really material. Being omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient, Kṛṣṇa can deal with His devotees in any form without difficulty. By the mercy of the Lord, the devotee knows perfectly well about the Lord's dealings. Indeed, he can talk face to face with the Lord.
